Tribune - May 18 -

THOMPSON BARS GRIFFITH FILM, BIRTH OF NATION

Sensational Photoplay Based on Dixon's "Clansman" Refused Permit.

NEGRO PROTEST IS HEEDED.

Tribune - May 19 - 1915

"The Birth of a Nation," D. W. Griffith's great photoplay spectacle, founded on Thomas Dixon's story, "The Clansman," may not be seen in Chicago—not for four years.

Mayor Thompson yesterday gave his final answer. It was a firm "No!"

Not as long as he remains in the mayor's chair, he said, will the panorama, starting with the importation of African slaves to this country and ending with the distressing tragedy of reconstruction days in the south after the civil war, be seen at the moving picture theaters here.

While the mayor would not go into a discussion of his reasons for putting up the bars in Chicago against the sensational picture drama, his close friends understand that he objects particularly to the scenes depicting the assassination of President Lincoln, the abortive attempt to impose the "social equality" of negroes and whites, and the impression that northern statesmen and southern negroes committed great wrongs against the south in the years immediately following the war.

Production on a Vast Scale.

The photoplay, among the biggest moving picture spectacles yet attempted, has created a profound impression in sections of the north where it has been permitted. The book, "The Clansman," on which it is founded, stirred the entire south a few years ago. It sought to justify the work of the Ku Klux Klan, or the "invisible empire," as it was termed.

Both the novel and the photoplay have been severely condemned by leading negroes, although the authors purposely injected into the reel several negro characters, representative of the best traditions of their race.

The big punch all through the drama is the predominating idea, sent home with unerring skill and effectiveness, that the south was cruelly imposed upon in reconstruction days and that had Lincoln lived the carpetbagger and his negro political aids would not have added "this humiliation to the defeated and devastated south.

"Social Equality" Driven Home.

One scene, tense and thrilling, that is bjected to by the opponents depicts the breakdown of the "social equality" proposition upheld by the white leader when Silas Lynch, a mulatto leader, elected lieutenant governor, asks the hand of a white man's daughter in marriage. Then the personal aspect of the theory is driven home and the thrill of it, as pictured, stirs mightily.

However, above and beyond all the tragedy there is a note of optimism, brotherly love, and a readjustment of conditions on racial lines that is intended to soothe and brighten and present the proverbial silver lining to the somber picture.

Makers of Film Optimistic.

The photoplay makers, in their concluding monograph, portray the underlying optimism of their effort. It is:

"To the American people the outcome of four years of fratricidal strife, the nightmare of reconstruction, and the establishment of the south in its rightful position is the birth of a new nation. Lincoln's plan of restricting negroes to Africa was dreamed of only—never carried out. The new nation, the real United States, as the years glided by turned away forever from the blood lust of war and anticipated with hope the world-millennium in which a brotherhood of love should bind all the nations together."

History One of Strife.

The history of the film from the beginning has been one of racial bitterness, censorial squabbles, and politics.

The national board of censors inspected the production and promptly had a stirring row which ended in the resignation of some members of the board. In Boston presentation of the film was permitted after considerable agitation, but minature riots took place in the lobby of the Tremont theater on several occasions.

Tribune May 19 -

RACE FILM BILL PASSES IN HOUSE ON NEGRO'S PLEA

Jackson Wins Votes Barring "Nigger," "Clansman," as Inciting to Riot.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Springfield, Ill., May 18.—[Special.]—"The Nigger," "The Clansman," and "The Birth of a Nation" as movies will be barred from exhibition in Illinois by the terms of Representative Jackson's bill, which passed the house tonight by a vote of 111 to 2.

Representative Jackson is one of the two colored Republican members of the house from Chicago, representing in part the exclusive Kenwood district on the south side.

Speech Fires House.

He made a speech which set the house on fire, brought members to their feet, and won a decisive victory over those who were attempting to defeat the bill he had introduced.

Representative Jackson charged in closing the debate that the moving picture interests were behind the effort to kill his bill. The measure prohibits the exhibition of any film that shows a lynching or unlawful hanging and is based on the theory that presentation of such pictures tends to race hatred and to rioting.

Calls Bill Too Sweeping.

Representative Louis J. Pierson of Wilmette led the fight against the bill. He made an extended argument, alleging that the bill as drawn affects much more than the negro race difficulties. He contended in his speech that the bill if it becomes a law prohibits in a religious way the use of any reproduction of the crucifixion in any church, any film which would raise the racial issue in any form, and in effect would put the movies out of business.

Herald May 17 -

Herald 5/17/15

LET IT STAY BARRED.

Mayor THOMPSON has barred from Chicago the notorious photoplay based on the romances of racial hatred by the Rev. THOMAS DIXON. Mayor THOMPSON is right. It should be barred.

In vain do the promoters protest that in their spectacle there is "a note of optimism, brotherly love and readjustment of racial conditions intended to soothe and brighten."

A famous French author dedicated to "My sons, when they reach the age of 20," a graphic account of the disasters that follow on yielding to enticements to enter into illicit sexual relations.

The book may, perhaps, be usefully read by many young men. Yet when presented in dramatic form it became merely the picture of a brothel and its inmates, affronting all clean-minded spectators and gratifying only the morbid emotions it stimulated.

However excellent the intentions, everything depends on the way they are carried out. The public derives no benefit from "popular" presentation of the scenes of the clinic and the confessional. This particular presentation, both in its ordinary and its film dramatization, has a riot-provoking record. Let it stay barred, so far as Chicago can bar it.

Ex - May 20.

"THE NEW GOVERNOR."
(FOX.)

Philip Morrow..William Farnum
Georgiana Byrd...Claire Whitney
Senator Long...Edgar Davenport
Mrs. Byrd.....Agnes Everett
Cliff Noyes..William W. Crimons
"Aunt Jinny"..Gertrude Clemons
Bill Watson...George de Carlton

BY JAMES WARREN CURRIE.

"The New Governor," the William Fox filmization of Edgar Sheldon's play, "The Nigger," was launched yesterday at the Ziegfeld, two days ahead of its announcement on the news that a bill barring it and "The Birth of the Nation" from exhibition in Illinois had passed the House of Representatives yesterday.

Its theme is the race and the whisky question, and these were the reasons for its prohibition. The story of the play deals with the career of Philip Morrow, a young planter, owner of Morrow's Rest, and the lives of the negroes who work and inhabit his estates, following the custom of the present South.

He has grown to manhood in the belief that the blood in his veins is the most aristocratic in the South. But he is the descendant of a quadroon slave girl, who loved his grandfather and who substituted her child when the other child, her master's, by his white wife, died a few hours after birth. The grandson of this old man is in love with Georgiana Byrd, a belle of his state, and is happy in the possession of wealth and political power.

HE RUNS FOR GOVERNOR.

Cliff Noyes, a political boss and distiller of whisky drunk by negroes in that section, persuades Morrow to run for Governor. At the start of the campaign, one of Morrow's negroes, the grandson of Aunt Jinny, Morrow's mammy, and the sister of his own quadroon mother, is lynched for a crime in spite of Morrow's efforts to save him. Aunt Jinny, when she begs for her grandson's life, hints to Morrow that he would save him "if he only knew." Noyes overhears her and starts searching for the meaning of her sentence. After his election pressure is brought to bear on Morrow to prevent him signing a bill for state-wide prohibition. Philip insists on signing it, whereupon Noyes springs the proof of his negro blood on him.

Convinced and shaken, Philip signs the bill, resigns his office, renounces the girl he loves and devotes his life to the uplift of the negroes, his "own people."

GERTRUDE CLEMONS STAR.

The best thing in the picture is Gertrude Clemons' characterization of Aunt Jinny, the old mammy. Her work stamps her as probably the best character actress in moving pictures. William Farnum, in the part of the self-sacrificing young idealist, Philip Morrow, brought the vividness of his personality to a wonderfully well-directed picture.

"The New Governor" is a big, vital picture, full of tremendous situations and breath-holding incidents. It doesn't need any excuse for existence. At least it wouldn't in any other country but our own.

* * *

Herald May 20 -

"Photoplays."

Chicago, May 17.—To the Editor: Your editorial column had an item of importance and significance regarding the notorious photoplay barred from Chicago by Mayor Thompson. The mayor is to be commended for barring any photoplay that might incite race hatred or religious prejudice. There seems to be enough hatred and prejudice now without injecting into the heart and mind of our populace further reason for discomfort. I heartily indorse the photoplay, but it must be the right kind.

MRS. PHILIP B. PRICE.

Letters From the People

Ex. May 21 -

Ex. 5/21/15

NEGROES THANK EXAMINER.

Editor Chicago Examiner:

We, the members of a committee appointed by the Progressive Negro League, wish to extend to you our sincere thanks for your recent publication of the facts concerning the Charles H. Davis matter, through which the negro race and others might know those who were so ready to object to the presence of representative negroes and cause more than the existing prejudice.

We appreciate that the papers of Chicago displayed so much fairness in a matter of intense interest to our people, and hope for your paper, as well as the others, much success in the future.

C. J. JACKSON,
3242 S. State street.
IRA B. MOSELEY,
4704 Wabash avenue.
M. T. BAILEY, Chairman,
3556 Forest avenue.

Chicago, May 17, 1915.

2

Tribune
May 22

U. S. JUDGES BACK CITY FILM BOARD

Unanimous Against Injunction Permitting Offensive Movie Pictures.

The city's right to censor films was upheld yesterday in a decision handed down by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals. The decision was unanimous. It was signed by presiding Justice Francis E. Baker, Judge Kohlsaat, and Judge Landis, the latter sitting as a Circuit judge during consideration of the case.

The case was that of the Mutual Film company and the H. & H. Film corporation, which one year ago filed a suit in the United States District court for an injunction to restrain the city and the board of censors operating under Second Deputy Funkhouser from interfering with moving picture exhibitions.

The complainants set up that the city's censorship was an abridgement of the rights guaranteed by the federal constitution and that it abridged freedom of the press and freedom of speech. The late Judge William H. Seaman, sitting as a District judge, heard the arguments and decided the case in favor of the city.

Offensive Films Issue.

The decision of the Court of Appeals is an affirmation of the late Judge Seaman's ruling. Cutouts of white slave pictures and other offensive film features ordered by the city's censors prompted the filing of the suit.

The arguments in the Court of Appeals were made six months ago by Assistant Corporation Counsel George L. Reker in behalf of the city. He insisted the city had a right to censor films under its general police power.

"The city has the same right to censor moving pictures that it has to establish and maintain a health department," Mr. Reker argued at the hearing. "Censorship is the department of the city which looks after the moral health of the people, particularly the children and the youth of the city."

The decision upholds this view.

Forestalls State Move.

Mr. Reker said the court's ruling was sweeping in its nature, and left no further room for doubt as to the right of the city to censor and prohibit objectionable or immoral movies.

"The decision means much," he said. "Legislation is now pending in Springfield which contemplates the destruction of Chicago's censorship. The plan is to take that power away from the city and place it in the hands of the state authorities.

"The state is not as well qualified to censor Chicago's moving pictures as is the city itself. I believe the decision of the Court of Appeals will do much to frustrate the attempt to take this necessary power away from Chicago."

"Twilight Sleep."

The city won another censorship victory in a case argued before Judge John P. McGoorty in the Circuit court. The hearing was on a petition of the Motherhood Educational society of New York for a writ of mandamus to compel the city to permit the exhibition of a series of moving pictures entitled "Twilight Sleep."

Mr. Reker appeared in behalf of the city and Attorney Herman Frank for the petitioning society. In his argument Mr. Reker contended the writ should not issue because the society had no standing in an Illinois court, it being a "foreign" corporation and not licensed to do business in Illinois.

Attorney Frank demurred to this contention, saying it was technical, and that the question at issue was whether or not the pictures are immoral. Judge McGoorty overruled the demurrer and declined to issue the writ.

Herald
May 22

"Birth of a Nation."

Chicago, May 19. — To the Editor: I have read your editorial which covertly denounces the picture play "The Birth of a Nation." I should like to say that the references to obscenity, brothels, illicit sexual relations and other indecent things, and the endeavor to connect them with this spectacle, are not only stupid but criminally vicious. There is not one moment in this offering that suggests anything obscene or immoral. On the contrary, the highest, finest and most noble emotions are aroused and only the most patriotic and high-minded thoughts are inspired by the story this picture tells. Chicago must not be denied the privilege of enjoying what New York, Boston and other liberal and progressive cities have welcomed with open arms.

WILLIAM E. WEBSTER.

Moving Picture Boards.

Chicago, May 20.—To the Editor: Chicagoans should be deeply interested in the Olson bill and others of like character now pending in the state legislature—bills which would eliminate our excellent local board of moving picture censors and substitute for it an inadequate political state board, appointed without civil service examination.

This strikes at home rule, for which we have been striving. Citizens should immediately make active protest to their senators and representatives against these bills.

ADA LEWIS ADAMS.

State Picture Censors Fail.

Chicago, May 20.—To the Editor: A blow is contemplated against home rule in Chicago. All good citizens should interest themselves in the bills under consideration at Springfield to create a state board of three moving picture censors. The Chicago moving picture censor board has performed its work admirably. A few years ago many people would not attend a moving picture theater, but since pictures have been censored theaters have been opened in all parts of the city and one can attend feeling sure he will not be shocked by what he sees. State censorship has been tried in several states, but from the class of pictures passed conditions do not seem to have been improved.

E. J. JOHNSON.

Herald
5/23

CHICAGO SUNDAY H

FUNKHOUSER REFUSES FRANK FILM PERMIT

Pictures Depicting Atlanta Murder Case Called Contrary to City Ordinance.

PRISONER ASKS CURB

Letter Declares Attempts to Capitalize Details of Trial Are Deplorable.

An attempt to exhibit in Chicago motion pictures depicting the Leo M. Frank murder case was stopped yesterday.

Major Funkhouser, second deputy superintendent of police, after viewing the pictures with the board of censors, declined to issue a permit for their exhibition.

Frank, from his prison cell in Atlanta, personally protested against the exhibition of the pictures, which were recently barred in New York.

Writing to a friend in Chicago, Frank said:

"It appears that some fakers are trying to utilize the notoriety that the case has been given to turn over an honest (?) penny.

ASKS CURB ON EXHIBITORS.

"You have the right to curb. Stop that photoplay. We had it stopped last week in New York. The board of censors did the trick.

"It is, of course, unnecessary for me to tell you how deplorable it would be to have the tragic death of Mary Phagan and my unfortunate predicament capitalized."

The motion picture which is called "The Frank Case" is said to have been posed especially for exhibition purposes, various scenes and incidents connected with the case and the trial being re-enacted by movie actors.

A permit for the exhibition of the pictures was refused on the grounds that they violated a section of the city ordinance, which prohibits pictures "of such character as tend to create contempt or hatred for any class of law-abiding citizens."

STATE LAW IS BROAD.

The state law is still more broad, making it "unlawful for any person or persons, company, firm or corporation to publicly exhibit for peruniary gain persons who have become conspicuous through some criminal act, which has a tendency to degrade human morals, to exhibit pictures or any article which appertain to them in their attainment of criminal notoriety and to exhibit persons whose notoriety is such as to attract public curiosity."

A permit for the exhibition of "The Birth of the Nation," said to have caused race riots in some cities, was revoked by Mayor Thompson yesterday. A permit for the exhibition was issued during the last days of former Mayor Harrison's term, but the picture was not shown. Protests from colored citizens caused Mayor Thompson to cancel the permit.

NEW GRIFFITH FILM.

Large Production of "The Quest of the Holy Grail" Promised.

David W. Griffith, the producer of "The Birth of a Nation," announces for the subject of his next elaborate film "The Quest of the Holy Grail." Mr. Griffith has long been an admirer of the Edwin A. Abbey "Grail" pictures that adorn the public library in Boston. He has made several trips thither this Spring to study their possibilities for a narrative story and to negotiate for the rights.

The production will be fully as sumptuous as "The Birth of a Nation," and the cast will include several of the leading romantic actors of the American stage. Work will be started in June immediately upon the director's return to Los Angeles.

My Telegraph
May 23

Ag. Telegraph
5/23

Mayor Thompson has vetoed the photoplay spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," so far as its public presentation is concerned, due to alleged race riots created elsewhere. The city executive bases, his action on the scenes depicting the assassination of Lincoln and the events of the reconstruction period. In consequence the Illinois remains dark.

Herald
May 24

MOVIE GIVES PATRIOTIC THRILLS

"Birth of the Nation," Shown at Private Presentation, Proves an Historic Wonder.

"The Birth of a Nation," the much discussed photo spectacle, was given a private presentation at the Illinois Theater last night, some sixty or seventy persons being present by invitation.

Nearly all that had been held as objectionable has been eliminated. An epoch was portrayed to the spectators in a manner so vivid that none will ever forget. To say that the little gathering was thrilled expresses it mildly. Imagine if you can 18,000 men, women and children and 3,000 horses, with whole cities, battlefields and countrysides as the settings—some stretches taking in a perspective of three miles—all asembled, staged and tragically active and with historic accuracy, vividly enacting before the eyes of the people of today the civil war with its reconstruction period. A stupendous climax has been reached in the world of motion pictures in "The Birth of a Nation," founded on Thomas Dixon's novel "The Clansman."

WAR SCENE; PEACE LESSON.

The civil war battlefields with armies, trenches, forts and cavalry come up out of the past and with their very tragedy and realism teach the best possible lesson of peace, for the horrors of war point the most impressive moral of peace. This portion of history has been told of much, but never with the thrilling vividness of this picture. The reconstruction period is one with which the Norts is not nearly as familiar. With the assassination of Lincoln—this in a duplicate of the old Ford Theater built at a cost of $25,000—the negro and the South lost their best friend. The negro, ignorant and just freed from slavery and led by unscrupulous Northern carpetbaggers, became intoxicated with power and then began a reign of terror unparalleled in the South. For self-protection there sprang into being the army of the Klu-Klux-Klan, that mysterious organization which rode by night with vengeance and warnings and under moss-hung forests held their impressive rites.

It was this army of ghostly-garbed warriors that finally rescued the South from the ignorant faction of the blacks and their unscrupulous leaders and restored law and peace. The final charge and the ultimate victory of the masked army brings a stirring climax that sets the blood tingling. It was this warfare that cost as much blood as did the battle of Gettysburg, according to some authorities.

NO NEGRO PREJUDICE.

That the photo spectacle is not animated by any prejudice against the negroes is evidenced by the finish when the colored people are shown at Hampton and Tuskagee, in schools and in shops, educated and equipped to do their part in a nation of good citizenship. The negro is praised in the final moral.

It is history, that's all, not the history of the library, but the history of the new wonderful educational medium, the moving picture. The armies march and battle as though in real life on the screen instead of fighting in the ponderous tomes of dust-covered library books. There is more to be learned of American history in two hours than in two months of reading, and what is seen and learned in this spectacle never can be forgotten. The total cost of the production is $150,000.

Tribune 5/25

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION."

The moving picture play "The Birth of a Nation" is, in our opinion, the greatest piece of work done for the films by American producers. It ranks with "Cabiria" as a tremendous spectacle and for the American temperament it has points of artistic advantage over the D'Annunsio photoplay.

In Chicago it has thus far been barred from production. It is not immoral or coarse. It does not offend for any of the reasons which usually cause the prohibition of picture plays or the elimination of scenes from them. It is in all essential episodes grounded on historical fact, representing the struggles of that terrible time in the south when the whites, back from war, saw their government taken over by the newly enfranchised blacks controlled by the northern carpetbaggers.

What happened with the negro ascendant and how the white reestablished his supremacy is shown with obvious natural sympathy for the south, and no doubt with such heightening of effect as dramatic art has a right to employ. It presents what the south says and the north of our day, at least, is inclined to believe to be truth.

The production of this photoplay is prohibited in Chicago. The book from which the scenario was taken was not suppressed. It could not be, although it was violent. The play made from the book was not suppressed, although, it also being violent, there were requests that it be. The photoplay alone gets the subject into such form that a prohibition is ordered.

Here is a question of freedom in expression which will give any thoughtful person cause for reflection. We assert our right to such freedom within the obvious bounds of common decency and morality. "The Birth of a Nation" does not offend against either. This film draws upon veritable pages from the history of the country, embodies men and women of whom the pages treat, and they reenact their struggles. We then say that citizens may not be permitted to see it.

THE TRIBUNE has been and is opposed to interference with freedom of expression, but it confesses that the subject here involved has complexities which do not yield to the application of ordinary rules. The terrible concrete reality of the moving picture is the disturbing factor and the consequent emotional response of the spectator is the disturbing result. The sin of the film is its effectiveness.

A lecturer with ability to touch men's susceptibilities might take this subject and do his emotional best with it and we doubt that a voice would be raised to stop him. Such people as might go to hear him would have their feelings made more acute, might have their prejudices heightened, but in the end the chief result would be that they knew more about the days of reconstruction.

The moving picture not so much makes its spectators know more about the period; it makes them live through it, vicariously but intensely, and the city government has said, in effect, that the citizens of Chicago ought not to live through it, and they ought not, as a matter of public policy, to enter a theater from which they must come with prejudices and race hatreds inflamed.

If the validity of this argument be questioned, as it is bound to be, let the consideration of the subject go further. We may suppose that one producing company has selected the time of the Spanish inquisition for film purposes, or that another has taken the persecution of the Irish Catholics by Cromwell, and that either play or both, done after the manner of "Cabiria" and "The Birth of a Nation," were put in Chicago theaters. Assume that these plays kept to historical accuracy. Query: Would it be public policy to permit the productions?

All censorship is an infringement of that perfect freedom of thought and expression which is dear to the liberal as an ideal if not always acceptable as a fact. Where we concede any restriction it is extremely difficult if not impossible to justify it on other grounds than those of expediency. Censorship of information and of debate is allowed only in extreme cases, as under martial law. Censorship of literary expression also is permitted only within relatively narrow limits. The field broadens, however, with restrictions upon other forms of art, especially where their appeal is to emotion rather than reason and effects of public consequence are feared.

But here it is necessary for us to resist a tendency easily extended in the general name of expediency or morality. Not all cases are as clear as those we have cited, and restriction is often the result of the organized zeal of minute minorities rather than an expression of the consensus of a community's opinion. Also there is always a disposition to use power when it is created.

Censorship often accomplishes concrete benefits and may be conceded to be necessary. But we ought never to lose sight of the fact that, if necessary, it is a necessary evil which we are right in regarding jealously.

Tribune 5/26

FLICKERINGS from FILM LAND

by KITTY KELLY

The Motion Picture and Witch Burners

DAVID WARK GRIFFITH, the genius behind the heights of motion picture achievement, "The Birth of a Nation," speaks his mind for us on the subject of the motion picture future in connection with its present hampering obstacles.

BY DAVID WARK GRIFFITH.

"THE most beautiful picture ever on canvas, the finest statue ever carved is a ridiculous caricature of real life compared with the flickering shadow of a tattered film in a backwoods nickelodeon."

The above assertion was made by Dr. E. E. Slossen of the Columbia university in an article entitled "The Birth of a New Art" and published in the Independent on April 6, 1914.

Primitive man emerging from a dark cave; evolving atoms abortively struggling in the first man's brain cell: unformed dreams, the crying out of which we call the soul in man's beginning attempting expression; carved rude images on stone, find expression in rhythmic shouting, progressed through the centuries until we had the written word.

The written word became, and perhaps still is, the best means of getting that wild something evolving in the inner man, out of the mouth of his clay carcass into expression.

The old carving on stone developed into the making of beautiful and godlike statues in the hands of the Greeks. The written word enabled the world to know and see and feel and believe in a Buddah, a Confucius, and a Christ. The written word enabled us to know the mornings and the nights of a struggling soul and all souls from Shakspeare, Goethe, Emerson, and a list too long to name.

Evolution, building up from rough carving in granite, and the pitiful expression on softer stone to Homer dashing his brains out against a world; to Shakspeare splashing beautiful dreams over a canvas that seems to be able to live forever. Yet the time it would take a modern prototype of Shakspeare to write a history, say, for instance, of the tragedy of the civil war in our own country, would take you days to read, would take a series of plays running a week to perform. Man ever groping for expression, discovered a new form—the motion picture.

The same things that would take the greatest modern writing brains we know, from Woodrow Wilson to Rudyard Kipling, years to write and days to be read, can be shown in a moving picture in three hours' time.

According to men of the standing of Metcalf, the cynical critic of "Life," including besides such people as the Rev. Thomas Gregory, Dorothy Dix, Burns Mantle, Louis Defoe, in fact, all the great dramatic critics of New York, aided in this line by twenty-one members of the United States house and senate, Richard Harding Davis, Booth Tarkington, two such international characters as the Rev. Father John Talbot Smith to Dr. Charles Parkhurst, enthusiastically indorse (I quote this as an instance) the motion picture play "The Birth of a Nation."

An outsider, knowing of this, would imagine these people would be capable of having an expressing judgment, which the average audience would accept as trustworthy. They would on any other subject in the world and receive attention, but "The Birth of a Nation" is a motion picture, and the motion picture is at present the witch of modern times, and at all times there must be witches to be burned.

The old witch of the Salem Commons, who made a horrible clamor as she was being tortured, had nothing on the new art of the motion picture in this respect.

I think it is generally agreed that the motion picture is at least on a par with the spoken and written word as a mode of expression.

The motion picture has progressed. It is capable of conveying a given message in many ways enormously more effectively than any mode of expression the world has ever possessed. It is already performing this work.

It is softening the hard life of the plain citizen with beauty and sweetness: it keeps men away from saloons and drink, because it gives them a place of recreation in pleasant surroundings: it brings to the poor who are unable to travel away from their own dingy surroundings the beauty and poetry of moving foreign scenes, of flowers, waving grasses, the beauty of uplifted mountain crests, and the wonders of nature. The great outdoors and beauty of dreams have uplifted man slowly and painfully with much torture and aching of joints out of the state of beasts.

The motion picture will help as no other art has done in this work, if it is given a chance. We understand that all new things must go through an inquisitorial gate. Why not make the passage of the moving picture less brutal than has been that of all other arts?

The printing press was called "an instrument of the devil" by the ignorant masses of that day. Should we put our [illegible] plane of the [illegible] dren is a different proposition from that of the motion picture in general.

In the name of common sense and public decency can't there be an understanding of this case? The ordinary theater, in which four or five different plays are shown a night, where the bill is changed nightly, where the audience before entering cannot possibly be aware of the nature of each performance, must of necessity have some watch put over it.

Growing children with unformed minds must be guarded. To that we all agree. But the new motion picture, as a form of art, running the same length of time as the play, playing to exactly the same theaters in which the play is performed, charging the same admission, advertised in exactly the same manner, with its prospective audience told far ahead of the kind and manner of performance they are to see; in other words, the moving picture put in exactly the same place as a play, playing to exactly the same class of people, should be allowed at least the same fair reception and treatment.

The witch burners, who burn through the censorship of the motion picture today, when they have nothing left but the charred and blackened embers of that which promised once to be a beautiful art, when this grisly work is finished, where will they turn their attention next? They have established a precedent. The stage will be the next victim. After the stage, the press. After the press and free speech are vanquished, then Russia.

All drama must of necessity be conflict—battle, fight. How are we to depict the right unless we show the wrong? Unless we show the evils of a vicious past, how are we allowed to be the means of guiding the footsteps of the present generation?

When you apply the method of censorship to these arts, what possible dream can we have of progress in the future? Had these witch burners built beech logs around the written word, setting fire to which made possible our literature and our drama, where would we be today? They are beginning their work now. It is for us to look to the present and the future.

If moving pictures properly done of the horrors of war had been inoculated in all the nations of Europe, there would be no bodies of men lying on European battlefields.

The greatest field which the motion picture has is the treating of historic subjects; as a great man has said of a certain motion picture, "It is like teaching history by lightning."

The witch burners will make this impossible. History is a story of conflict. You could not even portray the drama of the days of '49 to '70 in the golden west. If you tell the story of this period, you must show the atrocities committed by the Indians against the whites. Some public seeking fanatic would protest that it was an injustice to the Indians and might raise feeling against them.

These people revel in objections. There could be no story of the American revolution. Certainly the English do things which the American does not think proper. Those of English descent in our country would protest, and so on down the line with all nationalities and grades of people. It would be impossible to present anything.

4

Ex. 5/26

Chica

The TURN OF THE REEL

BY THE REV. DR. STUART B. EDMONDSON

Pastor Evanston Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church.

At the invitation of the Examiner I attended a presentation of the great photo-drama, "The Birth of a Nation," at the Illinois Theater. It is without question the most stupendous thing of its kind ever produced. The invited guests, numbering fifty or more, were thrilled again and again, and for three hours listened and looked breathlessly.

D. W. Griffitt has condensed into these three hours fifteen or more years of American history so that, seeing it, one can never forget it. Impressions of the evil of war and bloodshed pile upon the spectators until there is born in the heart an abhorrence of the thing which never can be eradicated. I have read history, but I have never felt it before.

There are some things one naturally wishes might have been eliminated, but then, it would not be true history. The negro "Gus" pursuing and frightening "Little Sister" to her death is an ugly picture, but once seen it is so dire and hateful that instinctively one declares that by education and every God-given power we propose to lift every race of mankind above that sort of thing.

AUTHOR IS WRITING HISTORY.

It is nothing against any race. The picture could possibly be portrayed of every race, but the author, as stated before, is writing history.

The picture here is no worse than that portrayed in the history of the United States written by our honored President, Woodrow Wilson. The intention of his history and of this photo-drama is to bring before the young the horrors of that dark spot in our country's history, which, please God, never will be experienced again. Its effect upon children is difficult to estimate in satisfactory measure. There are heroes of war, of course, but the devastation pictured erases much of its glory.

And as we weep with the "Camerons" and other stricken ones of the South, it seems fit that the impression made upon the mind of any clean-thinking youngster would be against war.

NEGROES NOT TO BLAME.

The negroes are not to blame, and there can be little objection there. "Stoneman," the white man, is the villain. His is the master mind that uses ignorance and superstition to further his own interests, and the negro man is shown to great advantage in the closing pictures of the drama.

The closing scene, where the King of Peace takes the place of the cruel god of war, is indeed a beautiful one. On the whole, I would say that in my judgment it does not create a war spirit or race prejudice.

The loyalty of the old Union soldier and Dr. Cameron, and the loyalty of the two faithful old slaves, who give their lives for their master, bespeak the spirit of our beautiful Union to-day—one lakes, one rivers, one country, and, thank God, one flag.

And I believe this photo-drama will create this spirit of union in the hearts of all who see it.

Mayor Agrees to See "Clansman."

The Birth of a Nation," the motion picture dramatization of the novel "The Clansman" may yet win the approval of the city authorities and be given a permit in Chicago. Mayor Thompson stated yesterday that he was willing to view the film himself should it be arranged conveniently and urged that it be sent through the board of censors where he could view it.

It was pointed out to the Mayor that he had heard only one side of the case and that he had taken the word of those wso declared the film would incite race prejudice and possibly riots. Mayor Thompson first announced his intention of barring the film at a meeting held in a South Side negro church.

The film play was presented to the censor board months ago for action. At that time, Charles C. Fitzmorris, secretary to the Mayor, acted as censor and the regular board was not asked for an opinion. A permit was issued as an executive order from Mayor Harrison's office.

The producers, however, fearing a reversal of opinion with the change of administration, preferred to hold off the initial expense of showing the play in Chicago until a final ruling could be obtained from Mayor Thompson.

Post 5/26

Praise for Mayor Thompson.

CHICAGO, May 24.—To the Editor THE POST. Sir: In his official condemnation of "The Birth of a Nation," and more recent action supporting Dr. Sachs his refusal to discriminate between patie at the Chicago Tuberculosis Institute race lines, Mayor Thompson has won grateful approval of good citizens of parties, white and colored. If such may be taken as an earnest of his fut course, he will prove himself both publican and Democrat in the best se of both terms, and a mere partisan neither. CELIA PARKER WOOLLE

Ex. 5/27

There Is No Excuse for Stopping This Show

THE American people are justly uneasy at the institution, new to us, of censorship.

We progressed fairly well without it until the advent of the moving picture, and our press and our stage have been cleaner and more moral than those of countries where an official has to pass on everything published or shown.

A department of censorship inevitably seeks for something to prohibit rather than something to permit.

Just now there is a question whether one of the most important film productions ever attempted, "The Birth of a Nation," should be shown in Chicago. The same sort of agitation has preceded its exhibition in every great American city, and the verdict has been uniformly in favor of the production.

There is no matter of immorality involved; it is simply a question of whether a play based largely on the reconstruction period following the civil war would give offense or engender disorder.

The Examiner frankly suggests that this question does not come within the reviewing power of the censor.

There is no possibility that the performance would endanger public morals. The scenes and incidents, based on history, carry a story of high purpose with dramatic intensity, but there is no wantonness, nor naked brutality, beyond what the theme demands.

There was no suggestion of suppressing the book that is the foundation of the film, nor is it likely that if the play was given in ordinary theatrical guise there would be any thought of stopping it.

Why should a picture play require special restraint?

Everybody knows what the play is about. If anybody does not care to see it he does not have to attend.

Recently we had a play dealing with German spies in England. Presumably Germans would not care to witness a stage production in which their people were pictured as treacherous blunderers inevitably circumvented and defeated by astute English heroes, but nobody suggested that the theater was not within its rights in giving such a performance.

How much less is it justifiable to apply censorship to a play based on our own history, so long past that most of us were unborn at the period described?

The founders of our country realized that there was more danger in the abuse of censorship than in the abuse of freedom. Jefferson's comment that he would rather have a country without government and a free press than one with government and an enslaved press reflects the jealousy with which any trespass on the people's right to know and learn was regarded when our country was in the making.

The libel laws and the statutes against indecency have always been a sufficient safeguard against gross abuse of the privileges of literature and the stage.

The people by withholding their patronage exercise a censorship to which no showman can be indifferent. Public opinion has banished the grotesque Irishman and the caricature of the Jew—it needed no censorship to eliminate these—and no play that holds up a race to ridicule or obloquy can ever succeed.

We are told that it cost $150,000 to prepare the spectacle now under consideration. No producer is risking such an amount on a production so offensive that the sentiment of the community would repudiate it, and if the officials of Chicago are not supposed to obey the dictates of the community it is a new note in American government.

The whole plan of censorship is contrary to the spirit of our country.

If an official can impose his views on us in the moving-picture house, the next attempt will be to tell the theater what it is allowed to show, and from that it is only a step to telling the press what it may print. That would spell an end to criticism of public acts and public men. It would substitute personal interest or personal prejudice for the truth as the standard in determining the right of publication.

Mayor Thompson has indicated that he would personally pass on "The Birth of a Nation."

The Examiner would respectfully suggest that he consider the precedent of other Mayors in determining this question and keep in mind the unfairness of subjecting the investments of men in legitimate undertakings to a despotic power that might put them out of business with a word.

Tribune 5/27

FLICKERINGS from FILM LAND

By KITTY KELLY

Another Plea for 'Birth of a Nation.'

E have with us, and yet not with us, the so far ultimate achievement in motion picture making. The reels lay folded here waiting to speak their story to the city. David Wark Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation" is barred from Chicago's midst by the zealous efforts of those guardians of our civic welfare who permit the display of "The New Governor," adapted from the notorious "The Nigger," while discriminating against a work of artistic inspiration.

"The Birth of a Nation" is acclaimed the country over, through all mediums of publication, magazines and newspapers, as the world's greatest picture. Chicagoans, only by commuting from the shades cast by the censorial dark lantern of their own town to the more enlightened regions of New York, Boston, Los Angeles, and San Francisco, may view this artistic triumph.

The picture was made by a master for the appreciation of intelligent people. It isn't going to attract the riotous, the hoi polloi, or the tumult stirrers, for the very price around it hedges it away. Its audiences where I have seen them in the west have been enthusiastic, but orderly; its audiences in the east must be or the performance could not continue, and would not receive the general and continued commendation of thinking writers as it does.

They are orderly audiences because they are law-abiding citizens, doing their duty in the world, not vagrant street mobs, looking for a straw pointing excitementward.

The thrill is there because by the magic of pictorial reality the film takes one into the lives of the people who figure in the tale. This has been done before in pictures, but never on so large a scale and with such perfect manipulation. In this it far exceeds "Cabiria," for it is a human thing—which "Cabiria" was not—along with its spectacular features, which it possesses in magnificent measure, striking the heart interest that makes it go home to other hearts.

Mr. Griffith has used all of the threads of life—the love thread, the hate thread, the threads of passion, loyalty, patriotism, youthfulness, humor, sorrow, heroism, horrorism—in weaving his wonderful fabric.

The picture is melodrama, but melodrama translated means vitality, and it moves with the speed and the spring and the grace of a spirited horse. It shifts from every shade of feeling, the playfulness of carefree youngsters, to the heart mourning of a war-stricken family, the stirring tumult of battle to the quiet of home enduring, and it carries the observer with it through every second of dash and crash and whisper and echo of the story's progress, unconscious of the material fact of the three hours and 12,000 feet of film used in the telling.

As a story of the civil war and the reconstruction period there is conflict in it of every sort, and there is villainy, both black and white, as well as heroism and faithfulness of each color.

The matter in supposed censorial disapproval shows the negroes as a people needing to be led and falling into the hands of false leaders—white ones, the film's traducers might notice.

Immense historical significance, handled with a fine and patriotic dignity of intent and achievement underlies the war tangled loves between the young folks of the north and the south, and the ultimate unraveling.

The picture is an interpretation of history in human terms, and to audiences it carries distinctly a feeling of past, rather than present. True, the bias is southern, but biases untrammeled have been always the cherished possessions of free minded American folk; we like to argue one way or the other, for it is American doctrine that argument is good for the soul.

That this picture stirs in some the chord of controversy is no unprecedented experience, nor any necessarily fatal one. It is general American sentiment to prefer taking an experience first hand—risking that it be unpleasant—rather than suffer the protection of shielding by paternally minded censors.

Ah, well, this is a big picture, this "Birth of a Nation," a photographic marvel, a directorial wonder, and by missing seeing it we miss marking the greatest step in motion picture advancement.

Herald 5/27

SEEN ON THE SCREEN

By LOUE

Terms David Wark Griffith "Belasco of the Movies"

EVER since the infancy of motion pictures, when the films were staggering bits of celluloid, presenting queer, unsteady figures, the eyes of the film world have been turned expectantly toward David Wark Griffith, the master producer of motion pictures.

It was Griffith who first lifted pictures from the mediocre and gave them the real creative power they now possess. This wizard of pictures, to whom the world owes more than it realizes, was in at the birth of this great industry and his concentrated energy and tremendous ability have made the motion picture of today a formidable rival of the spoken drama.

David Griffith is in Chicago for a few days. This man, who has made such actresses as Mary Pickford, Blanche Sweet, May Marsh and the Gish girls, is very reticent about his success.

+ + +

I felt that the failure of Chicago to grant a permit to his "Birth of a Nation" must be a sore trial to him. He had spent eight months in its production at a cost of over $150,000. Much to my surprise he spoke most charitably about the whole affair.

"I wish I could feel sure they had seen the picture," he said. "So many people have condemned it without even seeing it. It only seems fair for every one who fears its influence to see it before he judges. Naturally I lay the refusal of a permit to the fact that the city officials did not see the picture. New York accepted it in the light of an educational entertainment. Fifteen schools came to see the picture in lieu of a history lesson. I tried to give an exact reproduction of the reconstruction period and left out as many of the harrowing features as I could consistently. I desired the peace idea to be uppermost. I feel that is what the world needs just now."

+ + +

Mr. Griffith changed the subject then and did not return to "The Birth of a Nation," but I fancied I detected just a little bit of disappointment in his voice. It would be only human to desire a production of this magnitude to win approval, a production in which 18,000 persons and 3,000 horses took part.

David W. Griffith.

Perhaps in the days to come, when the "movies" have reached a higher pinnacle of fame, there will be other producers who will give us magnificent and matchless spectacular dramas; but I doubt if the world will ever have another David Griffith.

His early struggles with the camera and with raw material have helped him reach his present place. He has been director, writer and camera man, all that we might have better photodramas. He is the pioneer Belasco of pictures, and for his success, born both of hard work and talent, he deserves the highest praise.

Billboard 5/29

RACE FILM BILL PASSES HOUSE

Chicago, May 21.—A bill to prohibit the exhibition of any film that shows a lynching or unlawful hanging, and is based on the theory that presentation of such pictures tends to incite race hatred and rioting, passed the House at Springfield on May 18, by a vote of 111 to 2.

The bill was introduced by Representative Jackson, one of the two colored members from Chicago, and, if it becomes a law, such pictures as The Nigger, The Clansman and The Birth of a Nation would be barred from exhibition in Illinois.

Representative Louis J. Pierson, of Wilmette, led the fight against the bill. He made an extended argument, alleging that the bill as drawn affects much more than the negro race problems. He contended in his speech that the bill, if it becomes a law, prohibits in a religious way the use of any production of the crucifixion in any church, any film which would raise the racial issue in any way, and, in effect, would put moving pictures out of business.

ERROR IN FILM BILL

Chicago, May 21.—Thomas Curran, of Chicago, yesterday told representatives of picture manufacturers that a mistake had been made in the drafting of his picture censorship bill—that it was not intended to charge $1 per foot after the first 1,000 feet for the examination of films.

The bill, as it now stands before the House, provides for a State board of moving picture censors to examine all pictures shown in Illinois and that an examination charge of $1 for the first 1,000 feet and $1 per foot for all over 1,000 feet be made. Mr. Curran stated that the House bill was intended to read the same as the Senate bill on the same subject, which provides for an examination charge of $1 for the first 1,000 feet and $1 for each additional 1,000 feet.

Mr. Curran said he will introduce an amendment correcting the error.

6 American 5/27

MAYOR TO PASS ON 'BIRTH OF NATION' FILM

Thompson Declines to Commit Self in Advance on Disputed "Movie" Play.

Protest against the revocation of the permit to exhibit "The Birth of a Nation," one of the most elaborate moving picture films ever made, has led Mayor Thompson to decide to inspect the picture, if asked to do so by the producers.

When brought before the city moving picture censors last February the picture was passed upon by Mrs. Carter H. Harrison and Charles C. Fitzmorris, secretary to the Mayor. Both approved, and a permit was issued for its exhibition. The film was not ready for public exhibition and when it was there had been a change in the city administration.

Soon after taking office, Mayor Thompson was asked by many negroes to revoke the permit on the ground that it portrayed their race in an unfavorable light.

SAY RIOTS FOLLOWED.

They also said that riots had followed its exhibition in other cities. Without further examination and having no information that the picture was out of the ordinary run that is daily passed upon, Mayor Thompson revoked the permit.

Since then leading citizens, including fil mproducers, have explained the film to Mayor Thompson. They said such drastic action was an unwarranted and arbitrary blow at their business. They argued that the producers had spent $150,000 to perfect the picture and that they were business men who would not wantonly waste money on an enterprise that could not stand the test of inspection.

WOULD INSPECT FILM.

Because of these pleas, Mayor Thompson announced to-day that he would view the picture himself if asked by the producers. He would not commit himself as to what the outcome of his inspection would be.

"I will be glad to look at the film," said Mayor Thompson.

"I have not seen it and all I know about it is that many negroes objected to it because of the prejudice which they said the picture had raised against them.

"I believe the negro is entitled to as much protection from class hatred as a German, an Irishman or a Swede.

SEES NO REASON FOR RIOTS.

"When the producers asked for permission to exhibit the picture in Chicago I asked for information about the effects it had produced elsewhere. I was told that it had caused riots. I don't see why Chicago should have anything that causes riots. However, I'll be glad to see the picture if the producers ask me."

He would not say whether he thought this inspection would result in permission to exhibit the film.

Tribune May 28

12

FLICKERINGS

By KITTY.

Behind the Screen in "The Nigger."

OCCASIONALLY a ray of light comes sweeping across a thankless task, such as seeing pictures for other folk. Of such is this. It is also an interesting commentary, by one very intimately concerned, on a vital picture phase of today. William H. Lippert, the unwilling maker of the scenario for the William F. Fox production of "The New Governor," more generally known as "The Nigger," now at the Ziegfeld, speaks now illuminatingly from the safe haven of his scenario ship with the Selig company:

"My Dear Miss Kelly:

"I want to thank you for your criticism of 'The Nigger.' There is not another critic in the country who has been as bold and fearless as you, and in panning this atrocious film, of which I am the unhappy author of the script, you have done the public splendid service.

"'The Nigger' was the last work I did in New York before a kind Providence directed Col. William N. Selig to bring me away from that nauseating task which fate had placed me in after leaving the staff of the Lubin company.

"As the scenario editor of the Fox Film corporation I fought against the purchase of the Sheldon play. But Fox bought it anyway, thinking perhaps he might gain something by trailing along and getting some of the benefit that might accrue from Griffith's production of 'The Clansman.'

"When he bought it there was nothing left to do but make it or give up my meal ticket, and I could not afford to do that, for there were two little brown heads at home who needed food and clothes.

"Probably you do not know, and it has never been told before, but I think you should have the privilege of announcing it if you care to, that Robert Edeson threw up his contract calling for $1,000 a week rather than play the part of Phil Morrow in the picture. And that Lloyd B. Carleton, also now with the Selig forces, refused to make the picture, for the reason that the subject of miscegnation was a nauseating, disgusting theme, and that no good would accrue to any one connected with the production. While making it both Mr. Edeson and Mr. Carleton and I had daily conferences, and when I saw how they regarded it can you wonder that my heart was never in the work?

"When I had finished it I felt as though I did not want to look my family in the face again, and for days the taste did not leave my mouth, and I was grateful when the chance came to come here and do adaptations for a producer like Col. Selig, who has never yet catered to maudlin or suggestive sentimentalists.

"What the country needs is not legislation against race films, but against a certain class of manufacturers who are prone to film such subjects that will have commercial value solely because of their immorality, lasciviousness, or mongrel thoughts, that were never considered fit for the pure, clean drama.

"Such plays were never conceived with the idea of adding anything to the credit of the American stage. They were written to catch the dollars of the public, and they failed to catch many of them.

"Now to be inflicted with them all over again is the worst epidemic that has attacked the cinema field, and the public is appreciative. I am sure that you are brave enough to call a spade a spade.

"You may use any portion of this if it will aid you in your splendid efforts to prevent a repetition of such monstrosities. Thanking you again for your fearless and honest criticism, please believe me, always faithfully, WILLIAM H. LIPPERT."

* * *

D. W. Griffith has announced his next big feature film will be "The Quest of the Holy Grail." It will, of course, be a big spectacular production, showing at fitting times thousands of "Sir Knights."

* * *

Post

FRIDAY, MAY 28, 1915.

The Censorship Again.

The question whether the showing of an elaborate moving-picture drama, "The Birth of a Nation," shall be permitted in Chicago brings up again the troublesome issue of censorship. The objectors to the play fear that it may intensify race prejudice or, perhaps, even lead to riots, as, if we remember aright, performances of the stage play based on the same material—a novel by Thomas Dixon dealing with southern reconstruction days—actually did.

Speaking generally, we believe in censorship—but on one condition. That is, that the public shall be the censor. The public can delegate its sovereign power of self-government to representatives, and has to, altho the results are probably not as satisfactory as they might be. But the public cannot delegate its aesthetic taste. The minute it begins to let an official or a board or a group of volunteers decide what it shall see or what it shall not see it has abdicated a right more fundamental than that of political self-government. For even in bureaucratic countries where the citizens prefer to be governed efficiently rather than misgovern themselves, their tastes are usually left free, and any effort to control those tastes would be resented by the most politically submissive.

In such a country, however, the political aspect of a work of art embracing such a burning public question as that of race might cause the picture play in question to be prohibited. In America we assume that burning questions are just the questions that should be discussed publicly and fearlessly.

Are we to draw back from that attitude just because the discussion of one question is apt to be a little too noisy? Suppose it to be true that this play, by the very artistic merit it possesses, by its actuality and detail, may do harm. Then let us take the harm rather than risk the loss of the good that freedom brings. The censorship, once applied to this play, makes a precedent when some other debatable topic is treated in art. There are enemies to every good cause, and there may come a day when friends of the negro—who may also be friends of other progressive causes—may find the weapon that some of them are now invoking against this play used against themselves.

That the public is stupid and may be inflamed by what it sees in this, that or the other form of art is no argument for the suppression of all art that does not happen to be peaceful in content and bland in its presentation. The only thing to do is to educate the public. If that is too long and dangerous a course, with too little hope of success, then let us advertise for a competent dictator and end the whole democratic farce. But we cannot possibly run the ship of state with sails of democracy in fair weather and haul them down and stoke up a little auxiliary engine of despotism every time we strike a squall.

Tribune

THE BIRTH OF A NATION.

Chicago, May 26.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Relative to the views so well expressed in your editorial on "The Birth of a Nation," it may be said that Chicago is warmly to be commended for refusing to permit the show to appear within its borders. A storm of indignation has been aroused in Boston over its presentation, indignation voiced and spread by such men as Gov. Walsh, the Hon. Samuel W. McCall, and many of the clergy.

C. DE W. BROWER.

Tribune
May 29

Examiner

THE COURTS AND CENSORSHIP.

In New York the censor prohibited the production of a moving picture called "The Ordeal." It, like "The Birth of a Nation," gave no offense to public morals or decency, but was feared as a provocative of nationalistic prejudice and bitterness. It presented the desolation and sadness in parts of France traversed by the Germans in the Franco-Prussian war. The censor held that it would offend German-Americans and refused to let it be shown.

The film company went to court, and the judge who issued an injunction restraining the commissioner of licenses from interfering with the photoplay said that national distinctions could not be urged in an American court as a reason for shaping or coloring decisions.

In the jurisdiction of the court there could be no classes of citizenship and no increase of rights by hyphenization. It is enough to give Americans a start to realise that we must have a judicial statement of this fact. The other important point is the assertion of judicial control over bureaucratic government.

The rights of the public are not to be abridged by bureaucracy, but are under the protection of the judiciary. The growth of censorship, undoubtedly stimulated by the moving picture, is a development which no American devoted to ideals of freedom can observe without alarm. The complexities in the situation are recognized and there is no disposition to push hard and fast rules to the extreme, but the censorship is an anti-American institution.

The use of censorship easily may tend to the misuse of it, and the position of the courts as a corrective to check abuse of power by what is virtually an extra legal authority and might easily become an autocratic and stupid authority, must constantly be kept in mind.

FLICKERINGS

By KITTY

Court Wallops Film Censorship.

SUPREME COURT JUSTICE WHITTAKER of New York recently took a wallop at hyphenated citizenship and at the same time dealt a stinging blow at indiscriminate film censorship, when he made permanent the temporary injunction restraining the commissioner of licenses from interfering with the Life Photo Film company's picture play, "The Ordeal."

The play tells the story of a dream during the Franco-Prussian war. A German officer, in the dream, is condemning the sweetheart, mother, and sister of a French soldier to be shot. The father of the family is shot while defending his home. Then the dreamer wakes and is rejoiced to see his loved ones safe.

When the play was first shown Deputy Commissioner of Licenses Kaufman conferred with the national board of censors, and it was agreed that the play might arouse bitterness in Germans and German-Americans. Commissioner Bell also took that view, so he ordered the play withdrawn under penalty of canceling the license of its producers.

Then the injunction was applied for. In his decision Justice Whittaker said:

"The term 'American' includes all classes of citizens, native and naturalized, irrespective of where they originally came from, whether it be Germany or any other country. The court cannot give judicial sanction to the grouping of American citizens in different classes, and shape or color its decisions in accordance therewith. What has lately become known as hyphenated citizenship has no color or standing. It cannot properly be recognized by the court or any other branch of the government. The plaintiff should not, therefore, be interfered with in the transaction of its legitimate business because of the supersensitiveness of alien residents."

In reply to the argument that the production of the play might occasion racial differences, Justice Whittaker said:

"Both Commissioner Bell and his deputy, Mr. Kaufman, testified that there was nothing in the picture to which an American could take exception. The opposition and threats of the defendant are based, therefore, solely on the ground that the national board of censors and deputy commissioner feared the disapproval of foreigners. The national board of censors is a self-constituted body. It is not organized by law, and it is a question how far a public officer charged with exercising official powers upon his own judgment should base his opinions upon those of the board of censors and the deputy commissioner."

Justice Whittaker said the play could create no racial strife "to a sensible and ordinary mind."

May 29

Chicag

BY JAMES WARREN CURRIE.

The exhibitors of "The Birth of a Nation," a masterpiece of David Wark Griffith, are still awaiting permission to show the picture to Chicago. And daily bulletins given under stress to the newspapers and people who want to know are always the same, "The situation remains unchanged," like the monotonous response of hospital officials to the friends of a man who lies in danger of death.

I saw "The Birth of a Nation." When I left the theater I could not talk. My nerves were tense and quivering from suppressed emotions. I had seen an epic thrown boldly into the light, the sweep of armies and the clash of arms, the tears of women and the curses of men, the joy and sorrow of youthful love and the cadenced rhythm of a national hymn. For Griffith has visualized poetry.

Griffith says he conceived the idea of "The Birth of a Nation" one day while reading Woodrow Wilson's "Division and Reunion." He already knew "The Clansman," having read the book and seen the play.

"The era of the civil war and the reconstruction which followed," he says, "is the most dramatic part of the history of our country. I think it is the most dramatic part of the history of the world."

IDEA FROM WILSON.

So he went to work with the master mind, and the gift of welding men and women to his wishes and completed a work that favors of all the arts. "The Clansman" furnished him some dramatic incidents and some intimate knowledge of the methods of the Ku Klux Klan. Woodrow Wilson gave him the first idea of producing such a work. And libraries and paintings and a staff of scholars gave him the innumerable details that enabled him to complete it. For that is the way Griffith works.

There is a theme to "The Birth of a Nation" which is told in the name. There is not one story. "The Clansman" is one of the strands in the tapestry that tells of the little loves and hates of men on a background of tremendous struggle and history in the making.

For "The Birth of a Nation" is done in bold strokes, like a giant panel, and into the panel is painted with the tiny brush all the details of the stories of individuals. There is the panel and the miniature and one man has done both.

Before this picture all battle scenes taken before the camera were highly and justly dangerous. They were jokes. The battle scene in "The Birth of a Nation" raises the battle lust in the one who sees. There are new ideas in photography, new conceptions of the value of distances and panorama. There is a scene in which is a panorama of three miles.

STORY OF THE '60s.

The story tells of the people of the '60s. It deals strictly with history. There is nothing in it to arouse race prejudice or mob violence. The villain in the piece is the white man, always the white man. The negro is shown, as he was then, a people uncertain and a little fearful of freedom, a simple, lovable race, some members of which had been played upon by scheming and unscrupulous politicians.

And thus Griffith "splashed at a ten-league canvas with brushes of comet's hair." And there was seen a country in the throes of labor that a nation might be born, and the wild, tense struggle of a sovereign people with a force that for a while threatened them with worse than death, and the incessant sound of music, wild and soft and moody, fast or slow, or stirring, as when the klans were called with a weird trumpet note that roared in two notes like "yoho." If Chicago does not see "The Birth of a Nation" it is Chicago's loss. It is a royal painting.

8

Tribune May 25

VIEWS OF FILM CENSORSHIP.

Chicago, May 25.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—THE TRIBUNE'S editorial on "The Birth of a Nation" this morning is a comprehensive comment on the subject of censorship.

That there are many films produced which should never be shown we all realize. That an arbitrary board of censorship should have the final word on this means of influencing public opinion is absolutely inconceivable in our system of government.

Prompt arrest and legal—not arbitrary—penalties for showing improper films would achieve every object which may be obtained through censorship, and would do so without the dangers of the censorial system.

When we read "Cut out by censor" many of us are inclined to smile and let it pass. When we read of one of Victor Hugo's plays that "it was interdicted by the censor," we immediately have a chilling sensation of continental officialism. Between the two there is no dividing line. ROBERT H. GILLMORE.

STATE CENSORSHIP OF MOVIES.

Chicago, May 24.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—A blow is contemplated against home rule in Chicago, and all good citizens should interest themselves in the bills to create a state board of moving picture censors consisting of three members. Thinking persons will know that such censorship could not possibly be beneficial.

The Chicago moving picture censor board has performed its work admirably. A few years ago many people would not attend a moving picture theater, but since the pictures have been censored theaters have been opened in all parts of the city and one can attend feeling sure he will not be shocked by what is shown.

Several other cities will not accept pictures for exhibition unless passed by the Chicago board, which goes to show the efficiency of the present board.

State censorship has been tried in several states, but from the class of pictures passed conditions do not seem to have been improved. E. J. JOHNSON.

Ny. Telegraph 5/31

CENSOR BILLS ARE ALL HELD OVER

Massachusetts Legislators Defer Action on Recommendation of Ways and Means Committee.

VICTORY FOR THE FILM MEN

(Special Correspondence The Morning Telegraph.)

BOSTON, May 26.

As a result of the unanimous report returned to the Senate to-day by the Ways and Means Committee all bills concerning State-wide motion picture censorship have been put over until the next session of the General Court.

Exchange men and exhibitors regard the action as a big victory and are highly pleased.

United opposition by the film men and the tremendous political power of moving pictures, revealed by recent censorship agitation due to the opposition to "The Birth of a Nation," is held responsible for the postponement. It had been feared that the Lowell bill, which was regarded as the most obnoxious, might be passed in the face of the opposition of the motion picture men because of its powerful backing, but it has been put over with the others.

CAN THEY KEEP IT UP?

This suit, started by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, has been in evidence ever since the picture began to run in public a few months ago. As the film continued to draw big houses and the average negro citizens remained calm in spite of the supposed insult to their race contained in the production, it appears as though the association members went to a wholly unnecessary amount of trouble merely for the sake of kicking up a row about nothing and keeping under the publicity spotlight.

Anyhow, it's all over now—the law wrangle, we mean. For this relief much thanks.

Tribune May 25

David W. Griffith Tells How He Entered "Movie" Business.

By Mae Tinee.

I TRIED three doors at the Illinois theater before I found one that would open.

"Goodness!" I said to myself. "Is it possible that after all I'm not going to get to see that man?" Whereupon the fourth door opened and I scatted through the lobby and up the marble steps that led to the office where I expected to find the man of the hour of moving pictures, Mr. David W. Griffith, waiting for me.

The others in the office vanished as though touched by a magic wand as Mr. Griffith shook hands with me. He's tall, clean shaven, blue eyed, and brown haired and has an English accent, though he was born in Kentucky.

"My dear young lady," Mr. Griffith said, "I have the same horrible aversion to publicity that characterizes Eva Tanguay, Charlie Chaplin, and others of our best known public characters. A shrinking violet I am—not! No! Consider me at your service. I suppose you would like me to tell you confidentially whether or not 'The Birth of a Nation' will be shown in Chicago. Give you some 'inside dope.' Is that the idea?"

"O, of course, I wouldn't mind knowing" I said, "but I'll leave it to the news writers to inveigle information along those lines. I am here for the sole purpose of merely chatting informally with a great man for the purpose of interesting greatly that prominent class of people known as motion picture fans."

"They don't want to know about me, do they?" Mr. Griffith inquired. "Where I was born and all that? It's the pictures they want to hear about, isn't it?"

"Yes—and the man behind the pictures. How he happened to 'go into' pictures, and all that."

"I am here to assure you," Mr. Griffith said, with twinkling eyes, "that as a child I never dreamed of such a career as has been mine. I aspired to be a lawyer—or a writer. My preference was writing and I did 'several little things'—a play, some verse, and a couple of stories. The verse and one story were printed in publications I blush to mention, and James K. Hackett took my play, which was called 'The Fool and the Girl,' and did such unutterable things to it—with me cursing, praying, and staking my last dollars on it in the background—that, shortly afterwards as I walked the byways of New York, penniless, seeking work, I made a solemn vow—never to write again. A little later I obtained a position in the scenario department of the Biograph company."

"Writing?"

"O, yes—but that was different."

"Did they let you direct pictures from the start?"

Mr. Griffith shook his head and examined with minutest care the cane he held across his knees.

"No," he said after a minute, "I had to beg before I was allowed to do that. Then, when I began to try to introduce improvements I almost lost my job. The camera man was king in those days. And the camera man wanted straight photography or none at all. He scoffed at the idea of 'fade-outs' and reverse lighting, and insisted that the camera must stand on a level, especially when taking scenes where crowds are seen in the distance. I used to just about have to prostrate myself at his feet to even get him to try anything new. In 'Judith of Bethulia' we took the crowd scenes from the top of a mountain, but it was a weary time before I could get that camera man to climb the mountain. He wanted to stay on the level, a proceeding which would have made the crowds look like rabbits. However—" He paused and looked at me questioningly. I nodded.

"It was a great picture—but, of course, not to be compared with 'The Birth of a Nation.'"

We were quiet for a moment. Then I asked: "What do you think constitutes the great appeal in 'The Birth of a Nation'?"

He said strongly: "Because it's the story of a lost cause. Napoleon is a great and popular figure in history—not because of his triumphs—but because of the island of Elba. And what in the life of Christ has influenced most people throughout the ages? His beautiful life? No. What then? His crucifixion—the cross."

"Did the idea of making the reconstruction period into a photoplay come to you suddenly?" I asked. He shook his head. "No, it had been bothering me for months. I knew such a picture could be a marvel if worked out rightly. Eight months it took me, Miss Tinee, to make it."

"I can believe it! How in the world did you direct those battle scenes? Surely no megaphone would be strong enough."

"No," he said, sitting forward interestedly, "we did it through a system of telephonic communication. I would pass the word to a general a certain distance away. He to the next one and so on. The camera was set on a platform 125 feet above the ground. Action of three miles was photographed."

The telephone jangled at his elbow and his secretary rushed in to answer it. Boston was calling. Somebody would speak to Mr. Griffith. We'd been talking for some time and I thought that he must be hungry. I knew I was. So I said goodby and gave Boston the floor.

Between you and me he is vurr', vurr' nice!

Ny. Telegram 5-26

Triumph of Griffith Film.

The fourth month of D. W. Griffith's spectacle of the American military era, "The Birth of a Nation," shows undiminished attendance at the Liberty Theatre. The attraction seems eminently suited to the present, with European complications and the portent of possible war overshadowing the land. Civil strife that grew out of misunderstanding and jealousy, the victory of the North and the terrible aftermath of Reconstruction furnish a succession of startling themes. Never before has America's greatest war been put on film, canvas or panorama. "The Birth of a Nation" proved of intensest interest last week to thousands of those who attended the naval review and to hundreds of the jackies. It is the one big patriotic entertainment in town.

Mr. Griffith and Our Busy Censors

By THE HATTONS

A CURIOUS plague of censorship is upon us. Chicago soon will be like Boston and Berlin—a city of "don'ts" and "verbotens." Liberty is becoming a rarer and rarer word. It eventually will be retired to the museums like the dodo. Our rampant reformers proceed fanatically on their way, ignorant of the fact that censorship is a species of anti-toxin which eventually lowers the powers of moral resistance, just as too much physical inoculation puts the individual at the mercy of all other germs.

Gone is the faith in the human being to react to the strengths of his own character; no longer do the watchdogs of our morals believe in the health of individual election.

Censorship of any sort throws us into a peculiar irritation. It is the one thing that makes us yearn for the mind, the voice and the soap box of Bernard Shaw. We would plant them all at the corner of Clark and Randolph streets just at the theater hour, hoping for arrest and the resultant laying down of the issue.

The latest exhibition of our petty provincialism in the respect of censorship is the prohibition of the "Birth of a Nation" film play.

We voted for Mayor Thompson on the solemn assurance from one of his most intimate followers that he would not repeat the Dogberryism of the preceding administration in the matter of public theatricals.

But at the very beginning of his administration the genial commodore disappoints us by forbidding that which even his conformist predecessor had sanctioned.

+ + +

"The Birth of a Nation" is America's greatest achievement in the films. It is a masterpiece of kinetescopic staging, the most dramatic visualization of national history that ever has been accomplished.

Facts have been tamed rather than accentuated; the film is absolutely lacking in artistic liberties. The picturing of reconstruction history is richer than any in the libraries.

Why this timidity in the presence of truth; this unwillingness to face fact; this feminine unwillingness to admit vital record?

The play has been running for months in Los Angeles, New York and other more liberty-loving centers. Nothing has happened in any of these cities. There have been no race riots, no spectators have been incited to do wrong, no buildings have been burned.

We were permitted the other evening to see a private exhibition of "The Birth of a Nation." Nothing in the way of a film play has ever laid such hold on our interest and imagination. For years we have been imploring our playwrights to visualize for us the colorful and dramatic scenes which lie in the records of our national past.

It has remained for the wonder-working Griffith to realize this dream. He has put before us the picturesque southern life of the immediate ante-bellum period; the battlefield pageantry of the great struggle; the shadows of the dark days that followed. One might read histories for years without etching into the mind the pictures which you carry away from the Griffith film.

The long-awaited finger of genius has touched the "movies." Is Chicago to be denied the opportunity of seeing its greatest achievement? If Mayor Thompson has a single artistic instinct in him he will reconsider his ill-advised decision as to "The Birth of a Nation."

+ + +

Herald May 26

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION."

The National Association for the Advancement of the Colored People has succeeded in its effort to prevent the presentation in Boston of the photo play, "The Birth of a Nation." That city, following the example of Chicago, has decided that no good purpose can be served by permitting the exhibition of pictures calculated to excite race prejudice.

Both Mayor Thompson and the Boston authorities have correctly estimated the probable effect of the play. The editor of The State Journal has seen the picture and is satisfied that its reproduction generally will have an evil influence. It is particularly dangerous for the reason that it is a magnificent production—the last word in drama for the camera.

The photo play, like the dramatic production on which it is based, Mr. Dixon's "The Clansman," is certain to create bad feeling towards negroes. It recalls controversies growing out of the reconstruction of the south which might better be permitted to remain buried with the animosities developed by civil war.

There is now no occasion for reopening the question of whether the Ku Klux Klan was necessary to the safety of the south during the days of Thaddeus Stevens.

Regs. State Journal 5/27

D. W. Griffith in Plea For His Greatest Film

By LOUELLA PARSONS.

MOTION pictures' most famous creator, David Wark Griffith, came to Chicago last week to make his plea for his most powerful creation, "The Birth of a Nation."

This picture, which has taken its place shoulder to shoulder with the highest form of the spoken drama and which has been the cause of more discussion than the entire output of every film company combined, is now quietly reposing in the vault at the Illinois Theater, waiting for the permission of the ones in authority to tell its wonderful story.

I saw David Griffith at the Illinois Theater and, by the way, I want to say that it was the moment I have lived for, to personally meet this screen poet and hear from his own lips the miracle tale of his film symphonies.

A Kindly Personality.

A quiet, well-bred gentleman, seeing the world through glasses of kindness and beautifully inclined toward leniency, even for those whose views are the opposite of his own. Such a man is the master producer, David Wark Griffith.

"It always seems foolish to talk about oneself," Mr. Griffith said in answer to my request that he tell me how he was able to select such screen successes as Mary Pickford, Blanche Sweet and Harry Walthall.

"These people are merely automatons to me," he went on. "I act out the whole thing for them, and imagine myself each individual character. I find that I get much better results from the people who have never been on the stage. Trained actors are apt to be too stagy. Take little Mae Marsh. She has been hailed by many of the foremost critics as the world's greatest screen actress. The same is true of Lillian Gish, who came to me with no previous experience. She is, with her ethereal beauty and tender depths of emotion, one of the best motion picture actresses today. Harry Walthall is beautiful material to work with, also. He is so plastic, and I thoroughly enjoyed him both in 'The Avenging Conscience' and in 'The Birth of a Nation.' Quite apart from his ability, I love Harry Walthall. He is so boy-hearted and so sunny tempered. Bobby Harron is another genius of whom I am very proud."

Found Many Stars.

"Many of the picture stars had their beginning under your direction, did they not?" I asked Mr. Griffith.

"Yes, and I take the same pride in them as I did when they were with me. In fact, I am indignant when I hear them unfavorably criticised. I went to see Blanche Sweet today in 'Stolen Goods' at Orchestra Hall. She has kept all the little gestures that I taught her, and Mary Pickford still has her saucy pout. I fixed her face and eyes the first time she ever did the Mary pout."

Mr. Griffith mentioned the fact that many of the theaters were advertising pictures made under his direction in which he had no part.

"Every picture made under my supervision bears the name Griffith on every title and with D. G. for a trademark."

Of course, we came to the fascinating subject of "The Birth of a Nation."

"It's my greatest regret," said Mr. Griffith, "that this picture has resolved itself into a racial discussion. The play is founded on the true facts of the reconstruction period, with no intent to hurt either blacks or whites. Why, the greatest villain in the play is Stoneman, a white man. If we have white villains why isn't it permissible to have an occasional black roue? The matter should not be one-sided.

Intermarriage of Races.

"The most active workers against this film have been the people who believe in the intermarriage of the races. The negro should be as much opposed to this as the white man. He has every right to be proud of his unsullied blood and to fight to maintain it. The intermarriage of any two races has never been attended with good results.

"'The Birth of a Nation' is no attack on the negro race. Why should the colored people be barred from the film any more than Shakespeare's Shylock? Isn't he a bad example of the Hebrew race. There is good and bad in every class of people, and how are we to find the good unless we see the wrong way first? Why take a romance of the civil war so seriously?

"As a matter of fact, the better class of negro has taken no part in this argument. It is not the conservative element, but rather the notoriety seeker, who have set up this great cry. In the picture I have given both sides of the colored question—the old-time faithful servant, who served his master with heroic devotion, and then later the Hampton Institute for the colored people—endeavoring to show what this race has now accomplished by its thrift and honesty.

"Furthermore, 'The Birth of a Nation' should not be judged with the ordinary motion picture. The price—$2—has placed it with the stage productions. The press, books and plays are allowed to present the true side of things, and it does not seem justice to injure this art to satisfy a few people.

True Side of Things.

"I am very proud of my testimonials," said Mr. Griffith, handing me a great box full of letters and press notices. "Rupert Hughes wrote a glowing account of 'The Birth of a Nation' for our souvenir booklet and would not accept one cent for his splendid tribute. Then Clyde Westover, the critic, who took his daughter to see the play, said that they watched the picture together, and side by side reveled in the wonderful lesson.

"Lewis Sherwin says," and Mr. Griffith read aloud the letter sent him by this eminent critic. In part it said:

Against Public Policy.

"The suppressing of 'The Birth of a Nation' is absolutely against public policy, against the spirit of the Constitution, against the very life and essence of what should be true American and democratic ideas. The mere fact that in this case we show a few members of one of the races of the United States in an unpleasant light is no argument whatever. If this factor is to be seriously considered there is hardly any limit to which the censorship may not go. The entire question raises a most dangerous precedent. If the Africans oppose the production of a play to which they object, may not the Jew, the Teuton, the Italian, Slav, Irish and Scandinavians have the same privilege? The prospect is appalling. If this film be suppressed we shall be simply serving notice upon all theatrical managers that they may only produce plays that are absolutely offensive to nobody. The consequence of that will be colorless mediocrity even worse than we have at present and a general weariness. No sane person can pretend that there is any immoral suggestion in the film concerned."

A Screen Epic.

Mr. Griffith before my departure asked me to see "The Birth of a Nation." I felt a thrill of happiness to know that I had lived to see a day when such photography, such acting and such marvelous production should come under the head of a motion picture. Only we who started at the beginning and have grown up with pictures can possibly understand what this development of the newest art means—a screen epic, as some one aptly called it.

It is a most remarkable lesson on the history of our own dear country, and the strongest and most eloquent plea for peace of any book, play or sermon that has ever been brought to my attention.

In the words of Rupert Hughes:

"It makes the most spectacular production or drama look like the work of village amateurs. It reduces to childishness the biggest thing the theater can do."

I went away feeling I had seen the most stupendous human achievement of this age, and, if I may be pardoned for saying so, a photoplay whose wonder in the years to come will stand with Homer's "Iliad," Wagner's operas and Milton's "Paradise Lost."

Tribune 6/1.

COLORED PASTORS MAY PASS ON 'BIRTH OF NATION.'

Mayor Suggests 30 or 40 Negro Ministers See Film—Will Abide by Their Verdict.

Mayor Thompson has made a new proposal to the owners of "The Birth of a Nation," the moving picture drama based on "The Clansman."

"I suggested to them that they get thirty or forty colored ministers," he said yesterday, "and let them pass on the picture. The only question I have in my mind is whether it will arouse race prejudice. If the colored ministers say it won't I have no objection to the picture being shown."

The owners of the film are out of the city. No one could be found who thought they might accept the mayor's proposition.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE.

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION."

Chicago, May 27.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Speaking of the photoplay called "The Birth of a Nation," you say: "It is in all essential episodes grounded on historical fact, representing the struggles of that terrible time in the south when the whites, back from war, saw their government taken over by the newly enfranchised blacks controlled by the northern carpetbaggers.

"What happened with the negro ascendant and how the white reëstablished his supremacy is shown with obvious natural sympathy for the south, and no doubt with such heightening of effect as dramatic art has a right to employ. It presents what the south says and the north of our day, at least, is inclined to believe to be truth."

Exactly the reverse of this is true, for there never was a time when any one of the state governments of the south was taken over by the newly enfranchised blacks controlled by the northern carpetbaggers.

That some mistakes were made during the progress of reconstruction will not be denied. How could it be otherwise? The war had just come to an end. Sectional animosity was bitter and intense. The Republican party was looked upon as the enemy of the south. No white man could identify himself with the Republican party at that time in any one of the southern states without running the risk of being socially ostracised and publicly characterized as an enemy to his section, his state, and his race. Notwithstanding these things, not less than 25 per cent of the white men of that section—men who were to the manner born, many of them ex-Confederate soldiers, identified themselves with and became leaders of the Republican party. These, in the main, were the men that the newly enfranchised blacks selected as their leaders and whose leadership they loyally and faithfully followed.

I do not hesitate to assert that the reconstructed state governments at the south were the best governments those states ever had before or have ever had since. There never was a time when there was actual physical "Negro domination," or even carpetbag domination, in any one of the reconstructed states.

The play to which you refer, instead of being "grounded on historical facts," is grounded on historical misrepresentation, without having a single actual fact as the basis of its existence. It is fiction pure and simple, painted from a diseased and prejudiced imagination, with a false and deceptive background as a basis upon which to stand. Such a play could not be anywise than mischievous in its inception and dangerous in its results, even if the scenes depicted were a truthful reproduction of actual occurrences. But when it is or ought to be a well known fact that the alleged scenes are pure fabrications with not a single background of truth to support them, their production can hardly be less than criminal. In the main they are false, slanderous, and malicious. They are calculated and intended to engender and intensify race prejudice and race hatred. In the interest of peace, order, truth, justice, and morality they should be suppressed. No good can come but much harm may result from them. It is, therefore, the duty of the authorities to suppress them, just as they would suppress any other nuisance that is calculated to incite crime and general disorder in the community.

In this connection allow me, as a southern man, to say, and to say whereof I know, that there are just two classes of white people at the south who keep this so-called race problem constantly before the public. The first class is composed of those who commercialize race prejudice simply for the dollars and cents they can make out of it. The second class is composed of those who utilize race prejudice for the purpose of securing political distinction and official recognition which they could never secure though any merit of their own. It makes no difference with these people how much harm to the public or injustice is done to any people or race as long as they can accomplish the purpose desired. They know there is not a particle of truth in anything they say or produce relative to this matter. But what difference does that make to them? The office seeker finds that this is his best paying political asset. What is the use, then, of considering or discussing the tariff, the financial, or any other subject or question as long as this mythical race question will answer the purpose? They find that this is the one question upon which they can hold the white men of the south in abject political subjection and upon which the average white man at the north can be easily fooled and deceived. As long, then, as the country believes, as you seem to believe, that these things are true and that public sentiment must tolerate them and approve methods that are criminal and practices that would be otherwise indefensible for the purpose of preventing "Negro domination," just so long will this state of affairs continue. Let us hope that the eyes of the people will eventually be opened and that justice and fair play for all will be the accepted rule of action in all parts of our country.

JOHN R. LYNCH,
Author of "The Facts of Reconstruction."

Tribune 6/2

BOTH PLAINTIFF AND JUROR.

Mayor Thompson proposes to find out for once and for all whether or not the exhibition of this "The Birth of a Nation" moving picture drama will arouse the whites of the community to acts of blood and violence against the brethren of the Second ward. Therefore and forthwith an appeal is addressed to thirty or forty colored men of the cloth to foregather at a private exhibition and decide whether the 2,500,000 or so Germans, Swedes, Italians, Chinese, and other everyday Americans living in Chicago could sit through a picture show which presents unsympathetically the negroes and northern carpetbaggers of the reconstruction days.

What a novel and interesting suggestion it is! There are always so many hard knocks ahead for the executive, who must decide when the people are divided on what they want, anyway. The permit to show was revoked and the board of censors overruled upon the protestations of some colored gentlemen, it will be recalled. Then the censored complained, and now the kin of the plaintiffs are called into court to act as jurors in the final hearing.

The procedure for the friends of the particular film and the general theory of censorship is as clear as mud.

But anyway it gives the mayor an alibi.

Griffith Makes Stars—Others Buy 'Em.

The Essanay people have picked a fine large star out of he cinemac constellation and they announce with pardonable satisfaction the contracted acquisition of Henry Walthall, the leading man who has made such efficient appearances in the Griffith masterpieces. "The Avenging Conscience" and "The Birth of a Nation," and in the later Majestic features, "Ghosts" and "Pillars of Society." George K. Spoor has just completed the negotiations which will make this star a Chicagoan. He is to be used both in features and in two reel pictures, Essanay believing in the policy of stars shining alternately in big and little things.

* *

THE BIRTH OF A NATION.

The current week will wind up the third month of the run of D. W. Griffith's great spectacle, The Birth of a Nation, at the Liberty Theatre, where it continues to attract the attention of all sorts of theatregoers. On Sunday afternoon the 150th presentation of the master picture in New York will be celebrated. Its record is without a parallel on the local stage.

The first half of the picture remains the same stirring series of marvelous drama ranging from the picturesque days of the old South to the events leading up to the Civil War and showing in stirring action the terrors and the spirit of the great conflict. Then comes the graphic reproduction of the assassination of President Lincoln and the thrills of this tragic period of American history. The final half of the picture is largely devoted to the reconstruction period in the South and the rise of the Ku Klux Klan. The wild rides of these ghostly knights of a specific era in American development remain the most thrilling series of stage pictures ever seen in the theatre. The tale has been amplified from here on and shows what sober judgment in the way of education is doing for the children of the former slaves. It brings history up to date without curtailing the dramatic strength of the marvelous production. The thrills of swift action are kept intact and the great picture stands as an achievement of wonderful effectiveness and dramatic appeal.

The Birth of a Nation at the Tremont, which is on its sixth week, is advertised for at least another month, and has been doing a land-office business as the result of the bitter controversy and rioting which resulted from the agitation fomented by the negro organizations who are now fighting for a general revision of the movie picture censorship laws of Massachusetts.

Tribune June 2

BACKERS OF PHOTOPLAY SEEK TO ENJOIN MAYOR

"Birth of Nation" Sponsors Ask That City Be Restrained from Preventing Picture Display

Petition seeking an injunction against the city of Chicago, Mayor Thompson and otohers, as officials of the city, to enjoin them from interfering with the production of "The Birth of a Nation," a motion picture, was filed in the Superior court today.

The bill recites that on compliance with city ordinances, permits were obtained, first from former Chief of Police Gleason, and later from the present chief, Charles C. Healey; later a certain element of the negro population induced the mayor to forbid the production.

The bill recites that six months in time and the expenditure of more than $100,000 was consumed in producing the picture. It is charged that the ordinance under which it is sought to prevent the production of the picture is null and void.

Tribune June 3

E: THURSDAY, JUNE

FLICKERINGS ... by KITTY

Ruling on Griffith Film Due Today.

Decision on the petition for an injunction restraining the city from preventing the exhibition of the film play, "The Birth of a Nation," at the Illinois theater is expected in the Superior court today.

The bill was filed yesterday by Attorneys Burkhalter & Grossberg, representing Joseph J. McCarthy, who is in charge of the film in Chicago. The attorneys state in the document that the film has been barred by reason of the activities of a group of Chicago negroes seeking notoriety among their own race. In defense of the teachings of the film it is stated that the characteristics of both white and black races as they existed during the period of reconstruction following the civil war are portrayed with truth, but that it does not pretend that the conditions of a historical period that is past exist at the present time.

The huge cost of the film is emphasized, together with the summary that the exhibition is of high artistic merit and is of great educational value both historically and geographically.

American June 2

Sue Mayor to Show "Birth of a Nation" Pictures in Chicago

Determined to produce the motion picture, "The Birth of a Nation," the owners, represented by Joseph J. McCarthy, brought suit in the Superior Court this afternoon to restrain Mayor Thompson and other officials from interfering with the production of the picture to-morrow.

McCarthy in his bill states that the picture was made at a cost of $100,000, that in February Police Chief James Gleason, then chief of police, granted a permit; that in April Chief Healey also granted a permit, and that the owners leased the Illinois Theater and spent $5,000 in advertising.

McCarthy states that the picture was shown in Boston, New York, San Francisco and Los Angeles and that Mayor Thompson had the permit revoked after conferences with negro citizens.

The court probably will give a hearing late this afternoon or to-morrow morning.

Examiner June 3

Injunction Asked Against City for 'Birth of Nation'

Petition by Owners of Photoplay Asserts Five Superior Court Judges May Be Prejudiced.

Owners of the motion picture play called "The Birth of the Nation" filed a petition in Superior Court yesterday asking for a temporary injunction restraining city authorities from interfering with its production in Chicago. Mayor Thompson revoked the permit two weeks ago.

They went before Judge Foell. He could not hear the case, so it will be assigned to another judge this morning. It was mentioned in the petition that there are five judges of Superior Court who might be prejudiced against the plaintiffs.

The Rev. J. P. Brushingham was delegated by Mayor Thompson to select a committee of ministers and priests to view the film, and give its opinion to the Mayor as to whether it would tend to incite race feeling.

In view of the court action, the Rev. Mr. Brushingham said, the committee would not inspect the photo play.

Herald June 4

\+ + +

"The case of Joseph McCarthy vs. the City of Chicago" will be tried before Judge William Fenimore Cooper at 10 o'clock this morning. "The Birth of a Nation," the object of contention, has created widespread interest among the motion-picture fans. Mr. McCarthy, in his bill for a temporary injunction restraining the city from interfering with the production of the play, claims that he paid the city $12 to get a permit. This, he declares, was granted first by James Gleason as chief of police and later by C. C. Healey, the present chief.

Mr. McCarthy has leased the Illinois Theater for three months and also bought the Chicago rights of the pl from the Majestic Motion Picture Company. In the event of a withdrawal of the permit Mr. McCarthy points out that the loss resulting will be considerable.

\+ + +

Tribune 6/4

14 *

FLICKERINGS from FILM LAND ... by KITTY KELLY ...

More Praises for David W. Griffith

YOU can scarcely pick up a magazine nowadays without running into something or other "moviefied." And wherever you find an article on movies there you find the top notch of praise meted out to David Wark Griffith.

Rufus Steele in the current Sunset does it very interestingly: "The influx (of stage stars) followed the discovery that the screen could reproduce the shades and subtleties of acting and magnify them in the reproduction. The all-important discovery was due not so much to the actors as to the directors and to one certain director more than to the others.

"Through the brief, astonishing history of the pictures there has moved a Christopher Columbus, who has fairly leapt from threshold to threshold of unfoldment, a man in whose throbbing brain there was ever a larger dream and in whose hand there seemed always to be a magic key. Wherever pictures of intelligent sincerity are taking form the name of David Wark Griffith is spoken with a reverence that befits one who has not only led the way, but who has literally hewed the road.

"David W. Griffith is an artist who works in a more comprehensive medium than oil, a poet who expresses his thoughts on a surface broader and deeper than a printed page. No sooner had he convinced the trembling producers that the public would stand for pictures which departed from distorted clownish action than he undertook the filming of the subtle emotions.

"A revolutionist like Griffith was able to survive only because his revolutions proved to be revelations. His innovations stood the test which the doubting producers imposed. They paid."

The largest realized dream of Griffith's is "The Birth of a Nation," whose vibrant replica of life lies wrapped in its motionless reels here, while in other communities it is flashing its thrill and beauty to enthusiastic and enjoying multitudes. Being unable to dodge the subject in magazines, it seems almost like a matter of public culture—whether you like it or not—to see his picture, just as it is to read Dickens, or hear Mary Garden, or understand about wireless telegraphy.

In the June Everybody's is an interesting article on movies devoted mainly to D. W. Griffith and his masterpiece, "The Birth of a Nation."

Examiner 6-4

* * *

The efforts of the exhibitors and David Griffith to show "The Birth of a Nation" in Chicago will bear morning buletins if the fight keeps up much longer. The latest developments in the case are a continuance of the hearing until 10 o'clock this morning and the assignment of Judge Fennimore Cooper to hear it. The delegation of ministers invited by Mayor Thompson to see and pass on the picture refused the invitation because of the filing of the petition in the Superior Court by the owners of the film, asking for a temporary injunction to prevent city authorities from interfering with its production here.

* * *

now much protested in some circles—and crown them with a title on a dignified par with theater. For the stages keep turning to screens.

The latest one is the Colonial, one of the Jones, Linick & Shaefer vaudeville strongholds, which on June 14 is to enter the picture procession with a feature program changing twice a week, on Monday and on Thursday.

A symphony orchestra is to help the pictures move along and Norman H. Field, manager during the vaudeville season, will continue in the same rôle.

* *

News 6/3

"BIRTH OF NATION" AT CRISIS

Injunction Against City as to "Movie" to Be Asked To-Morrow.

A temporary injunction restraining the city from interfering with the production of the motion picture play entitled "The Birth of the Nation" will be asked in Judge Cooper's court at 10 a. m. to-morrow by the owners of the film. A petition in this connection was filed in the Superior court yesterday and the petitioners went before Judge Foell, who could not hear the case. Judge Sullivan reassigned it to-day after spirited argument between the opposing attorneys.

Attorney George L. Reker, representing the city, objected at first to the assignment of the case to Judge Cooper on the ground that by such action the petitioners practically would be having their choice of judges, they having set up in their petition that five other judges of the Superior court might be prejudiced against them. Attorneys Robert P. Burkhalter and J. G. Grossberg, representing the film company, asserted that the action of the city in withdrawing the permit already given for the film production was contrary to law and an injustice to their clients, who had spent large sums of money in the preparation of the pictures.

"I could understand such high handed actions under the military regime of some of the warring European countries," said Mr. Grossberg.

Maj. M. L. C. Funkhouser was in court but did not speak.

N.Y. Telegraph June 4

Griffith Goes West.

D. W. Griffith, who has been in New York for several days completing arrangements for the tours of "The Birth of a Nation," left yesterday for Chicago en route to California, where he is to begin work on another mammoth picture.

Just before leaving, Mr. Griffith received a full report on the favorable action taken by the newly elected Board of Censors in Boston, which he thinks is certain to put an end to the agitation against his picture in all parts of the country. "The Birth of a Nation" has now passed over every legal barrier placed in its way by the negro intermarriage societies opposed to its presentation in New York, Boston, Los Angeles and San Francisco.

The situation in Boston was unique, and threatened the freedom of the stage and the press. Through the pressure of negroes who are promoting the intermarriage of blacks and whites, Governor Walsh had a bill rushed through the Legislature about ten days ago creating a Board of Censors to pass upon "The Birth of a Nation," now at the Tremont in Boston. The board consists of Mayor Curley, Commissioner of Police O'Meara and Chief Justice Bolster, of the Municipal Court. After viewing the picture, the board met last Wednesday night, and decided that "The Birth of a Nation" was in no way contrary to good morals, and should not be suppressed.

As a result of the agitation, motion picture interests in Massachusetts are effecting an organization to protect them against unfair legislation and unjust censorship.

Tribune June 5

Court Arguments Over "Birth of a Nation"

Arguments were begun this morning before Judge Cooper in the Superior Court in support of the bill seeking an injunction to restrain the city from interfering with the production of "The Birth of a Nation," a motion picture. It was contended in behalf of the complainant that the city, inasmuch as it has previously issued permits for the presentation of the picture, has lost control of the matter, and is prevented from interfering. That the exercise of any discretion vested in the city has been abused was also contended.

Post 6/4 –

News Jun

'REEL' HEARING IS

Spirited Clashes Mis- of a Nation"

"Movie fans" of Chicag... were shock to-day. They ... Judge Cooper's court to listen... ited passage at arms betwee... counsel and were obliged to sit through a painfully technical argument having to do with the city's right to revoke a license. The occasion was the application for a temporary injunction to prevent the city from interfering with the production of the film entitled "The Birth of a Nation." A handful of negro listeners evidenced the interest of that race. The picture drama is "southern" and calculated, say some, to arouse race prejudice.

For a time the "fans" harkened with eagerness, but as counsel for the owners of the film read page after page from dull books of law their heads drooped and they began to whisper among themselves like the members of a church choir during sermon time. The whisperers included young men and young women and not a few older persons. The young men did most of the whispering and the young women most of the listening. Occasionally a fair "fan" giggled, and it became evident that the young man at her side had scored heavily with some bit of witticism.

Shortly before noon the "movie" people still had the floor and Attorney George L. Reker for the city was awaiting a chance to take a hand in the proceedings.

A Colu...

FLICKERINGS From FILM LAND

by KITTY KELLY

"Birth of Nation" Decision Today.

THE battle for "The Birth of a Nation," the Griffith photoplay, was waged all day yesterday in the court of Judge William Fenimore Cooper, before a roomful of observers, a few of them negroes. The judge held the decision over until 10 o'clock this morning.

In the light of verbal combat a strange situation developed as existing in censorial quarters.

J. G. Grossberg of the defending firm, Burkhalter & Grossberg, stated that the permits had been granted under the two administrations, Carter H. Harrison's and William Hale Thompson's, respectively, April 25 and May 6, and the revocation made May 22. He quoted authorities to show that such action was warrantable only during the first three days after inspection, except in violation of the only provisory section in the ordinance, the admission of minors when so conditioned.

In the ordinance he found no right of the mayor to revoke permits, and he regarded permits granted as binding the good faith of the city, making it safe for the licensee to go ahead in making contracts, as had been done in this case to an extent of a $30,000 consideration, in addition to the fortune spent in the original making of the picture.

No picture precedent existed, he said, but situations in regard to permits and buildings involving property losses were cited, in which it was shown that neither charters nor ordinances authorize the deprivation of a citizen in any invested rights, such power of forcing forfeiture resting plainly in the legislature.

Mr. Grossberg insisted that when the permits were issued and the three days allowed to lapse the judiciary power was exhausted, and that the effect of the further action by the chief of police was confiscation of the $30,000 invested on the good faith of the permits.

Assistant Corporation Counsel George Reker came back with the assurance that "E. W. Griffith knew permits had not been granted," a statement he illuminated by explaining the history of censorship from its installation in 1912, with the authorization of second deputy of police as motion picture censor, from whose office, he said, the permit of April 25 had been improperly issued, for the picture was never inspected nor authorized by the second deputy.

Thus, the permit being void or illegal, there was no occasion for a revocation, he explained, the one made simply being done to make it seem pleasant.

Mr. Reker was unable to see any element of damage in the situation to the owners of the film, declaring that none of the contracts engaged in held. He asserted that the permit was secured clandestinely by the "man who sneaked in and got it."

This aroused the interest of Judge Cooper in the physical issuing of the permits and led into a strange labyrinth. Counsel Reker didn't know who issued them—the second being shown merely as a duplicate—except that they came out of the office of the second deputy signed by a clerk.

Then Maj. Funkhouser was introduced into the situation.

"The mayor's secretary, Charles Fitzmorris," he said, "called me on the phone and asked to look at the picture the next morning (Feb. 25). He said he didn't want the censors there, so I arranged they should not be. Three or four were there unofficially, altogether about twenty people, including Mrs. Harrison. I did not go in until the ninth reel and I stayed only fifteen or twenty minutes—saw only about half of one reel.

"There was no one else there from the police department besides myself and I ordered the censor in charge to tell the censors not to view it officially.

"Mr. Fitzmorris gave instructions to issue the permit without any cuts and the records so show."

Maj. Funkhouser asserted Mr. Fitzmorris said he was the representative of the mayor to censor pictures, while he himself saw less than one reel and couldn't remember what that was about.

Counsel Reker complained that nobody had seen the picture and he expressed grievance that no colored people had been present at the city hall showing.

Judge Cooper invited any one who had seen the picture and wished to testify against its objectionability to come to the witness chair, but nobody responded, so D. W. Griffith was called upon as knowing more about it than any one.

He aroused Mr. Reker's ire and the audience's laughter by his manipulation of the counsel's questions.

This motion picture play he declared to be founded on certain historical facts before the civil war, during the civil war, and the reconstruction period, and that it had in it no scene not portrayed in plays, dramas, and stories since the making of stories.

The question of the impropriety and indecency of the picture was battened about, but as no one opposing it had seen it and those who advocated it insisted there was nothing to question, no agreement of opinion could be arrived at.

Judge Cooper then took the case under advisement.

SEEN ON THE SCREEN

Herald 6/5 –

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Fate of "Birth of a Nation" Will Be Decided Today

MOVING picture critics, playwrights, "movie" fans and forty negro ministers and their feminine cohorts crowded the court of Judge William Fenimore Cooper yesterday to hear the evidence offered in the suit filed by Joseph McCarthy for a temporary bill of injunction against the city interfering with the production of David W. Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation" in Chicago.

Judge Cooper will give his decision at 10 o'clock this morning.

Almost from the time court opened the spectators found much amusement in the testimony offered.

+ + +

J. G. Grossberg, one of the attorneys for the complainant, first cited instances where, after a license had been granted, the municipal authorities were unsuccessful in revoking the permit. He said the play in question was a "stationary mechanical," in which no change could be made after the licence was granted that could endanger the morals of a community.

Charles Reker, assistant corporation counsel, declared the permit granted was not legal. He charged it had been obtained in a roundabout way from former Mayor Harrison's secretary, Charles Fitzmorris, and that no censors were permitted to review the picture.

The first witness called was Major M. L. C. Funkhouser, who said he had not granted the permit, but that it had been given in his absence by Mrs. Eva L. Slawitsky, chief of the censors.

The major admitted seeing the picture in part before the permit was granted. The crowd laughed when he said he could remember nothing about it. He said the picture was exhibited about Feb. 23 or 24 and that Mr. Fitzmorris had stated the censor board was not to report on it.

Mrs. Slawitsky said she and probably four others of the censors had seen the picture. She failed to remember much about it.

When Judge Cooper invited anyone who had seen the picture and had anything to say against it to come forward no one responded.

C. J. Trainor, master in chancery, testified he had seen the picture, and that he considered it one of the greatest achievements of the age, both from an artistic and historical standpoint. He testified to seeing the censors taking notes and said the general supposition was that they were there to pass on the picture.

This testimony of Mr. Trainor was supported by his son, Attorney J. Fred Reever, and William Webster, a private detective.

Mr. Griffith, author and producer of "The Birth of a Nation," testified the story had not been written as a racial discussion, but rather to portray the history before and after the civil war. He said the picture had been running in New York for thirteen weeks and named Boston, Los Angeles and other cities where the picture had been shown.

+ + +

Mr. Reker asked the witness if it were true that "Gus," one of the negro characters in the play, was shown pursuing a white girl.

"I suppose so," answered Mr. Griffith, "In every play from Keystone comedies up to dramas the villain still pursues the heroine."

"Isn't he a renegade negro?"

"What is a renegade negro?" was the retort.

Mr. Reker admitted his ignorance on this question and waived it.

Mr. Griffith said there were now objections to the Italian villain, the German scoundrel and the Irish rogue, so it remained for the white American to take all the honors and be the star villain.

+ + +

Mr. Griffith showed the complimentary criticism of the national board of censorship given in New York, and also letters from the Rev. Charles Parkhurst and Thomas Gregory.

Attorney Grossberg in his closing argument called attention to $10,000 weekly expense incurred by his client in the renting of the theater and the employment of help while under the impression that the picture could be shown.

The Chicago Evening Post

LLEWELLYN JONES, Literary Editor

GEORGE CRAM COOK, Associate

The Chicago Evening Post Friday Literary Review, being the weekly book section of The Post, is devoted to the criticism of current literature, the publication of literary comment and of book news.

FRIDAY, JUNE 4, 1915.

The Censorship.

A Chicago correspondent, Dr. Duncan E. McEachern, takes us to task for our views on the censorship of artistic productions. We are defending, he says, a "dangerous extension of personal liberty," and he goes on to argue—in a letter which we regret is too long to quote in full—that:

According to your reasoning the aesthetic tastes of any group of people, no matter how depraved or distorted, have a right to portray the pabulum on which they delight. Vice in its various forms, prejudice in any of its activities and error in its blind conclusions, all these are exempt from challenge. Your philosophic toleration is worthy of a better illustration than the one under discussion. You are aware as well as I that the maintenance of what for want of a better term we call "social order" is based upon the waiving of some individual or even collective opinions. I respectfully take issue with the exploitation of any view or performance which seriously affects that arrangement.

To answer our correspondent on the specific instance first: We do not deny that some ill feeling might possibly be exhibited as the result of the exhibition of the film in question, but in the first place, we do not think its exhibition so great an evil as censorship has always tended to become, and in the second place, we believe that such ill feeling is not created by the exhibition, but is latent in the people who express it. And its expression, followed by the adverse criticism of it which would be evoked, would be a far better thing for the community than any means taken to keep it under cover, unexpressed, unreproved, but ready to break forth on some other occasion.

Then, as to our correspondent's general position: The words we have quoted from him imply that he or the censors know depravity, vice, prejudice, or error, when they see it. Well, perhaps we do recognize depravity when we see it, but the police power is ample to deal with that. But if our correspondent will take the responsibility of censoring the artistic expression of error, if he can separate error from truth so surely as that—well, shall we say that he at least owes the world a book of philosophy which shall supersede the blundering efforts of those thinkers of the past, many of whom have confessed that they could not find the truth?

And, lastly, let us deny that social order implies the "waiving of individual or even collective opinions." It may imply the impossibility of those opinions being worked out in action. Polygamy, for instance, may be forbidden in theory, and difficult enough in practice to keep it down to a negligible phenomenon. But if a man were to be conscientiously convinced that it was a good institution, social stability does not forbid him to voice the opinion. In fact, social stability is only served by letting him voice it freely—that it may be as freely criticised and shown up as an impossibility.

'NATION'S BIRTH' FILM IS O. K.'D

Producers of "The Birth of a Nation" to-day won their long fight for the right to have the picture exhibited in Chicago theaters when Judge Cooper issued an injunction enjoining the city from interfering with its production. The court order overruled the action of Mayor Thompson in refusing a permit.

Judge Cooper, in making his decision, gave praise to the negro race and went into a discussion of the objections brought forward by those who oppose the exhibition.

The battle over "The Birth of a Nation" began many weeks ago when the first intimation of the things it portrays reached Chicago from Los Angeles, where it was produced. The chief objection to it was based on the ground that it would stir racial hatred.

KU LUX KLAN SHOWN.

Leading Chicago negroes severely condemned not only the photoplay, but also Thomas Dixon's novel, "The Clansman," on which it is founded. The film seeks to justify the activities of the Ku Klux Klan, the "invisible empire" of the reconstruction period in the South.

The court found also that the moment a fee for a permit is accepted in good faith, a property right is vested in the applicant with which neither the Mayor nor chief of police or any other city official may interfere without good cause.

Assistant Corporation Counsel Reker appealed the decision for the city. The enjoining order is not interlocutory, and the production of the film is not to be stopped pending the decision of the higher court.

CITY LOSES FIGHT TO BAR "THE BIRTH OF A NATION"

Movie Portraying Events in South Fifty Years Ago Opens Tonight at Illinois Theater

The city today lost its fight to bar from Chicago the film drama, "The Birth of a Nation." The movie will open at the Illinois theater tonight.

Judge Cooper of the Superior court granted an injunction restraining the city from interfering with the production.

In giving his opinion Judge Cooper declared that nothing in a portrayal of events which happened fifty years ago might be interpreted as reflecting upon the negro race of the present day.

"The race has advanced immeasurably in the last generation," he said. "No other race has made such progress in the last two decades."

He pointed out that if the picturing of a "bad negro" on the canvas was ground for condemning the film, almost every play would be censored because villains are a type to which dramatists cling tenaciously.

"From the evidence I am convinced that 'bad negroes' and 'bad whites' are equally prominent features in the play," he said. Assistant Corporation Counsel Baker appealed the decision on behalf of the city.

"BIRTH OF NATION" WINS

Judge Cooper Enjoins City from Interfering with Photo Play.

Declares Negro Is Treated Fairly in Story of "The Clansman."

"The Birth of a Nation," much discussed photo play of Ku Klux days, opposed because it was alleged that its production would incite race hatred, may be exhibited in Chicago without hindrance from the city authorities. Judge Cooper in the Superior court to-day enjoined the city of Chicago from interfering with the showing of the film.

"Movie" people—producers, theater owners and actors—filled the courtroom at an early hour. A sprinkling of colored folk mingled with the crowd, which waited eagerly for the reading of the court's decision. As Judge Cooper ascended the bench a double force of bailiffs stepped out of chambers and scattered in the throng. The judge prefaced the reading of his ruling with a request that no demonstration of any sort follow, but when he had finished a wave of approval swept up from the assembled "movie" crowd, necessitating sharp calls to order.

Three Points Raised by City.

"There are three points upon which the city opposed the issuance of the injunction," said Judge Cooper in his opinion. "First, that the permit was not lawfully issued; second, that the permit was revoked, and, lastly, that if the photoplay were produced it would engender race animosity among our negro citizens."

"If the court were to consider the third and last contention as sound we would have to assume that the white citizens of the present day are not able to recognize the fact that the story told in the play deals with things as they were a half century ago," the opinion continued. "We would have to assume that the witnesses are so stupid that they cannot realize that the people represented upon the screen are of two or three generations ago and that the negror cace has since developed almost immeasurably. No other race has made such progress in that time.

Convinced Play Is Fair.

"And I am confident that the 'good black man' and the 'bad white man' are equally represented in the play. Each and every play has its good and its bad characters, both essential to the moral of the piece. The law is the same for the black man as the white, and no play could be kept from being shown because a white man is shown as a scoundrel. There is no contention that such a play might give rise to animosity toward the nationality of the villain."

"The Birth of a Nation" is the photo play dramatization of Thomas Dixon's "The Clansman," a story of reconstruction days in the south.

PART ONE—PAGE TWELVE

SOCIETY PUTS APPROVAL ON DIXON FILM

Illinois Theater Crowded for the Production of "Birth of a Nation" After Victory in Court.

Major Funkhouser's Investigators Find Big Audience Cheering Scenes of Censored Photo Play.

Within a few hours after the court's order enjoining the city from interfering with the production of "The Birth of a Nation," a gathering of spectators representing the best of Chicago's social life crowded every part of the Illinois Theater to witness the first public performance in this city. No more brilliant assemblage ever gathered in a playhouse in Chicago.

The producers of this most ambitious of moving picture plays had done everything to make it a gala occasion. The foyer and the orchestra, the balconies and the boxes were adorned with bunting and American flags, and decorated profusely with flowers. Pretty girls, who acted as ushers, wore the furbelowed dresses and crinoline skirts of ante-bellum days, while of the ushers some wore the blue uniform of officers of the federal army and others the grey of the confederate officers.

FUNKHOUSER'S MEN THERE.

Major Funkhouser had sent four of his investigators to watch the play, with instructions to take notes of anything which might be of help in Judge Cooper's court on Tuesday in case the city decides to make an attempt to get the injunction vacated. But to those who saw the play last night it seemed that Funkhouser's men would have difficulty in making any report other than that nearly every one of the hundreds of scenes of the play was enthusastically cheered, and that not a single mark of disapproval was hinted.

There are scores of scenes in this long moving picture production—long because it lasts three hours—that arouse wild enthusiasm on the part of partisans of the North as against the South, just as there are other scores of scenes that make Southerners and their sympathizers want to throw their hats in the air, but every one last night cheered the victories of the troops in grey and then, a moment later, cheered just as heartily over the victories won by Sherman in his march to the sea.

Many who went to the theater with their minds full of the protests made against the piece because of its scenes depicting the carpet bag period after the war and the raids of the Ku Klux Klan were surprised to find that Thomas Dixon's "Clansman" is a basis for only a part of "The Birth of a Nation," and that the unique feature of the production is its profusion of scenes representing battles and historic incidents on a scale of realism never before attempted.

PRODUCER MAKES SPEECH.

The assassination of Lincoln in Ford's Theater at Washington was reproduced in a way that brought an almost unanimous call for the producer, and D. W. Griffiths came before the curtain and made an address. He told how gratified he and his colleagues were over the victory won in court and thanked Judge Cooper for permitting the play to be produced.

The part of Abraham Lincoln in the play is taken by Joseph Henabery, and oftentimes a hush fell over the audience as it marked the almost speaking likeness between the moving picture figure of the great emancipator and the likenesses of Lincoln seen in the historic etchings. They saw Lincoln, his wife and staff leave the White House for Ford's Theater and then in vivid flashes they saw scenes of "Our American Cousin" on the stage, the army officers and their ladies in the boxes and in the orchestra the audience rising as the President entered his box to the playing of the "Star-Spangled Banner."

Old soldiers who were present last night said that the battle scenes were surprisingly realistic.

Captured forts and burning towns were seen in the red light of flames at night, while in intermittent flashes on the mammoth screen would come quiet, tragic episodes, mirroring the sufferings of the wounded and the burial of the dead.

The music by Joseph Carl Briel, rendered by a full orchestra under the direction of Frederick Arundel, added greatly to the success of the production.

6/6

Chicago Examiner...The Best

'Birth of Nation' May Be Produced, Court Decides

The long fight for the right to have "The Birth of a Nation" exhibited in moving picture theaters in Chicago was won yesterday for the producers when Judge Cooper issued an injunction restraining the city from interfering with the production. By this order the court overruled the action of Mayor Thompson in refusing a permit.

Corporation Counsel Beckwith will appeal from the decision of Judge Cooper.

Chief of Police Healey yesterday instructed Major Funkhouser to send four members of the censor board to view the performance of the play and to present affidavits to Judge Cooper on Tuesday, when an application will be made to dissolve the injunction.

Tribune 6/7

CENSORS TO REPORT ON "BIRTH OF NATION" TODAY.

Four Members of Board See Griffith Film for Second Time—City to Ask New Trial.

The four censors detailed by Maj. Funkhouser to view the film, "The Birth of a Nation," on Saturday night were present again at the exhibition last night. They will hand a report in to Maj. Funkhouser and Assistant Corporation Counsel George L. Reker this morning. Mr. Reker, who says he will ask a new trial and take an appeal if this is denied, asserted he would drop in to see the film some time today himself.

Herald 6/7

"The Birth of a Nation" opened in the Illinois Theater Saturday. The opening of this play establishes a precedent in pictures and is greeted with much enthusiasm by people interested in the art of the silent drama. Judge W. F. Cooper's ruling restraining the city from interfering with the production has more weight than is evident on the face of it. It means that motion pictures have come into their own and that we may be expected to be treated with the same justice as the spoken drama or the written word.

ILLINOIS THEATRE

BEGINNING TO-NIGHT
And Twice Daily Hereafter
(INCLUDING SUNDAYS)

AFTERNOONS at 2:15
EVENINGS .. .. at 8:10

THEATRE REMODELED ACCORDING TO SCIENTIFIC ADJUSTMENT OF FOCAL REQUIREMENTS

EVENINGS & SATURDAY MATS.
Orchestra.....$1 and $2
First Balcony...50c, 75c and $1
Second Balcony....25c and 50c

BUY YOUR SEATS AT THE BOX OFFICE
And Avoid Paying Extortionate Prices to Speculators

OTHER MATINEES
Orchestra.....50c and $1
Balcony.....50c and $1
Second Balcony.....25c

The Great American Play at Last!

D. W. GRIFFITH'S

GIGANTIC SPECTACLE

THE BIRTH OF A

ALFRED ZIEGFELD
HAMBURGER'S
Four Doors North of Blackstone Hotel
TO-DAY, JUNE 5
Rev. Cyrus Townsend Brady's
ISLAND OF REGENERATION With EDITH STOREY, ANTONIO MORENO, E. RANKIN DREW and a remarkable cast.
A beautiful story portrayed in a masterly way—love, romance and intensely exciting situations all interwoven. Children admitted.
PICTORIALLY BETTER THAN NEPTUNE'S DAUGHTER — BATHING SCENES
Continuous 1 P. M. to 11 P. M. Admission 25c

Means in most cases a skin free from irritation, roughness and pimples.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold throughout the world. Liberal sample of each mailed free with Cuticura Book. Address post-card "Cuticura," Dept. L, Boston.

Among those at the Homestead, Virginia Hot Springs, are Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Linn, Dwight Linn, Henry B. Keep, Norman Talbot, Paul Trowbridge, Albert H. Loeb, Mr. and Mrs. George Blair, Mrs. E. S. Brewster, Dr. and Mrs. Walter S. Dewes, Mrs. Allen S. Barrow and Mrs. E. G. Paulins.

St. Andrew's Players' Club will present "Hawthorne of the U. S. A." at Alphonsus Athenaeum, Southport Park entertained the Sigma Alpha Iota Sorority yesterday at her home on Lon Wood drive.

Miss Gertrude Schulze of Morgan and Oakdale avenue, to-morrow.

Dr. and Mrs. George F. Bracken and daughter, Miss Naomi Frances Bracken, will leave to-night for a trip to Los Angeles, where they will be the guests of Mrs. Naomi Gillett, Mrs. Bracken's mother.

Connell, Paul Wallin, Stanley McCormick and Medill McCormick, and the Misses Hattie Villum, Suzette Rosen, Cornelia Cowper and Mario Meyerson, James Norton, Mr. and Mrs. James Morton, Mr. and Mrs. James Stevenson, Cyrus McCormick, Mrs. James L. Laidlaw, Mr. and Mrs. James Stevenson, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Rozelle, coming as the representative of Governor Dunne; Mrs. Gertrude H. Leonard, Mrs. William Hale Thompson, Mr. William L. Thomas of the University of Chicago, representing Mayor Thompson; Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, Mrs. Grace Wilbur Trout, Miss Alice Stone Blackwell, Mrs. Richard Y. Fitzgerald and Mrs. E. M. Bolster.

'BIRTH OF NATION' WINS IN COURT

Judge Cooper Rules That the Photoplay Does Not Attack Any Race.

JURIST ENJOINS MAYOR

Crowds See Film Drama Produced at the Illinois Theater.

Holding that it made no attack on any race, Judge William Fennimore Cooper in the Superior Court yesterday granted a temporary injunction restraining Mayor Thompson and Chief of Police Healey from interfering with the "Birth of a Nation." As a result of the writ the photoplay was presented last night to a huge audience at the Illinois Theater.

In his decision Judge Cooper denied that the scenes portrayed discriminated against the negro race. He said as to the good and bad characters there was an even balance between whites and negroes in the photoplay.

CENSORS SEE FILM.

Four members of the municipal board of motion picture censors attended the by Second Deputy Funkhouser at the request of Chief Healey. They will make affidavits as to the various scenes in the photoplay. These documents will be presented to Judge Cooper on Tuesday morning. Then the city's lawyer's will seek to dissolve the injunction.

Assistsant Corporation Counsels George L. Reker and S. A. T. Watkins announced that Judge Cooper's decision, if made permanent, will be carried to the Appellate Court and the higher court will be asked to set aside the injunction.

The judge in granting the injunction decided that the city's contention that the production of the play would engender hatred against the Negro citizens of the city was based purely on assumption.

The judge said in part:

"This court is satisfied from the evidence that in this photoplay the good black man and the bad white man are equally prominent figures in the play.

DENIES PLAY IS UNIQUE.

"Every night in every fair-sized community in this broad land, where the stage instructs or entertains, each and every play has its good characters and its bad characters portrayed, both of which are essential to a play in the rounding out of its moral. Without a moral a play is of no educational value.

"Every night in every theater there is shown the debased type of the white race of different nationalities. And if groups of the various nationalities so presented became accutely sensitive that such individual portrayal would cause their race to suffer hatred, and all the plays in which a villain had played were stopped on that account, the theater as an educator and entertainer of the people would become a memory of the past and there would be nothing to fill its place for the education and enjoyment of our people.

RACES EQUAL UNDER LAW.

"No one race or nation has better rights under the law than any other has. Any race or nation so offended can best give the lie to the bad characters so presented by continuing to conduct themselves as law-abiding citizens, who do not expect greater legal rights than are allowed to all other men or nationalities.

"If white men appeal to the courts to restrain the production of a play because one of its characters portrayed that of a dissolute white man, whose acting would bring race hatred against the nation which his stage character assumes, their plea would be denied for want of law to support the same, and the law would be and is the same for black and white alike."

Judge Cooper also held that as Joseph McCarthy, who is producing the picture in Chicago, obtained a permit for the production in the last days of Mayor Harrison's administration, the revocation of that permit by Mayor Thompson did not deprive him of his rights to show the picture.

The judge held that as the play was censored by Charles C. Fitzmorris, former Mayor Harrison's private secretary, and Mrs. Harrison, and a permit issued in the regular way, the present city officials have no right to interfere with its production.

Marquis Eaton and Frank M. Fairfield of Chicago and A. L. Huston of Evanston have started a league to promote "wholesome motion pictures." Its idea is to aid approved movies in cooperation with producers, but not to operate as a board of censorship. It is proposed to form branch leagues all over the United States to pass upon photoplays, merely as critics, and to

Tribune 6/6

EMOTION ROCKED CROWD WATCHES BIRTH OF NATION

Film Fought by Censors Shown to Public After Court Stops Interference.

RULING PLEASES REEL MEN.

BY KITTY KELLY.

Last night for the first time at the Illinois theater the much contended over photoplay, "The Birth of a Nation," officially unreeled its story to an audience made up of some hundreds of white people and one negro. In spite of the fact that it had emerged from court only yesterday forenoon, when Judge William Fenimore Cooper granted the injunction restraining the city from prohibiting its performance, the house was well filled with people who looked intently, who applauded roundly, frequently and spontaneously, and wept in almost the same degree. There was no sign of disturbance other than of enthusiastic reception in all the performance.

During the intermission D. W. Griffith, the picture's producer, appeared before the curtain, greeted by a storm of applause.

"My name is Griffith," he began, and the audience hushed. "I appreciate your help and I want to thank you for it. We producers of the motion picture must struggle night and day to make of it something other than it used to be, and we beg you with real tears in our eyes and hearts to help us.

Where Censorship Is Needed.

"In the small theaters with changing programs where children are taken you need censorship, but with productions whose character is known, corresponding to the same surroundings as the stage possesses, we need the same privileges as the stage. We cannot portray the great heart of Abaham Lincoln unless we show the wrong of other hearts. As I have said before (referring to Friday, when he spoke in court in defense of his picture), we must have villains of some sort, and if every nationality becomes so sensitive soon we will be able to have none but American villains."

This brought a wave of laughter which subsided slowly to permit him to thank all who had helped him in his struggle, friends and the press, those present, and to pay a special debt of gratitude to "that distinguished, honorable, brave gentleman, Judge William Fenimore Cooper."

Play Has Sympathy of Audience.

And then the picture went on to a sympathy-attuned audience, any disapprovers, if present, not being manifest. Mr. Griffith explained afterwards that the educational series from Hampton college, showing the colored race's advancement, which had been added to the Chicago version, is not permitted by the censors under threat of stopping the picture on the grounds that it was not shown when the film was inspected.

So the negroes, on whose account the fight was made, have been denied the benefit of the showing of racial progress by the authorities whose sympathies were with them to the point of the picture's suppression.

Judge's Decision Broad.

The decision granting the injunction restraining the city from prohibiting the picture's exhibition given by Judge William Fenimore Cooper was broad and precedent establishing for pictures, the first of the kind ever given in the city and paralleling that rendered in New York last week on "The Ordeal" by Supreme Court Justice Whittaker.

Assistant Corporation Counsel Reker declared the city would take an appeal some time next week.

"The Birth of a Nation" has been so often referred to in THE TRIBUNE'S columns that no further review of it is deemed necessary.

JUDGE COOPER'S DECISION.

Judge Cooper's decision was as follows:

"The city contends against the issuance of the injunction on three grounds—that the permit to exhibit the photo play in question was not lawfully issued; that the permit issued was revoked and that the photo play, if presented, will engender race animosity against the negro citizens of our community.

"This last ground is based purely on assumption. To find that this is a good objection to the allowing of the injunction, this court will have to assume that our white citizens will not know or appreciate the fact that the days represented in the play were nearly in the first years of the last half century.

"This court will have to assume that they who will witness the play will be so stupid that they will be unable to comprehend that the people represented on the canvas were of two or three generations ago, and that they do not and will not appreciate the fact that in the succeeding time the negro race has advanced almost immeasurably.

"The court cannot assume that this will be so, when we know that there is universal recognition of the fact that no race has shown such great general advancement in from two to three generations as the negro race has done.

Cites Progress of Negro.

"In our own great community the fact is recognized by all well informed citizens that we have in the various professions and higher lines of business members of that race who are ministers, dentists, lawyers, physicians, and business men of fine ability, and business character, who enjoy the respect and confidence of our community.

"This court is satisfied from the evidence that in this photo play the good black man and the bad white man are equally prominent figures in the play. Every night in every fair sized community in this broad land where the stage instructs or entertains each and every play has its good characters and its bad characters portrayed, both of which are essential to a play in the rounding out of the moral of the play, and without which moral a play is of no educational value.

"Every night in every theater there is produced the debased type of the white race of different nationalities, and if representative groups of the various nationalities so presented became acutely sensitive that such individual portrayal would cause them to suffer race hatred of their race, and all the plays in which a villain had played were stopped on that account, the theater as an educator and entertainer of the people would become a memory of the past, and there would be nothing to fill its place for the education and enjoyment of our people.

"No one race or nationality has greater right under the law than any other has. Any race or nationality so offended can best give the lie to the bad characters so presented by continuing to conduct themselves as law abiding citizens who do not expect greater rights from the law than it allows all other men or nationalities.

Same Law for White and Black.

"If white men appeal to the courts to restrain the production of a play because one of its characters portrayed that of a dissolute white man whose acting would bring race hatred against the nation which his stage character assumed, their plea would be denied for want of law to support the same, and the law should be and is the same for black and white alike.

"It is the duty of the courts to protect the individual in the enjoyment of his right of property. The complainant in this case is the owner or lessee of the play called 'The Birth of a Nation.' Under the ordinances of our city, if one who desires to present a photoplay or moving picture complies with the law and obtains a license honestly and in good faith, and the play has been censored by the proper authorities of the city, and he has paid his money for a fee, from that time on the owner of the play is vested with an individual property right, which neither the city of Chicago, nor any official, be he mayor, general superintendent of police, or be he judge, can arbitrarily deprive him of, without giving him his hearing or day in court.

Harrison Permit Stands.

"The evidence in this case satisfies the court that this play was censored by the mayor's private secretary and by Mrs. Harrison, the wife of the former mayor of Chicago. Major Funkhouser admits that he received orders from the mayor's office to issue a permit for the production of this photoplay, and gave directions to that effect. A permit was issued first by James Gleason, general superintendent of police, and later on the present general superintendent of police, Charles C. Healey, issued another permit.

"I am obliged to find under the law and the evidence in this case that the complainant is entitled to the relief prayed for, and I will enter an injunction restraining the mayor, the chief of police, and the city of Chicago from interfering with the production of the play."

Griffith Highly Pleased.

D. W. Griffith, producer of the film, was probably the most interested listener.

"The decision is gratifying to me for other reasons than the fact there would be a heavy loss of money involved if the film were barred," he said. "I sincerely think more race prejudice would be aroused by the suppression of 'The Birth of a Nation' than by its exhibition. I realize, too, that such a decision took a great deal of nerve on the part of the court."

Chief Healey directed Maj. Funkhouser to have four censors at last night's showing of the picture. Affidavits made by the censors will be presented to Judge Cooper Tuesday in an effort to have the injunction dissolved.

Tribune 6/8

ILLINOIS THEATRE

MATINEES 2:15 NIGHTS 8:10

D. W. GRIFFITH'S GIGANTIC SPECTACLE

8 MONTHS IN THE MAKING

Symphony Orchestra of 50

The Lighth Wonder of the World

COST HALF A MILLION DOLLARS

SEATS SELLING 4 WEEKS IN ADVANCE

TWICE DAILY INCLUDING SUNDAYS

EVENINGS AND SAT. MATINEE

ORCHESTRA.....$1 & $2

1ST BALCONY.....50c, 75c & $1

2ND BALCONY.....25c & 50c

OTHER MATINEES

ORCHESTRA.....50c & $1

1ST BALCONY.....50c & $1

2ND BALCONY.....25c

18000 PEOPLE

THE BIRTH OF A NATION

3000 HORSES

Mr. Griffith announces in his program the "play's message of peace." Surely no person who sees the play would advocate warfare.

American 6/7

CALLS WAR FILM GREATEST OF ALL TIME

"The Birth of a Nation" Is Strong Message for Peace, Declares the Optimist.

BY THE OPTIMIST.

"The biggest and highest work of motion pictures will lie in the field of history."

That was part of a very earnest talk by D. W. Griffith the night he presented "The Birth of a Nation" to Chicago at the Illinois Theater.

The first half of what is modestly called "an historical drama in two acts," had just been seen for the first time in Chicago.

The public was experiencing the novelty of a $2 a seat film house. Why the $2, when we have the popular ten and fifteen cent brand? Mr. Griffith himself answered.

"The biggest and highest work of motion pictures," is the answer. Mr. Griffith has all of this and is to be congratulated. "The Birth of a Nation" should be preserved at Washington by national act as one of the "biggest and highest" of historical accomplishment. Mr. Griffith has brought to life one of his great ambitions. He might as well have made the title "The Birth of Our Nation."

LAUDED BY THEATRICAL MAN.

Here's added proof of what the public is getting at the Illinois Theater. One of the big men in the theater world saw the pictures. For that matter, several of them did. They're all interested more than ever when films are as good or better for the box office than the playerfolk in person. This successful theater man said quite freely:

"Mr. Griffith has accomplished one of the big things of the time. I do not believe he or any other man will get out anything so good in the next forty years. And when the next big thing comes it probably will be an accidental shot. It will not be built inch by inch by a master hand."

And this from a man who has had years of experience in handling plays.

WORTH $5 A SEAT.

"Zit" never said anything truer of a play than when he remarked in the columns of the New York Journal: "A seat at 'The Birth of a Nation' is worth a five-dollar note." His judgment is borne out by the fact that the film has been running months in New York at prices prevailing at the best playhouses.

Miles of trenches, hand to hand conflict, weird night scenes of battle, the march through Georgia, the mystic Ku-Klux in action, riot scenes, the shooting of Lincoln, the surrender of Lee—these are a few high spots in these great pictures, any one of which features in themselves are worth seeing at almost any price.

The picture is so cleverly done that high interest is maintained to the final curtain. The riding of the Ku-Klux Klan to the rescue of women and men in dire peril and the breaking up of the riot is tremendous. The origin of the Ku-Klux, taken from a prank of children at play, is cleverly shown.

MEMBERS OF CAST.

Here are the names of the cast: Henry Walthall, Miriam Cooper, Mae Marsh, Josephine Crowell, Spottiswoode Aiken, J. A. Beringer, John French, Jennie Lee, Ralph Lewis, Lillian Gish, Elmer Clifton, Robert Harron, Wallace Reed, Mary Alden, George Seigmann, Walter Long, Joseph Henabery, Raoul Walsh, Donald Crisp, Howard Gaye, John McGlynn and Ernest Campbell.

Herald 6/8

CENSORS FIND AGAINST 'THE BIRTH OF A NATION'

Report to Mayor Thompson That the Black-and-White Episodes Offend.

COURT FIGHT TO GO ON

An adverse report on the photoplay "The Birth of a Nation" was made by four members of the municipal censorship board yesterday. They saw the first exhibition at the Illinois Theater Saturday evening and again yesterday afternoon.

The report will be used by the city's lawyers when they appeal to Judge Cooper in the Superior Court tomorrow to set aside his injunction restraining the city authorities from interfering with the production.

THE MAYOR IN OBJECTION.

Mayor Thompson criticised the motion picture again yesterday.

"Some of my friends who have seen it say it ought not to be shown," he said. "There are several objectionable scenes. I understand that the assassination of President Lincoln is shown. I cannot understand how anyone can approve that sort of a picture under any circumstances. Anything of that kind simply breeds crime."

The "movie" censors say in part:

"No clear-thinking, level-headed man or woman viewing the film 'The Birth of a Nation,' based on Thomas Dixon's book, 'The Clansman,' can help but be impressed with the thought that the negro is shown to be a firm believer in miscegenation, or intermarriage between whites and blacks.

PRINCIPAL OBJECTIONS STATED.

"From Gus the Renegade, in pursuit of little Flora Cameron, the pet sister of the 'little colonel,' to Silas Lynch, the protege of the Hon. Austin Stoneman, the great radical leader of the house, the desire uppermost in their minds is to mate with a white woman.

"The glances and leers of Gus the Renegade, Lynch, the educated protege, or the negro legislators who helped to pass the intermarriage bill were different from the flashes of love and honorable passion of the two white men. The scenes at the meeting place where Lynch and Stoneman are present, banners with the inscription, 'Equal Rights, Equal Marriage,' also lead one to the forced belief that this is the main part of the plot in this motion picture."

ILLINOIS THEATRE

TWICE DAILY
(INCLUDING SUNDAYS)
AFTERNOONS - - at 2:15
EVENINGS - - - - at 8:10

EVENINGS AND SATURDAY MATS.
Orchestra.....$1 and $2
First Balcony.....50c, 75c and $1
Second Balcony.....25c and 50c

Seats Selling Four Weeks in Advance

OTHER MATINEES
Orchestra.....50c and $1
Balcony.....50c and $1
Second Balcony.....25c

The Eighth Wonder of the World

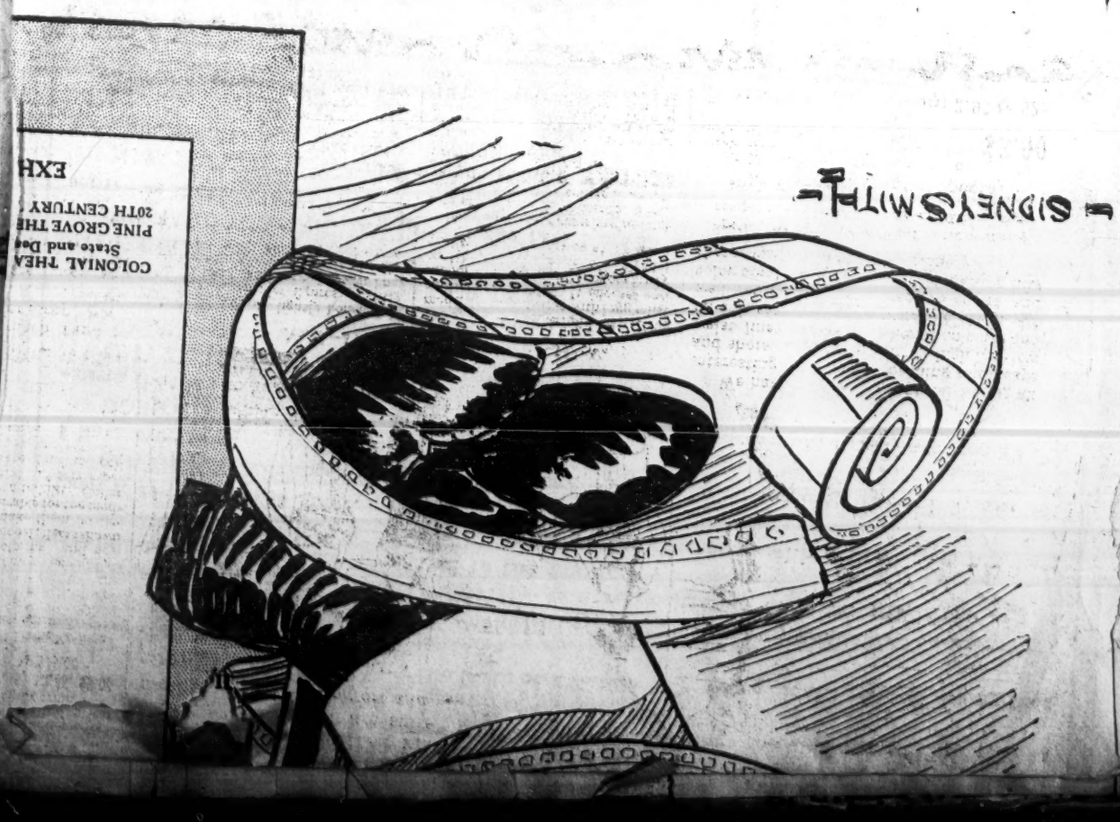
D. W. GRIFFITH'S

GIGANTIC SPECTACLE

18,000 PEOPLE

3,000 HORSES

THE BIRTH OF A



NEWS OF TH

"The Birth of a Nation," Biggest of Film Plays, Is Shown at the Illinois; Frank McIntyre to Act "Brother Masons"; Julie Opp to Return to Stage

By O. L. HALL

After weeks of waiting and the expenditure of much censorial wisdom, the film play called "The Birth of a Nation," newly possessed of the added dignity of court approval, is now publicly projected at the Illinois theater. This is the picture you have been hearing about. It has many claims to supreme distinction. It has given America leadership in the production of photographic spectacle, it has given us the 32 cameradrama, and it has proved that a director with a visioning imagination can lay a spell upon the spectator by mere photographic magic. It is an epic in celluloid. Its more spectacular foreign forerunners, "Quo Vadis?" the "Inferno," and "Cabiria," were minus many of the finer qualities of this made-in-America picture. It has, in far greater measure than any other picture I ever have seen, the compelling quality of dramatic conflict, and it is the only picture I have encountered which strikes and communicates the note of deep feeling. It is a photoplay with a personality. The notable success with which D. W. Griffith has produced this work no doubt will in time be eclipsed, but Grifith himself would seem to be the only director capable of performing the feat.

Though the court has struck off the shackles that held this spectacle in the dark some unaccountable freak of beneficent censorship, operant in this enlightened community, denies to youth the privilege of inspecting it. If tomorrow is your 21st birthday you will not be admitted to the Illinois tonight, but if you arrived today at your majority, and thereby acquired a mature outlook upon life, you may successfully seek ingress. A censorship that could permit the Young Person to attend shrill, vicious and demoralizing theatrical exhibitions like "The Traffic," "Damaged Goods," "The Fight" and "The Lure" finds a way of protecting innocence when nothing threatens it.

"The Birth of a Nation" is photographed in twelve reels and its projection covers two hours and forty-five minutes. It is, with generous sentimental and romantic concessions and with various dramatic allowances, a history of the civil war and of the reconstruction period. In many respects it has exceptional value as a historical record; otherwise it is fiction. It is based in part upon "The Clansman," the novel of Thomas Dixon, a clergyman who has also undertaken to write plays and to act in them. However, "The Birth of a Nation" is Griffith's, not Dixon's. There is more real literature in the explanatory "cut ins" in the picture than there is in the entire novel of "The Clansman." But Dixon's story of the Ku-Klux-Klan and the Carpetbaggers gave Grifith a great inspiration and he answered it mightily.

It is not possible accurately to describe a motion picture, with its unlimited multiplication of scenes, with its frequent repetitions, and all its illustrative detail. Griffith's picture has two well-defined lines of interest—one the interest that lies in a historical record, the other that which lies in the mere story-telling which gives to story a sentimental and romantic foreground. The historical record, and even it may necessarily suffer from some perversion of fact, has to do with war and politics; the accompanying romantic story, concerning sons and daughters of the south and the north, has also a historical interest in that it is illustrative of individual suffering and loss. These two interests are heightened in a thousand ways. One looks now upon a far-flung battle line, a panorama of amazing vastness; he follows Sherman's army on its march to the sea, traces the lone soldier and countless incidents of them. Here the picture reproduces easy-going southern affluence; here it shows a south desolated by war. We flicker on the curtain and Abraham Lincoln moves about the white house, and then, for historical record, is shown the assassination, a really wonderful scene in which it is said to be a perfect reproduction of Ford's theater. The picture of this historic event is believably real, and in Lincoln is the Lincoln we know in picture, fact and tradition.

The parts of the picture having to do with the reconstruction period and the carpetbagger and negro domination in the south are as varied as the pictures of the war. They never loose the threads of chief interest, even when the achievement of spectacle is uppermost in the producer's mind. In these pictures is shown the origin of the enduring problem of miscegenation; here is shown the unwinning of the southern woman's fear. Then comes the Ku-Klux-Klan and its retributive justice. This gives a weird air, almost an air of wonder, to the picture play. This shrouded army is pictured in its administration of a corrective secret government, and, in addition to some remarkable pictures of the ghostly battalions sweeping across field, there is a stenning picture of a battle between the klan and the negroes around a lonely cabin in a clearing. And so the scenes run on, hundreds of them, and the sum of them is the greatest of picture plays—in scope the mightiest, in theme the most intimate, in treatment the most daring, in feeling the richest. It probably will be called, in these unhappy times, a great argument for peace.

The programmes distributed at the Illinois name twenty-two principal players, but there are thousands of them all told. They are very good motion-picture players and there is every evidence at all points that they have had the best direction the film world affords. There is a large orchestra at the Illinois to play the special

June 7 — Tribune June 8 —

"Birth of a Nation" at Illinois Theater

Ku-Klux Film Play Contains Many Thrills

A Photo-Pageant Of Fact and Myth

By Charles Collins.

THE MOTION-PICTURE exhibition called "The Birth of a Nation," having won a legal victory over official disapproval, now occupies the Illinois Theater. With pomp and circumstance, with ushers in civil-war uniforms and usherettes in crinolines, and an orchestral accompaniment that seduces the ear while the photography fascinates the eye, this $2 photo-pageant, which the movie fanatics discuss as if it were a greater achievement than "Paradise Lost," the invention of telegraphy, and the battle of the Marne rolled together, is being revealed.

There are reels and reels of it. The story spins its way from Bull Run to Appomattox, and then thru the ferment of the reconstruction period. It covers, in the nebular, cinematographic way, the most terrible and exciting decade in the history of this nation; and it skips over that great epoch with a flamboyant sense of pictorial melodrama. It occupies the conventional three hours of theater time in its exhibition, and gives the observer a perfect gorge of film. I should say that "The Birth of a Nation" carries enough celluloid to make collars for the Russian army. I emerged after the unreeling blinking like a pop-eyed fish from the nocturnal waters of Mammoth Cave; but I must admit that my optic nerves were never made for use in the palaces of astigmatism now so much in the public favor.

The subject matter of "The Birth of a Nation" is familiar, partly thru the textbooks of American history and partly thru the novels of Thomas Dixon, that professional southerner for literary purposes who is obsessed with the fear of miscegenation. Its point of view, in its first part, is that which causes the tune of "Dixie" to be applauded in cafes—a chivalrous, romantic whimsy that is always accepted with sympathy. Its point of view, in the second part, is that of Mr. Dixon, the waver of the obsolete "bloody shirt," the stern surveyor of the color line, the Klu-Klux clansman of the pen.

Forty-five years have passed since the Klu-Klux bands put away their ghostly apparel and ceased their predatory or retributive rides by night, but Mr. Dixon still rides his hobby and carries the fiery torch. If he has children, I am sure that he compells them to address him as "Grand Cyclops" instead of father. He is the sole surviving inhabitant of the Invisible Empire. David W. Griffith, the Belasco of the films, has made that "empire" visible for him in "The Birth of a Nation," and I have no doubt but that he is sublimely content.

I shall leave Mr. Dixon to his artistic conscience, if he possesses that nonnegotiable asset, and with him, the entire question of "The Birth of a Nation," as anything but a film romance. I will state my conviction that the race conflict part of the picture (which means about three-fourths of it) touches an old sore in our national life in a clumsy, sensational, prejudiced way, but I will not argue the matter. I resent this aspect of "The Birth of a Nation," but rather than debate with the Dixon point of view I would hurl the thirteen heavy volumes of the congressional investigation of the Klu-Klux clan (an incident which closed in 1872) straight at Mr. Dixon's head, each volume with deadly aim.

Considered merely as a matter of the screen and the projecting lantern, "The Birth of a Nation" is magnificent. It is brilliant cinematography from the first to the last of its twelve reels. As a photographic stage director, Mr. Griffith deserves all of the superlatives which have been heaped upon him. He has erred in taste occasionally, but only, I think, thru the Dixonian influence. His panoramas are epic; his bits of detail, delightfully illustrative. He has visualized the civil war and the Klu-Klux aftermath, and still kept a human theme running thru the historical chaos—which is no small achievement in craftsmanship.

The battle scenes are ferociously exciting, and the representations of historical character are as exact as could be expected. The fidelity with which the assassination of Lincoln, in Ford's Theater, is shown is amazing; in every detail it follows the facts of that pitiful tragedy. For moving-picture rush, scuttle and thrill, the last grand round-up of the Klu-Klux squadrons, when they race all over the state of South Carolina on their scooting quadrupeds and save the entire female population (white) from miscegenation, has never been equaled.

The music must not be forgotten. The accompaniment is constant, and is played by a fine orchestra. The score has been arranged with consummate musicianly skill, and the right melody is always played at the right time. Part of the fascination of this picture is due to the orchestra, and I suspect that photo-plays will develop more and more toward musical form.

As an antidote to Mr. Dixon's share in "The Birth of a Nation" I recommend, to all whose curiosity has been aroused in regard to the Klu-Klux, the writings of Albion W. Tourgee, referred to rather sneeringly in one of the labels that break the picture as "the carpet-baggers' judge." For a documentation of the case, take his "The Invisible Empire," written with the events at close range. It tells the story better and more fairly.

News 6/7

CROWDS GET THRILL AT "BIRTH OF A NATION"

David W. Griffith's Film Masterpiece Is Full to the Brim with Action.

TELLS CIVIL WAR STORY

War Scenes in Which Camera Covers Miles of Country—Fifteen Years of U. S. History.

"The Birth of a Nation," said to have cost its producers several hundred thousand dollars, lost no time in making its initial public presentation after the censorship bars had been let down by Judge William Fennimore Cooper Saturday. That same evening it made its appearance before a houseful of spectators. The audience applauded incidents depicted on the screen vociferously.

David W. Griffith, producer, has rivaled Europe's foremost producers in the staging and directing of his tremendous offering. He has, in the opinion of many, overshadowed "Cabria," heretofore the supreme film subject, which also occupied the screen at the Illinois theater last summer, in most respects. While the foreign play was a massive production, it excelled only in its mammoth scenic splendor of especially constructed sets and the numerous supernumeraries it employed. It lacked, however, dramatic action.

Griffith has given a powerful story of historical interest, dramatically fascinating and well acted by an unusual cast of screen players. He has subordinated the spectacular, which in itself holds the spectators spellbound, for the dramatic, and thus has accomplished an unusual combination in the annals of film plays.

Great Mob and War Scenes.

The master mind and the stagecraftsmanship of the producer appear everywhere—in the acting of the individual players, settings, staging of minor as well as colossal mob and war scenes and in the directing of the thousands of men and women who frequently appear in single scenes. Seas of human being scrambling over each other lend realism to the scenes depicted. It seems as if each player in these mob scenes is living a real drama rather than acting one so determined does the average player appear. Horsemanship of the most daredevil kind is shown, with the riders speeding recklessly and falling from their running horses to the ground while the animal continues fleeing, followed by other horsemen on their steeds.

Battle scenes between actors representing northern and southern soldiers reveal the remarkable scope of the camera. The scenes apparently were obtained from a great height and show panoramic views of miles of country over which thousands of men are seen battling desperately. The staging of these scenes is a feat in itself. The action of the play and the emotion of the players are revealed splendidly in the facial expressions and in the gestures of the players, whose artistic attainments manifest themselves throughout the production.

"The Birth of a Nation" is a remarkable dramatic creation. The play intermingles pathos and humor so skillfully that sadness and gruesomeness are forgotten in the funny incidents pictured. It is a study in contrasts seldom seen in motion pictures, scaling from extreme pathos to humorous situations or depicting the toll of war on the battle field and immediately afterward a peaceful home, thereby affording relief from the tensity of the situation.

Covers Period of Fifteen Years.

"The Birth of a Nation" deals with fifteen years of the reconstructive period of the south, opening before and closing after the civil war. Animated pictures are seen of Abraham Lincoln surrounded by his cabinet deploring his emancipation proclamation, and the martyred president's assassination at Ford's theater. Historic battles are pictured and other noteworthy incidents of those exciting days appear reproduced from authentic sources.

negro in the south are reenacted and the bad white man and the good negro, as well as the bad colored man and the oppressed southerner, are pictured. The activities of the historical Ku Klux Klan thrilled the spectators. Through the entire play a double romance between children of the north on one side and others of the south on the other is carried.

Henry B. Walthall heads a most imposing cast of players who share honors equally in their interpretations. Others in the cast include Lillian Gish, Mae Marsh, Miriam Cooper, Spottiswoode Aiken, Ralph Lewis, Robert Harron and George Siegmann.

Examiner 6/8

FILM CENSORS ARE CENSORED

City motion picture censors are not to have a free rein in preparing their synopsis of "The Birth of a Nation" and the report on which the city will ask Judge Cooper to set aside his injunction restraining the police from interfering with the film production of "The Clansman" will be dictated by the corporation counsel's opinion rather than a technical discussion of the play.

This developed yesterday when the five censors sent to prepare a synopsis of the play were instructed now to make out their report by Assistant Corporation Counsel Reker. Reker, when asked who had written the report, admitted that the censors had been told to "play up" those scenes on which the city will base its contention that the drama will excite race prejudice.

Anticipating Judge Cooper's refusal to set aside his temporary injunction, a hearing has been arranged tentatively in the Appellate Court for next Monday. The city will ask the dissolution of the restraining order to-day or to-morrow.

When the censors were told to view "The Birth of a Nation" they were instructed to confine their report to a technically written synopsis similar to that which would be prepared by any analyst of the drama or any scene writer.

Reker prepared a resume of the censors' report, but reserved the body of the report as the surprise which he intended to spring in court as the basis of his arguments. When compared with the original report of the censors, however, it was found that Reker's "resume" was in fact an expression of his own opinion and did not contain the original phrasing of the synopsis which was submitted to Second Deputy Superintendent of Police Funkhouser. Mr. Reker then attached his "resume" to the original report and the entire document will be submitted to the court signed by the senior board.

Questions Motive of City in Fight on Birth of Nation

McCarthy Says Film Showing Negro's Progress Was Barred.

GRIFFITH MAKES PLEA

J. J. McCarthy, manager of "The Birth of a Nation," last night charged the municipal authorities are animated by some other motive than the advancement of the negro race.

Mr. McCarthy based his accusation on the fact that Second Deputy Funkhouser refused to issue a permit for "The New Era," a film shown as a postlude to "The Birth of a Nation." It portrays the moral and social advancement of the negro since reconstruction days.

Earlier in the day five municipal movie censors signed a report to be used in the city's court proceedings. The report was largely dictated by Assistant Corporation Counsel George L. Reker, who did not see the film till last night.

What Authorities Say.

"The city authorities say they are concerned for the negro," Mr. McCarthy said. "That is the reason they give for objecting to the photoplay.

"But there must be another explanation. Otherwise they would be anxious to have us show 'The New Era.' We prepared this part of the picture at the request of the trustees of Hampton and Tuskegee institutes. But when we asked permission to exhibit it Maj. Funkhouser said 'Nothing doing.'

"'The New Era' gives a vivid impression of the progress of the race. It shows that in the last fifty years since the passing of the carpet bagger and his trail of evil influences over the colored people their wealth has increased from $17,000,000 to $300,000,000.

Shows Negro's Progress.

"It shows how Hampton institute is making valuable citizens. It shows the agricultural advance of the race. It exhibits progressive types of colored men and women. In fact, it is a tribute to the qualities of the race and their capabilities for industrial and social progress. Yet Maj. Funkhouser won't let us show it."

David W. Griffith, the producer of "The Birth of a Nation," made a plea last night from the stage of the Illinois theater for "a square deal for the motion picture."

"If you permit a censorship of the movies, there will soon be a censorship of the drama and then a censorship of the press. That would be Russia. I ask for the motion picture the same privilege as that accorded the historian, the dramatist, and the novelist. We should be permitted to portray the wrongs of the past in order that we may be able to avoid errors in the future."

Thanks Judge Cooper.

Mr. Griffith publicly thanked Judge Cooper—who was in the audience—for his courage in issuing an injunction against the city to restrain it from interfering with the production.

Judge Cooper saw the performance and heard the speech but he refused comment.

"I don't know myself what I think about it. I haven't allowed myself to form an opinion," he said.

Assistant Corporation Counsel George L. Reker, who has the city's case against the production in charge, was strong in his denunciation of the film.

"It is wonderful and thrilling, but it is an outrage," said Mr. Reker. "Say for me that it is a damnable insult against the negro. I am more positive than before in the dangerous effects of this production. It ought to be stopped. The negro has a hard enough battle even now in this country. This is another obstacle in his betterment. With the exception of a few conventional negro characters—the southern mammy type—there isn't a commendable action by a negro in the whole piece. They are connected definitely, all the way through, with murder and rape and debauchery."

Mr. Reker said he has not determined what course to pursue in the matter. It is expected that he will ask that the injunction against the city be dissolved.

"WHOLE CIVIL WAR SHOWN ON SHEET"

So the Critic Summarizes "Birth of a Nation" at the Illinois.

BY ASHTON STEVENS.

ON A sheet of linen little larger than my mother used to make for the comfort of her sleepers, I witnessed the Civil War and its reconstruction as they have been flashed on a film by D. W. Griffith, the Wagner of screen. I am notoriously no friend of the movies. I am a dog too old to learn an occupation new—as we would say in blank. If these really are they, I have said, in the name of heaven retire me with whited whiskers, a la William Winter! Believe me, I went yesterday to "The Birth of a Nation" at the Illinois Theater an enmey in arms empowered to do his dangest.

After three hours' captivity to the spell of the show I emerged an enemy to every of his that opposes this Homeric film. It had to be raw to be true; it had to be grilling to be dramatic; it had to suggest the "bloody shirt" of platitude in order to make its art immediate, dynamic and plausible and sure-enough.

EPIC WITHOUT WORDS.

An epic without words, but with gorgeous poetry, is Mr. Griffith's filming of "The Birth of a Nation." It is a poet's picture. His art always is first, and he knows no black nor white to make his poem real. If God had been the villain in the play, so Mr. Griffith, one takes it, would have cast his deity.

To specialize in prejudice against this screen is to deny art in the face of a man who has risked his artist reputation on nothing less than art. How easier to have been conservative and won on a "checkerboard" (black and white) compromise! But he scorned placation. He plotted as urgently as did Eugene Walter in the best of our American plays, "The Easiest Way."

"The Birth of a Nation" is a huge, passionate, terrifying, enthralling glimpse of American history as never before has it been presented in concrete. It is perhaps the rarest pathos and poetry of our civil war that yet have been uttered. It employs a new means, new vocabulary, new senses. It is a hideous and victorious conflict against the warring of man against man. Curbed to the remotest gun-and-thunder items are its merely romantic details. Strung to their tenuous ultimate are the gross tragedies of embattlement. War, for good or evil, becomes murder in the first degree.

GRIFFITH MAKES SPEECH.

Mr. Griffith first spoke to the spectators during the nervous and necessary intermission. Or words to this effect, he said that he didn't mind telling us that his name was Griffith. He believed in the truth as advanced by the art of the camera. He had as much a right to picture as the historian had to write. Disparaging the spoken word as a medium, Mr. Griffith spoke well, winding up with loving every one of us, enemies included, to use his own well-picked words.

But his speech was not required to insure the success of the drama. It was a gratuitously successful as Mr. Belasco's well-known pulling of the forelock.

I met Griffith in the lobby after three hours of reel from which there was no human escape.

"You've almost made me late for my Western train," he said. "I couldn't wait for the paper, but —I had to wait for your idea. When I was an actor at $8 a week you never noticed me——"

"But," sez I, "now that you are an artist at one hundred thousand per season——"

"Do we require those vulgar fractions?"

"Your department of publicity has rather insisted."

CALLS IT "GREAT."

"That all comes under the head of obscene advertising," Mr. Griffith said. "I should like to know what you think of the show as an individual."

"Great," says I. "The limit—to date. Sometimes your actors hop rather than walk, but you have a wonder orchestra that synchronizes to the last deed and syllable—yes?"

"Yes. Utterly yes," said the master photoist. "But both are speeded up to the jerk because we started late to-day."

"You are going to eliminate the jerk from the movies?" I asked.

"I am," said Griffith; and I was very glad on account of my faith in him.

Tuesday
Rev. 6/8

CONDEMN "BIRTH OF NATION"

Four Members of Board of Censors to Appeal to Judge Cooper.

Condemnation of the photo play "The Birth of a Nation" is voiced in the report of the four members of the board of municipal censorship, who viewed the exhibition last Saturday evening and again yesterday afternoon. To-morrow Assistant Corporation Counsel Reker will appeal to Judge Cooper in the Superior court to set aside his injunction restraining the city authorities from interference with the production of the film. The censor's report will form the basis of appeal. One phase cited in the report as tending to increase race prejudice is that a witness "cannot help but be impressed with the thought that the negro is shown to be a firm believer in intermarriage between whites and blacks."

Mayor Thompson favors the city's appeal from the injunction.

"I think the fight should be carried on," said the mayor. "I have nothing to do with it now, of course, but I am not in favor of the film. I do not believe that the assassination of President Lincoln, as depicted in the film, should be shown. They say that suggestion is the breeder of crime, and there is suggestion for you."

Wednesday
Tribune
6-9

THE IRRATIONAL CENSOR.

The question of censorship raised by the play "The Birth of a Nation" has revealed as official muddleheadedness as any one could reably expect to be disclosed. Mayor Thomps quoted as saying:

"Some of my friends who have seen it say th ought not to be shown. There are several objeable scenes. I understand that the assassinati President Lincoln is shown. I cannot underhow any one can approve of that sort of a pi under any circumstances. Anything of that simply breeds crime."

We have conceded that this photo play pre an intricate question and one which might go public policy, but Mayor Thompson makes it a ent how blunderingly officialdom will approach handle a delicate problem.

The fact that the assassination of Abraham coln is represented with great effectiveness does constitute a valid reason for forbidding the sho of the film. The emotion produced in the spectator who sees the acting of this tremendous piece of national tragedy is in kind, if of smaller force, that which filled Ford's theater when the crime was committed. It is poignant, but to say that the sobered folk who yield to it have been under a crime breeding influence is to take a wild flight into the extravagances of unreason.

The question raised by "The Birth of a Nation" is simply and utterly one of public policy, to be determined either upon fact or upon the most intelligent presumption as to what would be found to be the facts. If the community were as intelligent as such a community ought to be, censorship would be an intolerable outrage upon it.

Intelligence does not need censorship. The greater the insistence upon censorship the greater the denial that the community has intelligence. We know that if moving pictures accessible to the immature, unreasoning, impressionable parts of the city portrayed the success of criminal acts, revealing their perpetrators in enjoyment of life easily made pleasurable, there would be an incentive to weak minds, and the public might suffer the consequences. The matter is one of public policy, and censorship, although in itself dangerous and abhorrent, is accepted as a necessary compromise.

But the question is always one of fact, and censorship, being in itself a denial of intelligence, or an acceptance of the fact that ignorance is impressionable, frequently proves that it itself is unintelligent.

The assassination of Abraham Lincoln, in whatever form it is brought to the attention, causes a reaction of profound horror and sympathy and of regret. It was a great and consequential fact in our national history. It meant immeasurable woe to the south. Few tragedies in history have had such appealing circumstances and such great consequences. And to contend that a representation of it "breeds crime" merely shows to what extremes of unreason censorship can and will go.

Examiner 6-9

FILM BOARD BILL PASSED

By a Staff Correspondent.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., June 8.—The Senate to-day passed the Olson bill, providing for a state board of moving picture censors, to be appointed by the Secretary of State. The original bill was amended to make it necessary for the Chicago board, as well as the state body, to approve a film before it could be run in Chicago.

American Tuesday
TUESDAY. 6/8

"BIRTH OF A NATION" GREAT AMERICAN DRAMA

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION."

David W. Griffith's great imaginative and spectacular drama of the civil war period, "The birth of a Nation," is now being presented twice a day at the Illinois Theater to crowded houses. In this great American drama the spectator is shown with all the subtleties of dramatic and pictorial effect a great epoch in American history, the period before, during and after the civil war. "The Birth of a Nation" is an American drama in which the passions of a people and the historic events of a great epoch are the background of a vivid human-interest story in which those same passions and emotions that moved a nation move the individuals and the families—North and South—and thus center the dramatic interest. The appeal of this most unusual entertainment is so emphatic that Chicago is bound to be its home for a long time.

ORCHESTRA HALL

Wednesday
Herald
6-9

GRIFFITH WINS IN BOSTON.

David W. Griffith's great film play, "The Birth of a Nation," is to remain in Boston, despite varied activities against it. The opponents of the play succeeded in getting through the legislature a week ago a so-called "threeman" censor bill, which provided that any play could be stopped without any reason being assigned at the pleasure of the Mayor of Boston, the chief justice of the Municipal Court and the police commissioner. The bill was promptly signed by Governor Walsh.

Mayor Curley, Chief Justice Wilfred Bolster and Police Commissioner Stephen O'Meara decided to see the film drama personally. They visited "The Birth of a Nation" at different times individually. Then on last Wednesday they gave a hearing to the counsel for the opponents and the counsel for the theater. John F. Cusick, the sole theatrical counsel, was faced by former United States Assistant Attorney General William H. Lewis and Butler R. Wilson, colored lawyers, and J. Mott Hallowell, representing the white protestants. The hearing lasted two hours, after which the board of censors went into executive session.

After short deliberation Mayor Curley in behalf of the board stated:

"Having witnessed the performance, heard counsel and having given full consideration to the entire subject we have decided that the license of the theater should not be revoked or suspended."

* * * * *

Wednesday
Herald
6-9

STATE FILM CENSORSHIP IS INDORSED BY SENATE

Lincoln Park Bonds Win and Chicago Pension Measure for Police and Firemen Is Amended.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Springfield, Ill., June 8.—State censorship of moving pictures became a probability today when the senate, by a vote of 38 to 1, passed the Olson bill creating a board of censors, to be appointed by the secretary of state. The bill is practically certain to receive favorable action in the house.

The bill applies to the entire state, but provides that Chicago may retain a local censorship board which may reject films which have been approved by the state authorities. No pictures may be shown in Chicago, however, which have not been passed by the state board. Senator Manny, a downstate member, cast the only vote against the bill. Several Chicago senators did not vote.

LINCOLN PARK BONDS WIN.

The senate passed the house bill authorizing Lincoln Park to issue $1,000,000 in bonds for improvement purposes.

Over the protests of the Democrats, Republican senators obtained the amendment of Chicago pension bills applying to police, firemen and park police by providing that their provisions should apply only for three years. An investigation of the workings of the pension fund acts is to be made in the meantime.

The firemen's pension bill was amended by reducing the tax levy from seven-tenths of a mill to three-tenths of a mill. The police pension fund bill was amended to provide a maximum tax of seven-tenths of a mill, and the park police pension fund bill to provide a maximum tax of one-twenty-fifth of a mill for the South Park board, one-tenth of a mill for the West Park and one-seventeenth of a mill for Lincoln Park. The amounts in the bills still represent increases over the present acts. The bills were advanced to third reading.

SANITARY BILL ADVANCED.

The Chicago sanitary district bill authorizing the extension of the drainage canal to a point five miles below Joliet and the development of water power at that point was advanced to third reading in the senate.

The bills making possible a merger of Chicago surface and elevated lines were made a special order for consideration tomorrow.

Tuesday
American 6-8

AMUSEMENTS. AMUSEMENTS.

ILLINOIS THEATRE

MATINEES 2:15 NIGHTS 8:10

D. W. GRIFFITH'S GIGANTIC SPECTACLE

8 MONTHS IN THE MAKING
SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA OF 50
The EIGHTH WONDER OF THE WORLD
COST HALF A MILLION DOLLARS
SEATS SELLING 4 WEEKS IN ADVANCE

TWICE DAILY Including Sunday
EVENINGS AND SAT. MATINEE
ORCHESTRA.....$1 & $2
1ST BALCONY.....50c, 75c & $1
2ND BALCONY.....25c & 50c
OTHER MATINEES
ORCHESTRA.....50c & $1
1ST BALCONY.....50c & 75c
2ND BALCONY.....25c

18000 PEOPLE
THE BIRTH OF A NATION
3000 HORSES

Examiner 6/9 Journal

AMUSEMENTS. 6/9 AMUSEMENTS

ILLINOIS THEATRE

MATINEES 2:15 NIGHTS 8:10

TWICE DAILY Including Sunday

EVENINGS AND SAT. MATINEE
ORCHESTRA.....$1 & $2
1ST BALCONY.....50c, 75c & $1
2ND BALCONY.....25c & 50c
OTHER MATINEES
ORCHESTRA.....50c & $1
1ST BALCONY.....50c & $1
2ND BALCONY.....25c

D. W. GRIFFITH'S GIGANTIC SPECTACLE

18000 PEOPLE

THE BIRTH OF A NATION

8 MONTHS IN THE MAKING
SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA OF 50
The EIGHTH WONDER OF THE WORLD
COST HALF A MILLION DOLLARS
SEATS SELLING 4 WEEKS IN ADVANCE

3000 HORSES

June 9

D. W. Griffith
PRODUCER OF THE PHOTOPLAY
"THE BIRTH OF A NATION"

Herald 6/9

Answers to Questions

ENTHUSIASTIC—I agree with you most heartily. "The Birth of a Nation" is a masterpiece. Yes, I think Mae Marsh and Harry Walthall are splendid. Thank you for your nice letter. No, you are not one bit too enthusiastic. I enjoyed your interest in the "movies."

Herald 6-10

The City of Chicago has served notice on the attorneys for Joseph McCarthy that they will appear before Judge William Fenimore Cooper this morning at 10 o'clock to file a bill of exceptions to the injunction granted permitting the showing of "The Birth of a Nation" in order to take the case to the Appellate Court. They will ask that they be allowed to present additional affidavits. The play in question is being shown at the Illinois Theater.

Tribune June 10

THURSDAY, JUNE

From FILM LAND
KELLY

HENRY B. WALTHALL

INTRODUCING to you Henry B. Walthall, distinguished citizen of cinema land, who arrived in town yesterday to begin his engagement with the Essanay company. No hint of any plans as to production, director, or salary can be abstracted from the managers, though Victor Eubank surmised that they were paying him $2.50 a week. Mr. Walthall probably is as well known a player as the screen shows, at present circulating in the city in the Griffith productions of "The Avenging Conscience" and "Ghosts," not to mention "The Birth of a Nation." He is of the old Biograph days and has been long under the Griffithian tutelage.

Examiner 6-10

"Birth of Nation" Appeal Is Up To-Day

The city's lawyers will appear before Judge Cooper this morning with a bill of exceptions in the "Birth of a Nation" film case, so that they may take it to the Appellate Court immediately. They will not try to have the temporary injunction, secured by Burkhalter & Grossberg as attorneys for John McCarthy, owner of the Illinois rights to the film, set aside, but will appeal directly to the higher court.

Tribune 6/10

ILLINOIS THEATRE

TWICE DAILY INCLUDING SUNDAYS

MATINEES 2:15 NIGHTS 8:10

EVENINGS AND SAT. MATINEE
ORCHESTRA.....$1 & $2
1ST BALCONY.....50c, 75c & $1
2ND BALCONY.....25c & 50c
OTHER MATINEES
ORCHESTRA.....50c & $1
1ST BALCONY.....50c & $1
2ND BALCONY.....25c

D. W. GRIFFITH'S GIGANTIC SPECTACLE

18000 PEOPLE

THE BIRTH OF A NATION

EIGHT MONTHS IN THE MAKING
SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA OF 50
THE EIGHTH WONDER OF THE WORLD
COST HALF A MILLION DOLLARS
SEATS SELLING 4 WEEKS IN ADVANCE

3000 HORSES

N.Y. Telegraph 6-9

Two Long Engagements.

"Twin Beds," now at the Harris Theatre, will to-night celebrate its 350th consecutive performance in New York. Souvenirs will be distributed.

D. W. Griffith also is pleased to note that this afternoon "The Birth of a Nation" will attain its second century mark at the Liberty. During this period Theodore Mitchell, who is Mr. Griffith's expert mathematician, estimates that 285,000 patrons have seen the picture. In this connection it must be recalled that the regular two-dollar scale of prices prevails at the Liberty.

"BIRTH OF A NATION" TAKES AT THE ILLINOIS; PICKFORD FILM AT ORCHESTRA HALL

Miss Mae Marsh.

Sherman's March to the Sea, one of the many big scenes in the Griffith masterpiece, and Lillian Gish, who plays Elsie Stoneman in the "Birth of a Nation."

BY JAMES WARREN CURRIE.

Out in Universal City, which is in California, there is a young woman still in her teens. There isn't an unusual fact. There are a lot of young women still in their teens in Universal City. But this happens to be an exceptionable young woman.

If you have seen "The Birth of a Nation" you have seen a young girl in danger throw herself from a precipice. If you have seen "The Avenging Conscience" you have sen a maid, deeply in love with a grocer's clerk, who bends his thoughts to her by the arts of the eternal feminine. And if you have seen "The Escape" you have seen a poor little sweatshop girl fall deeply in love with a brute of the slums who kills her baby. All these different people are the same girl who is out in Universal City. She is Mae Marsh, pet of the Griffith Mutual Studios, a lady with an O. Henry turn of mind and a future which has been pronounced by David Griffith as "the most promising in the moving pictures."

The stories of Miss Marsh coming out of the Universal City studios are very vague and heavy laden with the dew of poetry. That is because they are the brain children of the publicity man—than whom as a class there is no greater poet.

But I happened to talk with a person who wasn't a publicity man and who knew Miss Marsh very well through daily contact with her in her work, and he gave me some of the facts herein contained.

It seems that Miss Marsh one day dropped into the studio to call for one of her sisters, of which she has many. And Griffith saw her and studied her while she wasn't looking and asked her if she would like to work in pictures.

Now, I don't know whether the request was a realization of her dreams or whether she demurred. Anyhow she went in pictures. And under the Griffith direction her ability blossomed and she bloomed from an extra girl to a full-fledged actress person, like the Gishes and the Pickfords and the Sweets and all the rest.

But around the studio she is a popular and much feared young lady. Everybody is her friend, and nobody ever starts a battle of wits. Her gift of repartee is dangerous. She is wrapped up in her work, not for purposes of publicity, but on the level. And yet she hasn't had enough of that to pose.

* * *

Part 6—10

Appeal Is Allowed On Film Injunction

Judge Cooper in the Superior Court today allowed an appeal to be taken to the Appellate Court on a bill of exceptions filed to the injunction granted by him restraining the City of Chicago from interfering with the production of "The Birth of a Nation." It is expected that an early hearing will be had and an immediate decision given by the Appellate Court.

Part 6—10

"Birth of a Nation" Music Is Effective

By Karleton Hackett.

THERE ARE depths within us which only music can reach, and this production of "The Birth of a Nation," at the Illinois, is a striking case in point. The conditions were most favorable, for a national drama dealing with the elemental facts gave a scope which most photoplays could not hope to have, and Mr. Briel, who arranged the music, has taken full advantage of the opportunities.

There have been several attempts before to illustrate the action and heighten the effect thru music, especially in the "Spartacus" at the Auditorium some time ago, but in the present production is found the first realization of the possibilities. In the "Spartacus," tho the music in itself was excellently chosen and well played, it had no intimate relation with the story nor did it set any chord vibrating in the audience save thru its abstract charm as music. But in the "Birth of a Nation" not only is the story one that touches each of us, but it could be illumined by music associated with our earliest recollection and that told a wonderful tale of our national heritage the moment our ears caught the first strain.

Some of the music, if it should be named in cold print, might be held commonplace or even banal by one who had not been present at the production and was merely reading about it casually. But in these days we have stripped most of the ornamental decorations from life and are looking straight at the bare facts, so the simpler the thing the more direct its appeal. This is always true of life, and in times of solemnity it is true of whatever would speak to us of life. Whether or not a thing be "art" has never bothered me much, but whether a thing had any relation to life, to the things men had experienced or hoped for, means something.

From the tremolo on three scrapy fiddles while "Eliza was crossing the ice" in some country theater up to the supreme moment of the Niebelungen Ring the power of music to sound the deeps beyond where words or even the eye can carry has been one of the facts of human experience. So last night some of our nursery melodies came back to us with a force to which we all paid tribute. It was not merely the beauty of the thing itself, but the power of association which related what was passing before our eye and sounding in our ears with our innermost fibers of being.

What could be more simple, more inevitable, than to illustrate the picture of the southern household gathered together by having a chorus back of the scenes sing "My Old Kentucky Home"? Commonplace, done over and over again until it has become banal to some people, but has this marred the beauty of that melody which has become a part of our folklore and yields in nothing to any folk melody that has yet sprung from the heart of man? And if it serves but as the prelude to all the blood and hate of war, does it have any the less power over us in these days in which we are now living? It was not a detached, sentimental episode, but part of an unbroken stream of melodic suggestion from chorus and orchestra.

This is but one out of many ,and I purposely chose one of the most self-evident Because of the overwhelming power of its simplicity. If ever any nation needed to shake itself together and look the facts squarely in the face, it is this one at this moment. The effect that this music, drawn from our national heritage of folklore, had on the audience was unmistakable, even tho but few were more than half conscious of just what was creeping into their minds and coloring their thoughts. The music was continuous thruout the production, in remarkable variety, and with striking suggestiveness. It was worth something to realize how much folk music we have been able to garner in our short national existence, and the manner in which it has already woven itself into our feelings.

The man who arranged the music showed sympathetic understanding in his selections, taking bits here and there from many of the "classical" composers, but the parts that would serve his purpose, changing the rhythms and even the melodies to fit his needs, yet always bringing the right quality to bear on the picture on the stage. There was an orchestra of about thirty, as well as I could judge, and of excellent quality.

The music of the second part, the reconstruction period, was not nearly so happily chosen, principally because there is little to choose which shall pleasingly represent brutality, ignorance, drunkenness and lust.

It was the music of the first part about which I have been writing. It is an achievement in itself, as well as pointing the way for future activities. Even the "movies" cannot do without the active human element, the actual men making the living music. The first part of this "Birth of a Nation" would lose a great portion of its power without the music.

NEW YORK OFFICE, 1022 LONGACRE BUILDING
Forty-second Street and Broadway
Telephone Bryant 7030

Editors: EDWARD J. MOCK, PAUL H. WOODRUFF
Associate Editors
Neil G. Caward — John C. Garrett
Mabel Condon — Charles R. Condon
Advertising Manager: ALLEN L. HAASE

This publication is free and independent of all business or house connections or control. No manufacturer or supply dealer, or their stockholders or representatives, have any financial interest in Motography or any voice in its management or policy.

Entered at Chicago Post Office as Second Class Mail Matter

MOTOGRAPHY

WITH WHICH IS INCORPORATED THE NICKELODEON

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY ELECTRICITY MAGAZINE CORPORATION
MONADNOCK BUILDING
CHICAGO, ILL.
Telephone: Harrison 3014—All Departments

NOTICE TO ADVERTISERS

Changes of advertising copy should reach the office of publication not less than fifteen days in advance of date of issue. Regular date of issue, every Saturday. New advertisements will be accepted up to within ten days of date of issue, but proof of such advertisements can not be shown in advance of publication.

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE

Per year $3.00
Canada - - - - Per year, $4.00
Foreign - - - - Per year, 5.00
Single copy - - - - .10c

FOR SALE AT ALL NEWS STANDS

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS

REMITTANCES — Remittances should be made by check, New York draft or money order, in favor of MOTOGRAPHY. Foreign subscriptions may be remitted direct by International Postal Money Order.

CHANGE OF ADDRESS — The old address should be given as well as the new, and notice should be received two weeks in advance of the desired change.

If Your News Dealer Will Not Supply You — Please Notify Us

Volume XIII CHICAGO, JUNE 19, 1915 Number 25

Censorship Loses Again

THAT the exhibition of "The Birth of a Nation" might engender race animosity against negro citizens is a contention based purely on assumption. A license or permit to exhibit obtained honestly and in good faith vests the owner with an individual property right, which neither the city nor any official nor judge can arbitrarily deprive him of without a hearing in court. That is the nucleus of Judge William Fenimore Cooper's decision June 5, when he entered an injunction restraining the mayor, the chief of police, and the city of Chicago from interfering with the production of the play. Thus, in the long story of censorship, closes another chapter whose evidence shows that the world's sentiment is turning against the censors.

Sincerity, consistency and justice—these things the world demands even of censors. It is a hard order; for the very word censor is arbitrary, arrogant and exacting. That is why censorship is an un-American institution, and why the people are turning against it.

The history of the Chicago censors, especially, has not been a record of broad-mindedness or of "justice tempered with mercy." Always the apparent object of the board has been to stop every scene which offered any theoretical excuse for interference. We have always contended that abuse of censoring power would not stand the test of the courts; and now the record is bearing us out.

Our frequent criticisms of Chicago's censorial power has not been based on prejudice. Even the present case, full in the eyes of the world and the courts, continues to bear witness to the narrow arbitrariness of those who are delegated to the "regulation" of pictures. For Chicago's argument before the court was that "The Birth of a Nation" libelled the negro race. Observe, then, the sequel to the court's decision:

At the request of two negro institutes a picture entitled "The New Era" was prepared and arranged to run as a postlude to "The Birth of a Nation." This postlude shows the development of the negro race and the important part it is taking in modern civilization. Apparently the censors should have welcomed it—doubly so after they had been enjoined from interfering with the master film. Did they receive it in all sincerity as a solution of their difficulty? They did not. Those powerful and intelligent arbiters of the people's rights refused to allow "The New Era" to be shown, on the ground that it was not a part of "The Birth of a Nation" when a permit was granted for that film. And they refused to issue a separate permit for it. Is that judicial action, or is it small-minded retaliation for defeat? What better evidence can we ask of the quality of our "censors"—those vested with the sacred and responsible duty of protecting the public morals—than that they refuse to do a good act because they resent being caught in a bad one?

One decision against the censors might not mean a great deal. If that were all the testimony we had that the world is awakening to the injustice of censorship, perhaps jubilation were unwise. But when one decision follows another in widely separated cases, when the very newspapers that were themselves violently censorious not long ago now predict the downfall of the whole censor system, there is much hope for the freedom of the picture.

Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation"

Reviewed by Neil G. Caward

CHICAGO obtained its first glimpse of that superdreadnaught of all feature motion pictures, "The Birth of a Nation," on Saturday night, June 5, when, after a court decision of a sweeping nature, an injunction was granted by a Chicago judge restraining the city from interfering with the production.

Needless to say every man, woman and child who has attended the performance since its opening goes away amazed and awe-struck at the gigantic nature of the production and enthusiastic over its magnitude, fidelity to history and perfect direction.

It is hopeless to even try to compare "The Birth of a Nation" to any of the other feature films that have been shown, as it is so entirely different from all of the others. However, it is generally conceded that up to this time "Cabiria" may be referred to as the world's greatest production, and from the standpoint of stupendous grandeur, the number of supernumeraries handled, and the staging of spectacular battles and mob scenes, "The Birth of a Nation" in every way equals the great Itala production; and as an additional merit, the latter story, on account of its historical nature, is familiar to every school boy of the land; consequently it seems to have an even wider appeal and perhaps, therefore, merits the distinction of itself being called "the world's greatest production."

No review of the Chicago production would be complete without a special mention of the splendid orchestral accompaniment which undoubtedly adds much pleasure to the unreeling of the story. The music is so timed as to be exactly synchronous with the action of the film and weeks must have been spent in rehearsal to produce the perfect result obtained. The audience finds itself in the proper atmosphere immediately upon entering the theater, for the ushers are costumed in the quaint garb of the 60's, the girl ushers being dressed in hoop skirts and frocks of the period of 1863, while the male ushers wear Union and Confederate uniforms.

The story is so well known on account of previous reviews, at the time of its New York showing, together with feature articles that have appeared concerning its production, that it is needless to again describe it, and only necessary to mention the names of such stars as Messrs. Walthall, Aitken, Siegmann, Harron and the Misses Marsh, Gish, Alden and the other notable Mutual-Griffith photoplayers, to let every exhibitor know it is in every respect an all-star production.

ILLINOIS THEATRE
TWICE DAILY Including Sundays
EVENINGS AND SAT. MATINEE
ORCHESTRA ..... $1 & $2
1ST BALCONY ..... 50c, 75c & $1
2ND BALCONY ..... 25c & 50c
OTHER MATINEES
ORCHESTRA ..... 50c & $1
1ST BALCONY ..... 50c & $1
2ND BALCONY 25c
MATINEES 2:15 NIGHTS 8:10
D. W. GRIFFITH'S GIGANTIC SPECTACLE
18000 PEOPLE
THE BIRTH OF A NATION
8 MONTHS IN THE MAKING
SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA OF 50
The EIGHTH WONDER OF THE WORLD
COST HALF A MILLION DOLLARS
SEATS SELLING 4 WEEKS IN ADVANCE
3000 HORSES

ILLINOIS THEATRE
TWICE DAILY Including Sundays
EVENINGS AND SAT. MATINEE
ORCHESTRA ..... $1 & $2
1ST BALCONY ..... 50c, 75c & $1
2ND BALCONY ..... 25c & 50c
OTHER MATINEES
ORCHESTRA ..... 50c & $1
1ST BALCONY ..... 50c & $1
2ND BALCONY 25c
MATINEES 2:15 NIGHTS 8:10
D. W. GRIFFITH'S GIGANTIC SPECTACLE
18000 PEOPLE
THE BIRTH OF A NATION
8 MONTHS IN THE MAKING
SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA OF 50
THOUSANDS TURNED AWAY DAILY
OWING TO THE UNPRECEDENTED DEMAND, PATRONS ARE REQUESTED TO BUY SEATS IN ADVANCE IN ORDER TO SECURE DESIRABLE LOCATIONS.
SEATS SELLING 4 WEEKS IN ADVANCE
3000 HORSES

American 6-10

City Fight on "Birth of Nation" Bars Film of Negroes' Advance

The city administration and Second Deputy Superintendent of Police M. L. C. Funkhouser defeated their own purposes in refusing permission to exhibit all of the reels in the motion picture play, "Birth of a Nation," showing at the Illinois Theater, according to a reply framed by Attorney J. G. Grossberg of the firm of Grossberg & Burkhalter, representing the exhibitors.

Assistant Corporation Counsel George Reker charged that the motion play arouses prejudice against the negro. It was part of the argument against a motion for an appeal from the ruling of Judge Cooper in the Superior Court, enjoining the city from interfering with the production.

"We intended showing four reels of pictures of the Hampton Institute at Hampton, Va., showing the progress of the negro in vocational lines, but they refused to issue a permit for this truly educational feature," was the statement of Attorney Mortimer Newfield, conducting the case for John McCarthy, owner of the Illinois rights to the film.

"The additional films demonstrate the advancement and the good qualities of the colored people."

The motion for an appeal, brought by the city, was granted by Judge Cooper to-day. The case will go to the Appellate Court.

News 6/10

APPEAL 'BIRTH OF NATION' CASE

Attorneys Granted Right to Carry Up Film Play Injunction.

Judge Cooper in the Superior court to-day allowed an appeal to be taken to the injunction restraining the city from interfering with the production of "The Birth of a Nation." An immediate decision by the Appellate court is expected.

Herald 6-11

"Birth of a Nation" Decision Out To-Day

The Appellate Court to-day will pass on the injunction suit brought by the owners of the photoplay "The Birth of a Nation" to restain the city authorities from interferring with its production. A temporary injunction has been issued and the city authorities are fighting it. Superior Court Judge Cooper yesterday allowed the matter to go to the Appellate Court.

Herald 6-11

SEEN ON THE SCREEN By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Walthall Admits Delight In Psychological Roles

A man who can sit through an interview and smile cheerfully when he is dripping wet deserves the tribute David Griffith gave him—that of being the most even-tempered, boy-hearted man he had ever met.

"I like rain," said Henry Walthall, who was the man interviewed, in answer to my expressed regret that Chicago had given him such a cheerless reception. "California's sunshine gets monotonous after a time, especially during the days of dryness we have just experienced.

"I saw myself in 'Ghosts' last night. I didn't realize how depressing Ibsen's story was until I had seen it again on the screen. I have just finished his 'Pillars of Society' with a cast similar to the one used in "The Birth of a Nation.'

"I like those psychological stories," Mr. Walthall continued, "they have a fascination. I love to play them to see how far I can go."

By the twinkle in his eyes I fancy he rather enjoys the novelty of playing those "creepy" characters like the boy in "The Avenging Conscience."

When I asked him in which picture he liked himself best, I supposed of course he would say, "The Birth of a Nation," for he is so lovable and attractive as the "little colonel." So it was much to my surprise that he replied:

"The 'Avenging Conscience' is my favorite picture. I enjoyed playing that poor, harassed boy, tormented by his conscience and yet fearing to confess. Of course, 'The Birth of a Nation' has a much greater appeal and covers a wider scope. I doubt if there will ever be another picture made with the same local and national interest. I don't compare the two pictures when I say I believe the character in 'The Avenging Conscience' to be my best work."

"You had David Griffith as director in both, did you not?"

"Yes, and I want to say that he is delightful as a director, so inspiring and so appreciative. No man has ever had his hand on the human pulse in the manner of David Griffith.

"I am not sure just what picture will be my first Essanay production, but Mr. Boushey is seriously considering putting on 'The Misleading Lady.'"

"From your six years' experience on the screen what, in your opinion, is the future of pictures?"

"Rather uncertain, but sure; uncertain because we do not know who are going to be big, and who are going to sink into oblivion."

\+ + +

A dress rehearsal of the program to be offered the children tomorrow morning at Orchestra Hall was given by the Strand Theatrical Company yesterday morning. "The Adventures of the Patchwork Girl" are told in five reels and the scenic effects and large ensemble give the place the character of a musical comedy without the topical songs. There are transformation scenes and magical surprises too.

\+ + +

Judge Cooper in the Superior Court yesterday allowed an appeal to be taken to the Appellate Court on his injunction, restraining the city authorities from interfering with the production of the photo-play "The Birth of a Nation."

Ex. 6-12

ILLINOIS THEATRE

MATINEES 2:15 NIGHTS 8:10

TWICE DAILY Including Sundays

EVENINGS AND SAT. MATINEE

ORCHESTRA ..... $1 & $1
1ST BALCONY ..... 50c, 75c & $1
2ND BALCONY ..... 25c & 50c

OTHER MATINEES

ORCHESTRA ..... 50c & $1
1ST BALCONY ..... 50c & $1
2ND BALCONY 25c

D. W. GRIFFITH'S GIGANTIC SPECTACLE

THE BIRTH OF A NATION

18000 PEOPLE

8 MONTHS IN THE MAKING

SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA OF 50

3000 HORSES

THOUSANDS TURNED AWAY DAILY

OWING TO THE UNPRECEDENTED DEMAND, PATRONS ARE REQUESTED TO BUY SEATS IN ADVANCE IN ORDER TO SECURE DESIRABLE LOCATIONS.

SEATS SELLING 4 WEEKS IN ADVANCE

THE HYPHEN AT THE PLAY

(New York Sun)

The morbid irritability of certain collections of foreigners or imperfectly assimilated Americans in regard to the production of plays by which they conceive that their "race" is misrepresented or attacked has been displayed, and sometime effectively, much too often. Anybody who dislikes a show should be able to keep away from it. The notion that the United States is not a nation but a federation of "races," each of which is entitled to prohibit any drama which it dislikes, is impossible from the point of national patriotism and of free speech.

A photoplay whose subject went back to the Franco-Prussian war or the melancholy days after it in France was brought out at a New York theater. The National Board of Censors and the Commissioner of Licenses condemned it on th eground that it would stir ill feeling among Germans and "German Americans" here; and the latter official threatened to take away the theater's license if the films in question were not removed.

If the theory of these sages is carried out, the surrender of Cornwallis can't be shown pictorially lest "feeling" be stirred in "British American" breasts; nor could scenes of the Colonial wars against the French be filmed; the "Franco Americans" might be stirred to rage.

In short, history, fiction, poetryy couldn't deal safely with persons or things later than the Sumerians or the Hittites. Judge Whitaker of the Supreme Court, granting an injunction to the photoplay company, said:

> "The court cannot give judicial sanction to the grouping of American citizens in different classes, and shape or color its decisions in accordance therewith; so that what has lately become known as hyphenated citizenship has no color or standing. It cannot properly be recognized by the court or any other branch of the government."

We assume that this is good law, because it is good sense and good Americanism.

Examiner June 11

The TURN OF THE REEL

BY JAMES WARREN CURRIE.

A gentle Alabaman with a soft Southern drawl and a deceptive languidness about him sat in an office at the Essanay Studio and smiled as he submitted to an interview.

There was the advance guard of a cloud of interviewers and he must have been a little tired, but there wasn't any notice of it in his actions or in his replies. Henry Walthall, the new Griffith star secured by George K. Spoor after almost a year of dickering, is a very modest man. He is not an "actor" at all. He sits down and leans over and talks with you just as though he wasn't commanding one of the highest salaries in the moving pictures. He likes Chicago and hunting, waxed enthusiastic about New York and the moonlight rides up the Hudson River. But he didn't have much to say about Henry B. Walthall. He will talk the rest of the time, but you must remember that he was questioned closely and persistently and his answers were gathered all in a bunch.

"I was born in Alabama," he said. "I lived on a plantation till I was twenty-two. Then I went to New York to try for a job as an actor. I got it and did well enough. I was getting along nicely. One Summer, the Summer I was with Henry Miller in 'The Great Divide,' Mr. Miller sent me to find Kirkwood, another actor in the cast. I went to his home in the evening and learned from his wife that he was out taking 'locations' with a moving-picture concern, the Biograph Company.

MEETS MR. GRIFFITH.

"Mrs. Kirkwood told me that she expected him any minute and I waited. When he arrived I smiled at him. He told me not to laugh till I had seen pictures in the making. I went the next day and met Mr. Griffith.

"He told me he might be able to use me and I left my address. That same day Mr. Griffith started another picture, The Convict's Sacrifice. He asked me to rehearse in it and explained about the confined space of the camera as compared to the stage. I acted in that picture. That Fall I went with 'The Great Divide.' to Europe. We played there just ten weeks and I returned, intending to join a road company of the same play. But I met Mr Griffith again and he offered me as good a salary as that which I would have gotten on the road and I took it up. I have been in pictures ever since."

That was all about the career of Henry B. Walthall. We talked about hunting and Alabama and there was a light in his eyes. I mentioned that in "The Birth of a Nation" there was a particularly daring feat of horsemanship. A rider mounts his horse by leaping over the railing of a porch.

'Think so?" asked Mr. Walthall.

"Sure I do," said I.

WHAT THE COWBOYS DO.

"That's nothing to what some of those daring cowpunchers will do. They will throw a horse backward just for the fun of the thing."

"I don't care," said I. "That chap was some horseman. What's the matter, isn't he a friend of yours?"

"Certainly, he is," returned the actor "I was the fellow who mounted that way."

Oh where, oh where has the lady's man gone from pictures, the fellow who ran another man through with nine feet of steel, looked straight into the camera, and then wrote articles on how it felt to be a giant?

Henry B. Walthall is nice.

* * *

Tribune June 12

Star Theater

68 MADISON STREET

Between Clark and Dearborn Streets

Today and Every Day Until Further Notice

William Farnum

—IN—

The New Governor

Adapted from Edward Sheldon's Drama,

'The Nigger'

Will Positively Hold You Spellbound at the Appalling Conditions That Existed at the Time of

"The Birth of Our Nation"

No One Under 21 Years Admitted to Comply With Special City Permit.

FIRST TIME SHOWN IN CHICAGO FOR 10 CTS.

22 Boston Transcript 6/6

"BIRTH OF A NATION" WINS

Board of Censors Refuses to Stop Photo-play at the Tremont Theatre, but Declines to Give Reasons

After a three-hour session at City Hall, announcement was made last night that the Board of Censors which had considered the protests against "The Birth of a Nation" being given at the Tremont Theatre, had voted in favor of allowing the photo-play to continue. No reasons were given. The conclusion of the board was given in the following language:

The officials designated by Chapter 348, Acts of 1915, having received a petition from certain citizens requesting that performances of "The Birth of a Nation" be stopped by them under the authority given to them by the statute, having witnessed the performance, heard counsel representing the protesters and the licensee and having given full consideration to the entire subject, have decided that the license of the theatre should not be revoked or suspended.

Mayor Curley, chairman of the censorship board, after the other two members, Chief Justice Bolster of the Municipal Court and Police Commissioner O'Meara, had retired, declined to add to the official announcement. The chief justice and Commissioner O'Meara also declined to comment. Soon after the board assembled Mayor Curley opened a door to the outer corridor and told the large gathering of negro remonstrants who had been collecting for two hours that the board would admit a lawyer representing the remonstrants and one representing the Tremont Theatre.

J. Mott Hallowell, William H. Lewis and Butler R. Wilson said they represented the remonstrants, and were admitted, as was John F. Cusick, for the theatre. John A. Sullivan, corporation counsel, was also present.

W. Munroe Trotter arrived late and vainly sought the room with the censors The 100 remonstrants remained about until five, when under the City Hall rules, the mayor's office was closed officially. They then retired to the corridors.

The mayor, in summing up the hearing, said that the board had agreed to allow each side a half-hour to argue, but each side took an hour. The censors, after counsel had retired, went over the petitions and all other papers in the case, taking 40 minutes to arrive at the conclusion. The leaders of the remonstrants said petitions had been handed to the board containing 6181 names.

John B. Schoeffel, manager of the Tremont Theatre, said:

"I am sincerely glad that 'The Birth of a Nation' has been passed, and application to revoke the license refused, because the judgment of the directors in booking the play has been thereby justified. Whatever inequality may have been felt in regard to the historical treatment of the negro, in some parts of the film, has been removed by the incorporation of the Hampden Institute film, which shows the marvelous progress of the colored race since reconstruction. We believe 'The Birth of a Nation' to be not only legally permissable, but also, as now given, a thoroughly impartial story, holding the scales of justice even. We therefore invite the support of all the people of New England, and we beg to say, that no malice is felt toward anyone whomsoever, that has opposed the production in this city. To the more than 100,000 patrons who have seen it, and to the 15,000 persons, who in the last ten days have signed petitions protesting against any interference, we extend our hearty thanks."

When William Monroe Trotter announced to a gathering of negroes at St. Mark's Congregational Church, 1042A Tremont street, last night, that the board of theatrical censors had refused to suppress the photoplay, groans and hisses spread through the audience.

Governor Walsh was lauded by Mr. Trotter and the audience, but the mayor was branded as a "traitor," and his name hissed.

"He broke his word to us," said Trotter, referring to the mayor. "This decision by the board was rendered behind closed doors, and our people who were there to attend the meeting were forced into the mayor's outer office, and finally into the street."

Post 6/12

The Triumphant Film.

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION"—This much-discussed photo-pageant is filling the Illinois Theater to its capacity at every exhibition. Its theme is the civil war and the reconstruction period, from a southern point of view. The orchestral accompaniment is impressive.

THE

RACE FILM FOES UNDAUNTED BY CENSORS "O K"

"The fight against 'The Birth of a Nation' is not at an end," said Butler Wilson, attorney, one of the leaders in the effort to drive the photo-play from Boston, commenting today on the action of the new board of censorship in refusing to stop the production at the Tremont Theatre.

"The colored people at least are determined to drive it out of the theatres of the country, because they believe it to be a political propaganda aimed at the destruction of their political rights," he added. Then he said: "We believe we were right, and still think so. We believe there is law enough to justify a revocation."

At the end of a three hours' session in Mayor Curley's office last night the censorship board unanimously voted not to stop the photo-play.

"Having witnessed the performance, heard counsel representing the protestors and the licensee, and having given full consideration to the entire subject," the official statement of the board reads: "We have decided that the license of the theatre should not be revoked or suspended."

This action places the official stamp of approval on the production which resulted in numerous public hearings in a clash between the mayor and the Negroes of the city, in a demonstration at the doors of the Tremont Theatre, followed by court action, and finally in legislative action that ended in creating the present board of censorship, consisting of the mayor, as chairman; the police commissioner and the chief justice of the municipal court.

Both Sides Present.

One hour was allowed each side to present its case. Representing the objectors were J. Mott Hallowell, William H. Lewis and Butler R. Wilson. They rehearsed the case from the beginning, re-stated the objections already aired in City Hall, in churches, the courts and in the State House, and presented a petition bearing the names of more than 6000 who oppose the production of the film.

John F. Cusick appeared for the producers, and Corporation Counsel Sullivan was present in an advisory capacity.

The details of the session were not made public by the board, although, at the end of two hours of testimony taking, the attorneys for the objectors explained the proceedings to a group of nearly 100 Negroes who had waited outside the mayor's office. After hearing the testimony, the board sat for nearly an hour, in executive session.

As soon as the decision was reached, shortly after 7 o'clock, the mayor jumped into his automobile for a trip to New Bedford, where he had promised to act as the godfather at a Christening at 7:30. On leaving, his chauffeur told him that he would not be more than two hours and 15 minutes late.

Schoeffel Satisfied.

John B. Schoeffel, manager of the Tremont Theatre, said last night:

"I am sincerely glad that 'The Birth of a Nation' has been passed and application to revoke the license refused, because the judgment of the directors in booking the play has been thereby justified. Whatever inequality may have been felt in regard to the historical treatment of the Negro in some parts of the film has been removed by the incorporation of the Hampden Institute film, which shows the marvelous progress of the colored race since Reconstruction. We believe 'he Birth of a Nation' to be not only legally permissible, but also as now given a thoroughly impartial story holding the scales of justice even. We therefore invite the support of all the people of New England, and we beg to say that no malice is felt toward anyone whomsoever that has opposed the production in this city. To the more than 100,000 patrons who have seen it and to the 15,000 persons, who in the last 10 days have signed petitions protesting against any interference, we extend ou hearty thanks."

NEGROES INDIGNANT AT ACTION BY THE BOARD

When William Monroe Trotter announced to a gathering of Negroes at to suppress the photoplay, "The Birth of a Nation," groans and hisses spread through the audience.

Gov. Walsh was lauded by Mr. Trotter and the audience, but the mayor was branded as a "traitor," and his name hissed.

"He broke his word to us," said Trotter, referring to the mayor. "This decision by the board was rendered behind closed doors, and our people who were there to attend the meeting were forced into the mayor's outer office, and finally into the street.

"I did not learn that this meeting was to be held until 3:30 this afternoon. I was there at 4, but the mayor's secretary, who was guarding the door, refused to let me in. I showed him a petition which I had with me, and introduced him to the Equal Rights Association lawyer who was with me, as our representative, and said that it was his right to be present at the meeting, fully as much as the three lawyers from the National Association who were already in there. The secretary replied that there were already enough in there, and that he, as the mayor's secretary, had the right to enter the room, or even open the door, as the mayor in there was not the mayor, but simply a member of the board of censors.

"After all this agitation and waiting, after all this presentation of a right-some case, the board meets and solemnly sends out its verdict 'that 'The Birth of a Nation' can stay and play in Boston just as long as the management wants it to."

From the audience: "Well, we'll move it."

"Our work," continued Trotter, "has resulted in our putting additional money in the pockets of the theatre management and getting certain elements of the white race prejudiced against us. Our entire fight simply resulted in our getting Boston's official indorsement for the continuance of this instigation to race hatred.

"We have come to a new marking place. What are we going to do?" ("Blow it up") from the audience. "The censor board, whose jurisdiction is final, has rendered its decision. The voices raised, and the petitions signed by the several thousands of persons, at the 18 meetings of colored citizens, held in the last eight weeks in Greater Boston, have met with deaf ears. What more would they have us do?

"They say that arguments have not much weight as evidence when they are made in favor of a theatrical production unless there is something great at stake. Evidently the drawing of the color line in an open city like Boston is not considered great, nor the fact that we produced convincing evidence that the color line was drawn.

"So far as I can see, the case now rests in the hands of you people. I, as one of you, can only warn you to be very, very careful what you do."

plished. A propagandist who shows the cloven hoof as obviously as does Mr. Dixon in all his works is more or less ineffective. Mr. Griffith disavows him, but he is there just the same, eager, florid, tawdry, tricky, the apotheosis of unreconstruction, a sinister element throughout the story of "The Birth of a Nation."

Perhaps when I say "ineffective" I am wrong. The other night at the Illinois the crowd cheered the Stars and Bars, and it was not moved by the Stars and Stripes. It applauded "Dixie" and greeted "Marching Through Georgia" with silence. I confess the prejudice of one whose father and grandfather marched with Sherman to the sea, and whose best boyhood friend was the statesman who drafted the fourteenth amendment. But I do not believe that in the attitude of the audiences of "The Birth of a Nation" there is much incentive to fighting for this indifferent republic in case the present impasse should develop into war.

That off my mind, I may tell Mr. Griffith what I think of him as an artist. Photographically and as a pageant master he is a marvel, but as a dramatist he is expedient rather than good. The absurd coincidences of the play are juvenile, maudlin, and incredible. You cannot imagine Thaddeus Stevens, the sardonic and fanatic negro lover, going to visit the fire eating South Carolina Camerons at a time when the south's wounds were the sorest. And that expedition is the heart of the play. The whole thing is grotesque, insolent, and absolutely barren of plausibility. In the words of a shrewd director of the cinemas, "we treat our audiences like babes."

To me the most artistic thing in "The Birth of a Nation" is that real and photographic event of the assassination of Lincoln. There is a wonder work of action and stage management—with its irresistible alternation of scenes—the audience, the play, the president's box, the assassin, the confusion, everything as it should be. And the eerie Ku Klux incidents, with a thousand shrouded knights, night riding to vengeance, and the Wagnerian trumpet call of the Valkyries as they congregate to lynch the ravaging negroes. That trumpet call is an opulent device of sound applied to the silent drama. No spoken play can duplicate its thrilling cadences. That moment when the Ku Klux ride against a red horizon, swift with uplifted emblems of vengeance, is a fine spectacular interval, and in it you forgive Mr. Griffith for other partisan events in his panorama. It is a play to see, but to reflect upon, with the chill knowledge that it is not quite square. I advise all my readers to attend it, but at the end, when the band plays "The Star Spangled Banner," to arise dubiously, wondering whether after all the Mason and Dixon line was worth what it cost.

Tribune 6-13

Mens 6/13

"The Birth of a Nation" a Great Spectacle.

By Percy Hammond.

MR. DAVID W. GRIFFITH, the producer of the play at the Illinois, did me the honor last week to ask me to tell him, frankly, what I thought of "The Birth of a Nation" as a work of dramatic art. I say that he did me an honor by this request, because he is indubitably a great man in his way. Mr. Griffith is an authority on the beat of the human heart; he feels to an atom what retards and what accelerates the rythm of that susceptible organ. Moreover, he is a master of the means by which its contractions and dilatations in the theater are accomplished. He calculates with the uncanny intuition of a genius the cryptic relation of the eye to the right ventricle; he knows color and sound and motion to their ultimate detail, and he has the nerve and the vision to assemble them in a vast spectacle which is the peer (pictorially) of any historical pageant that I have ever seen, and I have seen them all.

I suspect, however, that "The Birth of a Nation" would be more admirable as drama were it less partial as propaganda. Mr. Griffith, the son of a confederate brigadier, explicably sees the Lost Cause as a hallowed one, with its followers suffering not ignobly the injustice and cruelty which are the prime attributes of most of their antagonists in the play.

The Ku Klux, about the holiness of whose exploits historians, President Wilson among them, express some doubt, are pictured as exalted seraphim, members of a righteous and indignant hierarchy who did no wrong. Sherman's army, on the other hand, is visualized as a drunken mob, addicted to murder and rapine, pillaging a sweet and lovely countryside. The caption to this episode infers a sneer at the "great conqueror," who marches to the sea while southern women and children, subtly brought into contrast, are hungry and in tears. Lee is to Grant as Hyperion to a wharf rat; and Thaddeus Stevens, at his worst an honest bigot, is presented as an evil and carnal miscegenist with a mulatto sweetheart. Since "The Birth of a Nation" purports to be a great historical document, it should include a picture or two of Lee's invasion of Pennsylvania, for instance, and the burning of Thaddeus Stevens' home and iron mill in Chambersburg.

Mr. Griffith was no doubt impelled to these seemingly unfair extravagances by the Rev. Mr. Dixon, his collaborator, upon whose story, "The Clansman," "The Birth of a Nation" is founded. I believe Mr. Dixon to be sincere in his abhorrence of the negro; he loathes the race and he is insistent in his aversion to the so-called Afro-American. With that emotion I have nothing to do, but I believe that were his method to be less that of a charlatan, if he were not so much a bad loser, if his squawks were less like those of a fellow dog, his mission would be more effectively accom-

Mens 6/12

At the Film Shows

"The Birth of a Nation," mightiest of the motion pictures, an illustrated history of the civil war and reconstruction periods, employing thousands of players in scenes intimate and battles spectacular, runs on at the Illinois. An orchestra plays specially composed music that effectively emphasizes and points the pictorial narrative.

The Colonial begins next week a summer season of feature pictures. A filming of Eugene Walter's play, "Fine Feathers," with Janet Beecher in it, and a variety of news and comedy pictures will be shown. An orchestra will play.

The Studebaker will keep on view Dr. George A. Dorsey's varied and interesting motion picture of life in China, which shows, among many other things, the traveler's experience on a journey up the Yangste Kiang river. Pictures of India will be shown week after next.

Mens 6/12

At the Illinois theater "The Birth of a Nation" has been playing to capacity audiences since the opening performance last Saturday. Chicago has fallen in line with other cities where this remarkable result of the camera is being shown and is supporting it at the usual price paid for high class dramatic productions. D. David W. Griffith has achieved dramatic action and spectacular effects that are a revelation in detail. Henry B. Walthall, Lillian Gish, Mae Marsh and Spottiswoode Aiken head an imposing cast.

ILLINOIS THEATRE

TWICE DAILY

(INCLUDING SUNDAYS)
AFTERNOONS AT 2:15
EVENINGS at 8:10

Evenings & Saturday Mats.
Orchestra .....$1 and $2
First Balcony. 50c, 75c and $1
Second Balcony. .25c and 50c

SEATS SELLING 4 WEEKS IN ADVANCE
Owing to the unprecedented demand patrons are requested to buy seats in advance in order to secure desirable locations.

Other Matinees
Orchestra .....50c and $1
Balcony .....50c and $1
Second Balcony 25c

SECOND TRIUMPHANT WEEK!

Thousands Turned Away at Every Performance

D. W. GRIFFITH'S

Gigantic Spectacle

18,000 People

THE BIRTH

3,000 Horses

MME. NAZIMOVA.

RUSSIAN ACTRESS APPEARING IN "WAR BRIDES" AT MAJESTIC.

[Photo copyright, 1915, by Byron company, New York.]

One result of the war in Europe is the coming visit to America of the Stratford-on-Avon Players, says a writer in the Theater Magazine. Their advent next fall will be the first surge in a outcast of enthusiasm sweeping on to the tercentenary celebration in April, 1916, of Shakespeare's death. It will be impossible to keep them here for that, for England, which even now, in the midst of wars and rumors of wars, has demanded the regular winter presence for the home festival. For their season of two weeks, will insist on a ICES time Shakespeare's native town as nearly a pilgrimage as—the birthplace, owned by a butcher, was shown to visitors, but nothing to connect the playwright with the living, vital drama existed. Save round for the Memorial theater, other Warwickshire residents joined him, and the spring festival of plays was instituted. From a few performances in the week of April 23, the date of Shakespeare's birth and death, this festival was enlarged to some three weeks of regular performances. Four years ago a summer season was inaugurated to supplement this, and in 1914, in spite of war's alarms and outlay successful season of four weeks was maintained, with excellent productions of thirteen different Shakespeare plays. Often English university centers request the loss of own plays, and perhaps the United States will follow this course. Of the regulars the following will be given: "Henry V," "Merchant of Venice," "As You Like It," "Twelfth Night," "Much Ado About Nothing," "Taming of the Shrew," "Hamlet," "Julius Caesar," "Macbeth."

STRATFORD-ON-AVON PLAYERS

Forty O'Neill, in "Pag o' my Heart," continues to please at the Cort theater. Music and pictures continue at Orchestra hall.

Olympic theater, one of the opera directors have been negotiating with Mr. Dillingham for several years. These dancers have been the sensations of Europe since 1908, holding Paris and at Covent Garden in London, including everybody the troupe to come to Chicago from the Metropolitan will number almost 200 persons. The orchestra is to consist of at least seventy musicians.

Chicago theater, "The Birth of a Nation," David W. Griffith's spectacle based on the thrilling events of the civil war," is now being presented twice a day at the Illinois theater. "The Island of Regeneration," made into picture by the Vitagraph company from the novel by the Rev. Cyrus Townsend Brady, will be retained at the Selwyn theater another week.

Peggy O'Neill, in "Pag o' my Heart," continues to please at the Cort theater. Music and pictures continue at Orchestra hall.

One result of the war in Europe is the coming visit to America of the Stratford-on-Avon Players, says a writer in the Theater Magazine. Their advent next fall will be the first surge in a outcast of enthusiasm sweeping on to the tercentenary celebration in April, 1916, of Shakespeare's death. It will be impossible to keep them here for that, for England, which even now, in the midst of wars and rumors of wars, has demanded the regular winter presence for the home festival. For their season of two weeks, will insist on a ICES time Shakespeare's native town as nearly a pilgrimage—the birthplace, owned by a butcher, was shown to visitors, but nothing to connect the playwright with the living, vital drama existed. Save round for the Memorial theater, other Warwickshire residents joined him, and the spring festival of plays was instituted. From a few performances in the week of April 23, the date of Shakespeare's birth and death, this festival was enlarged to some three weeks of regular performances. Four years ago a summer season was inaugurated to supplement this, and in 1914, in spite of war's alarms and outlay successful season of four weeks was maintained, with excellent productions of thirteen different Shakespeare plays. Often English university centers request the loss of own plays, and perhaps the United States will follow this course. Of the regulars the following will be given: "Henry V," "Merchant of Venice," "As You Like It," "Twelfth Night," "Much Ado About Nothing," "Taming of the Shrew," "Hamlet," "Julius Caesar," "Macbeth."

Olympic theater, one of the opera directors have been negotiating with Mr. Dillingham for several years. These dancers have been the sensations of Europe since 1908, holding Paris and at Covent Garden in London, including everybody the troupe to come to Chicago from the Metropolitan will number almost 200 persons. The orchestra is to consist of at least seventy musicians.

Chicago theater, "The Birth of a Nation," David W. Griffith's spectacle based on the thrilling events of the civil war," is now being presented twice a day at the Illinois theater. "The Island of Regeneration," made into picture by the Vitagraph company from the novel by the Rev. Cyrus Townsend Brady, will be retained at the Selwyn theater another week.

Peggy O'Neill, in "Pag o' my Heart," continues to please at the Cort theater. Music and pictures continue at Orchestra hall.

One result of the war in Europe is the coming visit to America of the Stratford-on-Avon Players, says a writer in the Theater Magazine. Their advent next fall will be the first surge in a outcast of enthusiasm sweeping on to the tercentenary celebration in April, 1916, of Shakespeare's death. It will be impossible to keep them here for that, for England, which even now, in the midst of wars and rumors of wars, has demanded the regular winter presence for the home festival. For their season of two weeks, will insist on a ICES time Shakespeare's native town as nearly a pilgrimage—the birthplace, owned by a butcher, was shown to visitors, but nothing to connect the playwright with the living, vital drama existed. Save round for the Memorial theater, other Warwickshire residents joined him, and the spring festival of plays was instituted. From a few performances in the week of April 23, the date of Shakespeare's birth and death, this festival was enlarged to some three weeks of regular performances. Four years ago a summer season was inaugurated to supplement this, and in 1914, in spite of war's alarms and outlay successful season of four weeks was maintained, with excellent productions of thirteen different Shakespeare plays. Often English university centers request the loss of own plays, and perhaps the United States will follow this course. Of the regulars the following will be given: "Henry V," "Merchant of Venice," "As You Like It," "Twelfth Night," "Much Ado About Nothing," "Taming of the Shrew," "Hamlet," "Julius Caesar," "Macbeth."

When ...ree hours of a funkhouse.

Sketches by a staff artist of The Daily

Rounds, on Sunday, have engaged company for public performances in the theatrical profession will ceased to the present. the only dramatic duction presented gratuitously by the tion to expopsition Grounds.

When Rose Coghlan plays Mme. in "Trilby," at the Schubert theater Boston next October, friends in and the theatrical profession will ceased to the present. the only dramatic duction presented gratuitously by the tion to expopsition Grounds.

When Rose Coghlan plays Mme. in "Trilby," at the Schubert theater Boston next October, friends in and the theatrical profession will ceased to the present. the only dramatic duction presented gratuitously by the tion to expopsition Grounds.

take part. Prizes valued at $800 will be awarded. Ignace Paderewski, the world famous pianist, has consented to act as one of the judges. Choral societies from the following nationalities of Chicago's polyglot population will participate: American, Swedish, Danc, Norwegian, Hungarian, Jewish, Lithuanian, Bohemian, Ukraine, Russian, Croatian, Slavish, Servian, Ruthenian, Polish, Irish, Bulgarian and Swiss. The contest will be held in the open air on the athletic field. Stands have been erected for the occasion. The water carnival will have an entire change of bill for the next two weeks. The nymph ballet has been increased to ten members. An exciting programme of bicycle racing has been arranged for to-night and tomorrow night in the Velodrome. The "ove-full" tower is the latest Riverview novelty. It is a column of glass 275 feet high. Cars take patrons to the top from which a fine view if to be obtained.

Attractions at White City.

At White City the visitor first comes to a building in which is housed a reproduction of "The Fall of Arterer." The panoramic display of this is in miniature with all the addenda of realistic fire and smoke effect, with crumbling buildings and the dissolution of what was recognized as a city of enterprise and street, "There is "Somaliland," a compiete village of strange people direct from the great Panama-Pacific exposition at San Francisco. Other features are Shaw's Congress of Oddities, the Four Queens, Charlie Chaplin's theater and all the numerous rides. In the Fandous Sport, "Hankinson's Auto polo." Two famous exhibitions of the most dangerous sport, will be played, one in the afternoon at 2 o'clock and one in the evening at 8. Buffalo Bill in Indian wars reopens at the United States Army. In the big stamotes, and next week's feature will be Persian Garden will be found fresh air play has the central figure of Judge Mr. Cobb's "Back Home" story, "Back Home" is partially a dramatization of Cobb's short story, "Uncle Billy." Since 1877 she has played with the elder Sothern. When Jefferson in his English tour of "Rip Van Winkle," he was the same theater he was turned to England she played with Later at the same theater she was with all

22 Boston Transcript 6/6

"BIRTH OF A NATION" WINS

Board of Censors Refuses to Stop Photoplay at the Tremont Theatre, but Declines to Give Reasons

After a three-hour session at City Hall, announcement was made last night that the Board of Censors which had considered the protests against "The Birth of a Nation" being given at the Tremont Theatre, had voted in favor of allowing the photoplay to continue. No reasons were given. The conclusion of the board was given in the following language:

The officials designated by Chapter 348, Acts of 1915, having received a petition from certain citizens requesting that performances of "The Birth of a Nation" be stopped by them under the authority given to them by the statute, having witnessed the performance, heard counsel representing the protesters and the licensee and having given full consideration to the entire subject, have decided that the license of the theatre should not be revoked or suspended.

Mayor Curley, chairman of the censorship board, after the other two members, Chief Justice Bolster of the Municipal Court and Police Commissioner O'Meara, had retired, declined to add to the official announcement. The chief justice and Commissioner O'Meara also declined to comment. Soon after the board assembled Mayor Curley opened a door to the outer corridor and told the large gathering of negro remonstrants who had been collecting for two hours that the board would admit a lawyer representing the remonstrants and one representing the Tremont Theatre.

J. Mott Hallowell, William H. Lewis and Butler R. Wilson said they represented the remonstrants, and were admitted, as was John F. Cusick, for the theatre. John A. Sullivan, corporation counsel, was also present.

W. Munroe Trotter arrived late and vainly sought the room with the censors The 100 remonstrants remained about until five, when under the City Hall rules, the mayor's office was closed officially. They then retired to the corridors.

The mayor, in summing up the hearing, said that the board had agreed to allow each side a half-hour to argue, but each side took an hour. The censors, after counsel had retired, went over the petitions and all other papers in the case, taking 40 minutes to arrive at the conclusion. The leaders of the remonstrants said petitions had been handed to the board containing 6181 names.

John B. Schoeffel, manager of the Tremont Theatre, said:

"I am sincerely glad that 'The Birth of a Nation' has been passed, and application to revoke the license refused, because the judgment of the directors in booking the play has been thereby justified. Whatever inequality may have been felt in regard to the historical treatment of the negro, in some parts of the film, has been removed by the incorporation of the Hampden Institute film, which shows the marvelous progress of the colored race since reconstruction. We believe 'The Birth of a Nation' to be not only legally permissable, but also, as now given, a thoroughly impartial story, holding the scales of justice even. We therefore invite the support of all the people of New England, and we beg to say, that no malice is felt toward anyone whomsoever, that has opposed the production in this city. To the more than 100,000 patrons who have seen it, and to the 15,000 persons, who in the last ten days have signed petitions protesting against any interference, we extend our hearty thanks."

When William Monroe Trotter announced to a gathering of negroes at St. Mark's Congregational Church, 1042A Tremont street, last night, that the board of theatrical censors had refused to suppress the photoplay, groans and hisses spread through the audience.

Governor Walsh was lauded by Mr. Trotter and the audience, but the mayor was branded as a "traitor," and his name hissed.

"He broke his word to us," said Trotter, referring to the mayor. "This decision by the board was rendered behind closed doors, and our people who were there to attend the meeting were forced into the mayor's outer office, and finally into the street."

Post 6/12

The Triumphant Film.

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION"—This much-discussed photo-pageant is filling the Illinois Theater to its capacity at every exhibition. Its theme is the civil war and the reconstruction period, from a southern point of view. The orchestral accompaniment is impressive.

BOSTON TRAVELER, THURSDAY, JUNE 8, 1916

THE RACE FILM FOES UNDAUNTED BY CENSORS "O K"

"The fight against 'The Birth of a Nation' is not at an end," said Butler Wilson, attorney, one of the leaders in the effort to drive the photo-play from Boston, commenting today on the action of the new board of censorship in refusing to stop the production at the Tremont Theatre.

"The colored people at least are determined to drive it out of the theatres of the country, because they believe it to be a political propaganda aimed at the destruction of their political rights," he added. Then he said: "We believe we were right, and still think so. We believe there is law enough to justify a revocation."

At the end of a three hours' session in Mayor Curley's office last night the censorship board unanimously voted not to stop the photo-play.

"Having witnessed the performance, heard counsel representing the protestors and the licensee, and having given full consideration to the entire subject," the official statement of the board reads: "We have decided that the license of the theatre should not be revoked or suspended."

This action places the official stamp of approval on the production which resulted in numerous public hearings in a clash between the mayor and the Negroes of the city, in a demonstration at the doors of the Tremont Theatre, followed by court action, and finally in legislative action that ended in creating the present board of censorship, consisting of the mayor, as chairman; the police commissioner and the chief justice of the municipal court.

Both Sides Present.

One hour was allowed each side to present its case. Representing the objectors were J. Mott Hallowell, William H. Lewis and Butler R. Wilson. They rehearsed the case from the beginning, re-stated the objections already aired in City Hall, in churches, the courts and in the State House, and presented a petition bearing the names of more than 6000 who oppose the production of the film.

John F. Cusick appeared for the producers, and Corporation Counsel Sullivan was present in an advisory capacity.

The details of the session were not made public by the board, although, at the end of two hours of testimony taking, the attorneys for the objectors explained the proceedings to a group of nearly 100 Negroes who had waited outside the mayor's office. After hearing the testimony, the board sat for nearly an hour, in executive session.

As soon as the decision was reached, shortly after 7 o'clock, the mayor jumped into his automobile for a trip to New Bedford, where he had promised to act as the godfather at a Christening at 7:30. On leaving, his chauffeur told him that he would not be more than two hours and 15 minutes late.

Schoeffel Satisfied.

John B. Schoeffel, manager of the Tremont Theatre, said last night:

"I am sincerely glad that 'The Birth of a Nation' has been passed and application to revoke the license refused, because the judgment of the directors in booking the play has been thereby justified. Whatever inequality may have been felt in regard to the historical treatment of the Negro in some parts of the film has been removed by the incorporation of the Hampden Institute film, which shows the marvelous progress of the colored race since Reconstruction. We believe 'The Birth of a Nation' to be not only legally permissible, but also as now given a thoroughly impartial story holding the scales of justice even. We therefore invite the support of all the people of New England, and we beg to say that no malice is felt toward anyone whomsoever that has opposed the production in this city. To the more than 100,000 patrons who have seen it and to the 15,000 persons, who in the last 10 days have signed petitions protesting against any interference, we extend ou hearty thanks."

NEGROES INDIGNANT AT ACTION BY THE BOARD

When William Monroe Trotter announced to a gathering of Negroes at to suppress the photoplay, "The Birth of a Nation," groans and hisses spread through the audience.

Gov. Walsh was lauded by Mr. Trotter and the audience, but the mayor was branded as a "traitor," and his name hissed.

"He broke his word to us," said Trotter, referring to the mayor. "This decision by the board was rendered behind closed doors, and our people who were there to attend the meeting were forced into the mayor's outer office, and finally into the street.

"I did not learn that this meeting was to be held until 3:30 this afternoon. I was there at 4, but the mayor's secretary, who was guarding the door, refused to let me in. I showed him a petition which I had with me, and introduced him to the Equal Rights Association lawyer who was with me, as our representative, and said that it was his right to be present at the meeting, fully as much as the three lawyers from the National Association who were already in there. The secretary replied that there were already enough in there, and that he, as the mayor's secretary, had no right to enter the room, or even open the door, as the mayor in there was not the mayor, but simply a member of the board of censors.

"After all this agitation and waiting, after all this presentation of a righteous cause, the board meets and solemnly sends out its verdict 'that The Birth of a Nation' can stay and play in Boston just as long as the management wants it to."

From the audience: "Well, we'll move it."

"Our work," continued Trotter, "has resulted in our putting additional money in the pockets of the theatre management and getting certain elements of the white race prejudiced against us. Our entire fight simply resulted in our getting Boston's official indorsement for the continuance of this instigation to race hatred.

"We have come to a new marking place. What are we going to do?" ("Blow it up") from the audience. "The censor board, whose jurisdiction is final, has rendered its decision. The voices raised, and the petitions signed by the several thousands of persons, at the 12 meetings of colored citizens held in the last eight weeks in Greater Boston, have met with deaf ears. What more would they have us do?

"They say that arguments have not much weight as evidence when they are made in favor of a theatrical production unless there is something great at stake. Evidently the drawing of the color line in an open city like Boston is not considered great, nor the fact that we produced convincing evidence that the color line was drawn.

"So far as I can see, the case now rests in the hands of you people. I, as one of you, can only warn you to be very, very careful what you do."

Tribune 6-13

"The Birth of a Nation" a Great Spectacle.

By Percy Hammond.

MR. DAVID W. GRIFFITH, the producer of the play at the Illinois, did me the honor last week to ask me to tell him, frankly, what I thought of "The Birth of a Nation" as a work of dramatic art. I say that he did me an honor by this request, because he is indubitably a great man in his way. Mr. Griffith is an authority on the beat of the human heart; he feels to an atom what retards and what accelerates the rythm of that susceptible organ. Moreover, he is a master of the means by which its contractions and dilatations in the theater are accomplished. He calculates with the uncanny intuition of a genius the cryptic relation of the eye to the right ventricle; he knows color and sound and motion to their ultimate detail, and he has the nerve and the vision to assemble them in a vast spectacle which is the peer (pictorially) of any historical pageant that I have ever seen, and I have seen them all.

I suspect, however, that "The Birth of a Nation" would be more admirable as drama were it less partial as propaganda. Mr. Griffith, the son of a confederate brigadier, explicably sees the Lost Cause as a hallowed one, with its followers suffering not ignobly the injustice and cruelty which are the prime attributes of most of their antagonists in the play.

The Ku Klux, about the holiness of whose exploits historians, President Wilson among them, express some doubt, are pictured as exalted seraphim, members of a righteous and indignant hierarchy who did no wrong. Sherman's army, on the other hand, is visualized as a drunken mob, addicted to murder and rapine, pillaging a sweet and lovely countryside. The caption to this episode infers a sneer at the "great conqueror," who marches to the sea while southern women and children, subtly brought into contrast, are hungry and in tears. Lee is to Grant as Hyperion to a wharf rat; and Thaddeus Stevens, at his worst an honest bigot, is presented as an evil and carnal miscegenist with a mulatto sweetheart. Since "The Birth of a Nation" purports to be a great historical document, it should include a picture or two of Lee's invasion of Pennsylvania, for instance, and the burning of Thaddeus Stevens' home and iron mill in Chambersburg.

Mr. Griffith was no doubt impelled to these seemingly unfair extravagances by the Rev. Mr. Dixon, his collaborator, upon whose story, "The Clansman," "The Birth of a Nation" is founded. I believe Mr. Dixon to be sincere in his abhorrence of the negro; he loathes the race and he is insistent in his aversion to the so-called Afro-American. With that emotion I have nothing to do, but I believe that were his method to be less that of a charlatan, if he were not so much a bad loser, if his squawks were less like those of a fellow dog, his mission would be more effectively accomplished. A propagandist who shows the cloven hoof so obviously as does Mr. Dixon in all his works is more or less ineffective. Mr. Griffith disowns him, but he is there just the same, eager, florid, tawdry, tricky, the apotheosis of unreconstruction, a sinister element throughout the story of "The Birth of a Nation."

Perhaps when I say "ineffective" I am wrong. The other night at the Illinois the crowd cheered the Stars and Bars, and it was not moved by the Stars and Stripes. It applauded "Dixie" and greeted "Marching Through Georgia" with silence. I confess the prejudice of one whose father and grandfather marched with Sherman to the sea, and whose best boyhood friend was the statesman who drafted the fourteenth amendment. But I do not believe that in the attitude of the audiences of "The Birth of a Nation" there is much incentive to fighting for this indifferent republic in case the present impasse should develop into war.

That off my mind, I may tell Mr. Griffith what I think of him as an artist. Photographically and as a pageant master he is a marvel, but as a dramatist he is expedient rather than good. The absurd coincidences of the play are juvenile, maudlin, and incredible. You cannot imagine Thaddeus Stevens, the sardonic and fanatic negro lover, going to visit the fire eating South Carolina Camerons at a time when the south's wounds were the sorest. And that expedition is the heart of the play. The whole thing is grotesque, insolent, and absolutely barren of plausibility. In the words of a shrewd director of the cinemas, "we treat our audiences like babes."

To me the most artistic thing in "The Birth of a Nation" is that real and photographic event of the assassination of Lincoln. There is a wonder work of action and stage management—with its irresistible alternation of scenes—the audience, the play, the president's box, the assassin, the confusion, everything as it should be. And the eerie Ku Klux incidents, with a thousand shrouded knights, night riding to vengeance, and the Wagnerian trumpet call of the Valkyries as they congregate to lynch the ravaging negroes. That trumpet call is an opulent device of sound applied to the silent drama. No spoken play can duplicate its thrilling cadences. That moment when the Ku Klux ride against a red horizon, swift, with uplifted emblems of vengeance, is a fine spectacular interval, and in it you forgive Mr. Griffith for other partisan events in his panorama. It is a play to see, but to reflect upon, with the chill knowledge that it is not quite square. I advise all my readers to attend it, but at the end, when the band plays "The Star Spangled Banner," to arise dubiously, wondering whether after all the Mason and Dixon line was worth what it cost.

Herald 6/13

At the Film Shows

"The Birth of a Nation," mightiest of the motion pictures, an illustrated history of the civil war and reconstruction periods, employing thousands of players in scenes intimate and battles spectacular, runs on at the Illinois. An orchestra plays specially composed music that effectively emphasizes and points the pictorial narrative.

The Colonial begins next week a summer season of feature pictures. A filming of Eugene Walter's play, "Fine Feathers," with Janet Beecher in it, and a variety of news and comedy pictures will be shown. An orchestra will play.

The Studebaker will keep on view Dr. George A. Dorsey's varied and interesting motion picture of life in China, which shows, among many other things, the traveler's experience on a journey up the Yangste Kiang river. Pictures of India will be shown week after next.

Herald 6/12

At the Illinois theater "The Birth of a Nation" has been playing to capacity audiences since the opening performance last Saturday. Chicago has fallen in line with other cities where this remarkable result of the camera is being shown and is supporting it at the usual price paid for high class dramatic productions. D. David W. Griffth has achieved dramatic action and spectacular effects that are a revelation in detail. Henry B. Walthall, Lillian Gish, Mae Marsh and Spottiswoode Aiken head an imposing cast.

ILLINOIS THEATRE

TWICE DAILY

(INCLUDING SUNDAYS)
AFTERNOONS AT 2:15
EVENINGS at 8:10

Evenings & Saturday Mats.
Orchestra .....$1 and $2
First Balcony. 50c, 75c and $1
Second Balcony..25c and 50c

SEATS SELLING 4 WEEKS IN ADVANCE
Owing to the unprecedented demand patrons are requested to buy seats in advance in order to secure desirable locations.

Other Matinees
Orchestra .....50c and $1
Balcony .....50c and $1
Second Balcony 25c

SECOND TRIUMPHANT WEEK!

Thousands Turned Away at Every Performance

D. W. GRIFFITH'S

Gigantic Spectacle

18,000 People

3,000 Horses

THE BIRTH OF A NATION

Orchestra of 50

Cost $500,000.00

The Eighth Wonder of the World

A Red-Blooded Tale of American History

MOST EXTRAORDINARY

CHICAGO HAS CAPITULATED!

When ...ree hours of ...a funkhouse.

Examiner 6/13

How "The Birth of a Nation" Was Filmed

David Mark Griffith, called the greatest motion picture producer in the world, shown directing the filming of scenes in "The Birth of a Nation." In the upper left hand corner Griffith is shown taking "out door stuff."

AN OBSERVING officer of a moving picture corporation was observing rehearsals for a little film drama one morning seven years ago when a complication developed and it was patent that, as arranged for, the idea "would not get over." One of the players in the company went up to the producing director and said: "Why couldn't it be done so and so?" indicating his plan.

The producing director nodded emphatically. "Right!" he said, and it was right. Whereupon the observing officer first mentioned turned to the actor seriously: "Why don't you try producing, Griffith?"

"I wouldn't mind having a chance to work out a few little ideas," was the answer.

"Work them out, then," was the decision.

Over at the Illinois Theater dur-[illegible] the past week [illegible] tionary war. Before that time there were Griffiths in Virginia.

After the war, of course, the Griffiths of Kentucky had, like many other families, mainly their memories to live on. The boy was born in that situation and received his education at a nearby country school.

The wander year came to the boy at twenty. He gravitated to Louisville and applied for a position with a little stock company, which was giving everything from Shakespeare to Charles Hoyt at a local theater.

GETS PLACE ON STAGE.

He was engaged, as he says, because they needed somebody. Then there were seven years on the stage. He played with Gertrude Coughlan, Walker Whiteside and finally Nance O'Neil, in the last year a leading man.

In an odd moment on the road the young actor had written a short story or two and some [illegible] action, and the cavalry had its time schedule perfect, even to the act place where a horse must mble or fall, the section leaders ne to headquarters.

[illegible]d-

tack in the hills the thousands e waiting. Word came that all ready and to the tick of a the action began. The air lled with smoke, the soldiers ed as if in a real fight. of panic-stricken refugees over the hills in flight and they stopped.

e used the greatest number l the scenes where they apwithout reference to the posithe pictures appear in the pro-" said Griffith. "That is done. The multitudes were st and gradually the numcut down, until at last nly the principals in their nes which appear taken three had to indi-

R HORSES.

POCKETT HARDWARE CO.
Randolph Street

on this job.
You can get the same service on your next job, whether it is big or little.
We have large stock of Everything in and motor truck de-ing this possible.

HEYWOOD --- WAKEFIELD

They manufacture seating of every kind and description.

Heywood Bros. & Wakefield
Company
Salesroom, 1415 Michigan Ave.
CHICAGO

All chairs in the boxes and Grandstand of CHICAGO'S BIG SPEEDWAY PARK were manufactured by

Realism in "The Birth of a Nation"

Above Is a Corner of the Ten Square Mile Battlefield Before Petersburg Shown in "The Birth of a Nation" at the Illinois Theater.

At the Left, Lillian Gish, Dainty Film Star of "The Birth of a Nation," Who Is Winning Public Approval.

chestra Hall this week. The usual interesting Strand topics and travelogues will be presented, accompanied by the Strand Symphony Orchestra.

ILLINOIS—"The Birth of a Nation," David Griffith's famous twelve-reel spectacular drama founded on "The Clansman," will be shown at this theater. The remarkable run this picture enjoyed in New York is being repeated in Chicago, and the advance sale of seats is said to exceed any attraction ever before shown at this theater.

Miriam Cooper, as a Southern Belle in the Photoplay, "The Birth of a Nation," at the Illinois.

LAUGHS IN TH "BIRTH OF A NATION"

Lovesick Soldier Makes Audience Smile; China Reel Starts Second Week.

ILLINOIS.

A great deal of film comedy is horse-play, but David W. Griffith in "The Birth of a Nation" at the Illinois Theater proves that quiet, refined comedy is a big laugh-maker and pleases people better than the old-style crude methods.

One of the best laughs in "The Birth of a Nation" is the love-sick sentry in the hospital scene gazing at Elsie Stoneman. This particular bit is of the "sure fire" order, for never does an audience miss the rapt devotion of the sentinel and the haughty expression of the young lady rebuking him with a million-miles-away look.

Miss Lillian Gish wears her costumes of Civil war and Reconstruction times that are heirlooms in her family. Through Griffith's skill all the actors in the production are made to appear as if to the manner born and not awkwardly moving about in habiliments to which they are unaccustomed.

TRENCHES BEFORE PETERS
"BIRTH OF A NATION" at the

LONGWINDED ITEM.—Mr. D. W. Griffith, the successful accoucheur of the Cook County production of his "The Birth of a Nation," is to be congratulated by this department. His film is too noble an epic to incite race prejudice where that prejudice has not heretofore obtained. Naturally, there will be geographic restrictions. It couldn't unreel itself in, say, Cairo, Illinois, without raising the price of vintage eggs. But here, where our colored brother really is a brother, and can see himself the villun in the piece as calmly as can the Irishman, the Hebrew, the German, the Englander, the idea of censorship is not only prophetically, but immediately ridiculous. Motion pictures that really clamor for the attention of a Funkhouser are the cheap and snide that attract an adult sucker by begging for adult audiences only. "The Birth of a Nation" is a work of art, and, as such, plays no favorites. In very fact its supervillain is a white man. But none should offer that measly apology. The picture is not to be apologized for, but generously to be celebrated as the cinematic masterpiece of its hours. Mr. Griffith, a poet in the medium of the visible, will indubitably do finer and greater things. Meantime he has made the roundly praised D'Annunzio's "Caberia" look like the proverbial thirty cents. The worst thing I can say of "The Birth of a Nation" is that I am impatient of the minor jobs that stand between my second view of it. When a screen holds such an ancient playgoer as this one in three hours of delighted surrender it can't be legitimately stored in a funkhouse.

Examiner 6-14

Telegraph 6-14

Journal 6/15

Federal Censorship Predicted by Lawyer

Federal laws defining the scope of censorship and interpreted by a national board of critics will be the ultimate solution of the censorship problem, according to John F. Cusick of Boston, who arrived in Chicago last night.

Attorney Cusick is Eastern counsel for the Epoch Producing Company, and was instrumental in bringing the fight against "The Birth of a Nation" to a successful conclusion for his clients when it was suppressed in Boston.

He predicted that the temporary injunction under which the famous picture is now being exhibited in Chicago will be made permanent.

"The legitimate producing companies are not opposed to properly defined censorship," he said. "On the contrary they realize that they, as well as the public, are safeguarded by such supervision."

Post 6-14

Have No Thought of Closing.

John J. Garrity, manager of the Garrick; Sam P. Gerson, manager of the Princess; Harry Singer, manager of the Palace; George C. Warren, manager of the Olympic, and Harry J. Ridings, manager of Cohan's Grand, each declared that no thought of closing was entertained. Charles Kohl, general manager of the Majestic, stated that his house, which has never been closed since its construction, would continue with its program. George Bowles, business manager of the photoplay "The Birth of a Nation," said:

"I believe that the Illinois Central can bring enough people downtown to keep us busy. Years ago, in Philadelphia, I went thru a street car strike as a theatrical manager, and then we rented buses for our patrons. The motor trucks of today will make such an arrangement much more practicable, and I am prepared to engage a fleet of them if necessary."

American 6/15

TUESDAY.

WORTH WHILE FILMS ON VIEW

"The Birth of a Nation" still holds first place as a successful motion picture spectacle at the Illinois Theater.

"Have you seen 'The Birth of a Nation?' It's great. Don't miss it!" That's the advice of almost every person who has already made a pilgrimage to the wonderful Griffith work of art. That's the secret of the large box office receipts which are reported.

* * *

'Nation's Birth' Wins New Court Point

Mortimer Newfield of the firm of Buckholder & Grossberg, attorneys for Joseph McCarthy, who obtained an injunction before Judge Cooper restraining the City of Chicago from interfering with the production of "The Birth of a Nation" in the Illinois Theater, appeared before that court and objected to having the bill of exceptions brought by the city signed to-day. The court granted the complaintants until Saturday to read over the exceptions and prepare objections.

On Wednesday last, D. W. Griffith's great spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," passed its 200th performance at the Liberty Theatre in this city, setting up a record for the first two-dollar motion picture production which will likely stand for a long time. This intensely interesting drama of history and romance has been the sensational success of the year. Special arrangements have been made to continue the run through the Summer season.

The second event of striking interest is the opening of "The Birth of a Nation" film in the Illinois after weeks of delay. On Saturday the producers won a long fight, when Judge Cooper issued an injunction enjoining the city from interfering with the showing of this great film drama, thus overruling the action of Mayor Thompson in refusing a permit. Crowds are flocking to the theatre and the picture is viewed as the greatest achievement ever shown on the screen. Leading Chicago negroes severely condemn the photo-play and are supported in their objections by Assistant Corporation Counsel George Reker, who has the city's case against the production in charge. After having seen the film Reker was more positive than before of its dangerous effects. It is expected that he will ask that the injunction against the city be dissolved. Pending the decision of the higher court the showing of the film will continue.

Tribune 6-15

ILLINOIS THEATRE | TWICE DAILY (INCLUDING SUNDAYS)

EV'GS & SAT. MAT. Orchestra.....$1 & $2 1st Bal'c'y, 50c, 75c & $1 2nd Balcony..25c & 50c

OTHER MATINEES Orchestra.....50c & $1 1st Balcony...50c & $1 2nd Balcony.....25c

MATINEES 2:15—NIGHTS 8:10

D. W. Griffith's GiganticSpectacle 18,000 PEOPLE 3,000 HORSES ORCHESTRA OF 50 COST $500,000 Seats 4 weeks ahead

THE Birth OF A Nation

News 6-14

ILLINOIS THEATER | TWICE DAILY (INCLUDING SUNDAYS)

EVGS. and SAT. MAT. Orchestra.....51 & $2 1st Balcony, 50c, 75c & $1 2d Balcony....25c & 50c

OTHER MATS. Orchestra, 50c & $1 1st Balcony, 50c & $1 2d Balcony.....25c

MATINEE 2:15 —— NIGHTS 8:10

D. W. GRIFFITH'S Gigantic Spectacle 18,000 PEOPLE 3,000 HORSES ORCHESTRA of 50 COST, $500,000 Seats 4 Weeks Ahead

The Birth of a Nation

Post 6-15

Good Audience at the Illinois.

"The Birth of a Nation," at the Illinois, did not exhibit the usual "Sold out" sign, but the main floor was sold to the last row of seats. "We will be here until September, strike or no strike," said Manager Bowles.

News 6-17

A MOTION PICTURE FILM.

The critics generally have been most generous with their praise of the most wonderful film that has yet been produced, "The Birth of a Nation." For the first time the south has had a fair play representation of historical facts.

My grandfather, Judge Richard O. L. Moncure of the Supreme court of Virginia, had an estate upon which the federal troops were quartered during the civil war. The relatives who still occupy the old homestead, Glencairne, near Fredericksburg, tell of horrors during the "carpet bag" period which were far worse than the miseries of war time.

There was much that was charming and picturesque about conditions in the old south even for the negro. It is a splendid thing to have a union now, a great united people, but it is well to look back upon scenes of history that will give to the north the southern view and help to weld the friendship. And it is well to ask ourselves if we are consistent in the claim that the north has solved the racial equality problem. Has it? Theory is so delightful and fact so hard and cold.

Children ought to be allowed to see "The Birth of a Nation." The lessons it teaches are certainly better than the ideas they absorb about life in the nonsensical, blood and thunder hair raising movies they are allowed to witness. This is an excellent way to teach history through pictures.

MARY MONCURE PARKER.

Chicago.

NEWS OF TH

Producer of "The Birth of a Nation" Talks of Making Photographic Spectacle; Elsie Janis in "Straight" Comedy; Planning New Dollar Circuit; Gossip of the Stage

By O. L. HALL

The producer of plays and musical comedies who would stage a show twelve times too long for performance in the allowable three hours 'twixt 8 o'clock and some minutes and 11 o'clock and a little would not long remain a producer. Nor would he be likely to have left a coherent entertainment after throwing away eleven-twelfths of his production. The author of a comedy plots his story for acting in less than three hours; the designers of musical shows undertake to shape a story which, frequently interrupted by specialty, can be told to its last word an hour before midnight. In staging their plays and musical shows, with their scenes numbering from one to a dozen, they must keep their eye upon the well-known wrist watch.

The makers of the motion-picture spectacles are not hedged in in this fashion. They must, of course, bring their exhibition within the three-hour limit, but they know that the more prodigal they are in their waste of celluloid in their work of production the livelier and more interesting their story-telling picture will be when the major part of it has been clipped away. For "The Birth of a Nation" David W. Griffith used more than 140,000 feet of film; of this about 130,000 feet was waste. The spectacle as shown to the public is measured in 12,000 feet of film. I have come upon Griffith's own story of his production of "The Birth of a Nation." It is an interesting record of a great achievement.

"My method of composition has been to invent, originate and reshape for myself after I have grasped the outline of a plot," Griffith explains. "I do not know today which scene I shall stage tomorrow. I may tear out bodily what the author considers his biggest scenes and substitute something I consider more suitable for filming. The only logic to be observed is that as many scenes as possible are to be staged first in studio. All film work is divided into studio-taking and location-taking. The studio-taking comes first, for both organization and equipment are at hand. It was not always the case, however, with 'The Birth of a Nation.' In reproducing the scene of the assassination of President Lincoln an entire Ford's theater replica had to be built. The assembly hall of the legislature of South Carolina was another specially constructed building, and in staging the scenes in Piedmont, S. C., an entire village of old-fashioned colonial houses had to be set up. But ours is a roomy inclosure, a great compound surrounding the main studio at Los Angeles, and we had no trouble in building more and more as our indoor and smaller outdoor scenes grew to completion. On one side of the studio lot, a rather hilly place, there was constructed a runway down which the shorter runs (the so-called 'flashes') of the Ku Klux were enacted.

"But the work of the historical drama which goes in for depiction of battlefields must be done far from the haunts of men. I found a wonderful site in Bear valley. Down the length of it I could see, in fancy, Sherman's legions marching to the sea; across its upper width were as plainly discernible to the practiced eye the larger natural features of the siege of Petersburg. Thither I sent my sappers and miners, ditch-diggers, camp-makers, engineers and landscape reconstructors. Then I communicated with the chief officers of the California national guard, who willingly assented to my plan. This was, in brief, to hire whole regiments of the guard, under their own commanders, and take them for a month's marching and mimic fighting down into Bear valley. Each soldier was to receive $5 a day. This, with the commissary and other fixed expenses, made the cost seem staggering; but I was to get regular war. The plan worked like a charm. I owe the artistically happy result to the splendid service of those California guardsmen, to the co-operation of war veterans and West Point experts, and to the painstaking use of all the modern devices, such as the field telephone. It was grueling work, directing these operations from a high tower by field-wires, wigwaggery and megaphone, virtually running both sides of the battle.

"Another important part of outdoor work was the getting of the longer Ku Klux rides. The Ku Klux Klansmen were the midnight cossacks of the south. The nature of the picture demanded that their wild rides be graphically exhibited. But thousands of horsemen on the public roads would be a menace. On private property only a few could be shown in brief runs. So I borrowed one sound and perfectly good American county for one day for my Ku Klux. I put the idea up to the county supervisors, who knew that the picture-makers spell prosperity to an entire countryside. They agreed to lend me the roads of an area ten miles square. I had the macadam roads covered with 10 inches of soft earth dressing; the public was warned off, and my horsemen raced over this wonderful Olympia, from sunup to sundown of one gorgeous California day—my camera man keeping just a few jumps ahead of them all day on the motor car.

"For nearly a year we worked, and when we were done several experts said that I could never make anything coherent of the multitudinous mass of takings in the reel cans. I knew differently. The bits of story were picked out of the cans and matched in the order suggested by my conversational scenario. There were 140,000 feet of this original film. Careful pruning cut it down first to 28,000 feet, and finally to 12,000 feet, which is about its length today. In other words, eleven-twelfths of our labor was chaff, and only the remaining one-twelfth was worth saving."

Post 6/15

A Reorganization of Note.

While not official, it comes very straight that H. E. Aitken, the president of the Mutual, is to withdraw from that organization and join with Director D. W. Griffith and the New York Motion Picture forces, which means Tom Ince of the Kay Bee, Domino, Broncho, and Mack Sennett of the Keystone company, in a new organization which should be one of the big factors in the field. It is said that they are contemplating making a deal to take over the Biograph plant also. It has been stated that a fourth great director will be affiliated with them, but no announcement has been made as to whom it will be. As to the Mutual, President Freuler of the American Film Manufacturing Company will assume charge of this company, which will retain the American, Beauty, Majestic, Reliance and Thanhouser brands.

Tribune 6/17

from FILM LAND

KITTY KELLY

East Hears Rumor of Split in Mutual

NEW YORK, June 16.—[Special.]—What is said to be the first step in a move which will disrupt the Mutual Film corporation took place here today at the annual election of directors, when Roy Aitken, a brother of the president, and A. P. Gleickman were supplanted by two new members, said to be closely in touch with the Thanhouser and American companies. This lends color to the rumor that President Harry E. Aitken will not be re-elected at the coming election of officers next Wednesday.

As David W. Griffith of the Reliance and Majestic and Thomas Ince and Mack Sennett, directors and stockholders in the New York Motion Picture corporation, (made up of the Broncho, Kay Bee, Domino, and Keystone companies), are lined up with President Aitken, it is probable they will follow him if he quits the Mutual. This will give the new distributing corporation the "big three" directors—Griffith, Sennett, and Ince.

Mr. Griffith was quoted by Kitty Kelly in THE TRIBUNE recently as saying that he would not leave the Mutual while Aitken was president.

* *

Ex. 6-17

ILLINOIS THEATRE | TWICE DAILY (INCLUDING SUNDAYS)

EV'GS AND SAT. MAT. ORCHESTRA..$1 & $2 1st BALCONY, 50c-75c, $1 2nd BALCONY, 25c & 50c

OTHER MATINEES ORCHESTRA..50c & $1 1st BALCONY, 50c & $1 2nd BALCONY 25c

MATINEES 2:15—NIGHTS 8:10

D. W. Griffith's Gigantic Spectacle 18,000 PEOPLE 3,000 HORSES ORCHESTRA OF 50 COST $500,000 Seats Four Weeks Ahead

THE BIRTH OF A NATION

Herald 6-16

Mortimer Newfield, attorney for Joseph McCarthy, who obtained an injunction before Judge Cooper restraining the City of Chicago from interfering with the production of "The Birth of a Nation" at the Illinois Theater, appeared before that court and objected to having the bill of exceptions brought by the city signed yesterday. The court granted the complainants until Saturday to read over the exceptions and prepare their objections.

ILLINOIS THEATRE

TWICE DAILY
(INCLUDING SUNDAYS)
AFTERNOONS at 2:15
EVENINGS at 8:10

Evenings & Saturday Mats.
Orchestra.....$1 and $2
First Balcony...50c, 75c and $1
Second Balcony....25c and 50c

SEATS SELLING 4 WEEKS IN ADVANCE.
Owing to the unprecedented demand, patrons are requested to buy seats in advance in order to secure desirable locations.

Other Matinees
Orchestra.....50c and $1
Balcony.....50c and $1
Second Balcony.....25c

SECOND TRIUMPHANT WEEK!

Thousands Turned Away at Every Performance

D. W. GRIFFITH'S

Gigantic Spectacle

18,000 People

3,000 Horses

THE BIRTH OF A NATION

Orchestra of 50

Cost $500,000.00

The Eighth Wonder of the World

A Red-Blooded Tale of American History

MOST EXTRAORDINARY

CHICAGO HAS CAPITULATED!

28

MUTUAL CO. FIGHT IS ON AND AITKEN MAY BE DEPOSED

His Brother Not Re-elected to Directorate by Stockholders at Annual Meeting in Richmond, Va.—Election Is to Be Held at Offices Here Next Wednesday.

J. R. FREULER IN CONTROL

Attorney Seligsberg Refuses to Be Quoted, but Says He May Have a Statement to Give Out To-day—Rivalry Existent for Some Time, It Is Said, but May Be Compromised.

Following a meeting of the stockholders of the Mutual Film Corporation yesterday in Richmond, Va.—which resulted in two new directors being chosen—rumors were rife that Harry E. Aitken, will be deposed from the presidency when the annual election of officers is held here next Wednesday. The new members of the directorate are a man named Smith and a Chicago attorney, whose name none of those in New York last night seem to know. They took the places of Roy Aitken, a brother of the president, and A. P. Gleickman.

At the present time it appears that John R. Freuler, president of the North American Film Corporation, is in control of the situation, but so far as was learned last night any changes that are contemplated now are wholly dependent upon the developments of the coming week and what efforts are made to bring about an amicable settlement of the differences of the warring factions.

The other faction is led by President Aitken, who is said to be backed by the New York Motion Picture Corporation. As head of two companies, the Reliance and the Majestic, and as backer of D. W. Griffith, maker of the Griffith features, Mr. Aitken's position is strong.

Also in this coterie would be Thomas H. Ince, the Keystone Company, the Broncho Company, the Domino Company and the Kay-Bee Company of the New York Motion Picture Corporation, which is controlled by Adam and Charles Kessel and C. O. Baumann.

Has Long Been Rivalry.

There is known to have existed for some time, great rivalry between Mr. Griffith and Mr. Ince, as the two great directors, and ho wthis would affect a continuation of the Aitken and New York Motion Picture Corporation is of general interest to the patrons of motion pictures.

There is some talk that the whole matter will be threshed out in private before the election here next Wednesday, because of the apparent benefit to be derived by the motion picture concerns sticking together at this time, when, it is held, the entire business is in a more or less chaotic state.

One evidence of the belief that the matter may be ironed out without any friction is the condition which existed a year ago, and which was adjusted at the eleventh hour after the air had been rife with reports of a split.

At that time a harmonious agreement was finally arrived at, the hatchet was buried and Mr. Aitken was retained as head of the corporation.

Attorney Refuses to Talk.

Walter N. Seligsberg, lawyer for the Mutual and also the personal attorney for Mr. Aitken, when called at his club at Woodmere, L. I., last night, said he had nothing to say regarding the reports that have been in circulation for some days. When pressed for some reply, he insisted he could not be quoted for publication.

Others connected with the various companies involved were equally reticent and would not vouchsafe any information, nor would they intimate what they thought might be the outcome of the present fight.

It was quietly rumored, though, that if Mr. Aitken is ousted his successor will likely be Mr. Freuler. Another man is also named for the place, but his name is carefully kept under cover.

June 18

CHICAGO DAILY TRIBUNE

FLICKERINGS from FILM LAND

by Kitty Kelly

Gigantic Movie Circuit Planned.

NEW YORK, June 17.—For the first time in the history of the business motion pictures are to be placed on an equal plane with legitimate theatrical productions. A $4,000,000 company is being formed with H. E. Aitken at its head, which has acquired the services of D. W. Griffith, Thomas H. Ince, and Mack Sennett as producers, who will turn out pictures to be routed throughout the country in a chain of theaters precisely as regular productions have been handled by the leading theatrical producers of New York.

This announcement was semi-officially made today following reports that Mr. Aitken, who is now president of the Mutual Film corporation, has been deposed and was to start a new concern of his own. The company will be incorporated in a day or two and the pictures will be routed at the $2 scale of prices.

Control of a chain of theaters throughout the world with a central theater on Broadway has been acquired, it is announced. The first showing of the pictures will be in New York. Prominent stars of the American and European stage it is also announced have been engaged.

Griffith, Ince, and Sennett, the three "big" directors of the Mutual, will supervise all the productions.

It is expected that the annual cost of the weekly "programs" will approximate $5,000,000. This is justified by the association that at the present day the annual earnings of the film interests is not far from $1,000,000,000.

The combination virtually means a merger of the New York Motion Picture corporation (made up of the Broncho, Kay Bee, Domino, and eystone companies) and the Majestic-Reliance companies and their retirement from the Mutual Film corporation. This will leave only the Thanhouser and American companies in the Mutual.

Headquarters of the new organization will be in New York with branches throughout the world and studios in California.

* *

June 1-7 issue

June 16-18

Movie Censors Take Rights of Parents

The movie censors have taken from fathers and mothers the right to say what pictures their sons and daughters shall see, and every night there is an outpouring of wrath in the lobby of the Illinois Theater, where "The Birth of a Nation" is shown. The rule is that "no person under twenty-one years of age" may see the pictures. One man brought his wife and daughter to see it and was enraged when the young lady was barred.

Combine Planned for $2 Moving Pictures

By International News Service.

NEW YORK, June 18.—Two-dollar motion picture shows will become a common feature of American theatrical life if the plans pending for a combination of several of the most powerful interests in the film play business materialize. A company capitalized at $4,000,000 is forming with H. E. Aitken, who financed "The Birth of a Nation," at its head. This corporation intends to obtain the services of D. W. Griffith, Thomas H. Ince and Mack Sennett.

"The Birth of a Nation" at the Illinois continues to demonstrate that people don't mind paying theatrical rates for a good picture when they are getting their money's worth. The Illinois is playing to the regular returns its best musical comedies have given, so says the gentleman who thumbs over the box office receipts.

Tribune 6-19

Dangerous Business.

Advertising that says the truth but in such fine print that the chance passer-by don't get it lays itself fairly open to the accusation "deceptive," for which the courts provide relief, so it is a dangerous indulgence.

The Essanay company and Chaplin have been long suffering victims of this method of attracting trade by inducing the idea of some value to be received which doesn't happen to be present, and now "The Birth of a Nation" is the latest victim.

One Madison street all night picture theater of the ten cent variety traded on the credulity of its public by announcing first through newspaper ads, which were barred out when the misstatement was caught, and then by billboard posters, in small letters under the shadow of a large capitalization of "The Birth of Our Nation," its program, so that the hasty seer might easily rush in under the impression that he was about to observe the big twelve reel spectacle.

For this latter matter court pressure was applied and the poster went down in favor of a "No Children Admitted" sign.

In the last analysis it's the advertiser himself who gets most hurt, for there's nobody so unhappy as the public bunkoed. Once done, he's done for good.

* *

Herald

TURDAY, JUNE 19, 19

STATE FILM CENSORSHIP PROVIDED BY LEGISLATORS

Olson Bill Is Passed by the House; Double Scrutiny for "Movies" Shown in Chicago.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Springfield, Ill., June 18.—Moving picture censorship for the entire state became a certainty today when the house passed the Olson bill, creating a state board of moving picture censors. Under the bill Chicago, the only city in he state, which heretofore has had a local board, will have a double censorship. All pictures shown in that city first must be approved by the state board and then must pass the scrutiny of the local censors.

The state board will be composed of three members appointed by the secretary of state. Each will receive a salary of $2,500. The bill was passed by the house by a vote of 95 to 10.

BILLS PASSED BY HOUSE.

Other bills passed by the house included the following:

Prohibiting the manufacture of high explosives within one-half mile of any dwelling without the consent of the majority of the voters within the territory.

Increasing from 2 to 3 per cent the portion of gross earnings of the Chicago house of correction to be applied to the employes' pension fund.

Providing sanitary requirements for school buildings and surroundings.

PASSED BY THE SENATE.

Bills passed by the senate included the following:

Increasing the number of batteries of field artillery in the Illinois National Guard from three to six.

Creating a state board to regulate public accountants.

Exempting from taxation all property of beneficient and charitable organizations.

Amending the mothers' pension act to include mothers deserted by their husbands for longer than two years and to include mothers whose children otherwise would be committed to dependent institutions.

Prohibiting the taking of photographs for rogues' galleries until after convic-

Examiner 6/19

Chicago Films Must Get O. K. of State Censors

BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., June 18.—Senate bill 382 (Olson), providing for a state board of moving picture censors under the Secretary of State, was passed by the House to-day. The Chicago board continues, but no picture can be put into Chicago without first being approved by the state board.

"If the Olson law goes into operation it will put many of the film corporations out of business," said R. C. Seery, of the Mutual Film Corporation, in commenting last night on the bill which establishes a state board of censorship. "It provides that the film company shall pay $1 for each reel. At the same time we have to pay 50 cents a reel to the Chicago board of censorship.

"The film people propose to urge Governor Dunne to veto the measure."

6/19

go Examiner... The Best Newspaper for the Best Ho

BY JAMES WARREN CURRIE.

The reasons for the unusual activity and frequent trips across country of David Mark Griffith and H. E. Aitken, producer and financier of "The Birth of a Nation," was disclosed yesterday by a message from the New York offices of Aitken that a new group of Wall street forces are descending on the moving picture industry.

Their plan of campaign is a combination of motion picture productions to be placed in competition with the principal theaters of the country.

H. E. Aitken is the president of the company and he has amalgamated the services of Griffith, Thomas H. Ince and Mack Sennett of Keystone fame. These directors will turn out weekly programs in a chain of theaters where the two dollar scale of prices will prevail.

The campany is capitalized at $4,000,000 and includes the men mentioned together with some Wall street interests and the Western Import Company of London.

* * *

Exam 6/18

AMUSEMENTS

ILLINOIS THEATRE — TWICE DAILY (INCLUDING SUNDAYS)

EV'GS & SAT. MAT.
Orchestra.....$1 & $2
1st Balc'y, 50c, 75c & $1
2nd Balcony 25c & 50c

OTHER MATINEES
Orchestra.....50c & $1
1st Balcony...50c & $1
2nd Balcony.....25c

MATINEES 2:15—NIGHTS 8:10

D. W. Griffith's GiganticSpectacle
18,000 PEOPLE
3,000 HORSES
ORCHESTRA OF 50
COST $500,000
Seats 4 weeks ahead

THE Birth OF A Nation

Tribune Post 6-19 Post 6-19

Herald 6-19

Word comes from New York that H. E. Aitken president of the Mutual Company which financed "The Birth of a Nation" has formed a new company to include D. W. Griffith, the creator of this big picture; Thomas Ince, whose work in reproducing frontier scenes in the West is well-known and Mack Sennett, creator of the Keystone comedies.

A $400,000 company has been organized with Mr. Aitken at the head. The combination consists of Messrs. Griffith, Ince, Sennett, Bauman, and Kessel.

The headquarters will be in New York with branch offices in London, Paris, Vienna, Petrograd, Rome, Barcelona and the chief cities of South America.

+ + +

The new combination has acquired control of a chain of theaters throughout the world with a central house in New York. There the attractions will be given their first showing. The same prices will be charged for these productions as are charged for the best class of spoken drama.

The once lowly "movie" has grown in ten years from a few scattered "nickelodeons" to a combination that ranks fourth or fifth among the great business enterprises of this country. The annual earnings of the film interests are not far short of a billion dollars.

Post 6-18

While "The Birth of A Nation" Continues.

Because of the publication of stories to the effect that the Jackson bill has passed the second reading in the senate at Springfield, even tho it has been amended and "censored" materially, the crowds at the Illinois Theater have been increasing. Much comment is heard in the lobby about this bill, which the theatergoers seem to realize is aimed at Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation." Fear that something may be done to stop the showing of this masterpiece in Chicago seems to be the cause of the rush to see the production.

* * *

Perhaps one of the most exciting moments during the viewing of Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation" at the Illinois Theater is when the little sister of the "Little Colonel" jumps to her death from the cliff to escape the pursuing negro. "Faked!" snaps the unbeliever in the aisle seat. "Faked, nothing!" sneers the man behind. "How could that be faked and appear so real?" "But how could a girl do that and live for future film death?" scoffs the unbeliever. A reporter asked George Bowles, "Well, no dummy was used," smiled G. B. as he walked away. Mr. Bowles is the press agent, but he knows enough not to tell all that he knows.

Herald 6-18

A PICTURE PLAY PROTESTED.

I wish to express my earnest disapproval of the photo play "The Birth of a Nation."

This seems a most discordant note to thrust upon people who are striving to love and help the unfortunates of the entire world. I consider it a gross injustice to the brave colored men and women who have suffered so much from their white brothers.

This play shows all the suffering of the whites of the south, with not a glimpse into the heart of the negro. It shows all the dark side of the negro character and leaves the white man supreme ruler, with no hint of his crimes against his dark skinned brother.

If "charity begins at home" let us denounce this portrayal of much that is horrible and demoralizing. It tends only to revive hatred and injustice.

Chicago. HARRIETT A. MOSHER.

Tribune 6-22

ILLINOIS THEATRE | TWICE DAILY (Including SUNDAYS)

EVGS & SAT. MAT. | OTHER MATINEES
Orchestra.....$1 & $2 | Orchestra.....50c & $1
1st Bal'y, 50c, 75c & $1 | 1st Balcony..50c & $1
2nd Balcony, 25c & 50c | 2nd Balcony.....25c
MATINEES 2:15—NIGHTS 8:10
D.W. GRIFFITH'S Gigantic Spectacle
The Birth of a Nation
18,000 PEOPLE
2,000 HORSES
ORCHESTRA OF 50—COST $500,000.00
SEATS SELLING 4 WEEKS AHEAD

MIDNIGHT CLOSE TO LAWMAKING SET FOR TONIGHT

O'Hara's Demand for Vice Commission Allowance Holds Up Work.

Work of Illinois Lawmakers

Legislative tangle precludes amendments to primary acts to adjust dates.

Committee of Fifteen's abatement bill to curb vice passed in house.

General assembly to adjourn tonight before midnight.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Springfield, Ill., June 17.—[Special.]—Final adjournment of the general assembly is set for tomorrow night, in time for the Chicago members to catch the midnight trains home. Some delay was caused by the effort of Lieut. Gov. Barratt O'Hara to have an item placed in the omnibus bill which will permit the vice commission, created by the last legislature, to complete its work and perfect its report. The item is in conference.

State Treasurer Andrew Russel wants the $25,000 item covering inheritance tax collections increased to $50,000.

The house stood pat against the vice commission appropriation, however, and a compromise was reached as to the state treasurer's request. Consequently the windup of the session tomorrow night seems certain.

Discussion over the two items withheld action of general legislation all through the day.

Race Measure Killed.

The senate tonight killed Representative Jackson's anti-race riot bill. The affirmative vote was only one short of the required majority, but a scouring of the senate failed to produce the additional friend needed. This was the measure relative to "The Birth of a Nation."

The measure changing the law in relation to disbarment proceedings was

Tribune 6-17

THE BIRTH OF A NATION CONTINUES.

The Birth of a Nation continues at the Liberty Theatre, where D. W. Griffith offers his mammoth production in the same manner that made it a sensation when originally given in this city. Saturday, May 8, turned the 133d presentation of the big picture in New York, during which time it was seen by approximately 190,000 theatregoers. The engagement has already assumed record proportions, as its time at the Liberty is equivalent to a stay of eighteen weeks for an ordinary attraction playing eight performances a week. The Birth of a Nation is given fourteen times a week. Judging by its record and the increasing interest in the big production, it will remain for a long time to a run which will be the record for the Liberty Theatre. Special interest attaches to the coming weeks for the visitors who will be in town to see the assembling of our great modern fleet. The famous battle scenes and historic incidents of the Civil War as given in such elaborate detail in the picture will furnish an interesting contrast with the evolution of modern warfare as shown in the North River, where our great navy is now at anchor.

America 6/21

Movie Censors Take Rights of Parents

The movie censors have taken from fathers and mothers the right to say what pictures their sons and daughters shall see, and every night there is an outpouring of wrath in the lobby of the Illinois Theater, where "The Birth of a Nation" is shown. The rule is that "no person under twenty-one years of age" may see the pictures. One man brought his wife and daughter to see it and was enraged when the young lady was barred.

"Birth of a Nation" Should Be Shown The Children

In school we were taught that an exception was necessary to prove a rule.

A rule has been made by a few Chicagoans for the many local playgoers, but as yet there has been no exception to prove it.

And that rule is the "none-under-21-admitted" clause, which has been used and abused ever since it was put into effect.

Several times since the screaming banners barring minors have been stretched across theater fronts there have been charges that certain managers have used this device to trick the unwary into picture houses. The truth of the accusation is not the point in question. Perhaps the rule has been abused; perhaps the rule in many cases is just.

But the supposition has been that such a ban was necessary only when so-called immoral plays have been screened and exhibited.

Comes Griffith's masterpiece, "The Birth of a Nation," to town. Much discussion, much opposition, much legislation and legal controversy. Result, an order prohibiting persons under 21 from viewing this historical, much-debated film drama.

It has been agreed that the play is not immoral. Teachers have advised children to have their parents take them to see this record from history. Parents having seen it have desired that their children see it. Men and women of education and position in Chicago have attempted to force the management to permit their sons and daughters to see the production. They have seen it in New York and their friends and their friends' children have seen it.

Why not in Chicago?

They can't understand. But the management can and must suffer to remain under the cloud of a ban that raises a question as to the theme of the play.

But there is the rule.

And there is no exception to prove it is right.

"Birth of a Nation" Should Be Shown The Children

In school we were taught that an exception was necessary to prove a rule.

A rule has been made by a few Chicagoans for the many local playgoers, but as yet there has been no exception to prove it.

And that rule is the "none-under-21-admitted" clause, which has been used and abused ever since it was put into effect.

Several times since the screaming banners barring minors have been stretched across theater fronts there have been charges that certain managers have used this device to trick the unwary into picture houses. The truth of the accusation is not the point in question. Perhaps the rule has been abused; perhaps the rule in many cases is just.

But the supposition has been that such a ban was necessary only when so-called immoral plays have been screened and exhibited.

Comes Griffith's masterpiece, "The Birth of a Nation," to town. Much discussion, much opposition, much legislation and legal controversy. Result, an order prohibiting persons under 21 from viewing this historical, much-debated film drama.

It has been agreed that the play is not immoral. Teachers have advised children to have their parents take them to see this record from history. Parents having seen it have desired that their children see it. Men and women of education and position in Chicago have attempted to force the management to permit their sons and daughters to see the production. They have seen it in New York and their friends and their friends' children have seen it.

Why not in Chicago?

They can't understand. But the management can and must suffer to remain under the cloud of a ban that raises a question as to the theme of the play.

But there is the rule.

And there is no exception to prove it is right.

American 6-19

The Bo

ILLINOIS.

The no-person-under-twenty-one-admitted rule that has to be inforced at the Illinois Theater during the run of Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation" is causing annoyance to the management and to "innocent victims." Every night about a score of young persons are stopped before they get to the box office. A gentleman and his wife and daughter drove up to the theater in a motor car. They had their tickets. As they were about to pass in they were stopped and told that the girl could not see "The Birth of a Nation." Indignant, the man, who had seen the film drama in New York exclaimed:

"Nonsense! There's nothing immoral about the play. That rule applies only to immoral pictures. I've seen this before and I want my daughter to see it. I believe I'm competent to decide what she should see."

But he had to be turned away. Another man was arguing that his small boy should see the Griffith masterpiece when his offspring, in an effort to clinch the argument, cried heatedly:

"Why, my schoolteacher told us we should see 'The Birth of a Nation.'"

Another little fellow refused to be bought off with a two-dollar bill offered by his father, sobbing, as he was led away:

"You promised to show me the battles, daddy."

But the city says no persons under twenty-one, and the theater management must comply with the rule.

Journal 6-21

Asks Quick Appeal in Birth of Nation Suit

Assistant Corporation Counsel George L. Reker appeared before Judge Cooper in the Superior Court to-day and urged a prompt completion of the appeal of the suit brought by Joseph J. McCarthy enjoining the city from interferring with the production of the "Birth of the Nation." Judge Cooper set Wednesday as the day in which objections may be made to the bill of exceptions filed by the city for the Appellate Court.

Ad Men to Watch "Birth of a Nation"

Photoplay Magazine will present a special performance of D. W. Griffith's great screen drama, "The Birth of a Nation," to the Advertising Convention's delegates and the wives, mothers and sisters accompanying them. All will be invited guests of the publishers of Photoplay Magazine, who arranged the performance that the advertising men of the whole country might see what has been termed the foremost example of today's motion picture art. The performance will begin at 10 a. m. Wednesday in the Illinois Theater, which regularly houses it, exactly in the manner of the evening representations. Mimic belles and beaux of ante-bellum North and South will usher visitors to their places.

Post 6-21

Tuesday June 22 a.m. ok

Special Performance of "The Birth of a Nation" for Ad Men.

Photoplay Magazine will present a special performance of D. W. Griffith's great screen drama, "The Birth of a Nation," to the advertising convention's delegates and their ladies, who will be its invited guests. The publishers of the Photoplay Magazine arranged for this performance in order that the advertising men of the whole country, assembled, might see the foremost concrete example of today's motion-picture art and witness in this picture and in its surroundings and accompaniments the faculties of the photoplay as a dynamo of emotions and as the vehicle for a great dramatic thought.

The Photoplay Magazine performance of "The Birth of a Nation" will begin at 10 a. m. Wednesday next. The picture will be presented in the Illinois Theater, which regularly houses it, exactly in the manner of the evening representations. The orchestra of fifty men will discourse its thrilling incidental music, the choruses will be sung by a large body of trained voices and the mimic belles and beau of the North and South will chaperon the visitors to their places.

ILLINOIS THEATRE | TWICE DAILY (INCLUDING SUNDAYS)

EVGS & SAT. MAT. | OTHER MATINEES
Orchestra.....$1 & $2 | Orchestra.....50c & $1
1st Bal'y, 50c, 75c & $1 | 1st Balcony..50c & $1
2nd Balcony, 25c & 50c | 2nd Balcony.....25c
MATINEES 2:15—NIGHTS 8:10
D.W. GRIFFITH'S Gigantic Spectacle
THE BIRTH OF A NATION
18,000 PEOPLE
2,000 HORSES
ORCHESTRA OF 50—COST $500,000.00
SEATS SELLING 4 WEEKS AHEAD

ON STAGE, IN FILMS AND AT PARKS

Top (Left to Right)—Irene Fenwick, in "The Spendthrift," at the Ziegfeld; Lillian Raymore, in Waterdome at Riverview; Phyllis Maude, in "The Lady in Red," Princess; Lillian Kemble Cooper, in "Peg o' My Heart," Cort; Carl Mahl, conductor of band at the Bismarck Garden.

Bottom (Left to Right)—Margaret Anglin, in "Beverly's Balance," Cohan's Grand; Verna Merceraux, McVicker's; Miriam Cooper, "Birth of a Nation," Illinois; and Florence Moore, "Maid in America," Palace.

Herald 6-20

Expansive.

GEORGE BOWLES, press agent for "The Birth of a Nation," was dealing with an editor who was hostile to the production, yet in a note to Bowles arranging for an engagement the editor wrote:

"I approach the matter with an elastic mind."

A short time later the editor invited Bowles to have dinner with him, to which Bowles replied:

"I approach the table with an elastic belt."

News 6-19

[illegible] weeks to come, "The Birth of a Nation," a film spectacular drama based upon the events of the civil war, remains at the Illinois theater.

Music and pictures continue at Orchestra hall.

News 6-9

At the Illinois theater, David W. Griffith's spectacular production of the reconstruction period of the south, entitled "The Birth of a Nation," enters upon its third week. This is the first time Chicago has paid the same admission price for a motion picture as for a first class dramatic stage play.

[illegible] Tuesday expedition

Journ. 6-19

At the Film Shows

"The Birth of a Nation," mightiest of the motion pictures, an illustrated history of the civil war and reconstruction periods, employing thousands of players in scenes intimate and battles spectacular, runs on at the Illinois. An orchestra plays specially composed music that effectively emphasizes and points the pictorial narrative.

Herald 6-19

ILLINOIS—"The Birth of a Nation," D. W. Griffith's epoch-making masterpiece of the civil war and the crisis that followed, enters another prosperous week at the Illinois Theater. Crowded houses every afternoon and evening take a course in American history as vividly depicted on the screen, which makes Abraham Lincoln, Grant, Sheridan, Sewell and other great figures of the '60s real personalities to this generation. Hoop-skirted romance threads through the powerful episodes and softens the thrilling sensations of grim war and national disaster.

Sat. Eve - Ad June 19

ILLINOIS THEATRE

TWICE DAILY

(INCLUDING SUNDAYS)
AFTERNOONS AT 2:15
EVENINGS AT 8:10

Evenings and Saturday Mats.
Orchestra.....$1 and $2
First Balcony...50c, 75c and $1
Second Balcony....25c and 50c

SEATS SELLING 4 WEEKS IN ADVANCE.
MAIL and TELEGRAPH requests accompanied by check will be filled in the order of their receipt. Patrons will aid us in accommodating them by naming two dates if possible.

Other Matinees
Orchestra.....50c and $1
Balcony.....50c and $1
Second Balcony.....25c

THE MOST TREMENDOUS DRAMATIC SPECTACLE

THAT THE BRAIN OF MAN HAS YET PRODUCED

3rd COLOSSAL WEEK!

D. W. Griffith's 8th WONDER OF THE WORLD!

5,000 Scenes
18,000 Characters
3,000 Horses
Cost $500,000.00

The 7 Great Newspapers of Chicago With One Accord Extol Its Artistic, Historical and Educational Values and Say to Their Readers "SEE IT."

Cities Built Up and Then Destroyed by Fire.

The Biggest Battle of the Civil War Re-Enacted.

Ford's Theatre, Washington, Reproduced to the Smallest Detail for the Lincoln Tragedy.

A Series of Wild Rides That Commandeered a County for a Day and Cost $10,000.

A Musical Score of 50 Pieces, Synchronized to the Several Thousand Distinct and Individual Scenes.

THE BIRTH OF A NATION

Night Photography of Battle Scenes, Invented and Perfected at a Cost of $12,000.

Wonderful Artillery Duels, in Which Real Shells —Costing $80 Apiece—Were Used. Miles of Trenches—Thousands of Fighters—"War As It Actually Is."

HIGHLY IMPORTANT: "THE BIRTH OF A NATION" WILL NEVER BE PRESENTED IN ANY BUT THE HIGHEST CLASS THEATRES AND AT PRICES CUSTOMARILY CHARGED IN SUCH PLAYHOUSES. D. W. GRIFFITH.

Sat a.m. ad June 19 -

ILLINOIS THEATRE | TWICE DAILY (INCLUDING SUNDAYS)

EV'GS & SAT. MAT.
Orchestra.....$1 & $2
1st Bale'y. 50c, 75c & $1
2nd Balcony..25c & 50c

OTHER MATINEES
Orchestra.....50c & $1
1st Balcony...50c & $1
2nd Balcony.....25c

MATINEES 2:15—NIGHTS 8:10

D. W. Griffith's GiganticSpectacle
18,000 PEOPLE
3,000 HORSES
ORCHESTRA OF 50
COST $500,000
Seats 4 weeks ahead

THE Birth OF A Nation

Post 6-23

SEE "BIRTH OF NATION" FREE

A "morning matinee" was attended by more than 1,000 advertising men from all sections of the country at the Illinois theater. From 10 a. m. until noon convention headquarters practically shifted to the Jackson boulevard playhouse, and many "played hookey" from departmental meetings and conferences, in order to view "The Birth of a Nation." Every seat in the house was free, as all accredited advertising men in the city had been invited as guests of the Photoplay

News 6-24

WILL HAVE HEARING ON CENSORSHIP BILL

Dunne Plans for Public Discussion of Statewide Measure Monday.

PATRONAGE IS AN ISSUE

Executive Adds Number of Laws to the Statute Book by His Signatures To-Day.

[Special Dispatch from a Staff Correspondent.]

Springfield, Ill., June 23.—State censorship of moving pictures, superimposed on Chicago's censorship, is to have a hearing before Gov. Dunne and his "veto cabinet" Monday. This was decided to-day as a result of protests received by the governor since the bill passed. While it does not take home rule in the regulation of moving picture shows away from Chicago, it seriously curtails the scope of the Chicago board.

Under the bill passed by the legislature the state will have a censor board, named by the secretary of state. It will pass on all films used in the state and collect a fee of $2 a thousand feet. After this the Chicago board can pass on them. Also, if Cook county wants a censor board, or the park boards, provided they are not consolidated with the city, or any other downstate municipalities or local governments want additional censorship they are free to establish it.

6-23

CHICAGO EVENING AM

Admen Delegates See "Birth of a Nation"

A "morning matinee" was attended by more than 1,000 advertising men from all sections of the country at the Illinois Theater to-day. Many "played hookey" from departmental meetings and conferences and viewed "The Birth of a Nation." Every seat was free to accredited advertising men in the city. They were guests of the Photoplay Magazine.

News 6-23

This morning at 10 o'clock the Illinois theater entertained the visiting ad men at a special performance of David W. Griffith's photo spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation." The theater was engaged by the reception committee of the advertising men's association for the morning performance because of its inability to secure it for a regular performance on account of the advance sale of seats to the public.

Jour. 6-23

1,000 Ad Men Guests At "Birth of a Nation"

A "morning matinee" was attended by more than 1,000 advertising men from all sections of the country at the Illinois Theater this forenoon. From 10 a. m. until noon convention headquarters practically shifted to the Jackson boulevard playhouse and many "played hookey" from departmental meetings and conferences in order to view "The Birth of a Nation." Every seat in the house was free, as all accredited advertising men had been invited as guests of the Photoplay Magazine.

ILLINOIS THEATRE

TWICE DAILY

(INCLUDING SUNDAYS)

AFTERNOONS at 2:15
EVENINGS at 8:10

Evenings & Saturday Mats.
Orchestra.....$1 and $2
First Balcony...50c, 75c and $1
Second Balcony....25c and 50c

SEATS SELLING 4 WEEKS IN ADVANCE.
MAIL and TELEGRAPH requests accompanied by check will be filled in the order of their receipt. Patrons will aid us in accommodating them by naming two dates if possible.

Other Matinees
Orchestra.....50c and $1
Balcony.....50c and $1
Second Balcony.....25c

THE MOST TREMENDOUS DRAMATIC SPECTACLE

THAT THE BRAIN OF MAN HAS YET PRODUCED

3rd COLOSSAL WEEK!

D. W. Griffith's 8th WONDER OF THE WORLD!

THE BIRTH OF A NATION

5,000 Scenes
18,000 Characters
3,000 Horses
Cost $500,000.00

The 7 Great Newspapers of Chicago With One Accord Extol Its Artistic, Historical and Educational Values and Say to Their Readers "SEE IT."

Cities Built Up and Then Destroyed by Fire.

The Biggest Battle of the Civil War Re-Enacted.

Ford's Theatre, Washington, Reproduced to the Smallest Detail for the Lincoln Tragedy.

A Series of Wild Rides That Commandeered a County for a Day and Cost $10,000.

A Musical Score of 50 Pieces, Synchronized to the Several Thousand Distinct and Individual Scenes.

Night Photography of Battle Scenes, Invented and Perfected at a Cost of $12,000.

Wonderful Artillery Duels, in Which Real Shells —Costing $80 Apiece—Were Used. Miles of Trenches—Thousands of Fighters—"War As It Actually Is."

HIGHLY IMPORTANT: "THE BIRTH OF A NATION" WILL NEVER BE PRESENTED IN ANY BUT THE HIGHEST CLASS THEATRES AND AT PRICES CUSTOMARILY CHARGED IN SUCH PLAYHOUSES. D. W. GRIFFITH.

Post

AT THE BEST PICTURE SHOWS

No "Follies" show ever drew more consistently big houses to the Illinois than Mr. Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation." The film apparently is good for a run until Fall. The public owes a vote of thanks to Mr. Griffith for his enterprise and daring. It must take nerve to spend $500,000 for a photoplay. That is what the management announces as the amount spent in registering 18,000 people and 3,000 horses in the camera. When the prices were announced for seats —$2, ranging down to 25 cents— "movie" promoters and theater men alike predicted disaster.

A steady stream of humanity by the box office is the answer of the public.

One Point of Detail in "The Birth of a Nation."

Detail in the eyes of D. W. Griffith, "master producer," is the most important point to be remembered in the making of a photodrama. As much as it may be criticised, even the enemies of the film play admit that "The Birth of a Nation," being shown at the Illinois Theater, is a masterpiece as much for detail as for plot and stupendous dramatic action.

Another director—perhaps any other director—might have thought to have built an exact replica of Ford's Theater. Another director might have dressed the play and directed properly the performance that the martyred Lincoln was watching. Another director might have consulted all of the authorities to set a time for the actual shooting.

But who, save D. W. Griffith, would have noted in studying the stories of the shooting the fact that the temperature fell just before the assassination on that mild spring night in Washington. And who, save Griffith, would have directed his Lincoln to change his position in the box and slip a warm cape over his shoulders just before ordering his Booth to shoot down "the South's best friend"?

The absence of such detail would have been overlooked, but, being there, it stands out as a bit of history that most of us had forgotten if we ever knew of it.

That's the detail Griffith feels and understands. And detail is what he believes will do most to insure the success of the $2 photodrama.

Journal 6-22

Mae Marsh "THE BIRTH OF A NATION" (PHOTOPLAY) ILLINOIS

6/20

THE TURN OF THE REEL

"HAIL to the Chief!" clarions the orchestra, an audience of men in glittering uniforms and women in hoop-skirts rises as one, a fierce, wild cheer bursts forth, and then—the tall, stooped figure and the sad, rough-hewn face of the President of a reunited nation appears between heavy curtains.

Abraham Lincoln has arrived at Ford's Theater!

This is the tremendous scene which is flashed from a tiny, one-inch piece of celluloid onto the screen every evening, and in the Illinois Theater a real audience feels itself actually face to face with Abraham Lincoln, the martyred President.

"The most noble scene in moving pictures," is a tribute paid to D. W. Griffith's staging of this remarkable situation in his epoch-making production, "The Birth of a Nation."

The last pathetic triumph before the tragedy of Ford's Theater in Washington, D. C., at the close of the civil war is portrayed with gripping realism and absolute historical accuracy. It is described by photoplay technicians as a play within a play. The depiction of events leading to the assassination of President Lincoln sets this episode aside as a separate drama. However, it is skillfully woven into the romantic structure of the entire play, and is shown to have important bearing on the momentous events of history which are to follow.

D. W. Griffith surpassed himself when he produced the killing of Abraham Lincoln. It is the capstone of realistic art, whether on stage or motion picture screen. So powerful is the illusion that thousands of spectators afterward declare that they felt themselves auditors in Ford's Theater, and that the beloved President's life was actually taken before their eyes.

It is said that even Griffith, directing the action in coatless intensity, forgot for a few moments that he had superintended the building of scenery, costuming of characters and assignment of parts.

This was attributed partly to the music. An orchestra sat in the pit of the duplicater Ford's Theater, and these musicians played all the music that was rendered on the night of the President's assassination.

When an actor, arrayed to the last minute detail as President Lincoln, bowed from the upper box, the orchestra delivered "Hail to the Chief," with all the spirit with which it was played on the fatal night. The audience of players, carefully costumed as army officers, statesmen and Washington society women, arose and cheered. It was then that the onlookers forgot themselves and the presence of the grinding camera. Overwhelming was the scene to a group of old men and women, guests of Mr. Griffith, who had been present at Ford's Theater when Lincoln fell at the hands of John Wilkes Booth. These gray-haired folk lived once more in the memorable night of a half-century ago. They had come to advise Mr. Griffith on points of accuracy in the staging of the event they so vividly recalled. They forgot it was amotion picture production. They cheered "The Great Emancipator" with trembling voices.

And then, when the music had ceased, and the voice of the director was heard giving instructions for the next step in the film drama, they awoke to their real surroundings—and wept. It was a stunning recollection of their own horror and sadness, following so swiftly the brief triumph of President Lincoln on his gala theater night.

The drama of the slaying of Abraham Lincoln in "The Birth of a Nation" was the product of many months of research through great historical libraries and museums. A corps of university professors and persons who were actually witnesses of the tragedy aided in the task. When all was ready for the staging of the scenes, when leading authorities had pronounced every detail perfect, there still were halts so tiny points of historical presentation might be corrected.

The actor who portrays Abraham Lincoln was selected from twelve candidates. The slightest difference in the shading of an eyebrow, or a line at the mouth was sufficient reason for casting away hundreds of feet of film and the retaking of a difficult and costly scenic passage.

"One instance of the producer's exactitude," said J. A. Barry, secretary to Griffith and a witness of the entire work of producing "The Birth of a Nation," "was shown in the matter of Lincoln's greatcoat. Mr. Griffith discovered that on the day of the assassination the weather in Washington changed from Spring balminess to chilly rawness. Then he learned that at the moment of his departure from the White House to the theater, President Lincoln drew on a great-coat—without putting his arms into the sleeves. An exact duplicate of the President's overcoat appears in the play, and it is donned by the President with genuine movements of his tall and powerful frame."

The presentation of the murderer, Booth, was a comparatively easy matter, Barry explained, as it is not difficult to find an actor who in brief scenes can portray the affected and ultra-dramatic attitudes of that war-time "matinee idol."

In the opinion of many competent observers, the tragedy of Abraham Lincoln within the dramatic story of "The Birth of a Nation" is the master-stroke of a world's masterpiece.

JOHN WILKES BOOTH leaping from the box to th stage of Fords' Theater after he had mortally wounde Abraham Lincoln (on the right), as shown in "The Birth o a Nation" at the Illinois Theater.

L. M. ad Wed 6/23

ILLINOIS THEATRE
TWICE DAILY (Including SUNDAYS)
EVGS & SAT. MAT., OTHER MATINEES
Orchestra....$1 & $2 Orchestra....50c & $1
1st Balc'y.50c,75c & $1 1st Balcony..50c & $1
2d Balcony..25c & 50c 2d Balcony.....25c
MATINEES 2:15—NIGHTS 8:10
D. W. GRIFFITH'S Gigantic Spectacle
The Birth 18,000 PEOPLE
3,000 HORSES of a Nation
ORCHESTRA OF 50—COST $500,000.00.
SEATS SELLING 4 WEEKS AHEAD.

Journal 6-22

Word from the east, better suited haps, to the financial page than to column, has it that a company wi capital of $4,000,000, backed by "powe Wall street interests," is soon to be corporated with a view to controlling output of the more able and more famo motion-picture directors. The plan, th rosiest of the year, is to enter into direct competition with the regular $2 theaters, so-called. The president of the company which furnished the money for filming "The Birth of a Nation" is said to be the promoter of the new venture. He has undertaken to bring under one control the services of David W. Griffith, Thomas H. Ince and Mack Sennett, who, according to the hopeful organizer, are to create cinematographic wonders which will be exhibited on the weekly-change plan in a chain of theaters assessing the curious public $2 per ticket. It is stated that theaters already have been acquired, not only in this country, but abroad. Maybe in Siam and Switzerland!

Exam 6-28

Mutual Film Head Joins D. W. Griffith

By International News Service.

NEW YORK, June 23.—John R. Freuler of Milwaukee was elected president of the Mutual Film Corporation to-day to succeed Harry E. Aitken as the result of disagreement in the group who largely control the business in America.

Aitken heads those who believe that the film can compete with "legitimate" attractions at $2 a seat, while Freuler believes short pictures are the ideal commercial proposition. The Mutual will devote itself to this policy.

Aitken will join with D. W. Griffith, producer of "The Birth of a Nation" and others who will attempt to form a high-priced circuit where the leading lights of stageland will be presented on the screen.

Post 6/22

PHOTOPLAY MAGAZINE invites the delegates to the Advertising Convention and their wives to attend a special performance of "The Birth of a Nation," the great $500,000 photo-drama masterpiece, with orchestra of 50 musicians and full chorus 10 a. m. Wednesday, June 23rd, at Illinois Theatre. Tickets may be secured at the Registration Bureau, Auditorium Hotel, by presenting credentials.

ILLINOIS THEATRE

TWICE DAILY
(INCLUDING SUNDAYS)
AFTERNOONS at 2:15
EVENINGS .. .. at 8:10

Evenings and Saturday Mats.
Orchestra.....$1 and $2
First Balcony...50c, 75c and $1
Second Balcony....25c and 50c

SEATS SELLING 4 WEEKS IN ADVANCE
Owing to the unprecedented demand, patrons are requested to buy seats in advance in order to secure desirable locations.

Other Matinees
Orchestra.....50c and $1
Balcony.....50c and $1
Second Balcony.....25c

THIRD TRIUMPHANT WEEK!

The Most Tremendous Dramatic Spectacle

D. W. GRIFFITH'S

Gigantic Spectacle

18,000 People

THE BIRTH OF A NATION

3,000 Horses

Orchestra of 50

Cost $500,000.00

The Eighth Wonder of the World

A Red-Blooded Tale of American History

MOST EXTRAORDINARY AND WONDERFUL ART CONQUEST SINCE THE BIRTH OF CIVILIZATION

CHICAGO HAS CAPITULATED!

TRIBUNE: "Griffith has used all the threads of life in weaving his wonderful fabric."
EXAMINER: "An epic without words, but with gorgeous poetry."
HERALD: "'The Birth of a Nation' is America's greatest achievement."

CHICAGO HAS SURRENDERED!

NEWS: "The audience applauded vociferously."
JOURNAL: "It has given us the two dollar cameradrama."
AMERICAN: "'The Birth of a Nation' should be preserved at Washington by national act."

A COMPOSITION OF NATIONAL FIGURES WITH THE UNIVERSE AS

Omit this ad - same as June 12

"TRIBUNE" TIP BRINGS CROWD TO MEET MARY

Two Hundred Gather at Station to Catch Glimpse of Miss Pickford.

BY KITTY KELLY.

Did you notice how bright the day was yesterday along about 11:30? That was because the shiniest, sparkliest star in all cinemaland, Mary Pickford herself, shone and twinkled on Chicago for a few minutes. After she left for New York the skies gloomed over.

About 11:25 200 people waited in the Northwestern train shed. They had read THE TRIBUNE'S exclusive tip to its readers printed yesterday in "Flickerings from Filmland." The train caller chanted "Los Angeles train will arrive in track 4," and the crowd crushed into phalanx solidity about the gate. A guard pushed them back. People fell apart, forming an aisle, down which amazed arrivers traveled to the welcoming arms of their friends. Then they, too, fell into the ranks of waiters.

"She'll be all in white," murmured somebody.

But she wasn't all in white, and she didn't come down the aisle of triumph, this little Mary, the world's favorite. They spirited her out the Canal entrance, where a car was waiting, and a few quick intuitional, swift legged folks got there in time to see her, in her little black suit, snapped by THE TRIBUNE photographer before the car swallowed her and whirled her away to the Hotel La Salle for lunch.

Like a Good Friend.

Round tables were pushed together and room made for everybody, including Miss Pickford, her personal manager, who carries her handbag and sees that she gets to trains on time; her mother, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Quirk, Julian Johnson, editor of Photoplay magazine, and the moving picture editors of the local newspapers.

Miss Pickford talked easily and frequently and familiarly all the time, making the company feel not as if they were being entertained by a rarefied angel, but as if they were just visiting with a good friend. She has that human, natural way with her.

"I'm so sorry about the people," she regretted, "but crowds are so awful. Why once in Boston they nearly tore me to pieces, and five men had to put their arms around me to save me. It was dreadful. If one could do anything it would be different, but you can't shake hands with so many, and it doesn't amount to anything to make a speech, and I'm not good at talking anyhow. So it seems best just to slip through quietly."

Sorry to Leave Coast.

"I was sorry to leave the sunny lands. I'm going to work in New York this summer, and then I don't know just where we'll go for the winter."

To the waiter she explained that she wanted only a cup of coffee, and when he brought her tea she said, "O, is this tea? Thank you. Some cream, please," and went on telling us how she never had a real vacation.

"I quit work two weeks ago, though, so I'll be ready to begin again. Christmas eve I was so provoked because they made me work until 7 o'clock—we were doing "The Dawn of a Tomorrow"—and I wanted to get my presents. I have worked all night, and once I worked for twenty-seven hours at a stretch. That was when I was doing one and two reel pictures. It is easier in the feature game. No, I don't know whether I will always stay in features. It depends on what the public wants. We never know what we are going to do until we are told."

Can Only Die Once.

Earthquakes came up, but Miss Pickford denied being glad to leave California on their account. "I have no fear. I feel that you are going to die only once, when your time comes, so there is no use to worry. Then go to your death bravely—like Frohman," she added, half under her breath. "The only thing I'm afraid of is being crippled. That would be dreadful.

"I depend on my director a good bit, and I think it is rather good to have different ones, so as not to get in a rut. And yet I had Mr. Griffith two years and I didn't," and she smiled a smile of Pickfordian tenderness.

"I think 'The Birth of a Nation' is the most wonderful picture ever made. I went the opening night in Los Angeles, and I got so excited I stood up in my seat. It seems to be the fashion now for motion picture players to say they don't like to see pictures. But I have to be old fashioned and say I do. I think it is good to see what other people do, and then I like them. I get so excited when the man is going to stab the girl. And everybody is always saying things are fakes," she continued indignantly. "They don't realize the chances the picture people take."

Dieting Spoils Appetite.

In the conversational intervals she pecked at some bits of chicken. "I've been dieting," she informed us, "and it spoiled my appetite. I got to weighing 110 pounds. Now I only weigh 104 or 105, but I don't care about eating. I never eat sweets. My friends eat all my candies. Mother, don't you be flirting with Mr. Johnson," she twinkled, as a counter attack to her mother's insistence that she eat more lunch. "You see, I have to chaperon my mother."

The competent mother person, whom Mary and Lottie mention with every other breath, beamed at her daughter and explained that she was generally the only single person in the party and so had the most privileges.

"It is just like a big family in Los Angeles among the picture people. There everybody knows what you do; in New York nobody does," Miss Pickford laughed, "and I had to leave poor Lottie in Santa Barbara, where she is still working in "The Diamond from the Sky." It is always saying 'good-by' in this profession."

Doesn't Like Jewelry.

Somewhere Miss Pickford explained that she never carried a handbag and never wore any jewelry, "except this pin here," and she fumbled at a diamond set bar pin in her blouse, "that the Famous Players gave me for Christmas."

On one hand she wears an oddly set diamond, and on the regulation third finger a round gold band that testifies Owen Moore is in her thoughts if he isn't traveling in her party—a bit of jewelry rarely glimpsed on an actress.

Filmland's Starriest Star and Her Mother.

A secret that whizzed telegraphically into THE TRIBUNE'S office and which might have given Kitty Kelly a nice scoop was utilized by her for the public's benefit, and yesterday morning THE TRIBUNE'S "Flickerings from Filmland" flickered the hour and place of Mary Pickford's arrival. Consequently a big crowd, including most of the other newspaper motion picture editors, who took advantage of THE TRIBUNE'S tip, gathered at the Northwestern station to see her come in.

Tribune 6-24

FLICKERINGS

by KITTY

Mutual Film Holds Annual Election.

HOW "THE TRIBUNE" LEADS IN MOVIE NEWS.

On June 17 "The Tribune" printed an exclusive story telling of a rumored split in the Mutual Film corporation. The following day the Flickerings from Filmland printed another exclusive story telling of how the insurgent companies in the Mutual planned a gigantic circuit of theaters, over which big features were to be routed. It also made a prediction on the election of officers for the Mutual. No other Chicago paper printed a line of news on these subjects on these two days. Last night the following telegram was received from "The Tribune's" New York correspondent:

"New York, June 23.—Do you want story election Mutual Film corporation? Your predictions fulfilled in every particular. We have 1,500 words on it."

The story, condensed, is given herewith.

NEW YORK, June 23.—[Special.]—As foretold in the columns of THE TRIBUNE last Thursday and Friday, today's annual election of the Mutual Film corporation's officers resulted in the elevation of John R. Freuler to the presidency and the elimination of H. E. Aitken, former president.

The following were elected: John R. Freuler, president and general manager, succeeding H. E. Aitken; Edwin Thanhouser, first vice president; Felix E. Kahn, reëlected treasurer; Samuel M. Field, succeeding Miss Thomas as secretary, and Walter N. Seligsburg as general counsel. J. N. Naulty was reëlected assistant treasurer. On the executive committee John R. Freuler, Edwin Thanhouser, Felix E. Kahn, Samuel M. Field, and Crawford Livingston were elected.

A split in the ranks of the Mutual officials has been rumored as inevitable for some time past. This rumor was strengthened when announcement was made last week that a $4,000,000 company was being formed, with H. E. Aitken at its head, to turn out his feature pictures.

Associated with Aitken in the project are said to be D. W. Griffith of the Majestic-Reliance companies, Thomas H. Ince and Mack Sennett, C. O. Baumann, Adam and Charles Kessel, and the Western Import company of London.

Following the election of officers the members of the executive committee were appointed. H. E. Aitken was nominated for membership, but declined the office on the ground that it might cause embarrassment—but did not state who might be thus affected. Samuel M. Field was then elected in place of Mr. Aitken.

According to general report, it is rumored that immediately after the board of directors adjourned an executive meeting was held, at which the decision was reached to demand from all companies releasing their products in the Mutual immediate renewal of the contracts of said companies for a period of three years.

American 6-24

Mutual Film Head Joins D. W. Griffith

International News Service.

New York, June 24.—John R. Freuler of Milwaukee was elected president of the Mutual Film Corporation to-day to succeed Harry E. Aitken as the result of disagreement in the group who largely control the business in America.

Aitken will join with D. W. Griffith, producer of "The Birth of a Nation," and others who will attempt to form a high-priced circuit where the leading lights of stageland will be presented on the screen.

tred and P m
June 23

ILLINOIS THEATRE
TWICE DAILY (INCLUDING SUNDAYS)
EVGS & SAT. MAT. | OTHER MATINEES
Orchestra....$1 & $2 | Orchestra....50c & $1
1st Bal'y, 50c, 75c & $1 | 1st Balcony..50c & $1
2d Balcony..25c & 50c | 2d Balcony.....25c
MATINEES 2:15—NIGHTS 8:10
D. W. GRIFFITH'S Gigantic Spectacle
THE BIRTH OF A NATION
18,000 PEOPLE
3,000 HORSES
ORCHESTRA OF 50—COST $500,000.00
SEATS SELLING 4 WEEKS AHEAD

Dy Telegraph 6/23

GRIFFITH'S NEXT BIG PICTURE IS "THE MOTHER AND THE LAW"

Court Stops Illustrated Song Entitled "Pollyanna," Which Was Heard in a Boston Picture House—A. H. Woods Engages Margot Williams.

"THE HOUSE OF GLASS" A HIT

Chauffeur Leaves His Employer, a Comedian, "Flat on His Back" on Long Island—Ralph Herz Engaged for "Ruggles of Red Gap."

By RENNOLD WOLF.

EVER since the arrivel of the sensational "Birth of a Nation," which up to date has surpassed all moving picture records for attendance, film patrons have been speculating upon the nature of D. W. Griffith's next undertaking. Rumor had it that he contemplated "The Life of George Washington" in films, as being worthy of his capacity for big endeavor. Another report was that he had in mind a series of pictures based upon the Crusades. It may now be stated authoritatively that his next big picture will be entitled "The Mother and the Law."

Mr. Griffith is now at the Reliance-Majestic studios in Hollywood, California, in the midst of his preparations for the new film. The plot and theme except as indicated in the title have not been divulged. The cast, however, has been selected. Prominent among the players are Mae Marsh, who acts Florence Cameron in "The Birth of a Nation." Others are Robert Harren, Miriam Cooper, Mary Alden, Ralph Lewis and Walter Long.

Some of Mr. Griffiths's experiences subsequent to the filming of "The Birth of a Nation," will be related by him at the National Exhibitors' convention, which is to be in session at San Francisco on July 13. He will speak especially of censorship as he encountered it in Boston and other cities.

Exam 6/26

NEW $2 FILM PLAY HAS A SECRET

"Mother and the Law" Believed "War Baby" Movie; Herz Will Play "Ruggles."

BY ASHTON STEVENS.

D. W. GRIFFITH, the inventor of the two-dollar photoplay that gives value received, has got the whole theatrical as well as movie world speculating on what is the subject of the production he is now filming in California. So far the press knows only the title, "The Mother and the Law." But a little bird tells me that the plot involves a child born out of wedlock, who grows to womanhood to see realized her mother's prophecy that the state must give its aid to all needy mothers and legitimacy to all children.

* * *

News June 24—

A PHOTO PLAY CONDEMNED.

Mary Moncure Parker writes praising "The Birth of a Nation" because "for the first time the south has had a fair play representation of historical facts." If there ever was a caricature of real history it can be found in the pretense of historical fact in these wonderful films.

The pictures are founded on the negro baiting book by Thomas Dixon, "The Clansman." This exhibition is a daily insult to the union soldier, as it leaves the impression that the men in blue were a raiding, burning mob. It is too late in the day to attempt to glorify the infamous Ku-Klux Klan, which was guilty of every form of murderous atrocity.

To picture Thaddeus Stevens as a "carpet bagger" and in favor of miscegenation and going down south to help outrage southern homes is simply absurd.

The reconstruction period was a sad chapter in this nation's history, but the rule of the carpet baggers and their use of the negro in dominating some of the southern states may be paralleled by the open attempts of southern men virtually to annul negro emancipation and keep the negroes in ignorance and degradation. The best people of the south, as well as the north, are glad to cease emphasizing these painful and shameful events, for which both sections were responsible.

The pictures relating to the negro help to magnify racial prejudice. With young people and new citizens they will leave the impression that the chief characteristic of the colored people is lust. In the face of the tremendous growth and development of the colored people in education and religion and their coming up from absolute poverty to great increase of property and wealth, it is a shame that this exhibition should be allowed that tends to create hatred.

A dramatic critic says "the absurd coincidences of the play are juvenile, maudlin and incredible." He also says that the Thaddeus Stevens incident which is the heart of the play "is grotesque, insolent and absolutely barren of plausibility."

As to the averment that children ought to be allowed to see "The Birth of a Nation," the one mark of good judgment shown by the management is that children are excluded. As an old soldier and an old minister as I looked at the pictures I counted the crowning shame the use of the pictures of Abraham Lincoln and Jesus Christ.

Chicago. DUNCAN C. MILNER.

OPPOSED TO TWO FILMS.

Some colored citizens have made a protest for wrongs done to them, so I am now going to protest the two pictures, "The Birth of a Nation" and "The Governor," which I have lately seen in this city. I am white, a Canadian by birth and did not have to change my name when I became a citizen of this country.

The pictures are an insult to the colored race.

The colored man wants to be let alone, to forget the past and press forward, to enlighten himself, to keep to himself and his people.

Let us try to be fair to those who are seeking to get on and improve themselves. HENRY ST. L. CHANDLER.

Chicago.

ILLINOIS THEATRE | TWICE DAILY (Including SUNDAYS)

EV'GS & SAT. MAT. Orchestra.....$1 & $2 1st Bale'y.50c, 75c & $1 2d Balcony. 25c & 50c

OTHER MATINEES Orchestra.....50c & $1 1st Balcony..50c & $1 2d Balcony.....25c

MATINEES 2:15—NIGHTS 8:10

D. W. GRIFFITH'S Gigantic Spectacle

The Birth 18,000 PEOPLE of a Nation 3,000 HORSES

ORCHESTRA OF 50—COST $500,000.00. SEATS SELLING 4 WEEKS AHEAD.

June 24—Ray Wall

DE WOLF HOPPER JOINS BIG MOVIE COMBINATION

Tribune 6/26

Comedian Will Be Seen on the Screen in Title Role of Opera "Don Quixote."

Announcement is made to-day that De Wolf Hopper is the first of the big American stars to be obtained for the new Griffith-Ince-Sennett combination which is to present $2 motion pictures in a chain of theatres throughout this country and Europe.

H. E. Aitken, head of the new organization, completed the deal with Mr. Hopper Saturday whereby that comedian devotes his exclusive services for one year to a series of spectacular productions to be handled by D. W. Griffith. This contract carries with it an option for a further call on Hopper's services.

Hopper will receive a salary, it is said, of $125,000, and will be seen in some of the presentations Mr. Griffith is now planning for production. The first spectacle in which the fat comedian is to appear will be a screen version of the opera, "Don Quixote," with Mr. Hopper in the title role. One of the foremost composers will synchronize the score to suit the adventures.

It also develops that William A. Brady played a rather important part in the deal. Mr. Brady and Mr. Hopper had practically completed negotiations for a revival of "Wang" for the regular theatrical tour of the comedian next season. When Mr. Hopper presented this new offer to Mr. Brady that manager saw the possibilities of it and consented to release Mr. Hopper from his agreement.

Herald 6-26

STATE FILM CENSORS OPPOSED IN CHICAGO

Delegation to Visit Governor on Monday to Ask Him to Withhold Signature to Bill.

REKER TO HEAD PARTY

Protests against the bill passed by the legislature providing for a state board of motion picture censors will be made to Governor Dunne Monday.

A delegation of Chicagoans headed by Assistant Corporation Counsel Reker will go to Springfield tomorrow night to urge the governor not to sign the bill. City officials and others interested in the work of the municipal board of censors declare that the creation of the state board would break down the standards for moving pictures established in Chicago and would permit the exhibition of many pictures which are now kept off the screens.

Two of the provisions of the bill which are declared to be especially objectionable are:

"Only such films as are in the judgment and discretion of the board of censors of a moral, educational or amusing and harmless character shall be passed and approved by such board.

"The board of censors may work in conjunction with any censor board or boards of legal status as a censor congress and the action of such congress in approving or rejecting films shall be construed as the action of the board and all films passed, approved, stamped and numbered by such congress when the fees therefor have been paid to the Illinois board shall be considered approved by said board."

The first section is declared to be so broad that practically any picture could be approved. Enforcement of the Chicago ordinance, which is more strict, would be impossible with the state law in force, city officials declare.

FEARS FILM LID WILL COME OFF

Funkhouser Says Proposed Law Will Make State Board Supreme.

Chicago's movie censor board will be deprived of practically all its power if Gov. Dunne signs the bill providing for state censorship of films.

An opinion to this effect was given to Second Deputy Funkhouser yesterday by Assistant Corporation Counsel George L. Reker. In the judgment of the city authorities the new act opens the way for removing all restrictions on the exhibition of immoral pictures.

Maj. Funkhouser has been notified Gov. Dunne will hold a hearing on the measure next Monday. Representatives of various racial, civic, and religious organizations will leave for Springfield tomorrow night to ask the governor to veto the bill.

The Clause That Scares.

Following is the clause that particularly arouses the apprehension of the city authorities:

"Only such films as are in the judgment and discretion of the board of censors of a moral, educational, or amusing and harmless character shall be passed and approved. The board may work in conjunction with any censor board of other states."

This confers on the state board a blanket right to pass any kind of picture, according to the verdict of the city law department. The "judgment and discretion" of the board, it is pointed out, are the controlling factors. Furthermore, the board is permitted to accept the finding of any other state without going through the formality of examining the film.

State Takes Precedence.

"The Chicago ordinance absolutely prohibits the showing of scenes that would promote crime, immorality, or race prejudice," said Maj. Funkhouser. "It isn't left to the 'discretion' of the censors."

A. Ex. ad June 26

ILLINOIS THEATRE | TWICE DAILY (INCLUDING SUNDAYS)

EV'GS AND SAT. MAT. ORCHESTRA...$1 & $2 1st BALCONY.50c, 75c, $1 2nd BALCONY, 25c & 50c

OTHER MATINEES ORCHESTRA..50c & $1 1st BALCONY..50c & $1 2nd BALCONY.....25c

MATINEES 2:15—NIGHTS 8:10

D. W. GRIFFITH'S Gigantic Spectacle

The Birth 18,000 PEOPLE of a Nation 3,000 HORSES

ORCHESTRA OF 50—COST $500,000.00 SEATS SELLING 4 WEEKS AHEAD

WALTHALL BEGINS HIS DUTIES FOR ESSANAY

Senn High Pupils Gather Around New Star to Watch Film Work.

HINDRANCE FOR CAMERA

"Avenging Conscience" His Great-est Production, Actor Says—A Difficult Play to Depict.

"I've just finished my first day's work with the Essanay company," was the simple announcement made by Henry B. Walthall, star of "The Birth of a Nation," "The Avenging Conscience" and numerous other screen plays. His face lighted up with an expansive smile and his expressive eyes danced with merriment as he continued: "I was becoming quite lazy from idleness at the studio, for I've patiently waited more than ten days to get started in pictures with my new concern."

HENRY B. WALTHALL (Photo from Essanay.)

At the Essanay studio on the north side, where the prominent actor is engaged in film work it was learned that a company under the direction of C. J. Brabin was staging scenes in the vicinity of the Senn high school at Ardmore and Glenwood avenues. There the actors and actresses were found in make-up and costumes surrounded by several hundred boys and girls, students at the school. The intensely interested spectators had impeded the progress of the work all day.

Youngsters Interfere with Him.

"We succeeded in staging only six scenes," said Mr. Walthall afterward, "on account of the curious youngsters. They didn't interfere with us, you understand, but they always were where they did not belong. In Los Angeles, where I spent a good part of my film experience, we players move about freely, our faces covered with grease paints and some of us even wearing the most grotesque costumes without attracting any unusual attention. Even freakish antics of film comedians go unnoticed on the streets, so accustomed has the public grown to us and our work."

Although the gathering appeared to be a curious one it none the less was impressed with the seriousness of the work. The director with difficulty kept the observers outside the range of the camera. They were unconsciously drawn closer into the scenes by their interest in Mr. Walthall's work. They were particularly impressed by one scene which brought out Mr. Walthall's remarkable ability to display emotion through facial expressions. It was a realistic encounter in which the star floored his adversary and seized him by the throat, growling and muttering, his eyes blazing with anger and his face working with rage.

"Temper" His First Essanay Play.

"Temper" is the title of the picture, the scenes for which were being snapped under such great difficulties. It will mark Mr. Walthall's first appearance under the Essanay banner. Ruth Stonehouse, Thomas Commerford and "Bill" Baker also were in the cast, to the last named falling the lot of posing as Mr. Walthall's opponent in the scuffle.

Later in the quiet dressing room at the studio Mr. Walthall revealed an innate modesty that led him to recall his experiences in the studio during the production of a picture and especially "The Avenging Conscience," rather than to discuss himself.

"I think 'The Avenging Conscience' my greatest individual effort, although 'The Birth of a Nation' is the greatest picture in which I ever appeared. Never has a picture taxed my nervous system as did "The Avenging Conscience."

Mr. Walthall before joining the movies was an actor playing with Henry Miller and Margaret Anglin. His first offer of a screen job came through his introduction by James B. Kirkwood to Mr. Griffith.

"BIRTH OF A NATION."

The fourth week of daily victories in the battle for popular success will be entered to-morrow by "The Birth of a Nation," the world's greatest war spectacle, at the Illinois Theater. D. W. Griffith's masterpiece photo-drama, depicting the crisis in American history, is easily breaking attendance records and gives promise of doing so during the rest of its Chicago's engagement.

The story of simple love between maid and man carried to eventual happiness by the tremendous tide of brutal war is told while the spectator is led through spectacular episodes in the great American conflict of '61-'65. From a trysting place in a romantic Southern garden the onlooker is hurried to battle fields, where many thousands of men engage in combat to decide the fate of a continent.

Military experts, including war veterans and regular army officers from Fort Sheridan and other posts, have spontaneously indorsed the realism of the battle scenes. Sheridan's march to the sea, the battle of Petersburgh and other mighty moves of the "war game" as played in the sixties are reproduced in "The Birth of a Nation." Military men pronounce the staging of these vast spectacles to be historically and technically correct.

Abraham Lincoln and his cabinet of famus statesmen are seen exactly as in life on the screen at the Illinois Theater. The characterization of Lincoln was the result of long research and painstaking rehearsal, and is declared a great feat by elders who knew the great emancipator. The assassination of the President in Ford's Theater, Washington, D. C., is filmed with such dramatic accuracy that the visitor to the Illinois Theater momentarily imagines himself a witness to the blackest tragedy of the ages.

Miriam Cooper "THE BIRTH OF A NATION" (PHOTOPLAY) ILLINOIS

At the Film Shows

"The Birth of a Nation," D. W. Griffith's vast spectacle of the civil war and reconstruction period, blending history and romance in a lovely and thrilling spectacle, enjoys great and growing favor at the Illinois. It is the most stupendous thing in the motion-picture world. It is a picture with a personality.

The fourth week of "The Birth of a Nation" begins to-day at the Illinois theater, where David W. Griffith's masterpiece has been viewed by crowded houses since the opening day.

"The Birth of a Nation," a film drama, continues to be shown at the Illinois manner.

Exam 6-27

ILLINOIS—"The Birth of a Nation" continues to play to crowded houses twice a day, and daily wins more friends. The flare of the mortar shells, the bursting of shrapnel and the scarlet glare of burning cities proclaim this to be the most marvelous photographical wonder of the age. The historical episode and the simple love between a man and a maid carry the interest of the audience from the horrors of war to the entertainment of an interesting story.

6-27

Chicago Examiner... The Best Newspaper for the CHICAGO EVENING AMERICAN, JUNE 26, 1915.

LAUGH AND CRY

MAE MARSH in "BIRTH OF A NATION" at the ILLINOIS

Journal 6-28

It is not likely that the Colonial, now in motion pictures, will be restored to the vaudeville column. Plans are almost perfected for continuing, with improvements, the new film policy. Beginning Thursday, an eleven-reel exhibition will be offered. This policy probably will be continued throughout the summer, and when the new theatrical season begins at the Illinois in September "The Birth of a Nation" may be moved to the Randolph street house. The great picture at the Illinois is doing a tremendous business, and its owners expect it to stay here for a year.

P. Pr. Ad June 26

ILLINOIS THEATRE
TWICE DAILY (INCLUDING SUNDAY'S)
EVGS AND SAT. MAT. ORCHESTRA.. $1 & $2 1st BALCONY, 50c-75c, $1 2nd BALCONY, 25c & 50c
OTHER MATINEES ORCHESTRA.. 50c & $1 1st BALCONY, 50c & $1 2nd BALCONY.....25c
MATINEES 2:15—NIGHTS 8:10
D. W. GRIFFITH'S Gigantic Spectacle
The Birth 18,000 PEOPLE
3,000 HORSES of a Nation
ORCHESTRA OF 30—COST $400,000.00
SEATS SELLING 4 WEEKS AHEAD

POST PHOTOPLAY

EDITED BY CLOVER LOR

Three Feminine Film Favorites at the Illinois

Appearing in "The Birth of a Nation," the Masterpiece of a Master Craftsman.

From Left to Right—Lillian Gish as Elsie Stoneman, Miriam Cooper as Margaret Cameron and Mae Marsh as Flora Cameron. Below—David Wark Griffith, the Great Genius of Photoplay Production, Who Built "The Birth of a Nation."

THE fourth week of daily victories in the battle for popular success will be entered tomorrow by "The Birth of a Nation," the world's greatest war spectacle, at the Illinois Theater. D. W. Griffith's masterpiece photodrama, depicting with realism beyond description the most terrible crisis in American history, is easily breaking attendance records and gives promise of doing so during the rest of its limited Chicago engagement.

The story of simple love between maid and man carried to eventual happiness by the tremendous tide of brutal war, is told while the spectator is led thru spectacular episodes in the great American conflict of '61-'65. From a trysting place in a southern cotton field the onlooker is whisked to battlefields where many thousands of men engage in combat to decide the fate of a continent.

Military experts, including war veterans and regular army officers from Fort Sheridan and other posts, have spontaneously indorsed the faithful realism of these battle scenes. Sheridan's march to the sea, the battle of Petersburg and other mighty moves of the "war game' as played in the '60s are reproduced in "The Birth of a Nation." Military men pronounce the staging of these vast spectacles to be historically and technically correct.

Abraham Lincoln and his Cabinet of famous statesmen are seen exactly as in life on the screen at the Illinois Theater. The characterization of Lincoln was the result of long research and painstaking rehearsal and is declared a miraculous feat by elders who knew the great emancipator. The assassination of the President in Ford's Theater, Washington, D. C., is filmed with such dramatic accuracy that the visitor to the Illinois Theater momentarily imagines himself a witness to the blackest tragedy of the ages.

Another historical episode less heartbreaking in theme is the surrender of General Robert E. Lee to General U. S. Grant in 1865. Like those scenes pertaining to Lincoln and official life in Washington this historical climax is portrayed with inspiring fidelity. The surrender of General Lee and the disbanding of the northern and southern armies, reunited under the Stars and Stripes, is followed by an onrush of striking events during reconstruction in the Southland.

"The Birth of a Nation" contains practically three full values as far as admission price is concerned. The civil war, the last days of Abraham Lincoln and the shocking story of southern suffering following Lee's surrender would each form a separate drama worthy of world-wide fame. Two performances of the Griffith cinema classic are given, afternoon and evening, at the Illinois Theater. A large orchestra, a chorus and a system of realistic sound effects are used with complementary effect and aid the pictorial realism of this wonderful photoplay.

ILLINOIS THEATRE — TWICE DAILY (INCLUDING SUNDAYS)

EV'GS & SAT. MAT. Orchestra.....$1 & $2; 1st Bal'y.50c, 75c & $1; 2d Balcony...25c & 50c
OTHER MATINEES Orchestra.....50c & $1; 1st Balcony.....50c & $1; 2nd Balcony.....25c
MATINEES 2:15—NIGHTS 8:10

D.W. GRIFFITH'S Gigantic Spectacle

THE BIRTH 18,000 PEOPLE
3,000 HORSES OF A NATION

ORCHESTRA OF 50—COST $500,000.00
SEATS SELLING 4 WEEKS AHEAD

Tribune 6/28

JUST MORE JOBS.

A veto of the state censorship bill passed by the legislature will save the state money for salaries better not paid and the moving picture world from unnecessary loss and interference. The need for state censorship does not appear. The national board of censors is strict. In Chicago we have a drastic regulation. Any town or city can protect itself if it feels the need of protection. A state board would mean just so many new jobs, new drains on the state treasury. A fifth wheel on a wagon would be useful compared to a state board of censors.

Examiner 6/29

MOVIE CENSORSHIP IS ASSAILED AS JOB PLAN

Bitter Opposition Voiced to Governor While Bi Finds Itself Virtually Friendless.

BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.

SPRINGFIELD, June 28.—Censorship in general and the bill providing for state censorship for moving pictures in particular came in for scathing denunciation at a public hearing held in the Governor's reception room this afternoon.

Former Congressman James M. Graham of Springfield, Major Funkhouse and Assistant Corporation Counsel George L. Reker, representing the City of Chicago, and heads of various civic organizations appeared against the measure.

Reker shot this question:

"Outside of Secretary of State Stevenson, who would appoint the state board, who is here for this bill—what cities, what constituencies—whence the demand for this legislation?"

In response to the challenge no one appeared save Meyer J. Stein, law clerk of the Senate. He was introduced by Stevenson himself, who said:

"I never interested myself in this bill until after Senator Olson introduced it in the Senate. There is one here who will speak for Senator Olson and the people asking this legislation."

STEIN TALKS BRIEFLY.

But Stein did not give any light on the question of who wanted the legislation. He talked briefly on legal points involved. It was Senator Olson who killed the "one-day rest in seven" bill.

Outside of the office of Secretary of State and the Senate law clerk not a voice was raised for the bill and the Governor had to cut debate short to stop personalities occasioned by the suggestion of the delegation that the bill was a political job-seeking move.

Former Congressman Graham said: "Between the people who produce pictures on screens and men who draw cartoons for newspapers the line is most finely drawn. If censorship is to begin with one where is it to stop with the other? The proposition eventually would reach to censorship of the press itself.

IDEA IS REPUGNANT.

"The idea of censorship is repugnant to the American people.

"Moving pictures to-day are one of the pleasantest things we have in life. They have brought more wholesome amusement to the poor, to the working classes, than any modern device.

"There are no three men in the State of Illinois—and I will not even except you, honored Governor—capable of composing a censorship board to establish a moral standard. The people themselves constitute the only possible board."

Graham staked his reputation as a lawyer that the bill was unconstitutional.

"The bill," he said, "provides that the state board shall sit in censorship 'congresses' with other states and that the finding of that 'congress' shall be binding on the board of Illinois. Under such a scheme Illinois might be outvoted in a 'congress' of state boards, and the verdict of that board would be imposed upon Illinois according to this bill. That is absurd. It is delegating the power of this board to citizens and boards not of this state."

LOCAL REGULATION.

Reker pointed out that the cities now have established their power in the courts to regulate pictures in their own communities.

"This bill," he said, "would take away from all Illinois cities home rule."

Reker added that in Chicago an injustice by the board of censors could be corrected through appeal to the courts, the Mayor or the Council—that in the proposed bill the Secretary of State was the czar, and that appeal could be had only through the Sangamon County courts.

Major Funkhouser showed that the state board would be a costly investment for the taxpayers. He said that the Chicago board cost $25,000 per annum, between $7,000 and $8,000 short of the revenue they created.

Irvin Lewis, in behalf of the anti-defamation league, spoke against the bill. He read a communication from the faculty of Loyola University in support of his position.

NEWS PICTURES IN DANGER.

J. A. Berst, vice president of the Selig Polyscope, showed the handicap that the creation of a state board would put upon the Hearst-Selig current event pictures and similar productions.

"The Hearst-Selig Company," he said, "is releasing in Chicago to-day pictures taken of the great automobile race Saturday. What would have happened had we had to come to some board in Springfield? This bill would make of us historians, instead of newspaper film producers.

"Moreover, there are in Illinois to-day 35,000 films on 25,000 different subjects. If this bill is signed it would take eleven months to pass on all these films. Are the picture people to close up in the meantime?"

W. L. Long, attorney for the office of the Secretary of State, made an argument for the bill, and outside of himself, Mr. Stein and Mr. Stevenson, no one said a word in favor of the measure.

6/28 Post ad

Examiner 6-29

ILLINOIS THEATRE — TWICE DAILY (INCLUDING SUNDAYS)

EV'GS & SAT. MAT. Orchestra.....$1 & $2; 1st Bal'y.50c, 75c & $1; 2d Balcony...25c & 50c
OTHER MATINEES Orchestra.....50c & $1; 1st Balcony.....50c & $1; 2d Balcony.....25c
MATINEES 2:15—NIGHTS 8:10

D. W. GRIFFITH'S Gigantic Spectacle

THE BIRTH 18,000 PEOPLE
3,000 HORSES OF A NATION

ORCHESTRA OF 50—COST $500,000.00
SEATS SELLING 4 WEEKS AHEAD

ILLINOIS THEATRE — TWICE DAILY (INCLUDING SUNDAYS)

EV'GS AND SAT. MAT. ORCHESTRA...$1 and $2; 1st BALCONY, 50,75c,$1; 2nd BALCONY, 25c & 50c
OTHER MATINEES ORCHESTRA...50c & $1; 1st BALCONY...50c & $1; 2nd BALCONY.....25c
MATINEES 2:15—NIGHTS 8:10

D. W. GRIFFITH'S Gigantic Spectacle

The Birth 18,000 PEOPLE
3,000 HORSES of a Nation

ORCHESTRA OF 50—COST $500,000.00
SEATS SELLING 4 WEEKS AHEAD

ILLINOIS THEATRE

TWICE DAILY
(INCLUDING SUNDAYS)
AFTERNOONS AT 2:15
EVENINGS AT 8:10

Evenings & Saturday Mats.
Orchestra.....$1 and $2
First Balcony....50c, 75c and $1
Second Balcony....25c and 50c

SEATS SELLING 4 WEEKS IN ADVANCE.
MAIL and TELEGRAPH requests accompanied by check will be filled in the order of their receipt. Patrons will aid us in accommodating them by naming two dates if possible.

Other Matinees
Orchestra.....50c and $1
Balcony.....50c and $1
Second Balcony.....25c

DRAMATIC SPECTACLE
THE MOST TREMENDOUS

2nd MIGHTY MONTH

THAT THE BRAIN OF MAN HAS YET PRODUCED

D. W. GRIFFITH'S

8th WONDER OF THE WORLD!

June 29, 1915. Tribune

FIGHT BODY TO CENSOR FILMS

Bill to Create a State Board Rests with Dunne; Both Sides Present Views.

FATE HANGS IN DOUBT.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Springfield, Ill., June 28.—[Special.]—The fate of the state moving picture censorship board, as provided by the Olson bill, went into the hands of Gov. Dunne tonight. He has given no indication of what he purposes to do with it.

If the governor signs the bill and it becomes a law on Thursday, its Chicago opponents, including Assistant Corporation Counsel Reker of Chicago, insist that a needless and unwholesome tax will have been levied on the moving picture industry and a double fee levied on Chicago exhibiters.

If the governor vetoes the bill and it dies the legislative proponents of the measure say downstate cities and villages (1,100 of them) will be left at the mercy of unscrupulous film distributors in St. Louis, Evansville, Indianapolis, Des Moines and Dubuque, with no opportunity offered for censorship of any description and without even the chance for assistance from the municipal censorship of the Chicago ordinance provisions.

Sharp Argument Over Bill.

The hearing on this bill was held today. It lasted nearly two hours and stirred up some real excitement.

At one point the issue seemed to turn upon whether a state board could be self-sustaining. Maj. M. L. C. Funkhouser of the Chicago police department was on hand with statistics to show there had been an annual shortage of between $7,000 and $9,000 in Chicago, although 26,000 permits had been granted. He said the state, in attempting to censor films used all over the state, would have to employ at least the force now employed in Chicago and probably larger.

Secretary of State Stevenson replied with the statement that the fee is double for the state board, as compared with the Chicago fees, and that the Ohio state board, with approximately the same situation as in Illinois, is self-sustaining.

Would Affect Chicago Ordinance.

The opposition to the bill was split three ways. Congressman Graham, representing many moving picture house managers, objected to it on "public policy ground."

Assistant Corporation Counsel Reker said the bill was bad because it was not as closely drawn as the Chicago ordinance, which has passed a court test and which establishes a stronger censorship than the Olson bill does, and that if the bill becomes a law the Chicago local censorship must be modified to permit such films as "The Birth of a Nation," which he said could be stopped under the city ordinance but not under the proposed act.

The third element was the manufacturer, represented by one of the Selig people, who objected because of the time that would be lost in submitting films to a state censor.

Stevenson Replies to Objections.

Secretary Stevenson replied that there would be an office in Chicago and that there is no reason why the same rapid-fire tactics as the censorship could not be used by a state board as well as by a local board, which the speakers admitted does exist in Chicago.

W. L. Long represented the secretary of state, whose duty it is under the Olson bill to appoint the three censors. He contended that many of the cutouts ordered by the Chicago municipal board are exhibited downstate, and that there is no way to reach this condition. Congressman Graham's position was that this could be governed entirely by the police powers under the cities and villages act, and that if a community needed regulation, the sentiment of the community would be the first to assert itself.

Outdoor fetes on the wonderful lawns of Winnetka and Lake Forest, where so much of Chicago society spends its summers, are quite the most popular of all early Summer affairs. The lawn fetes serve as "house warmings" or "openings" and they are such happy affairs that they certainly leave in the guests' minds the pleasant thought that Mrs. So-and-So has "really moved out there for the Summer."

Mrs. J. Ogden Armour is planning a fete for July, at Mellody Farm, her home in Lake Forest. Mrs. Armour always does things a little bit differently from other people, and her originality is the feature of her parties. One can really show so much hospitality at lawn fetes, for there isn't a corner of the premises that one can't use for tea, dancing, luncheon and tete-a-tetes. Mrs. Armour is to have a dramatic entertainment and tennis too, at her lawn party.

Miss Lolita Armour has gone for a short yachting cruise with Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Meeker and their daughters, but she will return for the Garden fete.

Society is listening intently for the hints it gets of the wedding to take place July 21 in the most fashionable, too—Graden affairs, all flowery and summery.

[illegible] for the big event.

The matron of honor, Mrs. R. F. McFarren, and the maid of honor, Miss Elisabeth Goodrich, will wear pale green tulle gowns with mauve Eltridge, and mauve tulle hats.

The bridesmaids, Miss Rosalind Goodrich and Miss Jane Vincent of Chicago, and Miss Christine Miller and Miss Isabelle Stroh of Detroit, [illegible] Summer. Mr. and Mrs. Lionel Robertson of 20 Bellevue place will go to Harbor Point and stay the rest of the Summer.

Mrs. William Blair has gone to Charlevoix. Mrs. Dunlap Smith has a home near Charlevoix and will go there July 1.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward N. Wiley leave in a few days for Lake Geneva.

George Hamlins Leave for Coast

GEORGE HAMLIN of the Chicago Opera Company and Mrs. Hamlin have gone to California. Mr. Hamlin has been engaged to sing the leading tenor part in this season's performance by the Bohemian Club of San Francisco, given annually in the Redwood Forest. The drama is called "Apollo," the book by Frank Pixley, of light opera fame, and the music by Edward Schneider. The artists taking part in the performance—men exclusively—go to the famous amphitheater in the depths of the forest several weeks ahead of time and enjoy an idyllic recreation campfire, as well as attending

Onwentsia Is Busy With Players

ONWENTSIA had the largest coterie of golfers and luncheon visitors on Tuesday of any day this season. There was bridge in the clubhouse and numerous tables filled with players. Those observed on the links or in the clubhouse included Mrs. George McKinlock, Mrs. F. C. Lette, Mrs. D. Mark Cummings, Mrs. D. H. McLennan, Mrs. Frank E. Wilhelm, Mrs. Bruce Smith, Mrs W. P. Martin, Mrs. Edward Walker, Mrs. H. C. Chatfield-Taylor, Mrs. Orville Babcock, Mrs. Walter Kirk, the Misses Edith Cummings, Courtney Letts, Edith Hoyt and Elisabeth Keith.

Mrs. Gorton W. [illegible] Normal avenue announces the birth of her daughter, Frances Martha Nichols. Mr. Barnes, Mr. will be at home after [illegible] 7104 Lowe avenue.

• • •

The wedding of Miss Helen [illegible] tion Keefe, daughter of Mr. Mrs. James E. Keefe of 3911 [illegible] avenue, and George Alfred Sc[illegible] took place on Wednesday eve[illegible] at 5 o'clock at the Holy An[illegible] Church, Father Foley officia[illegible]. Miss Lorraine Cleary was ma[illegible] honor. The bridesmaids were Misses Alice Norman, Amy [illegible] Ruth Lobdell, Elaine Harlow [illegible] entine Cleary and Theodore [illegible] ham, with Jarnet and Beth K[illegible] flower maid and ring bearer. Lynch was best man. The [illegible] were Howard Keefe, Char[illegible] ther, Walter McDona[illegible] Ernst, Charles and Steward [illegible] ton. A reception follow[illegible] vice. After August 12 [illegible] and bridegroom will be [illegible] the Kenwood Hotel un[illegible] home is completed.

• • •

Mrs. Riley will be at home after a short honeymoon trip, at 1408 Sheridan road.

4C

6/30

HICAGO HERALD, TUESDAY, JUNE 29, 19 ... go Examiner ... The Best Newspaper for the Best ...

45 BILLS ARE SIGNED BY ILLINOIS GOVERNOR

All Will Be Disposed Of by To-night—Dunne to Approve Chicago Park Plan.

MOTHERS' PENSIONS WIN

Executive Holds Hearings on Many Measures of Importance to Metropolis.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Springfield, Ill., June 28.—Governor Dunne plans to finish the signing of all bills by tomorrow night. The Chicago park consolidation bill reached him from the attorney general's office with a favorable recommendation this afternoon and will be signed tomorrow.

The governor found time to sign forty-five bills today. Most of them were appropriation measures. Among them were the bills appropriating $5,000,000 for the University of Illinois, $8,700,000 for the state institutions, $2,000,000 for state aid roads, $830,000 for the maintenance of the National Guard, $50,000 for a new armory at Peoria, $49,000 for the farmers' institute, $21,839 for election contest expenses, $25,000 for a statue of General U. S. Grant on the capitol grounds and $35,000 for a monument to Governor Richard J. Oglesby in one of the Chicago parks.

SIGNS MOTHERS' PENSIONS.

Other bills signed included the Bruce mothers' pension act amendment and the Gardner adult probation bill backed by the Civic Federation of Chicago.

A hearing on the bill permitting the City of Chicago to lease for ninety-nine years submerged lands at Lake Calumet for industrial purposes will be held tomorrow.

Governor Dunne is practically certain to veto the two bills reducing corporation fees, the rogues' gallery bill and probably one or more of the bills creating new state boards. He also is inclined to veto the bill providing additional funds for public libraries. Opposition against the bill relating to high school tuition was so strong that it is likely to be vetoed. The mutual insurance bill is another which may fall by the wayside. Governor Dunne vetoed a bill permitting corporations to own real estate two years ago, but may sign the present measure.

MANY HEARINGS HELD.

Hearing on disputed bills occupied Governor Dunne's attention throughout today and this evening. Out of fifteen bills against which arguments were presented his attitude during the hearings indicated that probably half or two-thirds of them would be vetoed.

Bills affecting Chicago which were discussed before the governor included those creating a state moving picture censorship board, permitting corporations to erect buildings, giving the city and the park boards power with reference to the conveyance to each other of submerged lands for harbor and park purposes, prohibiting the photographing of accused persons before conviction, prohibiting the leasing of tipping privileges, increasing the tax for the Chicago public library and changing oil inspection regulations.

Other measures on which hearings were held were those reducing fees of railroads and other corporations, creating a state optometry board, creating a board of examiners of structural engineers, creating the office of state inspector of masonry and providing regulations for mutual insurance companies.

ARGUE MOVIE CENSORSHIP.

Second Deputy Superintendent of Police Funkhouser and Assistant Corporation Counsel Reker represented the City of Chicago in opposition to the moving picture censorship bill. Secretary of State Lewis G. Stevenson, who under the bill will appoint the three members of the censorship bill, and W. L. Long, attorney for the secretary of state's department, were the only persons who appeared in behalf of the measure.

REAL ESTATE MEN DISAGREE.

The two Chicago real estate organizations took opposite positions on the bill permitting corporations to erect buildings. J. L. Vettie, attorney for the Chicago Real Estate Board, talked in favor of the bill, declaring the proper development of the Chicago downtown district was hampered by present laws. Harry McCartney of Chicago and George Dobler and H. C. Porter of Rockford also appeared for the bill. W. D. Kerr, representing the Cook County Real Estate Board, urged Governor Dunne to veto the bill. He took the ground that it was contrary to public policy to permit corporations to own real estate and erect buildings.

TIPPING BILL IS UP.

Egbert Robertson of Chicago, attorney for Jacques Russo, who has been termed the head of the tipping trust which operates in Chicago hotels and restaurants, appeared in opposition to the bill prohibiting the leasing of tipping privileges. Representative Merritt, who introduced the bill, spoke in its favor and found a sympathetic listener in Governor Dunne, who remarked that he often had been subjected to annoyance by attendants in hotel washrooms. Mr. Merritt said he had been told that Russo paid $10,000 a year for the tipping privileges in the Hotel Sherman. Mr. Robertson said the actual sum was not in excess of $6,000. The attorney also took exception to a statement by Mr. Merritt that one tipping company pays $110,000 for rights in the LaSalle, Morrison, Auditorium, Congress and Great Northern hotels.

GOVERNOR DUNNE SHOCKED.

At a public hearing tonight on S. B. 442 (German) changing the method of payment of fees of the Chicago oil inspector so as to make fees payable at destination of shipment instead of at the source, Governor Dunne learned it has been the custom in Illinois for county judges to appoint employes of refining companies as oil inspectors.

"Well, this is shocking," declared the governor. "It's high time the law was changed. No man can serve two masters."

The TURN OF THE REEL

BY JAMES WARREN CURRIE.

"What," said I to a prominent moving picture director, "do you think of the influence of the stage in the development of the moving picture play?"

"I think," he replied, "that it has been most pernicious and that the influence of the stage and of stage precedent and the worship of these by directors have retarded the development of the art of the moving picture except in a few cases.

"When moving pictures were first invented they were regarded as a toy. There was nothing difficult about making a moving picture play. All you had to have was action.

"But as the moving picture developed into a dramatic medium, there came a demand for real, logical play.

GRIFFITH GETS REALISM.

"Griffith wanted realism, life. He studied the stage methods for methods to present his characters realistically and found that the best the stage had to offer him was an illusion of realism. Griffith pondered and experimented. 'I don't want an illusion,' he said. 'I want reality.' And so he created the art of the moving picture, which is nothing more or less than making his characters live the picture instead of acting it.

"This was a long time ago that he did this. Yet to-day very few seem to grasp his idea. There are a few. Ralph and Tom Ince, and the De Milles and Mack Sennet and Fred Wright, and one of two others.

"These men I've mentioned have developed characters for the moving picture alone. Their actors and actresses have not had stage experience. If they have, it is but a little part of their education."

"Well, what's the answer," I asked. "Where are all these examples of arrested development you're worrying about?"

"I'll tell you," said the director. "I dropped into a big theater today and I saw a feature production. It was the film version of a great book and a great play. And the bills said that it featured the actress who had made the big hit in the stage play. I went in and saw a woman about fifty-two years old playing the lead as an ingenue. She was an actress all right. I had seen her on the stage. But she spoke her lines and registered not. When she wanted to show anger, she talked loudly. But it didn't mean a thing in the picture. Now, if the director had realized the difference as I did there would have been a young girl in the leading role and this nice old lady still would have been in retirement. Then the picture would have been a success. As shown, it was a failure. That's what I mean when I talk about pernicious influence. It is enough."

Post 6-30

Post 6-29

New Censorship for "The Birth of a Nation."

Now it's the music censor who has ventured to revise "The Birth of a Nation."

In this case, however, the criticism was taken with the best of grace by the management.

The other evening, during the intermission following the first act, a stalwart young fellow in the olive-drab uniform of the United States regulars accosted Manager George Bowles in the Illinois Theater foyer.

"Are you the manager, sir?" asked the soldier, saluting.

"I am the same," admitted Mr. Bowles, giving a Broadway version of the military courtesy.

"Well, sir, I like your show immensely and I hate to see it go wrong because of one little thing," said the soldier man. "If you want to know the trouble? It may sound a little thing to you but it simply spoils the effect of the battle scenes to any one who has been in the service. When that confederate regiment begins its bayonet charge at the battle of Petersburg, the bugler in your orchestra sounds 'Reveille' instead of 'Charge.' Now, 'reveille' is the call that drags the soldiers out of their bunks in the morning. It's that 'Can't-get-'em-up' signal, you know. Why, if a bugler made that mistake in a battle, both sides would laugh so hard they couldn't fight."

The young regular, who is a field-battery trumpeter, accepted Mr. Bowles' invitation to instruct the orchestra musician in the way to toot blood-curdling thrills in the regulation bugle call "Charge."

THE film industry has succeeded in spite of itself. That it is a success can today be denied by no one, but this success has come because the people would have the films, and, altho some terrible crimes against good taste and good business have been committed during the evolution of the industry, it has succeeded, and that success is now so firmly established that there is no longer any question about it with even the worst scoffer of a year or two ago. Every big magazine is today devoting space to the "discovery" that the films have conquered the amusement public. It so happens that the public knows so much more about this than the magazine editors or the men who write the "stories" for said magazines at so much per word that the situation is rather laughable. It is a good movement, however, because there are still a few thousand, here and there, who have not yet "recognized" the films, and to them the "story" in the magazine is conclusive proof that this industry is finally "worthy" of their support.

But with all of its wonderful advance the film industry still lacks men who can analyze big situations and sense conditions. The chief trouble has been, as I have said before, that almost every man who has been successful in this whirlwind of business has been so busy getting his that he has not taken time to worry about what was going on about him. The day has come now when the "infant" is a great big adult and must be reckoned with from that viewpoint. The man in the business who would succeed today must "know" about other things than his own individual troubles.

As an example of what I mean, I will mention an instance. Recently the Mutual forces split. D. W. Griffith, H. E. Aitken, Tom Ince, Mack Sennett and Keasey and Bauman, "KB," have announced a "new" idea. Their thought is to prepare films of suitable subjects and lengths to make up an evening's entertainment and play them in theaters which they will control. It was announced that they would do this on a scale of $2 admissions. A number of prominent film folk have asked me what I thought of the idea and I have said that I considered it a very fine one, and what do you think was the inevitable inquiry? They wanted to know. "But do you think they can get $2 everywhere for films?"

Now, these men did not stop to figure out that this new combination is simply working out with films what the United Booking Offices has done with vaudeville. They did not seem so much concerned with the "idea." What stuck in their minds was the "$2." Of course these folk will be able to get $2 if they make $2 films. When the films are not worth $2 they will take less and get it. But the idea is right. Surely if theatrical managers in the past have been able to take last year's success and make up ten companies of second-rate artists and send these companies over the road, getting $2 a seat for the attractions, when perfectly made films, which will be the same in Oshkosh as they are on Broadway, and shown at the same time, can get the $2. The answer is that the mediocre road show of the speaking stage is dead and the high-class film entertainment has come to stay at any price they ask when they have the goods. Surely some folk have not given serious thought to what "The Birth of a Nation" has proved.—Wid."

Evening ad 6-29

Morning ad News 6/30

ILLINOIS THEATER — TWICE DAILY (including SUNDAYS)
EVES. & SAT. MAT. Orchestra....$1 & $2; 1st Balcony, 50c, 75c & $1; 2d Balcony...25c & 50c
OTHER MATINEES Orchestra...50c & $1; 1st Balcony, 50c & $1; 2d Balcony.....25c
MATINEES 2:15—NIGHTS 8:10.
D. W. GRIFFITH'S Gigantic Spectacle.
The Birth of a Nation
18,000 PEOPLE
3,000 HORSES
ORCHESTRA OF 50—COST $500,000.00.
SEATS SELLING 4 WEEKS AHEAD.

ILLINOIS THEATRE — TWIC DAIL (INCLUD SUNDAY
EVES & SAT. MAT. Orchestra....$1 & $2; 1st Bal'y, 50c, 75c & $1; 2nd Balcony..25c & 50c
OTHER MATINE Orchestra....50c & 1st Balcony..50c & 2nd Balcony.....
MATINEES 2:15—NIGHTS 8:10
D.W. GRIFFITH'S Gigantic Specta
THE BIRTH 18,000 PEOPL
3,000 HORSES OF A NATIO
ORCHESTRA OF 50—COST $500,000
SEATS SELLING 4 WEEKS AHE

'THE ORDEAL' BARRED BY CENSO

Fear of Offending German-Americans Believed the Motive.

Another photo play is suffering the experiences of "The Birth of a Nation' with the local censor board, due to almost the identical reasons which kept David W. Griffith's film drama from the screen, excepting that the feeling it is feared it will arouse will not be among the negroes, but sympathizers of the Germans. "The Ordeal," is the title of the photo play which the censor board refuses to permit a showing in this city.

This photo play has been refused a permit by the national board of censorship, and later was kept from the screen in New York until a Supreme court judge restrained that city from interfering with its presentation. The Celebrated Players' Film company, the Chicago concern which controls the local rights to the picture, asserts that a license had been issued here, but was revoked after the play had been shown at one theater.

The play concerns two nations interested in the present European conflict, Belgium and Germany. It depicts inhuman treatment of Belgian captives by an unscrupulous officer typifying a German, who later is punished for his cruelties by a superior officer. It is presented as a dream of a young Belgian following a war recital of his father.

P.M. ad 6-30

ILLINOIS THEATRE — TWICE DAILY (INCLUDING SUNDAYS)
EVGS. & SAT. MAT. Orchestra....$1 & $2; 1st Bal'y, 50c, 75c & $1; 2d Balcony..25c & 50c
OTHER MATINEES Orchestra....50c & $1; 1st Balcony..50c & $1; 2d Balcony.....25c
MATINEES 2:15—NIGHTS 8:10
D. W. GRIFFITH'S Gigantic Spectacle
THE BIRTH 18,000 PEOPLE
3,000 HORSES OF A NATION
ORCHESTRA OF 50—COST $500,000.00
SEATS SELLING 4 WEEKS AHEAD

Ad ad July 1st — News 6/1 — Tribune 6/2

ILLINOIS THEATRE | TWICE DAILY (INCLUDING SUNDAYS)

EV'GS & SAT. MAT. | OTHER MATINEES
Orchestra.....$1 & $2 | Orchestra.....50c & $1
1st Bale'y, 50c, 75c & $1 | 1st Balcony..50c & $1
2nd Balcony..25c & 50c | 2nd Balcony.....25c
MATINEES 2:15—NIGHTS 8:10
D.W. GRIFFITH'S Gigantic Spectacle
THE BIRTH 18,000 PEOPLE
3,000 HORSES OF A NATION
ORCHESTRA OF 50—COST $500,000.00
SEATS SELLING 4 WEEKS AHEAD

Herald 6/1

Arrangements have been made to run "The Birth of a Nation" in Milwaukee. It probably will open there some time this month.

Post 6/1

Weber and Fields have signed up with the new "G-I-S-K-B" combination for three years, the five-letter abbreviation standing for Griffith-Ince-Sennett-Kessel-Baumann, five of the Mutual producers who have joined hands in the interest of the $2 photoplay. They are formally signed up by the Keystone company. The press agent was very modest. He said $600,000 changed hands. Whaddyemean "changed hands"?

PMad 6/1 all papers except American - Journal-American 6-2 See page 12

ILLINOIS THEATRE | TWICE DAILY (INCLUDING SUNDAYS)

EV'GS & SAT. MAT. | OTHER MATINEES
Orchestra.....$1 & $2 | Orchestra.....50c & $1
1st Bale'y, 50c, 75c & $1 | 1st Balcony..50c & $1
2d Balcony...25c & 50c | 2d Balcony.....25c
MATINEES 2:15—NIGHTS 8:10
D. W. GRIFFITH'S Gigantic Spectacle
THE BIRTH 18,000 PEOPLE
3,000 HORSES OF A NATION
ORCHESTRA OF 50—COST $500,000.00
SEATS SELLING 4 WEEKS AHEAD

PMad 6-2

ILLINOIS THEATRE | TWICE DAILY (Including SUNDAYS)

EV'GS & SAT. MAT. | OTHER MATINEES
Orchestra.....$1 & $2 | Orchestra.....50c & $1
1st Bale'y, 50c, 75c & $1 | 1st Balcony..50c & $1
2d Balcony...25c & 50c | 2d Balcony.....25c
MATINEES 2:15—NIGHTS 8:10
D. W. GRIFFITH'S Gigantic Spectacle
The Birth 18,000 PEOPLE
3,000 HORSES of a Nation
ORCHESTRA OF 50—COST $500,000.00.
SEATS SELLING 4 WEEKS AHEAD.

HOLTS "MOVIE" BILL HARD

Folsom Aid Calls Censor Measure Viciously Anti Home Rule.

Reker Dissects Plan Which, It Is Said, Governor Will O. K.

"The most vicious anti home rule bill that has been before the legislature in many sessions."

That is Assistant Corporation Counsel George L. Reker's characterization of the bill creating a state censorship board for moving pictures, which, according to a special dispatch to The Daily News from Springfield, will be signed by Gov. Dunne. Persons who have studied the measure assert that when the state body gets into action the Chicago censor board will have no more authority than any "movie fan."

"The bill practically establishes a one man censorship board," said the municipal lawyer, "and that man the secretary of state, who will be the censor of all pictures shown in Illinois—the most cosmopolitan, perhaps, of all the states.

Extra Hard on Chicago.

"Absolutely no standard could ever be fixed which would suit the people of Waukegan and the people of Cairo too. Even in Chicago it is difficult to adopt a standard that is acceptable to people of the loop and to residents of the outlying districts.

"Chicago's foreign population and members of other races may well expect to be insulted every day if this bill goes through, as the censors, not being selected from Chicago, would be likely to censor from the standpoint of the rural communities. There would be no relief for Chicago, for proceedings to overrule the censor would have to be filed in the Sangamon county Circuit court. Under the present act proceedings to overrule the censor may be filed on a day's notice in the local courts.

Power of Secretary of State.

"If Maj. Funkhouser acts arbitrarily he hears about it from the aldermen or the people—and knows what the people want. The city council may take his power from him and give it to the superintendent of schools if it wants to. Now the plan is to give all power to the secretary of state, and however arbitrary or capricious his judgment may be, there is no relief. Never before was an individual given such autocratic power as this bill gives the secretary of state and he never was elected to exercise such powers. The bill provides for three censors, but also provides that the secretary of state may remove them.

"Censorship is opposed by people generally. It is un-American and exists only as a necessary evil. Ideal censorship, if it must exist, is what we now have."

Deplored by the Mayor.

Mayor Thompson deplored the prospective signing of the film measure, also.

"I can only say," he remarked, "that I deplore the passage of any bill that takes away the principle of home rule. That applies to this and other matters. The people must make up their minds whether municipal matters are to be administered from Springfield or here at home."

Maj. Funkhouser referred inquisitors to Mr. Reker.

THE STATE CENSORS BILL.

The duplication of censorship which will follow the establishment of a state board of censors, so far as it affects Chicago, is an injustice from the standpoint of moving picture enterprise and an improvident as well as unnecessary regulation of public entertainment.

The movies are the people's entertainment, a great democratic development which gives legitimate amusement to all the public. They ought not to be subjected to undue official obstructions and unnecessary regulations. Some reliance should be put upon the conscience and good sense of moving picture patrons, and every extension of official control should be compelled clearly to prove its expediency. America believes in the individual and is not yet ready to put itself under the monitorship of interminable bureaus.

A board of censors for the state means, also, an added expense for salaries and expenses, a new drain on the treasury. At a time when the governor is trying sincerely to cut expenditures and has reduced several otherwise highly desirable appropriations, such as, for example, the good roads and armory funds, the creation of a body of censors, the need for which is challenged, would seem inconsistent and uncalled for.

Journal 6-3

At the Film Shows

"The Birth of a Nation," D. W. Griffith's vast spectacle of the civil war and reconstruction period, blending history and romance in a lovely and thrilling spectacle, enjoys enormous favor at the Illinois. It is the biggest thing in the motion-picture world. Very effective music, well played, points and emphasizes the pictorial narrative.

Examiner 6/2 Chicag

MOVIE BILL TO BECOME A LAW

Governor Dunne Expected to Let Several Measures Take Effect Without His Signature.

BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., July 1.—Indications to-day were that Governor Dunne would let the moving-picture bill become a law without his signature. According to Attorney General Lucey, the law would not be operative until July 1, 1916. Former Congressman James M. Graham contends that the bill is unconstitutional for the reason that it seeks to delegate power to boards and persons outside the state of Illinois.

It is likely also that the Governor will let the bill increasing the salaries of the members of the Legislature become a law without his signature. There would be no material difference whether this bill became a law at once or a year hence, as the new Legislature will not be elected until more than a year from now.

The Governor is as yet undecided with reference to the bill authorizing engineers to enter part of the field now occupied by architects.

The Lake Calumet bill also remains in doubt. This measure would authorize the city of Chicago to rent for manufacturing and mercantile purposes any lands that might be reclaimed from the botton of the lake. South Chicago interests are united for the measure.

A legal fight is threatened with reference to the Governor's action in "scaling down" appropriations to the extent of $2,225,000. Interests hurt by these vetoes claim that the Governor has the right to veto a bill in its entirety, but no right to cut down the amount appropriated.

The Governor, as soon as he is through with the bills, will make announcement of appointments to the new boards created by this session.

American 7-3

American July 1st

THURSDAY.

'SEE IT TWICE,' SAY 'BIRTH OF NATION' FANS

One visit to the Illinois Theater to see "The Birth of a Nation" is not enough, in the opinion of many well-known Chicagoans, including leading society women. Numerous "Nation fans" have viewed D. W. Griffith's world famous masterpiece not only twice, but three times, and have made seat reservations to view the peerless spectacle for the fourth time. As "The Birth of a Nation" is about to enter its fifth week of twice-daily triumphs at the Illinois, it is announced that the number of playgoers who have already seen two complete performances will amount to many hundreds.

"To see 'The Birth of a Nation' once is to see it soon again," commented an experienced observer of theatrical events. "Folks who have already seen the production not only urge their friends to see it, but offer to go along with them, saying it is the one entertainment that bears repetition."

"SOLD OUT."

Hanging out the "Sold Out" sign is a nightly ceremony in the foyer of the Illinois Theater, and the amusement world is treated to the novel sight of packed houses at $2 per main floor seat. This is accepted as proof that Mr. Griffith's achievement has inaugurated the era in which a production of this sort may outrival in quality and popularity the finest of attractions on the "old stage" at equal prices.

Years of study in libraries containing large collections of works on Abraham Lincoln cannot give such a true impression of the great President as the scenes at the White House and Ford's Theater in "The Birth of a Nation." Admirers and students of Lincoln, from civil war veterans to young collegians, are unqualified in their praise of the presentation of the Emancipator in the Griffith masterpiece.

THE LINCOLN PORTRAYAL.

Here it is demonstrated that a faithful portrayal of Lincoln's personality is actually possible, despite previous failures on the stage and in films. The portrayal of President Lincoln in "The Birth of a Nation" is not only realistic to the finest degree. It is reverent as well as true, and renews admiration for "Honest Abe" in the hearts of those who are many years removed from historical study or patriotic thrills.

No reproduction of sidelights on the European war can even faintly approach the battle scenes of "The Birth of a Nation" in showing what grim war means. And perhaps no war correspondent, aviator or experienced army officer ever viewed a field of battle, with many thousands of men engaged, to such advantage as is enjoyed by the spectator at the Illinois Theater. It is as if the "innocent bystander," immune from danger, were transported to a mountain grandstand, there to view the terrible events of a nation's strife in a warmad valley of death. Artillery duels by night and day, sorties, bayonet charges and indomitable trench fighting are revealed with a fidelity which defies criticism by military experts.

In "The Birth of a Nation" a charming love story is woven through mighty historical chapters from the outbreak of the civil war to the terrific time of the reconstruction period.

American July 3

ILLINOIS THEATRE | TWICE DAILY (Including SUNDAYS)

EV'GS & SAT. MAT. | OTHER MATINEES
Orchestra.....$1 & $2 | Orchestra.....50c & $1
1st Bale'y, 50c, 75c & $1 | 1st Balcony..50c & $1
2d Balcony...25c & 50c | 2d Balcony.....25c
MATINEES 2:15—NIGHTS 8:10
D. W. GRIFFITH'S Gigantic Spectacle
The Birth 18,000 PEOPLE
3,000 HORSES of a Nation
ORCHESTRA OF 50—COST $500,000.00.
SEATS SELLING 4 WEEKS AHEAD.

CHICAGO'S TREMENDOUS DRAMATIC SENSATION!

SEE THE HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES FIRST AT THE

ILLINOIS THEATRE

TAKE A VACATION THROUGH THE EXCITING YEARS OF

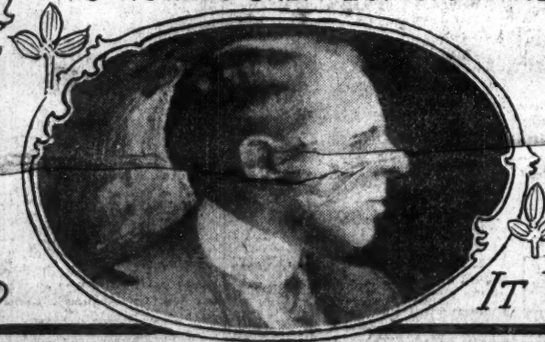
THE BIRTH OF A NATION

3000 HORSEMEN RIDING TO RESCUE

THE EIGHTH WONDER OF THE WORLD

D.W. GRIFFITH

WHOSE MASTER MIND CREATED THIS WORLD'S GREATEST SPECTACLE



18000 PEOPLE IN A $500,000.00 DRAMA

IT WILL MAKE A BETTER AMERICAN OF YOU

TWICE DAILY

(INCLUDING SUNDAYS)

Afternoons at 2:15 Evenings at 8:10

Evenings and Sat. Mats.		Other Matinees
Orchestra	$1 and $2	Orchestra	50c and $1
First Balcony	50c, 75c and $1	Balcony	50c and $1
Second Balcony	25c and 50c	Second Balcony	25c

THE BIRTH OF A NATION

ILLINOIS THEATRE

100000 CHICAGOANS

HAVE ALREADY SEEN THIS WONDERFUL PLAY AND VOTED THEIR APPROVAL BY RAPT ATTENTION, TEARS, LAUGHTER AND FERVENT APPLAUSE

SEATS SELLING FOUR WEEKS IN ADVANCE

MAIL and TELEGRAPH requests accompanied by check will be filled in the order of their receipt. Patrons will aid us in accommodating them by naming two dates if possible.

HIGHLY IMPORTANT:

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION" WILL NEVER BE PRESENTED IN ANY BUT THE HIGHEST CLASS THEATERS AND AT PRICES CUSTOMARILY CHARGED IN SUCH PLAYHOUSES.

D. W. GRIFFITH.

Tribune 7-3

"The Birth of a Nation," at the Illinois, keeps right on keeping on, with the "sold out" sign playing a prominent part in the program.

* * *

Herald 7/3

Notes of the Film World

Pavlowa, who is to appear later in a Universal picture, arrived in Chicago this morning. This is Pavlowa's one night of freedom before she starts in to dance at the Midway Garden tomorrow night. She has proven her interest in motion pictures by spending this one evening of leisure at the Illinois, where she will review Griffith's masterpiece, "The Birth of a Nation."

\+ \+ \+

American 7-3

The Film World

"BIRTH OF A NATION."

With the seeming arrival of the long-delayed "hot spell" that usually reaches a climax on the Fourth of July, there seems to be no let-up in the demand for seats and future reservations for Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation" at the Illinois Theater. For this masterpiece and its artistic presentation make up an ideal Summer show.

Everything possible has been done for the comfort of the patrons. In addition there is the soothing cool that is associated with the front room of an elm-shaded country home when the blinds are drawn.

"This is the first show I ever really enjoyed in hot weather," remarked an old soldier to George Bowles, who is in charge of the production in Chicago. "I went through the war, and because Griffith's wonderful spectacle took me back to the hotter times than I ever expect to suffer again, I was cool by contrast."

As he passed out onto the street he heard a young man complain of the heat, and the veteran smiled.

IN DRAMA'S SPOTLIGHT

BY THE OPTIMIST.

Fourth of July week bids fair to issue in real Summer with a list of amusements diversified enough to please theater, movie, park and garden fan of the most critical taste. "The Birth of a Nation" easily holds the lead in loop theaters, although the half dozen or so regular Summer shows are doing a regular Winter business.

News 7/3

"The Birth of a Nation" continues to play to large audiences at the Illinois theater. Although in its fifth week and playing twice each day, interest in David W. Griffith's spectacle seems unabated, judging from the crowded houses and the advance sale in seats. One of the many startling and realistic scenes in the picture is Lincoln's assassination. It is reported that the author pored over authentic books of this incident for correct details. Thus the Ford theater is reproduced with fidelity, as is the interior and the incidents leading up to and after the crime.

P. Mail July 3-

ILLINOIS THEATRE

TWICE DAILY
(INCLUDING SUNDAYS)
AFTERNOONS AT 2:15
EVENINGS AT 8:10

EVENINGS AND SATURDAY MATS.
Orchestra.....$1 and $2
First Balcony, 50c, 75c and $1
Second Balcony, 25c and 50c

SEATS SELLING 4 WEEKS IN ADVANCE
MAIL and TELEGRAPH requests accompanied by check will be filled in the order of their receipt. Patrons will aid us in accommodating them by naming two dates if possible.

OTHER MATINEES
Orchestra...50c and $1
Balcony....50c and $1
Second Balcony....25c

D. W. GRIFFITH'S 8th WONDER OF THE WORLD

CELEBRATE INDEPENDENCE DAY BY SEEING IT

A REAL 4th OF JULY TONIC FOR WEAK-KNEED CITIZENS

5,000 SCENES

18,000 PEOPLE

THE BIRTH OF A NATION

COST $500,000.00

3,000 HORSES

IT WILL MAKE A BETTER AMERICAN OF YOU

THE VOICE OF THE PEOPLE AND THE VOICE OF THE PRESS ARE AS ONE IN ITS PRAISE

TRIBUNE (Percy Hammond)—"I advise all my readers to attend it."
EXAMINER (Ashton Stevens)—"An epic without words—a poet's picture."
HERALD (The Hattons)—"The most dramatic visualization of national history that has ever been accomplished."
JOURNAL (O. L. Hall)—"A performance of amazing vastness; in scope the mightiest, in theme the most intimate, in treatment the most daring, in feeling the richest."
NEWS (W. K. Hollander)—"'The Birth of a Nation' is a remarkable dramatic creation."
AMERICAN (F. M. McQuigg)—"The greatest play of all times."

HIGHLY IMPORTANT: "The Birth of a Nation" Will Never Be Presented at Any but the Highest Class Theatres and at Prices Customarily Charged in Such Playhouses.
D. W. GRIFFITH.

Am. Mat July 4-

ILLINOIS THEATRE | TWICE DAILY (Including) SUNDAYS

EV'GS & SAT. MAT. Orchestra.....$1 & $2 | 1st Bal'y, 50c, 75c & $1 | 2d Balcony...25c & 50c

OTHER MATINEES Orchestra.....50c & $1 | 1st Balcony...50c & $1 | 2d Balcony.....25c

MATINEES 2:15—NIGHTS 8:10
D. W. GRIFFITH'S Gigantic Spectacle

The Birth 18,000 PEOPLE of a Nation 3,000 HORSES

ORCHESTRA OF 50—COST $500,000.00.
SEATS SELLING 4 WEEKS AHEAD.

Tribune 7/4

MOVIE ADS AS COME-ONS.

There is something too neat for explication in the fact that movie producers now use an edict of the board of censors to make a pretense of getting the worst effects from which censorship is supposed to protect us. When a movie advertisement reads that the "police positively prohibit the admission of any one under 21" a situation is created which cannot be observed other than with chagrin by any one interested in perfecting the censorship system.

The fact that it is advertising intended to deceive and that the hopes aroused by it will be dissipated by the showing of the film does not change the other fact that the rules of the board of censors are being used as bait for persons who would like to take a surreptitious nibble at the salacious. They get cheated out of their taste of immorality, in most cases at least, but is it a good principle of censorship to permit the temptation to be offered?

Tribune July 3

P. Mail ad. July 3

APPROVING A FILM PLAY.

Artistically "The Birth of a Nation" is overwhelming in its beauty and the wonder of its technique. In the presentation itself there is nothing to my mind that could offend the moral sense, nor would the average child see in any incident of the play the intentions which a perverted trend of thought might seek.

The play gives to us of the north a clearer comprehension of the social and political problems which confronted the white south of that day. The blame for the evils of the reconstruction period is placed where it belongs—upon the irresponsible, self seeking and therefore short sighted northern politicians and not upon the colored man, who is not pictured as responsible for his lack of wisdom in the use of his newly acquired freedom, that instrument of greatest danger in the hands of the unprepared. Since that time colored people in the mass have amply proved that, in spite of staggering handicaps testing their moral strength to the utmost, they have been able through their own endeavors to raise themselves to the status of respected citizenship. They can therefore view these portrayals with less sorrow than we of German blood can view the scenes of despoiled Belgium and France.

The period with which the play deals has passed into history. Neither the colored nor the white man is the same today. The last fifty years have taught valuable lessons to both, not the least valuable that it is not wise to feed beefsteak to a toothless baby.

Considered from an impartial historical standpoint, the play is profitable as an accurate reflection of the motives and impulses behind the thought and act of the times. Furthermore, in a more than national scope it is an object lesson which impresses the uselessness and viciousness of war more indelibly upon the mind than even "The Trojan Women." Because of its intensely human interest it is more intelligible and convincing than any number of lectures. And the far reaching extent of war's tragedies is more vividly manifested to the average individual by their enactment before his very eyes than by the most illuminating recital.

LINDA TRUSSING AZAMAR.

Maywood, Ill.

Herald 7/4

ILLINOIS—Hanging out the "Sold Out" sign is a nightly ceremony in the foyer of this theater. "The Birth of a Nation," in spite of the $2 per main floor seat, continues to attract record-breaking audiences. It is a charming love story woven through mighty historical chapters from the outbreak of the civil war to the terrific time of the reconstruction period.

Tribune 7/4

D. W. Griffith has just decided upon his next multiple reel feature to follow "The Birth of a Nation." Its title is to be "The Mother and the Law." He is now at the Griffith headquarters, the Reliance-Majestic studios in Hollywood, Los Angeles, Cal. He is in the midst of preparations for the filming of "The Mother and the Law."

Examiner June 7

Moving Picture Censorship Bill Vetoed by Dunne

By International News Service.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., July 6.—The motion picture censorship bill has been vetoed by Governor Dunne. The veto was decided upon by the Governor before he left for Chicago last night and was announced today by his secretary, William L. Sullivan.

The bill provided for the appointment of a board of censors for all pictures shown in the state. Strong opposition was made to the bill by Chicago city authorities, on the ground it would result in the abolition of the Chicago censorship board, without giving adequate censorship.

Downstate movie men also opposed the measure.

ILLINOIS THEATRE

TWICE DAILY
(INCLUDING SUNDAYS)
AFTERNOONS AT 2:15
EVENINGS AT 8:10

EVENINGS AND SATURDAY MATS.
Orchestra.....$1 and $2
First Balcony..50c, 75c and $1
Second Balcony....25c and 50c

SEATS SELLING 4 WEEKS IN ADVANCE
MAIL and TELEGRAPH requests accompanied by check will be filled in the order of their receipt. Patrons will aid us in accommodating them by naming two dates if possible.

OTHER MATINEES
Orchestra....50c and $1
Balcony.....50c and $1
Second Balcony.....25c

D. W. GRIFFITH'S 8th WONDER OF THE WORLD

CELEBRATE INDEPENDENCE DAY BY SEEING IT

A REAL 4th OF JULY TONIC FOR WEAK-KNEED CITIZENS

5,000 SCENES

18,000 PEOPLE

THE BIRTH OF A NATION

COST $500,000.00

3,000 HORSES

IT WILL MAKE A BETTER AMERICAN OF YOU

THE VOICE OF THE PEOPLE AND THE VOICE OF THE PRESS ARE AS ONE IN ITS PRAISE

TRIBUNE (Percy Hammond)—"I advise all my readers to attend it."
EXAMINER (Ashton Stevens)—"An epic without words—a poet's picture."
HERALD (The Hattons)—"The most dramatic visualization of national history that has ever been accomplished."
JOURNAL (O. L. Hall)—"A performance of amazing vastness; in scope the mightiest, in theme the most intimate, in treatment the most daring, in feeling the richest."
DAILY NEWS (W. K. Hollander)—"'The Birth of a Nation' is a remarkable dramatic creation."
AMERICAN (F. M. McQuigg)—"The greatest play of all times."

HIGHLY IMPORTANT: "The Birth of a Nation" Will Never Be Presented at Any but the Highest Class Theatres and at Prices Customarily Charged in Such Playhouses.
D. W. GRIFFITH.

P. Mail ad 7-7

American 7/7

ILLINOIS THEATRE | TWICE DAILY (INCLUDING SUNDAYS)

EV'GS & SAT. MAT.
Orchestra.....$1 & $2
1st Bal'y.50c, 75c & $1
2d Balcony..25c & 50c

OTHER MATINEES
Orchestra.....50c & $1
1st Balcony..50c & $1
2d Balcony.....25c

MATINEES 2:15—NIGHTS 8:10

D. W. GRIFFITH'S Gigantic Spectacle

THE BIRTH OF A NATION

18,000 PEOPLE

3,000 HORSES

ORCHESTRA OF 50—COST $500,000
SEATS SELLING 4 WEEKS AHEAD

Polo Stars Watch Horses on Screen

A delegation of polo enthusiasts fled the rain-soaked field at the Onwentsia Club yesterday afternoon and attend Griffiths' "The Birth of a Nation" at the Illinois Theater.

The Mid-Western Circuit polo tournament was to have been started at the Onwentsia Country Club in Lake Forest with a match between the Onwentsia Indians and the Chicago Polo Club of Wheaton, but the heavy going prevented.

According to Colonel J. Kennedy of the British Army, who accompanied the polo players, the chief drawing power of the "Birth of a Nation," as far as they were concerned, is the handling of the 3,000 horses used by Mr. Griffiths in producing the spectacle.

Colonel Kennedy, Earl Fitzmaurice and Major William Slingsby are here buying army horses for the allies.

SEEING "THE BIRTH OF A NATION" AT THE ILLINOIS THEATER

What of Movies Without Tunes?

BY RONALD WEBSTER.

THE canny management of "The Birth of a Nation" turned the Illinois theater into a kind of psychological laboratory yesterday afternoon in an attempt to determine just what part music plays in making their pseudo-historical film a success. They invited to the theater a group of deafmutes now stopping in Chicago, on their way to a convention in San Francisco.

The experiment was interesting if not enlightening. It was almost impossible to get any expression of opinion from the visitors, even through an interpreter, because of the darkness. There were, however, certain outstanding facts.

So far as could be seen, none of the deaf mutes clapped or gave any outward expression of enthusiasm. When the audience of articulate persons clapped furiously over the death of Gus, the Renegade, they appeared placid, though interested.

What chiefly nullified the experiment, moreover, was the fact that to the visitors music has never had any significance. Sound, except as a kind of bodily vibration, seemed to have no meaning to them because they have never experienced the emotional effects of sound. One of them said she could distinguish between gun fire and cannon fire as represented by the orchestra, and many of them were conscious of vibration. Whether the vibrations made the picture more interesting or not remained unanswered.

It must not be thought that they found the drama uninteresting. They were as keenly interested as any of the other beholders, though they were certainly not so much stirred.

If the management really cares to determine just how much it owes to music, it should omit the music for a week and study the results. The game would not be worth the candle.

The Origin of Kuklux.

CHICAGO, July 8.—To the Editor of The Post: Sir: An elderly Southron—with whom I attended Griffith's marvelous film-drama of reconstruction days—said that he never expected to hear "Nothemers" wildly applaud the doings of the Kuklux Klan. He deemed it proof that feeling caused by the civil war was "plumb over and forgotten." Of course, we know that in the North at the time it flourished the Klan was hardly regarded as any order of chivalry.

My friend from Dixie also asserted that if Brady, the famous war photographer, had possessed a moving-picture outfit instead of a plain camera at Petersburg and Cold Harbor the views handed down to us would be identical with the war scenes that live on the screen at the Illinois Theater.

Regarding the origin of the name my friend said the words Kuklux Klan were intended to reproduce the sound of cocking a rifle. Having looked the matter up I was able to state the more usual explanation, which is this: During 1866 some youths in Pulaski, Tenn., seeking relief from the dullness of hard times got up a semi-mystic social club. They took a name from the Greek word "kuklos" (circle) and added with alliterative effect the English word "klan" (clan). It was seen that mystery was just the means for disciplining the "black Republicans" and carpet baggers, and the organization carried on the functions of the old negro patrols or regulators. Under various names it spread over the entire South.

Still another origin is suggested by Albion W. Tourgee in his books "The Invisible Empire" and "Fool's Errand." According to him the name derives from the diabolical "eluckie" with which the clansmen routed out their victims. He says the negroes were wont to refer to their nightriding oppressors as "dem kluckers." If there is a more definite opinion as to the above I would be interested to read it.

MAURICE MASON.

Congregational Notes.

The Pastor will hold services this Sunday, July fourth and the usual morning and evening hours will be observed. Since it is the National holiday and anniversary, the occasion will be observed with a special sermon.

The topic will be: The Birth of a nation"? and will be given at the evening service. This talk will be based upon the widely talked of moving picture now having such a spectacular run in Chicago.

47

Herald July 11

The Story of Lillian Gish—"Most Beautiful Blonde in the World"

RUBY—The good-looking chap who was formerly with the Famous Players but is now with the American is Harold Lockwood. Alack! he is married. Henry Walthal is married. The girl who plays the octoroon in "The Birth of a Nation" is Mary Alden. Yes, I think she is very talented. She also was in "Ghosts." I am glad to be of assistance to you, and you are very welcome.

ILLINOIS—"The Birth of a Nation," the world's greatest historical spectacle, continues making history in attendance. At the outset of the sixth week in Chicago D. W. Griffith's production continues to draw packed houses twice daily. It has been playing to more people than any of the Herald Jul 11

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS.

THE most beautiful blonde in the world," is the way David Griffith describes Lillian, the older of the famous Gish sisters. This same golden hair has been the object of deep admiration ever since Lillian, a quaint tot of 6, played Eva in "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

"Isn't it strange," said Lillian, "that Mary Pickford, Vivian Prescott and I were all initiated into the stage business in the timeworn role of little Eva?

"'I am going to join the angels, Uncle Tom. Don't weep for me,'" and Lillian did the affecting deathbed scene which for years has made so many people shed tears.

In answer to my applause Lillian said: "I have been acting ever since I was 4 years old. My schooling and Dorothy's has been largely from tutors, although I spent some months at the Ursuline convent in St. Louis. A sort of 'finish up' to my education, as it were."

✦ ✦ ✦

Lillian Gish's appearance in filmland was made in a perfectly natural way. She came into pictures by the stage door entrance, an undisputably good training school, that has served hundreds of the most proficient photoplayers.

"I was 6," volunteered Miss Gish, "when I was asked to act in 'The Little Red Schoolhouse.' I was so pleased and did not feel in the least embarrassed. It was just a good game to me, and I entered into it heart and soul. I remember the play quite well. Don't you recall that part where the little boy says to the little girl, 'Do you like chicken?' The little girl answers 'Yes,' and then the little boy says, 'Take a wing,' and holds out his arms and they go out? Well, that wee tot was I. That was my stage debut."

✦ ✦ ✦

When David Griffith was in Chicago some weeks ago he spoke of Lillian Gish as having ethereal loveliness and showing a rare depth of feeling in every part in which she was cast. These words remained in my mind, and after I had seen Lillian Gish as Elsie Cameron in "The Birth of a Nation" I was fully convinced that Mr. Griffith's compliment was not extravagant or fulsome praise.

Lillian Gish is so delicate and so pink and golden in her coloring that the word ethereal seems to fit her more nearly than any other term I have heard applied to her.

This Striking Pose of Lillian Gish Shows Her as the Fans Love Her Best—Exhibiting Her Wealth of Yellow Hair.

Lillian Gish the Girl Says of Lillian Gish the Star—

MY DEBUT at the age of six years was just fun. It was a good game for me.

Mary Pickford, Vivian Prescott and I all were initiated into the stage business through the timeworn role of Little Eva.

Sister Dorothy and I owe everything we have accomplished in the picture world to David Griffith. He explains everything so carefully and he never loses his head.

Of course Dorothy and I are not jealous of one another. I'm so proud of her work and always interested in everything she does.

"I remember you in the old Biograph days, when you and your sister," I said, "were just starting to shine among the cinema stars. I recall especially a picture called 'Mother, Mother' something——"

✦ ✦ ✦

"You mean 'The Mothering Heart,'" supplied Miss Gish, her face lighting up with a smile. "I am so pleased that you remember that picture, because it has always been one of my favorites. Of course, I have been in much more elaborate productions, but that simple little story has a touch of heart interest that makes it stand in a class by itself."

"It is the mother thought in the picture," I said, "that bit of sentiment that gives the picture human appeal. I saw you as the little starving mother in 'Judith of Bethulia' and in 'The Battle of the Sexes' and of course as Elsie Cameron, but I want to say that through it all that one picture has remained indelibly fixed in my mind."

"Those are all Griffith pictures and naturally that places them among the masterpieces," said Miss Gish. "Do you know that I have never worked for another director?"

Like Anita Stewart, who has done all her work under the guidance of Ralph Ince, Lillian Gish says she is not quite sure she would be a success with any other producer but David Griffith.

✦ ✦ ✦

"Mr. Griffith explains everything so carefully. He is so calm and so cool. He never loses his head and never allows anything to annoy him or us. I couldn't stand to work for a director who shouts or yells and loses his temper. It would make me so nervous I could not keep my thoughts on my work.

"Of course, I think there never was such a person in the world as Mr. Griffith. Dorothy and I both owe everything we have accomplished in the motion picture business to David Griffith. Mary Pickford introduced us to Mr. Griffith and he gave us both a trial on Mary's recommendation, so, of course, we owe some of our success to her. We have always known the Pickford family, and Mary is one of my closest friends. She is a dear," said Miss Gish warmly.

✦ ✦ ✦

Lillian told me a secret. "I am to have a prominent part in Mr. Griffith's new picture, 'The Mother and the Law,'" she said. "We aren't telling very much about it, because Mr. Griffith always keeps the text and nature of his productions secret until they are ready for the market. I think it is a wise idea, because if a picture is advertised and advertised before it is finished people get tired of hearing about it."

"There is a strong resemblance between you and your sister," I said to Lillian.

✦ ✦ ✦

"Yes, I think we look alike. I have more color and I am more robust than she is. You see, we almost lost Dorothy last year. It was dreadful. She was in an automobile accident and was nearly killed. I think if anything had happened to her I would have almost died," and Lillian's pretty blue eyes filled with tears.

"Dorothy is the baby of the family. I went into pictures first and then she came a little later. Some people are unkind enough to ask if we are not jealous of each other. Did you ever hear of such a thing?" asked Lillian indignantly. "My own sister. I am so proud of everything she does, and she is so interested in my career. I think it would be very strange if we didn't sympathize with each other," and Lillian's blue eyes flashed wrathfully at the unlucky one who first put the notion of sisterly jealously into her lovely head.

✦ ✦ ✦

The Gish girls, unlike many other young people who figure prominently in the limelight, spend much of their time reading. Lillian has a large library and devotes a part of each week's salary to enlarging that increasing list of books, which contains some very rare and valuable volumes de luxe.

"It will be a great thing, won't it," I said, "for you in after years to be able to say that you had one of the principal roles in the first $2 movie? 'The Birth of a Nation' has certainly had a share in giving you a permanent place in filmland's hall of fame."

✦ ✦ ✦

"I am very thankful that Mr. Griffith cast me for Elsie. It took eight months of hard work to finish that picture, but it has been well worth the long months of work and the time we spent in giving our director what he wanted. Just imagine, he photographed over 75,000 feet of film for the necessary 12,000 feet. That means that we were in over five times as many scenes as you saw us on the screen. The first time that I saw myself in this big production I was as nervous as a prima donna making her first appearance. Mr. Griffith had a first night and invited all the film folk at Los Angeles to be present. It was like performing before a room full of critics. They were all critics, but each one was kind enough to say some nice things about 'The Birth of a Nation,' and naturally that made me very happy."

I have come to the conclusion that one reason that Lillian Gish at 19 is such a recognized success is because of her sweet nature, which finds evil in no one and abundant charity for every one. She is a lovable child, is this 19-year-old star of the world's greatest photoplay. A girl deserving of all of her success, which has had only its beginning in "The Birth of a Nation."

American 7-10

GRIFFITH SHOW BREAKS RECORD

"BIRTH OF A NATION."

"THE Birth of a Nation" continues making history in attendance figures at the Illinois Theater. At the outset of its sixth week in Chicago D. W. Griffith's mammouth production draws packed houses twice daily, doing a greater business at top-notch prices than any other dramatic attraction of recent times.

That the public is finding full value in the great three-hour entertainment, even with main-floor seats at $2, is illustrated by the fact that audiences have become larger in a steady growth since the prosperous opening week. The big attendance is in part due to the large number of residents of nearby cities and towns who make trips to Chicago for the particular purpose of viewing "The Birth of a Nation."

The inadequacy of "news-films" from Europe in portraying the appearance of a battle field at the height of action is in contrast to the comprehensive realism of "The Birth of a Nation." The battle of Petersburg, as staged by Griffith, the master, shows many thousand fighting men extended over a front many miles.

Post 7-10

Leah Baird is again playing leads opposite Maurice Costello at the Vitagraph.

Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation" is to be shown in London this month.

"As It Happened," a one-reel Biograph feature, will be released July 12.

"Coincidence," a two-reel Biograph picture, will be released July 13.

Illinois.

"The Birth of a Nation," the photoplay which has set all Chicago agog, both from a photoplay and a legitimate attraction standpoint, continues to play to crowded houses at the Illinois, the month of July seeming to have little effect in decreasing patronage. "The Birth of a Nation" is in twelve reels, and yet easily of sufficient strength to make one willing to sit thru it all over again after once witnessing this Griffith masterpiece.

Journal 7-10

At the Film Shows

"The Birth of a Nation," D. W. Griffith's vast spectacle of the civil war and reconstruction period, blending history and romance in a lovely and thrilling spectacle, prospers mightily at the Illinois. Very effective music, well played, points and emphasizes the pictorial narrative.

News 7-10

"Peg o' My Heart," with Peggy O'Neil, has the distinction of being the only straight play in town. It continues at the Cort theater.

"The Birth of a Nation," the historical film drama, continues to be shown at the Illinois theater.

"The Rosary" enters its second week at the Studebaker. Kathlyn Williams appears in the play.

MAIL FOR BLACKSTONE

Post 7-10

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION," a photo pageant on the history of the civil war, continues capacity business at the Illinois Theater. The excellent orchestral accompaniment to this spectacular photo production makes it doubly interesting.

News 7-10

At the outset of its sixth week at the Illinois theater "The Birth of a Nation" continues to draw packed houses twice daily, doing a greater business at regular dramatic prices than most recent dramatic attractions.

A. Mail 7/12

ILLINOIS THEATRE — TWICE DAILY (INCLUDING SUNDAYS)

EV'GS AND SAT. MAT. ORCHESTRA..$1 and $2
1st BALCONY..50c,75c,$1
2nd BALCONY..25c & 50c

OTHER MATINEES ORCHESTRA...50c & $1
1st BALCONY...50c & $1
2nd BALCONY.....25c

MATINEES 2:15—NIGHTS 8:10

D. W. GRIFFITH'S Gigantic Spectacle

The Birth of a Nation

18,000 PEOPLE

3,000 HORSES

ORCHESTRA OF 50—COST $500,000.00
SEATS SELLING 4 WEEKS AHEAD

P. M. ad 7-10 Eve. 7-11

ILLINOIS THEATRE

TWICE DAILY
(INCLUDING SUNDAYS)
AFTERNOONS AT 2:15
EVENINGS AT 8:10

EVENINGS AND SATURDAY MATS.
Orchestra.....$1 and $2
First Balcony.50c, 75c and $1
Second Balcony..25c and 50c

SEATS SELLING 4 WEEKS IN ADVANCE
MAIL and TELEGRAPH requests accompanied by check will be filled in the order of their receipt. Patrons will aid us in accommodating them by naming two dates if possible.

OTHER MATINEES
Orchestra...50c and $1
Balcony....50c and $1
Second Balcony....25c

D. W. GRIFFITH'S 8th WONDER OF THE WORLD

2nd STUPENDOUS MONTH

5,000 SCENES

18,000 PEOPLE

THE BIRTH OF A NATION

THE PLAY THAT WOKE CHICAGO UP

Cities built up and then destroyed by fire.

The biggest battle of the Civil War re-enacted.

Ford's Theatre, Washington, reproduced to the smallest detail for the Lincoln tragedy.

COST $500,000.00

3,000 HORSES

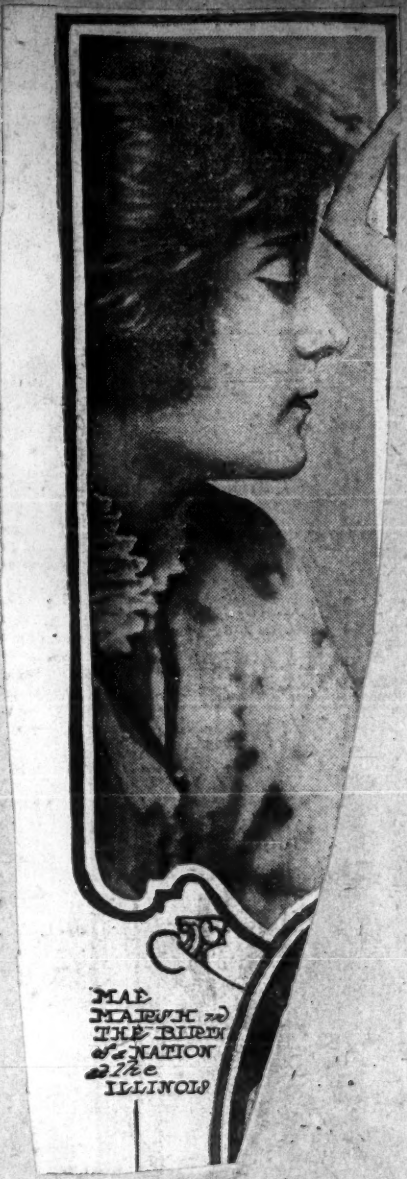
A series of wild rides that commandeered a county for a day and cost $10,000.

Night photography of battle scenes, invented and perfected at a cost of $12,000.

Wonderful artillery duels in which real shells—costing $80 apiece—were used. Miles of trenches—thousands of fighters—"War as it actually is."

A Musical Score of 50 pieces, synchronized to the several thousand distinct and individual scenes.

HIGHLY IMPORTANT: "The Birth of a Nation" Will Never Be Presented at Any but the Highest Class Theatres and at Prices Customarily Charged in Such Playhouses.
D. W. GRIFFITH



Herald 7-11

HENRY B. WALTHAL.

Herald 7-11

MIRIAM COOPER.

July 11

...o Examiner...The Best Newspaper for the Best Homes

Detecting Women's Ages Despite Dress

HOW old is any woman?

Is she in her thirties, although she wears the abbreviated frock of the school girl, a juvenile bonnet and a complexion which is the essence of milk and peaches?

Is she sweet sixteen, albeit her hair is tight-drawn, her dress is designed to fit a dashing widow, and her keen little face is knowingly punctuated with a beauty spot?

How old is any girl or woman—those are the questions which have baffled mankind since the outset of this new era of girlish garb for grandmammas, and grown-up togs for little maids in their little 'teens.

But alas, the delightful period of doubt and successful concealment is over. Science has flown to the rescue of poor man. Science, not in the interest of mere learning, but in behalf of the distracted management of a great amusement enterprise at a Chicago theater. Science is on the job, and its middle, or technical name, is Orthodontia. To this is added psychology, as practiced by the disciples of Sherlock Holmes.

"Thou shalt not give admittance to any person under twenty-one years of age."

This was the command uttered by the city authorities when the permit was given to display D. W. Griffith's marvelous spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," at the Illinois Theater.

Forthwith the management took every precaution to obey the law to its letter. Because of opposition, political and otherwise, aimed against "The Birth of a Nation," because it reveals the part played by carpet-baggers and the Ku Klux Klan in the reconstruction of the South, there were especial reasons why the city's ruling should be respected. It was feared that attempts would be made to have minors seated in the theater. One such case would then be the basis for prosecution of the management and perhaps the cancellation of its permit.

"But how is it possible to say for certain that a girl is under twenty-one years of age?" was the baffling question. "Must every young looking woman who comes to the theater be stopped and interrogated? In view of present day styles, how can we avoid getting into arguments with women who are closer to forty than to twenty-one?"

But the problem has been brought successfully to a solution. No minors, boys or girls, are now obtaining entrance to the Illinois Theater under the guise of being "grown-up."

A force of "age detectors" is on duty at every performance in the foyer of the Illinois. They are real detectives, too, and they are under command of the greatest "age detector" of them all. He is William E. Webster, assistant superintendent of a national detective agency. Webster thoroughly demonstrated his age-detecting abilities to Manager George Bowles before he took up his unique duties at the portals of "The Birth of a Nation." Since he has been in charge, hundreds of young men and women have been denied entrance to the Illinois Theater each week because their age was instantly discerned, although to the average doortender they would easily have passed muster.

Webster's qualifications as an "age detector" are unsurpassed. In addition to years of the widest police experience, he is a licensed dentist and a specialist in Orthodontia. This is the science which deals with the placing of the teeth at various stages in life, resulting in decided changes in the contour of the face and its general appearance.

However, Webster denies that he tells age at the Illinois Theater by requiring visitors to display their teeth.

"We are able to detect the girl in her teens, no matter how mature her dress, by the whole shape of the face as affected by the teeth," explained Webster. "For one thing, wisdom teeth seldom appear until persons are close to being 'of age,' and when these teeth have fully sprouted there is generally a change in the facial outline. The jaws and the cheekbones are not fully formed until after the age of twenty-one, and of course the teeth are all-important in this transformation.

"Detecting youth by means of the principles of orthodontia is not an experiment in the case of 'The Birth of a Nation.' It has been used before and successfully, although never employed in connection with a theatrical production. In factories it is often desirable to secure the services of an expert in judging accurately the ages of girl employes and applicants for work.

"As for judging women by their dress, that is a complete impossibility in this age. That is why science must come to the succor of the harassed theater management which seeks to live up to the law. Dress is now a disguise for both age and youth among women. It is deceptive for the reason that elderly women are becoming more girlish, and young girls seek to look grown up and sophisticated. The result is confusion, especially in the crowded foyer of a theater before the matinee or evening performance.

"The length of skirts is deceiving, applying to age. So is the presence of curls, for middle-aged women are quite as addicted to these charmers as the young ones, in fact, more so. Girlish slippers cover the feet of the elderly, who a few years ago preferred comfortable walking gear. As for complexions—well, even an experienced detective must surrender and confess himself unable to descry the difference between eighteen and thirty-five."

Webster, however, admitted that he had other means of deciding the age question besides dental science. For instance:

"The young girl wears little jewelry. Her parents object to too much display, and, besides, she has not accumulated wedding gifts, etc., like the older woman. Nor does she have much perfumery. As for jewelry, it is accumulative from year to year.

The other evening a petite girl, handsomely dressed, entered the Illinois Theater lobby, accompanied by an attentive escort.

Pardon me, but are you twenty-one?" demanded Webster.

"Am I twenty-one? Why, how you flatter me," replied the girl, beaming with smiles. "But I am twenty-two, thank you."

A few minutes later the incident was repeated, Webster receiving exactly the same reply to his question.

"It pleases them all to be asked if they are twenty-one," he explained. "That is, it pleases any woman beyond that age, but the real young things, who are trying their best to be grown up, unappreciative of their precious, fleeting youth, often become indignant. It is often the case that we have to bar out a girl who is not only married, but is the mother of one or two children. According to the city order, she is not yet old enough to know her own mind or to witness the great historical episodes in 'The Birth of a Nation.'"

This statement naturally raises the question: If it is legal for a girl to choose her husband at eighteen, why is it illegal to let her choose her evening's amusement at a first-class theater?

But this problem is too much for Age-Detector Webster to solve. In the meantime he is forced to make many young folks unhappy by refusing them admission to the Griffith masterpiece. And he is not thanking the latest styles as a help in detecting ages.

P. Mad 7-13

ILLINOIS THEATRE | TWICE DAILY (INCLUDING SUNDAYS)

EV'GS & SAT. MAT. — Orchestra .....$1 & $2; 1st Bal'y, 50c, 75c & $1; 2d Balcony ...25 & 50c
OTHER MATINEES — Orchestra.....50c & $1; 1st Bal'y.....50c & $1; 2d Balcony.....25c
MATINEES 2:15—NIGHTS 8:10

D. W. GRIFFITH'S Gigantic Spectacle
THE BIRTH OF A NATION
18,000 PEOPLE
3,000 HORSES
ORCHESTRA OF 50—COST $500,000
SEATS SELLING 4 WEEKS AHEAD

A. Mad 7-14

ILLINOIS THEATRE | TWICE DAILY (INCLUDING SUNDAYS)

EV'GS & SAT. MAT. — Orchestra.....$1 & $2; 1st Bal'y, 50c, 75c & $1; 2nd Balcony..25c & 50c
OTHER MATINEES — Orchestra.....50c & $1; 1st Balcony.....50c & $1; 2nd Balcony.....25c
MATINEES 2:15—NIGHTS 8:10

D.W. GRIFFITH'S Gigantic Spectacle
THE BIRTH OF A NATION
18,000 PEOPLE
3,000 HORSES
ORCHESTRA OF 50—COST $500,000.00
SEATS SELLING 4 WEEKS AHEAD

American 7-13

Dorothy Gish, the Griffith star and player in many Reliance and Majestic features, is so fond of ice cream she took a freezer with her recently on a trip to the San Bernardino mountains for the filming of "The Mountain Girl." Snow took the place of ice.

• • •

Sunday July 7-11

ILLINOIS THEATRE

TWICE DAILY (INCLUDING SUNDAYS)
AFTERNOONS AT 2:15
EVENINGS AT 8:10

EVENINGS AND SATURDAY MATS.
Orchestra.....$1 and $2
First Balcony..50c, 75c and $1
Second Balcony....25c and 50c

OTHER MATINEES
Orchestra.....50c and $1
Balcony.....50c and $1
Second Balcony.....25c

SEATS SELLING 4 WEEKS IN ADVANCE
MAIL and TELEGRAPH requests accompanied by check will be filled in the order of their receipt. Patrons will aid us in accommodating them by naming two dates if possible.

D. W. GRIFFITH'S 8th WONDER OF THE WORLD

2nd STUPENDOUS MONTH

5,000 SCENES

THE BIRTH OF A NATION

18,000 PEOPLE

3,000 HORSES

THE PLAY THAT WOKE CHICAGO UP

Cities built up and then destroyed by fire.

The biggest battle of the Civil War re-enacted.

Ford's Theatre, Washington, reproduced to the smallest detail for the Lincoln tragedy.

COST $500,000.00

A series of wild rides that commandeered a county for a day and cost $10,000.

Night photography of battle scenes, invented and perfected at a cost of $12,000.

Wonderful artillery duels in which real shells—costing $80 apiece—were used.

Miles of trenches—thousands of fighters—"War as it actually is."

A Musical Score of 50 pieces, synchronized to the several thousand distinct and individual scenes.

HIGHLY IMPORTANT: "The Birth of a Nation" Will Never Be Presented at Any but the Highest Class Theatres and at Prices Customarily Charged in Such Playhouses.
D. W. GRIFFITH.

Herald July 19

52

Jitney Jim Discovers Why Tall Matinee Idols Will Not Do in the Movies of Today

By GENE MORGAN.

OH, JITNEY, this lets you out of it,' giggled Myrtle, the lovely box office girl. She rustled a newspaper inside the ticket cage and Jitney Jim moved his lanky, elongated form toward the scene of mirth.

"This lets you out," chuckled Myrtle some more. "Here in the paper it says that only short actors are wanted in the movies. Tall fellahs ain't in demand. Now you'll never be a star."

Jitney Jim, the champion movie fan, failed to look disappointed.

"Why don't you spring something new?" he said. "Something new that makes my hair stand on the left root—something that wasn't printed in last year's almanac? Of course, I know that sawed-off actors are kings in the movies. I had the anti-giant act read to me several months ago. They wouldn't hire me as an extra man, at three bucks per sometimes, because I was too tall. But, then, I'm sort of like a snake. Every spring I shed a new skin of disappointment and go merrily rattling along.

"When I lost that job I wanted to sue the city. What for? Why, for building the sidewalk so far away from my chin."

Myrtle was puzzled to know the prejudice that movie directors had against tall men.

"No prejudice 't all," declared Jitney Jim. "There's a sound reason why the high guys are a drug on the market and the short guys now come high. And it isn't because the big actors are able to pound the stage director to a pulp when he calls 'em boob, half-wit, solid ivory, nobody home and empty cars on the train of thought. Nor is it because the short actor will take a lot of panning, especially when there are tourists and visitors around, and the boss likes to show he is boss and present some $2,000-a-week star with his walking papers draped neatly in a can.

"Such is not the case.

"Tall men don't fit into the movies as well as sawed-offers, it seems. In fiction and romance and drama a hero is always supposed to be tall. He must be stalwart and handsome, and he must measure at least six feet in his lilac-hued stocking feet.

"But that was the day before the close-up, Mrytle dear. Haven't you ever heard of a close-up? How many photoplays you wrote have been sent back with thanks? A close-up is the scene where the characters are brought close to the camera, and you can study their features and the lines under their eyes. Close-ups come thick and often in modern films, because it's the best way to 'register' love, hate, jealousy—in fact, the whole suitcase of human emotions.

"Now, a tall actor has his troubles fitting into a close-up. He finds it harder than fitting into a large, roomy room with a southern exposure in a summer hotel—the kind of a room which makes you feel like a boob sandwich because the floor and the ceiling are so close to one another.

"The tall man doesn't belong in a close-up. He doesn't belong in it any more than he belongs in his kid brother's clothes. His head is so high that the camera can't get close enough.

"But with the short actor it's entirely different. He is the close-up kid.

"Still, there will be a lot of drawbacks if the movies are snapped up by the short actors and five-foot heroes rule the close-up roost. Think of the illusions that will be shattered when the dear girls get a look at the real J. Warren Huntingham on the street! They'll take one once-over at the famous movie star and then cry, 'My gracious, what a little shrimp! I thought he was a hero, and here he isn't waist-high to a roller skate!'"

Myrtle cut in on the circuit at this point. She allowed that little men could be just as brave as big men, and coldly suggested that Jitney look at Napoleon, for instance.

"Yes, it's a pity about Napoleon," admitted Jitney Jim. "Fate was cruel to send him on earth in the days of baseball league warfare. Why wasn't he held in reserve until the era of the movies? Think what D. W. Griffith could do with an actor like that. Instead, when Griff wants to produce the battle of Waterloo he's got to hire an ex-jockey or somebody to command the troops."

Instruction for the Amateur Photoplaywright

By Louella Parsons

LIGHTS and shades—all there is to photography—have reached an unbelievable period of progress in these later years of picture development.

Expert camera men are now as essential to the success of motion pictures as the actor or producer.

The Essanay Film Company, in addition to employing a corps of expert camera men, has Harry Zeck in charge of all its men. Mr. Zeck is an inventor and is largely responsible for the excellent photography that has marked all the recent Essanay productions. Different shaped masking discs have been designed by Mr. Zeck for the purpose of presenting in every conceivable shape a dissolve or vision.

A dissolve is the gradual appearance or disappearance of a character by means of double exposure. Where there is a series of the same person appearing simultaneously this is done by a number of exposures made at different times to complete the picture.

The double appearance on the screen of Francis Bushman or King Baggott has filled the spectator with awe and sent thousands of inquiries to the motion picture editor as to how this can be accomplished.

The photoplay writer is especially anxious to know how the wizard of a camera produces this double exposure—this dual personality.

One side of the camera is masked and one side exposed. The action is photographed on the exposed side. Then the film is rewound and the side that has been exposed is masked and the masked side exposed. The different action of the same character is then filmed on the reverse side. This all sounds complicated, but it is very simple. Only last month Universal released "The Corsican Brothers," with King Baggott playing the role of both brothers. The same system of masking was undoubtedly used in this well-produced picture.

Dreams and visions are always of great interest to the photoplaywright.

In photographing a dream or vision scene the film has to be marked at the aperture opening in front of the camera, so that when the film is rewound and the second exposure is made on the same film scene the holes or perforations register in the same place in the aperture. If this is not done the two pictures will not be simultaneous on the screen.

In explaining the vision scene, for example, where a woman sees the vision of her dead father, the picture is taken from beginning to end. Note is made just when the dead father appears. This is done by means of a dial which records the number of feet exposed, and at the same time the length of time in feet (one foot to the second) that she saw the dead father. The film is then rewound.

The camera is reloaded, making sure that the marked aperture on the film is in the proper place. The film is turned to the beginning, with the lens masked to the place where the vision is recorded in feet. The vision is faded in, the film timed and dissolved out. The lens is then masked again and the rest of the scene taken.

Close-ups are photographed at close range—they are used as effective means of expressing emotion.

The working line averages six feet or less in width, so that when one sees how small is the place in which the action is photographed he is astonished at the splendid effect of depth that the camera man gets.

In the battle scene of "The Birth of a Nation" David Griffith takes a scene such a distance away that his direction is communicated by the aid of a system of telephones placed at intervals. He has a number of aids provided at the telephones to carry the direction to the actors.

NEGRO EDITOR FINED $100 ON A CHARGE OF LIBEL

Julius F. Taylor of Broad Ax Tried After Nineteen Judges Are Objected To.

Julius F. Taylor, editor of the Broad Ax, a negro publication, was fined $100 and costs yesterday afternoon when arraigned before Judge H. C. Moran in the Municipal Court on a charge of libel.

Nineteen judges of the Municipal Court were objected to by Taylor before the case was heard.

The charge arose out of an article printed in the Broad Ax in which Taylor accused the Rev. Archibald James Carey and Thomas Wallace Swann.

Both are members of the commission appointed in 1913 by Governor Dunne to take charge of the Half-Century Anniversary Exposition, to be held in Chicago Aug. 22 to Sept. 16. Mr. Swann is secretary of the commission and appeared as prosecuting witness against Taylor.

Herald 7-18

Examiner 7-12

AMUSEMENTS.

ILLINOIS THEATRE
TWICE DAILY
(INCLUDING SUNDAYS)

$1.00 AND $2.00 MAT. TODAY. OTHER MATINEES ORCHESTRA, $1; BALCONY, 50c, 75c, $1. 1st BALCONY, 50c, 75c, $1. 2nd BALCONY, 25c & 50c. MATINEES, 2:15. NIGHTS, 8:15

1,000 HORSES

D. W. GRIFFITH'S Gigantic Spectacle

The Birth of a Nation

18,000 PEOPLE

ORCHESTRA OF 50—COST $500,000.00
SEATS SELLING 4 WEEKS AHEAD

ILLINOIS—THEATER—
TWICE DAILY
(Including SUNDAYS)
EVS. & SAT. MAT. TODAY. OTHER MATINEES ORCHESTRA, $1; BALCONY, 50c, 75c, $1. 1st Balcony, 50c & $1. 2nd Balcony, 25c & 50c. MATINEES, 2:15. NIGHTS, 8:15

1,000 HORSES

D. W. GRIFFITH'S Gigantic Spectacle

The Birth of a Nation

18,000 PEOPLE

ORCHESTRA OF 50—COST $500,000.00
SEATS SELLING 4 WEEKS AHEAD

P. Mail 7-12

Tribune 7-11

Poe on Screen, Walthall's Ambition.

SEVERAL months ago when the Essanay company discovered it was about to be shorn of its yum-yum hero, it became vurr' busy and now is purring like a sixty horse power pussy cat over the acquisition of an actor who is, at the same time, a regular man. Mr. Henry B. Walthall, at your service. He of "The Birth of a Nation," "The Avenging Conscience," "Ghosts," and other memorable films. Having adored him on the screen I found myself possessed with an insatiable desire to know him off it. I took it for granted that you'd be curious, too. Thuffur—this interview.

It's a sad but true fact that with many film favorites—once on the screen is to be always made up. Working or idling, they are, nevertheless, constantly intent on "registering." I wondered how it would be with Mr. Walthall as I sat waiting for his appearance in the pleasant office of the studio. Would he, as another had done before him, grasp me by both hands, peer into my eyes, and exclaim low and huskily:

"Ah, at last—I have found you! Those eyes! And you have come. Here—where am I? Ah-h-h, fate—were—kind!" Would he? I hoped and prayed not, for one such experience is quite as much enough as is one operation for appendicitis. The fact that Mr. Walthall was late worried me a little. Was he timing his entrance? Would he be heralded and announced and presented with acclaim? On the contrary——

He entered the room quite unostentatiously—a slender, brown eyed, black haired man of medium height, and stood for a moment, hesitating. Just then my companion spied him and rushed to the rescue. Mr. Walthall went through with introductions pleasantly and sat down opposite me.

"I suppose," he said, "they've been telling you things about me—that I had probably wandered away and got lost? You know I did that a couple of times—not being accustomed to the city. Now, though, I think I have my sense of directions adjusted. The reason I'm late is that the thunderstorm kept me awake last night—you see, having lived in California, I haven't seen any lightning for a long time—and I couldn't miss the chance of watching it. Result—late to arise. Then on my way over I happened to think how good a cup of coffee would taste, and so——" He paused, and his sunshiny smile was the winning smile of the screen. I smiled back.

"I'm mighty glad you had it," I said. "Otherwise I'd probably be engaged in placating a bear—that is, if you're a bit like I am before my morning coffee."

"I—just—am!" my interviewee said, with conviction. "I surely—just—am!" (You see, we had something in common right from the start—the rest was easy.)

To begin with I hold him quite frankly that I admired his work.

"Why?" he asked, and in the same breath, "Well, you see, I like it. I'd much rather be working than doing anything else. I never take vacations—that is, not regular ones. I'm always within range of the camera, as it were."

In answer to his "why" I proceeded:

"You never seem in the least conscious that your picture's being taken. Probably you are—but you don't seem to be. I should think it would give a person the willies to know that one's expressions and emotions were being ground out so much to foot!"

Said Mr. Walthall: "I was afraid the camera would fuss me when I first started in, but, strange as it may seem, I no sooner get into the spirit of a scene than I forget its presence, and, on the other hand, have to be watched carefully in order that I don't play over the lines. That's my great trouble, Miss Tinee," and he looked at me with a little frown as though this were a vurr' great trouble indeed. I couldn't see it, however, and spoke with enthusiasm regarding his perfect work in "The Avenging Conscience."

"Well," he told me, "I was completely absorbed in that. After the scene where I'm tortured by the detective—you remember?—I was all in—absolutely incapable of doing another bit of work for the day. Mr. Griffith himself was so affected that he had to walk away. He said he couldn't bear it. I'm fond of playing parts of the kind, but they're wearing." Again there was the little frown and the look of absorption.

I said thoughtfully: "Did you ever play the part of a man who goes slowly mad? I should think——" He interrupted me eagerly. "Yes, in 'The House with the Closed Shutters' I had a part like that. A man supposed to have been killed in the army in reality deserted, and his family kept him incarcerated for years, during which he slowly lost his mind. That was a grewsome part, but interesting. Vagaries of the mind provide marvelous and illimitable material for picture work. The desire of my life—I don't know that this is the time and place to divulge it—but the desire of my life is to put the life of Poe into pictures. He, of course, did not go mad, but his life was a strange, feverish mixture of red dreams and weird realities. Yes, I want to play Poe. A play has been written around it and is in my possession. I alone have been given the right to screen it. I hope they'll let me do it here!"

"They'll probably let you do anything you want to," I hazarded, and we both said we hoped so. Gradually, then, the conversation drifted. We discussed "The Birth of a Nation," which Mr. Walthall thinks is a great picture—but not so great as "The Avenging Conscience." He had seen the complete picture for the first time the night before. Imagine! A great many scenes, he says, have fallen under the scissors—scenes that would have had greatly to do with enlivening the production.

He said, laughing, "Opposition was expected—and to some extent courted. Publicity, you know. But in this town the wind reaped the whirlwind with a vengeance—didn't it?"

Recalling the chilled and lonely Illinois theater during the weeks of parley between mayor, censors, producers, and representatives of the various races, I agreed. Then—with frequent boosts from me—Mr. Walthall told about how he came to "go into" pictures. He doesn't like talking about himself a bit—that's a fact—and so whole heartedly evasive was he that I had to keep prodding him on pretty constantly.

He was born and spent twenty-two years on a plantation in Alabama. Then the spark that was in him struck fire and he went on the stage. Purely by accident he chanced to visit the Biograph studio one day. D. W. Griffith was directing a picture. Spotting Mr. Walthall, whom he had seen on the stage, Mr. Griffith asked him how he'd like to be screened for the summer. Having nothing else to do, the former said he didn't mind trying. So he went to work, his first picture being "The Convict's Sacrifice."

"I reckon, though, you said to yourself, 'Can it be possible I have come to this?'" I conjectured. "That's the way the 'legitimates' used to feel, you know."

He shook his head. "Far from that—I saw the possibilities from the start," he told me. "I went back to the stage for a time, but it had lost its charm. So again, in response to an invitation, I sought out Mr. Griffith—and, well—here I am—and glad to be here." His heart warming smile flashed across eyes and mouth.

"Well," I said, "I'm glad, too. We're all glad." I rose to go—hesitated. There was something, fans, I must ask him—for you. How would he take it? Bravely I took the plunge.

"Are you married, Mr. Walthall?"

"Yes, indeed," replied this remarkable man. I stag-gag-gered backward.

"Am those two words for publication?" I gasped. And with surprise writ in every tone of his voice, Mr. Walthall rejoined:

"Why, yes. Why not?"

Well—why not?

MAYOR AROUSES IRE OF NEGROES

Appointment of Pastor to Law Department Arouses Factional Feeling.

Factional feeling among Chicago's negro voters, who made possible Mayor Thompson's election by casting the vote which nominated him at the primaries, was stirred up yesterday when the Mayor announced the appointment of the Rev. A. J. Carey, negro pastor of the Institutional Church, to a $2,000 a year job as investigator in the City Law Department.

Carey was not endorsed by the Second Ward Republican organization. He belongs to the Ettelson faction in the ward and has the enmity of the opposed negro faction. He was also accused of aiding the Democrats, as he was appointed a member of the moving picture censor board by former Mayor Harrison.

In his new job Carey will have charge of six or seven claim investigators, who are white men.

Negroes swarmed in the City Hall most of the day. Some protested audibly against the appointment of Carey.

Vacancies in quota of assistant prosecuting attorneys also were filled by the Mayor, Daniel Webster, 3718 Webster avenue, was made chief assistant prosecutor at a salary of $3,250. Roger Faherty, 2735 Pine Grove avenue, a son of M. J. Faherty, president of the Board of Local Improvements, drew a $2,700 job. Lawrence B. Jacobs, a former assistant U. S. District Attorney, was given a $2,400 position. Charles Roloff, 2000 South California avenue, Adolph Borgmeier, 1522 North Oakley boulevard; Ben Brown, 114 East Oak street; Stanley Klarkowski, 1922 Evergreen avenue; John Richardson, 3119 Calumet avenue, and Francis C. Day, 1436 West Monroe street, drew $2,000 jobs. L. P. Piquett, 44 East Chicago avenue, was named as chief clerk, at a salary of $2,000.

Louis B. Anderson, 2821 South Wabash avenue, a negro, was given a $3,000 job as an assistant corporation counsel.

A few days ago the Mayor appointed William G. Gregori, a brother-in-law of William Lorimer, as third assistant superintendent of streets.

The Mayor announced during the day that he would not make any appointments to the School Board until Fall. Terms of seven board members will expire July 22, but the Mayor said he wanted to wait until a Senate committee has finished its inquiry into School Board expenditures before he reappoints any of the old members or fill their places with new ones.

Examiner 7-12 Journal 7-13

The makers of motion pictures threaten to enter the "legitimate" producing field on a wholesale scale, according to a story told by Rennold Wolf in the New York Telegraph. He tells that three of the biggest and most prosperous of the picture firms are about to combine, and that they have plans for producing plays as rapidly as they can unearth them. They figure that, even if a play fail, it still will be valuable for filming, the idea apparently being that failure in the theater is not inhibitory to success in the optitoria. The idea would appear to be sound; at least an abundance of photographic trash finds a ready market. Since "The Birth of a Nation" came to the Illinois this public has thoroughly revised its opinion as to what constitutes good motion pictures. If many of the "features" which are sold at a dime are worth the price charged for them, then "The Birth of a Nation" is worth several times the $1 and $2 charged for it. There is more interest in 1,000 feet of that great picture than in 1,000 miles of ordinary film.

Another newly discussed scheme for combining theatrical and motion picture production moves Wolf to write so:

"That the playwright will shortly be the most important factor in the motion picture situation, and that the field of the regular stage producers is soon to be invaded by the motion picture men, now seems an assured fact. The writer knows of an offer, recently made by a reputable moving picture company to a theatrical manager of prominence, stipulating that the former would pay the cost of the stage production of any play which the theatrical manager wished to place upon the stage, in return for the motion picture rights. In other words, according to this proposition, a regular theatrical manager may induce a motion picture firm to pay the cost of stage production by merely assigning to the latter the film rights—that is, he may produce a film play without any initial risk."

Tribune 7-16

In Again; Out Again.

"The Birth of a Nation" had some more of its chronic court experience yesterday afternoon when the appeal for its dispersal was presented before Judge William Fennimore Cooper. The case was not decided, however, and the Appellate court adjourns on Saturday, not to be reconvened until October, in the meantime of which the picture may go on unreeling with no legal restraint so long as it violates no ordinances. A number of negroes were present at the hearing.

It isn't often that a younger sister's fame reflects a favoring light upon that of an elder, but so it does in the Marsh family. That is the reason Marguerite Loveridge is going to revert to her original name, Marguerite Marsh. She is the elder sister of the gifted Mae Marsh, who has achieved so many noteworthy successes, the latest being Flora Cameron in "The Birth of a Nation."

Herald 7-16

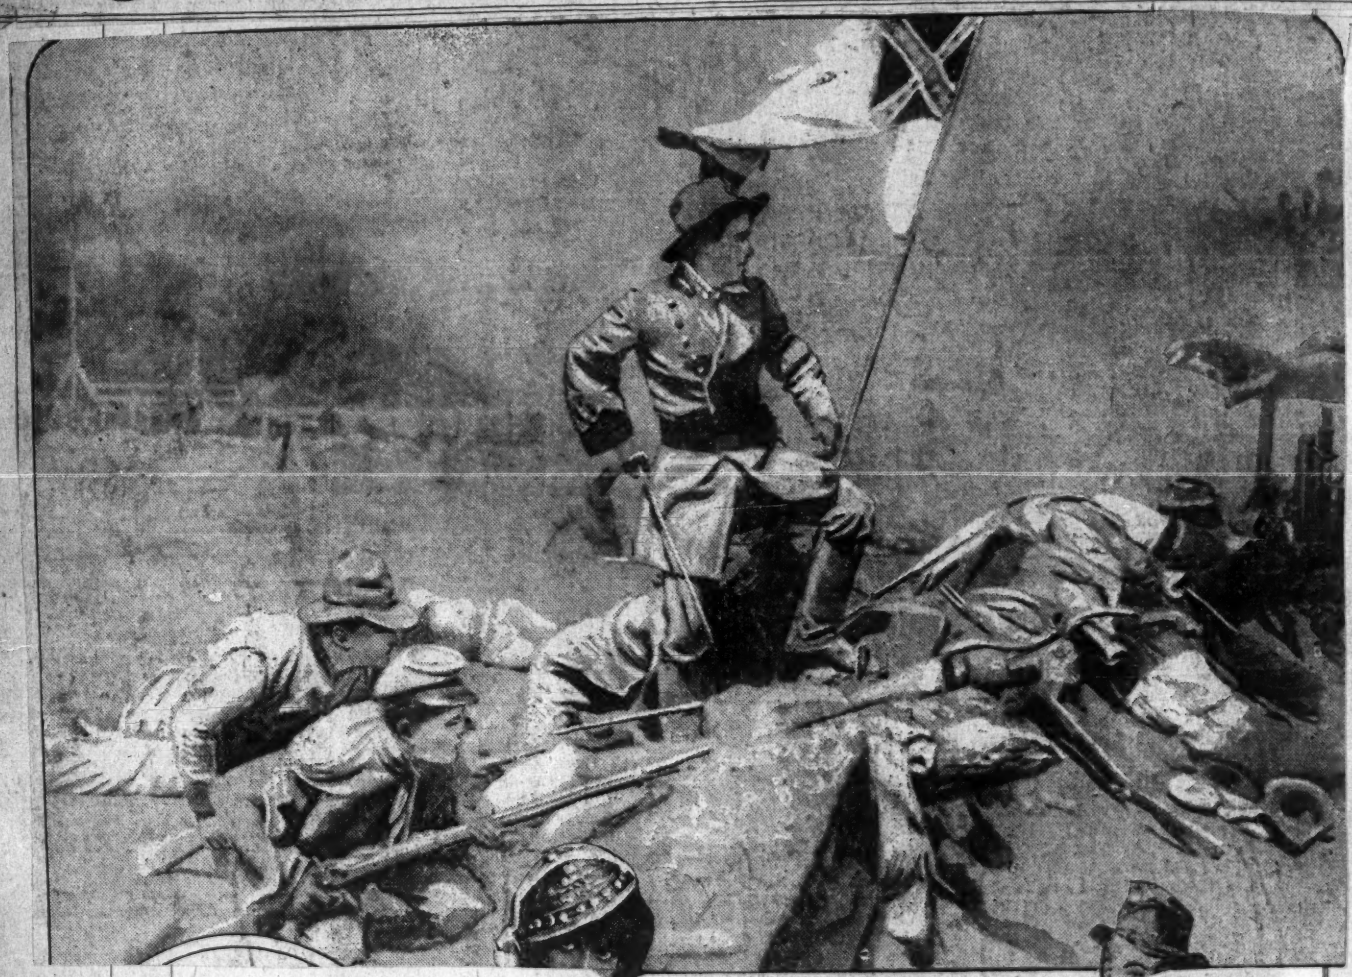
Who says the "movies" are not here to stay? The LaSalle, the Illinois, the Studebaker, the Colonial, the Fine Arts, Orchestra Hall and the Ziegfeld are all devoted exclusively to the motion pictures. The rumor of another loop theater turning filmward makes it seem as if the popularity of the silent drama is increasing with greater strides than ever before.

The "legitimate" would rather not acknowledge the hold that pictures have upon the amusement-loving public, even though many of the erstwhile theatrical magnates are coming into the fold, "still, truth is mighty and will prevail!" The picture houses are crowded every night and each day sees greater and bigger things loom up in the celluloid horizon. Surely this is the day of the "movies."

54

Sunday July 11

The Morning Telegraph



AT THE CREST OF A CHARGE IN "THE BIRTH OF A NATION" LIBERTY THEATRE

Pic. ad 7-14

ILLINOIS THEATER

TWICE DAILY (INCLUDING SUNDAYS)

EV'GS AND SAT. MAT. ORCHESTRA..$1 & $2 1st BALCONY 50c-75c-$1 2nd BALCONY 25c & 50c

OTHER MATINEES ORCHESTRA..50c & $1 1st BALCONY..50c & $1 2nd BALCONY.....25c

MATINEES 2:15—NIGHTS 8:10

D. W. GRIFFITH'S Gigantic Spectacle

The Birth of a Nation

18,000 PEOPLE

3,000 HORSES

ORCHESTRA OF 50—COST $500,000.00

SEATS SELLING 4 WEEKS AHEAD

American 7-14

J. J. McCarthy, who has been in Chicago in connection with his production of Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation" at the Illinois Theater, departed for the East yesterday to make final arrangements for the Atlantic City opening.

* * *

Herald 7-15

Notes From the Screen

The final details of the $500,000 corporation organized by David Griffith, Mack Sennet and Tom Ince were revealed yesterday by J. J. McCarthy, general manager of the Epoch Producing Company. This is the organization under which "The Birth of a Nation" was produced.

The information was given out by Mr. McCarthy during a flying visit to Chicago. The first play under the Griffith-Sennet-Ince auspices will be released in September, according to Mr. McCarthy. De Wolf Hopper will be star, and his dramatic vehicle will be one of the three now being completed. They are "Wang," "Don Quixote" and "David Copperfield."

Raymond Hitchcock will play the lead in the first Keystone comedy to supplement the first production. The new offering of drama and comedy will be presented exclusively in a chain of high-class theaters which will have been established in the leading cities by the time the first picture is ready for release.

* * *

Journal 7/17

"The Birth of a Nation"

"The Birth of a Nation" nears the end of its second great month at the Illinois theater, and still scores new achievements in record-breaking attendance. From all indications it will be rated eventually as the one big smashing success of the theatrical year in Chicago from the financial as well as the spectacular and artistic points of view. Patriotic outbursts at the showing of the Griffith masterpiece are significant of the temper of the American people at this time. "The Birth of a Nation" serves to bring back Americans to the bedrock of freedom's ideals and reaffirms the patriotic devotion of a great united nation.

American 7-17

"Birth of a Nation" Prosecuted by City

Final papers of the appeal granted the city in its prosecution of the promoters of the "Birth of a Nation" motion picture, for failure to submit the film to the board of censors, were signed before Judge William Fenimore Cooper to-day. Assistant Corporation Counsel Louis B. Anderson and George L. Reker obtained the papers.

Post 7-17

Illinois—"The Birth of a Nation" nears the completion of its second stupendous month at the Illinois Theater, and still scores new surplus achievements in record-breaking attendance figures. From all indications it will be rated eventually as the one big smashing success of the theatrical year in Chicago from the financial as well as the spectacular and artistic point of view. Two performances are given daily. A large orchestra of superior caliber and numerous realistic effects are adjuncts of the production.

* * *

P. Mail 7-17

ILLINOIS THEATRE

TWICE DAILY (INCLUDING SUNDAYS)

EV'GS & SAT. MAT. Orchestra.....$1 & $2 1st Balc'y. 50c 75c & $1 2d Balcony..25c & 50c

OTHER MATINEES Orchestra.....50c & $1 1st Balcony....50c & $1 2d Balcony.....25c

MATINEES 2:15—NIGHTS 8:10

D. W. GRIFFITH'S Gigantic Spectacle

THE BIRTH OF A NATION

18,000 PEOPLE

3,000 HORSES

ORCHESTRA OF 50—COST $500,000.00

SEATS SELLING 4 WEEKS AHEAD

AMERICAN, JULY 17, 1915.

"The Birth of a Nation" Is Hit of Summer

ILLINOIS.

"The Birth of a Nation" nears the completion of its second stupendous month at the Illinois Theater, and still scores new surplus achievements in record-breaking attendance figures. From indications it will be rated eventually as the one big smashing success of the theatrical year in Chicago from the financial as well as the spectacular and artistic points of view.

Patriotic outbursts evoked at every performance of the D. W. Griffith masterpiece are significant of the temper of the American people at this time. "The Birth of a Nation" more than any thing else serves to bring back Americans to the bedrock of freedom's ideals and the patriotic devotion of a great united nation.

Two performances of "The Birth of a Nation," visualizing the greatest crisis in American history, humanized by a charming love story, are given daily. A large orchestra of superior caliber and numerous realistic effects are adjuncts of the production.

ONE ON THE AISLE

CONCERNING THINGS — BY — W. W. Dunkle — THEATRICAL—MOSTLY

R 101 ORCHESTRA OPERA HOUSE 73 Return Mail Check

This is not a press notice as that term is frequently used. It's our personal opinion of the greatest motion picture we ever saw. We paid real money to see it, so did our friends, and so has every one else that we know of who has seen it. That's mentioned to dispel the idea that we mighta been handed a coupla ducats to say a good word when we got back home. Besides, we've had morna week to cool off and we disclaim any insinuation that we're still unduly excited.

We're talking about "The Birth of a Nation," founded on Thomas Dixon's "The Clansman," produced by D. W. Grimith, and now showing in Chicago. Never mind the theater; you can find it if you wanta. At the performance we attended there were more tears, more applause, more cheers and a bigger crowd at regular $2 prices than any dramatic show we saw last season. And we attended over 100. How many? Well, five or six, anyway.

This isn't an atteinpt to criticize or even describe the picture. Historically it is magnificent; it is a great, true, artistic photograph of the crisis of the civil war. Educationally it excels our best war records and it's lots easier to take.

There are bits which reminded us of "Cabiria," such as the silhouette of the Ku Klux Klan crossing the brow of the hill in the moonlight, as the camels did in the other picture. There is a fist fight which overshadows the man-to-man scrap in "The Spoilers." There are correct reproductions of historical scenes like Lee's surrender and the assassination of Lincoln. Never before, on canvas, by photography, or by literature, has the great struggle of the civil war been so graphically pictured. We had always remembered the panorama of "The Battle of Gettysburg," as a wonderful war painting. It pales to insignificance beside this latter achievement.

The burning of Atlanta, Sherman's march to the sea, and the downfall of Petersburg, impressive and stirring scenes, are instances of the clever use of photography. Time and time again the action in the big scenes stretches away in the distance as far as the eye can reach; again two parallel lines of fighters move slowly across the line of vision; again there are close-up views in the trenches that are shocking in realism. The advertised thousands must have been employed, for many times the horses and men cover the screen in the battle scenes and the action depicted must cover miles of ground.

The first half unfolds, without a break, or a division into parts, for one hour and 40 minutes. Then there is a six minute intermission. The second half is devoted to the conflict between the whites and the Negroes in the reconstruction period of the south. It is a strong combination of spectacle and story. The plot grips. The actors are real. The action is strong and stirring. There is a cleverly worked up quadruple climax. The whites are besieged by the Negroes. The Ku Klux are gathering. The actions flash back and forth from the galloping Klans to the street fighting. Then comes the rescue and the disarming of the blacks. Then follows the allegorical scenes decrying war, pleading for peace.

The tension relieved you stumble out into the light of the street, subdued, amazed, impressed. The quaintly dressed little colonial maid, with ringlet-framed face, who ushered you in, smiles at you sweetly and sympathetically. The confederate-uniformed door man directs you the the street. Strains from the 50-piece orchestra can still be heard. The trumpet calls and the crash of battle is still in your ears. Your mind is filled with the thousands of impressive scenes you've just witnessed.

By George! It's no wonder you—I mean we—come home and say it is a great picture!

How's this for nuthin'?

A. Mad 6-17

ILLINOIS THEATRE — TWICE DAILY (INCLUDING SUNDAYS)

EV'GS & SAT. MAT. Orchestra.....$1 & $2; 1st Bale'y, 50c, 75c & $1; 2nd Balcony..25c & 50c

OTHER MATINEES Orchestra.....50c & $1; 1st Balcony..50c & $1; 2nd Balcony.....25c

MATINEES 2:15—NIGHTS, 8:10

D.W. GRIFFITH'S Gigantic Spectacle

THE BIRTH OF A NATION

18,000 PEOPLE — 3,000 HORSES

ORCHESTRA OF 50—COST $500,000.00

SEATS SELLING 4 WEEKS AHEAD

Tribune 7-18

THE

GIRL DIVER GIVES CROWD A THRILL BY BRIDGE JUMP

Gallant Rescue Foiled When She Floats About Like a Cork.

A pretty 18 year old girl climbed to the railing on the Clark street bridge, poised there for a moment, and then, as a policeman reached out a pair of frantic arms to seize her, jumped deliberately into the river. Men gasped, women screamed, and the officer threw aside his coat to leap to the rescue.

But he did not leap. For the pretty girl came to the surface and, floating with all the buoyancy of the proverbial cork, proceeded calmly to disrobe.

Whole Crowd on Edge.

To put it mildly, the policeman was flabbergasted, as was the crowd which had gathered along the railing. A pretty girl disrobing in a river is not a usual sight, even in Chicago.

Suddenly a number of discoveries were made almost simultaneously. The girl was wearing a bathing suit and a new style life preserver under her clothing.

Ho! the Secret's Out.

A man in a checked suit informed the policeman that she was Miss Gertrude Agemar, usher at the Illinois theater, and that she was demonstrating the efficacy of the preserver. Then there appeared a number of young men, also wearing life preservers, who jumped into the river and cavorted for the benefit of the crowd.

Interest, however, centered about the girl until she was hurried away in an automobile to return to her duties at the theater. The young men remained on exhibition for a longer time, but the crowd thinned appreciably with the departure of Miss Agemar.

All in all, it was a most commonplace ending for an incident which appeared fraught with great possibilities.

Exam. 7-15

Chicag

55

TURN OF THE REEL

BY JAMES WARREN CURRIE.

[redacted] Hopper in one of three productions, Cervantes' "Don Quixote," Reginald De Koven's "Wang," or Charles Dickens' "David Copperfield," will lead the first line of battle for the Griffith-Ince-Sennett forces in their battle for a $2 moving picture program which will clash with the stage for the patronage of amusement seekers.

J. J. McCarthy, general manager of the Epoch Producing Corporation, which is the name of the combine behind "The Birth of a Nation," stated yesterday that the first picture would be released in September, about the time that all the theaters come out of darkness. All of the three productions mentioned are being made under the direction of the three men. It is a question of chooce. One of the three plays will be used.

HITCHCOCK IN COMEDY.

Raymond Hitchcock will supplement De Wolf Hopper in the first comedy release of the corporation, which will be shown on the same program with the headliner. The programs of the company will be shown exclusively in a chain of first-class theaters, which have been established in all the leading cities, including New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, Boston, Cleveland, Cincinnati, St. Louis and Washington.

Each program will contain a master drama picture, a master comedy picture, the first of the regulation six-reel length or thereabouts, the latter from two to four reels. These will be supplemented by other pictures of the same quality, which because of their shortness or some other quality will take a minor place on the bill. The whole program, as it is planned, will take from three to four hours to show. This includes the intermission. The length of the bill will vary little from time to time.

A standard of $2 for the best seats will be maintained in all the theaters in the system controlled by the Griffith-Ince-Sennett interests.

OFFERED MUCH CAPITAL.

McCarthy in a statement regarding the attitude of the money powers of Wall street toward the moving picture as an investment said:

"The Griffith-Ince-Sennett interests were offered unlimited capital in the most solid banking and brokerage circles in the United States. The corporation now is a multi-million dollar one, but a capitalization of millions more might have been established had any one of the trio said the word. The reputation and the records of these three, and especially the financial success of 'The Birth of a Nation,' convinced the magnates, who, after a searching investigation of its costs, returns and prospects, announced themselves ready to put capital in any like enterprise.

"This picture of David Wark Griffith's was the last proof needed in financial circles. Time after time when they had announced their new project they were offered anything they wanted in any investment in moving pictures that the three would vouch for."

Among the first players who will be featured in the new corporation besides Hopper and Hitchcock are Henry Miller, Douglas Fairbanks and Nazimova. In the Sennett comedies will appear Weber, Fields and Eddie Foy.

• • •

De Wolf Hopper, whose advent on the screen will be the opening gun of the battle to establish $2 moving picture theaters in all the principal cities.

American 7-16

The first play released under the Griffith-Ince-Sennett $5,000,000 corporation is coming through in September, according to J. J. McCarthy, general manager of the Epoch Producing Company, which is behind the D. W. Griffith masterpiece, "The Birth of a Nation.' DeWolf Hopper will be the star. He will appear in "Don Quixote," "Wang" or "David Copperfield," which are now being completed.

Tribune 7-18

...ounces Film at Dedication.

...shop W. F. McDowell of Evanston, ...shop Isaiah B. Scott, missionary bishop of Africa, and the Rev. Charles Bayard Mitchell of St. James' church, preached yesterday at the dedication of St. Mark's Methodist Episcopal church, Fiftieth street and South Wabash avenue. An offering of $5,000 was contributed at the dedicatory exercises.

The church is the largest colored church of the Methodist Episcopal denomination in Chicago. Dr. Mitchell in his sermon denounced the film, "The Birth of the Nation," as being unjust in its delineation of negro character.

56

Tribune 7-15

14 *

FLICKERINGS from FILM LAND
by KITTY KELLY

Combine Plans Huge Chain of Playhouses

THIS Griffith-Ince-Sennett combine—which, by the way, is the informal label it wears until it gets properly christened with a proper sort of name—is making some brief announcements of its plans through J. J. McCarthy, who has been confabbing in the midst of the manipulative minds.

Early in September the first picture will appear, one of three containing De Wolf Hopper, either "Don Quixote," "David Copperfield," or "Wang," produced under the direction of D. W. Griffith.

A chain of first class theaters, dabbling in the $2 top price, will be stretched across the country in such places as New York, Chicago, Boson, Philadelphia, St. Louis, Washington, and so on, which will house these productions. It appears now to be the aim to have a weekly change of program consisting of some such production as the De Wolf Hopper one, a two reel Keystone comedy, and another five or six reeler, furnishing an evening's complete entertainment. Then, occasionally, there will be interpolations of big things akin to "The Birth of a Nation," which will run for a greater length of time.

The present big thing about the organization is that it has command of more capital than it can possibly desire. Kesel & Bauman, the financial department of the New York Motion Picture company, are allied with H. E. Aitkin in backing the project, and, furthermore, according to Mr. McCarhy, money is to be had from recognized financiers actually without the asking.

The financiers, solid ones of weight and reputation, are for the first time in the industry's history extending to it their assistance, duplicating their espousal of the automobile cause in its days of infancy.

Griffith's last production, "The Birth of a Nation," is now regarded as more than an artistic triumph. Mr. McCarthy says it is the thing that has converted Wall street to the influence of the cinema.

Other players announced to appear on the Griffith-Ince screen are Henry Miller, Douglas Fairbanks, and Nazimova, while Sennett's recruits for funland are Weber and Fields, Raymond Hitchcock, Eddie Foy, and Sam Bernard.

* *

At the Colonial.

Mary Pickford has her second loop engagement in "Little Pal" at the Colonial beginning today. "Marse Covington" is the other feature that completes the double bill.

Miss MIRIAM COOPER
"The BIRTH OF A NATION."

MISS MIRIAM COOPER, the elder southern sister, along with all the other celluloid shadows who have succeeded in putting across excellent imitations of reality to the S. R. O. crowds at the Illinois witnessing "The Birth of a Nation," is soon going to journey to London, where arrangements for showing the great picture are being made. Here in Chicago it is running near the end of its second month, but not near the end of its engagement. Yesterday afternoon, for instance, hot as it was, every seat in the house was occupied, and hundreds were turned away.

Herald 7-18

Birth of Nation Makes Record

"ATTENDANCE plus" is the twice-daily story of patronage at the Illinois Theater, where "The Birth of a Nation" nears the completion of its second month. The Griffith masterpiece probably will be rated as the one big smashing success of the theatrical year in Chicago, from the financial as well as art-spectacular point of view.

Patriotic outbursts evoked at every performance of "The Birth of a Nation" are significant of the temper of the American people at this time. Griffith's production more than anything else serves to return Americans to the bedrock of freedom's ideals and the patriotic devotion of a great united nation.

Everything has been said that can be said in description and praise of the Abraham Lincoln episodes in "The Birth of a Nation." Words fall far short of picturing the impressive, gripping realism of this dramatization of Lincoln.

Two performances of "The Birth of a Nation," visualizing the greatest crisis in American history, humanized by a charming love story, are given daily. A large orchestra and numerous realistic effects are adjuncts to the production.

Herald 7-19

"MOVIE FAN" OF 99 VIEWS SCENES OF 50 YEARS AGO

"Kid" Williams of Home for Old Men Sees War-Time Photoplay.

Marquis De Lafayette Williams, 99 years old, who was considered "too old" to fight in the civil war, so paid bounties to several men to join the colors, yesterday saw again the scenes of fifty years ago, when he attended "The Birth of a Nation" at the Illinois Theater. Mr. Williams lives at the James C. King Home for Old Men, 360 East Garfield boulevard, where he is affectionately called "Kid" Williams, because he is the oldest "movie fan" in the city.

Examiner 7-18

At 99, He Lives Life Anew at Movie Show

Marquis DeLafayette Williams, ninety-nine years old, saw the motion pictures of Griffith's "Birth of a Nation" yesterday at the Illinois Theater as the guest of the Chicago Examiner. Williams was accompanied by Mrs. H. S. Moore, wife of the superintendent of the James C. King Home for Old Men.

According to Williams the show was one of the treats of his life. He declared he lived a part of his early life over again. He recalled the election and assassination of Lincoln and told of his personal acquaintance with Grant and Sherman.

When the pictured body of Lincoln was removed from the theater box, Williams declared that he never realized till then what the tragedy meant.

Herald 7-18

ILLINOIS — David Griffith's great spectacular drama continues playing to capacity houses. The heat has had no effect on the popularity of "The Birth of a Nation." Great crowds continue to witness every performance. The greatest photoplay of the age is not too extravagant a term.

Herald 7-19

"Mutes and Movies"

The two met last week when George Bowles of the Illinois Theater invited a number of the delegates to the deaf and dumb convention to attend a performance of "The Birth of a Nation."

Previous to that time some one had remarked that this play's success was in a measure due to the musical score prepared for it. The music that accompanies this production is beautiful, but so impressive is the picture that Mr. Bowles has been of the opinion that, were the play presented without a word of song or music, it would still be the greatest dramatic spectacle of the day. The following letter is cited in proof of this contention:

"Dear Mr. Bowles: Please allow me in behalf of the delegation of the deaf en route to California to thank you for your courtesy and generosity expressed in the invitation to witness "The Birth of a Nation."

"I have been asked if I felt or heard the musical vibrations or if the deaf people in our party did. The sound waves can be felt by many of the deaf who are high strung or supersensitive, but the sound is not palpable. It is only so in the sense that one would instinctively become aware that another person was in the same room without warning sound.

"But music is not necessary to convey the thrill of the pictures. It is inconceivable that such wonderful scenes as the gathering of the Ku Klux Klan could be brought to such a state of realism."

The letter is signed by Mr. Hodgson, who is editor of the Deaf Mutes' Journal.

Journal 7-19

A $5,000,000 photo-play corporation, to be known as the Griffith-Ince-Sennett combination, has been organized, and plays therefrom will issue forthwith. The first play under the new auspices will be released in September. De Wolf Hopper will be the star, and his dramatic vehicle will be one of three productions now being completed. They are "Don Quixote," "Wang" and "David Copperfield." Raymond Hitchcock will be the leading player in the first Keystone comedy release, which will supplement the main production.

ILLINOIS THEATER | TWICE DAILY Including SUNDAYS
EV'GS & SAT. MAT. Orchestra....$1 & $2 1st Bale'y.50c,75c & $1 2d Balcony..25c & 50c
OTHER MATINEES Orchestra.....50c & $1 1st Balcony....50c & $1 2d Balcony.....25c
MATINEES 2:15—NIGHTS 8:10
D. W. GRIFFITH'S Gigantic Spectacle
The Birth of a Nation
18,000 PEOPLE
3,000 HORSES
ORCHESTRA OF 50—COST $500,000.00
SEATS SELLING 4 WEEKS AHEAD

Ex. 7-20

THE only press agent in Chicago who does not seek publicity is George Bowles. His show, "The Birth of a Nation," at the Illinois Theater, is selling out at practically every performance, and he is worrying not a bit.

* * *

Post 7-20

ILLINOIS THEATRE | TWICE DAILY (INCLUDING SUNDAYS)
EV'GS & SAT. MAT. Orchestra.....$1 & $2 1st Bale'y 50c 75c & $1 2d Balcony..25c & 50c
OTHER MATINEES Orchestra....50c & $1 1st Balconv....50c & $1 2d Balconv.....25c
MATINEES 2:15—NIGHTS 8:10
D. W. GRIFFITH'S Gigantic Spectacle
THE BIRTH OF A NATION
18,000 PEOPLE
3,000 HORSES
ORCHESTRA OF 50—COST $500,000.00
SEATS SELLING 4 WEEKS AHEAD

Tribune 7-21

ILLINOIS THEATER | TWICE DAILY Including SUNDAYS
EV'GS & SAT. MAT. Orchestra....$1 & $2 1st Bale'y..50c,75c & $1 2d Balcony..25c & 50c
OTHER MATINEES Orchestra.....50c & $1 1st Balcony....50c & $1 2d Balcony.....25c
MATINEES 2:15—NIGHTS 8:10
D. W. GRIFFITH'S Gigantic Spectacle
The Birth of a Nation
18,000 PEOPLE
3,000 HORSES
ORCHESTRA OF 50—COST $500,000.00
SEATS SELLING 4 WEEKS AHEAD

Tribune 7-24

"Big Three" in Triangle Film.

New York, July 20.—[Special.]—The Triangle Film corporation was formed today with a capital of $5,000,000 in La Junta, Col., when David W. Griffith, Thomas H. Ince, anad Mack Sennett went from Los Angeles to La Junta and there met Harry E. Aitken, Adam and Charles Kessel, and Charles Baumann, who had gone from New York. Mr. Aitken, formerly president of the Mutual Film company, was chosen as head of the new company.

* *

Herald 7-21

* * *

Ralph Lewis, who plays Stoneman in "The Birth of a Nation," is said to be one of the most versatile actors in the business. "The Wolf Man" and "The Mountain Girl" are recent Mutual releases in which Mr. Lewis has starred.

* * *

ILLINOIS THEATRE | TWICE DAILY (INCLUDING SUNDAYS)
EV'GS & SAT. MAT. Orchestra.....$1 & $2 1st Bale'y..50c, 75c & $1 2d Balcony....25c & 50c
OTHER MATINEES Orchestra.....50c & $1 1st Balcony.....50c & $1 2d Balcony.....25c
MATINEES 2:15—NIGHTS 8:10
D. W. GRIFFITH'S Gigantic Spectacle
THE BIRTH OF A NATION
18,000 PEOPLE
3,000 HORSES
ORCHESTRA OF 50—COST $500,000.00
SEATS SELLING 4 WEEKS AHEAD

Herald 7-19

ILLINOIS THEATRE | TWICE DAILY (INCLUDING SUNDAYS)
EV'GS & SAT. MAT. Orchestra.....$1 & $2 1st Bale'y..50c, 75c & $1 2d Balcony....25c & 50c
OTHER MATINEES Orchestra.....50c & $1 1st Balcony.....50c & $1 2d Balcony.....25c
MATINEES 2:15—NIGHTS 8:10
D. W. GRIFFITH'S Gigantic Spectacle
THE BIRTH OF A NATION
18,000 PEOPLE
3,000 HORSES
ORCHESTRA OF 50—COST $500,000.00
SEATS SELLING 4 WEEKS AHEAD

Sunday Oct 7 - #18

Trans. 7-22

ILLINOIS THEATRE

TWICE DAILY
(INCLUDING SUNDAYS)
AFTERNOONS AT 2:15
EVENINGS AT 8:10

EVENINGS AND SATURDAY MATS.
Orchestra ..... $1 and $2
First Balcony .50c, 75c and $1
Second Balcony ..25c and 50c

Seats Selling 4 Weeks in Advance
MAIL and TELEGRAPH requests accompanied by check will be filled in the order of their receipt. Patrons will aid us in accommodating them by naming two dates if possible.

OTHER MATINEES
Orchestra..50c and $1
Balcony....50c and $1
Second Balcony...25c

D. W. GRIFFITH'S 8th WONDER OF THE WORLD

2nd STUPENDOUS MONTH

IT WILL MAKE A BETTER AMERICAN OF YOU

5,000 SCENES

18,000 PEOPLE

THE BIRTH OF A NATION

Cities built up and then destroyed by fire.

The biggest battle of the Civil War re-enacted.

Ford's Theatre, Washington, reproduced to the smallest detail for the Lincoln tragedy.

COST $500,000.00

3,000 HORSES

A series of wild rides that commandeered a county for a day and cost $10,000.

Night photography of battle scenes, invented and perfected at a cost of $12,000.

Wonderful artillery duels in which real shells—costing $80 apiece—were used. Miles of trenches—thousands of fighters—"War as it actually is."

A Musical Score of 50 pieces, synchronized to the several thousand distinct and individual scenes.

HIGHLY IMPORTANT: "The Birth of a Nation" Will Never Be Presented at Any but the Highest Class Theatres and at Prices Customarily Charged in Such Playhouses.

D. W. GRIFFITH.

$2 ALL-YEAR MOVIES PLANNED

Moving pictures at $2 a seat are going to be shown in Chicago all the year round.

H. E. Aitken, president, and A. H. P. Banzhaf, secretary-treasurer of the Epoch Producing Company, the new $5,000,000 photoplay company backed by several Wall street men, will arrive here this morning to sign a long lease on a loop theater to house their productions.

The Colonial, Olympic and Studebaker have been mentioned in connection with the deal, which is a part of a general plan to establish a string of $2 movie houses in a dozen of the largest cities. Already leases have been taken on theaters in Boston, New York and Philadelphia.

There is every reason to believe that the Colonial will be the theater obtained by the new concern. George Bowles has been attending to the preliminary arrangements, and it is said that the only hitch in the negotiations between Bowles and Jones, Linick & Schaefer is the question as to who will spend the $5,000 necessary to renovate and redecorate the theater to bring it up to the standard fixed by Aitken and his associates.

Aitken and Banzhaf are coming from La Junta, Colo., where on Tuesday they met David Wark Griffiths, producer of "The Birth of a Nation." At that time contracts were signed by which Griffiths becomes the producing director of the new corporation. After the meeting he hurried back to Los Angeles, where he is directing the filming of another spectacle, which is said to be as good or better than "The Birth of a Nation."

Tribune Sunday July 6

By Percy Hammond.

NOW that summer is come it may be just as well to take stock of the resources available here for passing the sultry and idle hours away. Pilgrims from other ports depose that our riches in this respect are more abundant and more reputable than those elsewhere, running largely to al fresco affairs where music and the dance may be indulged in, vicariously and otherwise. Our indoor pleasures this season are few. By attending the Illinois we may view with disfavor the rough Union men mistreating the nice Rebels in that populous, spirited, and sentimental photograph, "The Birth of a Nation." At the Palace the naids of the New York Winter Garden disport themselves like the minor goddess in the poem, neither overdressed nor wholly bare; and at the Garrick the slim and agile Mr. Santley, in mellifluous song and story, puts additional bunkers on the fairway of the imperiled debutante, jeopardising virtue's bogey with hazards of curly hair and graceful waist line. Pretty music is to be heard in "The Lady in Red" at the Grand above the discords caused by the clashing temperaments of blonde tenor and brune prima donna; but there is naught else of importance since the movie fans have begun to surmise that Mr. Charles I. Chaplin is vulgar, thereby making suspect that eminent element in our life entomologic.

Tribune 7-22

FLICKERINGS from FILM LAND

by KITTY KELLY

Mr. Ince of Inceville; a Human Dynamo.

THE New Triangle Film corporation, triangling around D. W. Griffith, Mack Sennett, and Thomas Ince, had its first official birthday on Tuesday. Griffith and Sennett have been visited with in this column, while Thomas Ince, director of the New York Motion Picture company, another one of the human dynamos in filmland, was visited in his studio stronghold, "My Kingdom," as he calls Inceville, six miles up the coast from Santa Monica.

Ince is the man who in the space of five years has accumulated a million dollars and built up a tremendous selling reputation for his Domino, Broncho, and Kay Bee brands, and who has recently been hitting the mark with some exceedingly effective productions on the Mutual master picture program.

He is only 35, a person radiant with energy and bubbling with interest, on the working qui vive every minute.

When he took me into his office at Inceville, it was a few minutes after 12 by the clock above his head.

We talked, or rather he talked, with punctuations by various hungry seekers after help from the dark room, the stage, this actor and that Indian, until the clock pointed to after 2.

"Really, I work day and night," said Mr. Ince. "I do the scenarios for all the features we put on and I read all the synopses and revise the stories for our program pictures. Then I oversee all the direction and I dip into the dark room.

And then he related how it came about that he got started in what he called "the most interesting business in the world."

"It was an absolute necessity," prefaced Mr. Ince. "I needed the money. I had been an actor for nineteen years. I was fairly born in the business, for my father and mother were both in it, so I began it early, and it was the only thing I knew.

"I played juvenile and light comedian rôles, but work was uncertain, and my build was against other things. I always tried to keep with the best companies, for I figured that it was better to be a servant with a high type of company than to be a lead with a bunch of low brows. For that reason I never thought about pictures, which had up till then only attracted the flotsam and jetsam of the theater. Only the cheap people had gone in for them. There was among the good people something of the feeling of the bread line about them.

"But I was married and had a boy and five years ago in September I was walking along Broadway without a job, with only a $10 bill in my pocket and the $8 rent for my little flat uptown due.

"It was then I met a mediocre actor, dressed in the last splash, who drove up in a car with a great flourish. I had never seen the inside of a limousine," explained Mr. Ince whimsically, "and I thought anybody that rode in a car was very wealthy.

"He told me he was in the motion picture business and advised me to go to it. So I went to the Imp studio and applied. The director was not a theatrical man so he didn't know theatrical reputations and he was very upstage with me—O, very," mused Mr. Ince

"He gave me a job at $5 a day. I was not there long and then I went to the Biograph for a week. I wasn't under Griffith. Then the Imp sent for me, and after a week and a half I got my directorship. I was there for over a year and had Mary Pickford for seven or eight months.

"Then, after the mix-up, I came on a salary with Kessel and Baumann in this company—not a very wonderful salary, either. I was the first man to start big westerns, with plausible stories and real Indians. I insisted on a reason in things and the public liked it.

"Then I was flirted with by several organizations and we made an arrangement which took me into partnership. I didn't get much out of it for a while, for Kessel and Baumann were very good business men—but I was a good business man too," Mr. Ince twinkled shrewdly, "and the results have been satisfactory.

"We got Miller Bros. '101' circus and started in making the 'Bison 101' brand of pictures.

"Now we have a lease on this 20,000 acre ranch and a weekly pay roll of $10,000 for 325 people.

"For a creditable picture you've got to have everything perfect. Even after all of the acting and directing and setting and photographing are done as nearly perfectly as possible, you are at the mercy of the man who prints and develops, so you must have an artist in the dark room—and you have to pay artists. But we do pay our people well and they all stay with us, which probably will bankrupt us some time," chuckled the monologuer, "for we increase everybody's pay every year.

"We make an average of thirty-two reels a month for our program release besides our features.

"That's how it happens that we are now a $5,000,000 corporation grown from a shoestring," Mr. Ince explained in cheerful conclusion.

Eve Sun 7-22 News 7-23

LOU HOUSEMAN is going to give a private view of the famous Bernhardt pictures at the Illinois Theater at noon next Tuesday through an arrangement with Manager George Bowles of "The Birth of a Nation." The films show the "Divine Sarah" at home and are said to be remarkable in many respects.

NEW FIRM SEEKS LOOP LEASES

Triangle Interests Say First Releases Will Be Made in September.

Negotiations for permanent leases on two loop playhouses have been opened by the new $5,000,000 Triangle Film company, which is backing Directors David W. Griffith, Thomas H. Ince and Mack Sennett, it was announced yesterday by H. E. Aitken, president. Mr. Aitken, accompanied by Attorneys Walter Seligberg and C. T. U. Banzhof, were in Chicago for two hours on the way from Los Angeles to New York. They visited the Illinois theater, where "The Birth of a Nation," the product of the Epoch company of which Mr. Aitken is also head, is now playing.

"We are aiming to produce only dramas of great spectacular magnitude as well as of gripping interest," said Mr. Aitken. "The average length of our releases will be fourteen reels. At present we are eying two leading theaters in the loop district, which we may place on our circuit of surpassing photo play offerings. I can positively announce that the first Triangle production will be seen in September."

Headquarters of the Triangle company will be in New York. With Mr. Aitken in the direction of the firm are Ad Kessel and C. O. Bauman. Mr. Aitken expressed gratification over the continued "full house" patronage enjoyed by "The Birth of a Nation," which is held out as a forerunner of the type of production to be made by the Griffith-Ince-Sennett alliance.

Morning Telegraph 7-21

TRIANGLE FILM CORPORATION IS FORMED FOR $5,000,000

D. W. Griffith, Thomas H. Ince and Mack Sennett Head the New Company, Which Plans to Produce World's Best Pictures.

ELSIE JANIS STARTING HOME

William Morris Moves Jardin de Danse "Props" to Long Beach. Hall Caine's Son Will Appear Here—Kathryn Osterman to Pose.

By RENNOLD WOLF.

THE Triangle Film Corporation reports of the organizing of which have been current for several weeks, actually sprang into being yesterday, when the promoters met at La Junta, Col., and incorporated the company for $5,000,000.

This new concern, which will participate in every branch of the motion picture business, is perhaps the most comprehensive thus far organized. The three leading lights are David W. Griffith, of "The Birth of a Nation" fame; Thomas H. Ince, best known for his "Battle of Gettysburg," and Mack Sennett, the creator of Keystone comedy.

To attend the session at La Junta the three directors came from Los Angeles. They were met in Colorado yesterday morning by the executives from New York, including H. E. Aitken, Adam and Charles Kessel and Charles O. Baumann. Mr. Aitken, identified with the Mutual Film Corporation, brings the Griffith studies of the Reliance-Majestic combination into the new organization, together with great financial resources. The Messrs. Kessel and Baumann bring Ince and Sennett; the big plant of the New York Motion Picture Corporation and contracts with about thirty distinguished players.

The list of the latter includes Billie Burke, Mary Boland, Julia Dean, Bessie Barriscale, DeWolf Hopper, Raymond Hitchcock, Sam Bernard, Eddie Foy, Weber and Fields, Douglas Fairbanks, H. B. Warner, Dustin Farnum, Frank Keenan, Hale Hamilton, Willard Mack, W. S. Hart, Forrest Winant, Henry Woodruff, Orrin Johnson, Maurice Farkoe, Louise Dresser, House Peters, Jane Grey and William Desmond.

The officers elected at yesterday's meeting were: president, H. E. Aitkin; vice presidents, C. O. Baumann, D. W. Griffith, Thomas H. Ince and Mark Sennett; secretary, Adam Kessel, and auditor, Charles Kessel.

Among the plans of the new organization already approaching fruition are the leasing of a chain of first-class theatres covering the large cities of the country, the engagement of as many available distinguished players as possible, revolutionary improvement of shorter films, and the conquest of foreign lands by made-in-America films.

An idea of the progress already made is found in the fact that in Great Britain eighty prints of every Sennett-Keystone comedy are marketed. The Triangle Film Corporation is to be the parent company of the Triangle Film Corporations of Great Britain, Russia, France, Italy, Spain, Australia, Japan and the South American countries.

Tribune July 20

FLICKERINGS

by KITTY

More News About Triangle Combine.

THIS thing of having a great film corporation using the whole country in which to get itself formed is handy for Chicago. Yesterday H. E. Aitkin dropped into town on his way back to New York from his little jaunt out to La Junta, Colo., with some first hand news of what happened there on Tuesday, when D. W. Griffith, Mack Sennett, and Thomas Ince, having put their respective Reliance and Majestic, Keystone, Domino, Broncho, and Kay Bee companies into subdirector hands temporarily, Pullmanned off there for a little corporation fling.

The result of the party, as announced briefly in THE TRIBUNE Wednesday, was the formation of the Triangle Film corporation with a capital of $5,000,000. Mr. Aitkin brought more extensive news. The officers, for instance, all of whom were present, are, president, H. E. Aitkin; vice presidents, D. W. Griffith, Thomas Ince, and Adam Kessel; secretary, C. O. Baumann.

There is opportunity for theatrical shivering in the suggestion flung out that efforts would be directed toward having the stars engaged sign contracts not to appear on the stage for a set time, said appearance being deemed by the photoplay folks as detracting from the popularity of the picture.

The procedure of the Triangle will be a weekly release of two five reel and one two reel productions, made by the directors in chief and other directors selected by them for their competency and working under them. Two months' time is to be the regular allotment for the making of the five reelers.

To this corporation Mr. Aitkin contributed the Majestic and Reliance studios, with considerable financial backing, while Kessell and Baumann turned in the Inceville and the Keystone plants and contracts with about thirty prominent players.

The houses to be occupied here are not yet decided on. It is quite definitely stated that two are needed, one for "The Birth of a Nation" and one for the Triangle program which will begin in September. The Colonial has been glanced at, and of course, the Illinois is regarded as highly desirable, having already taught folks the way to the seeing of distinctive photodramas.

A fragment of rumor indicates the answering of Sothern and Marlowe to the celluloid call, though nothing definite is stated. Other stars already under contract are: Billie Burke, Mary Boland, Julia Dean, Bessie Barriscale, Louise Dresser, Raymond Hitchcock, H. B. Warner, Sam Bernard, Eddie Foy, Weber & Fields, Dustin Farnum, Douglas Fairbanks, Frank Keenan, Hale Hamilton Bruce McRae, Willard Mack, W. S. Hart, Forest Winant, Henry Woodruff, Orrin Johnson, Maurice Farkoa, House Peters, William Desmond, and Bert Clarke.

Telegram July 24

TRIANGLE FILM CORPORATION IS FORMED FOR $5,000,000

D. W. Griffith, Thomas H. Ince and Mack Sennett Head the New Company, Which Plans to Produce World's Best Pictures.

ELSIE JANIS STARTING HOME

William Morris Moves Jardin de Danse "Props" to Long Beach. Hall Caine's Son Will Appear Here—Kathryn Osterman to Pose.

By RENNOLD WOLF.

THE Triangle Film Corporation reports of the organizing of which have been current for several weeks, actually sprang into being yesterday, when the promoters met at La Junta, Col., and incorporated the company for $5,000,000.

This new concern, which will participate in every branch of the motion picture business, is perhaps the most comprehensive thus far organized. The three leading lights are David W. Griffith, of "The Birth of a Nation" fame; Thomas H. Ince, best known for his "Battle of Gettysburg," and Mack Sennett, the creator of Keystone comedy.

To attend the session at La Junta the three directors came from Los Angeles. They were met in Colorado yesterday morning by the executives from New York, including H. E. Aitken, Adam and Charles Kessel and Charle s O. Baumann. Mr. Aitken, identified with the Mutual Film Corporation, brings the Griffith studios of the Reliance-Majestic combination into the new organization, together with great financial resources. The Messrs. Kessel and Baumann bring Ince and Sennett; the big plant of the New York Motion Picture Corporation and contracts with about thirty distinguished players.

The list of the latter includes Billie Burke, Mary Boland, Julia Dean, Bessie Barriscale, DeWolf Hopper, Raymond Hitchcock, Sam Bernard, Eddie Foy, Weber and Fields, Douglas Fairbanks, H. B. Warner, Dustin Farnum, Frank Keenan, Hale Hamilton, Willard Mack, W. S. Hart, Forrest Winant, Henry Woodruff, Orrin Johnson, Maurice Farkoe, Louise Dresser, House Peters, Jane Grey and William Desmond.

The officers elected at yesterday's meeting were: president, H. E. Aitkin; vice presidents, C. O. Baumann, D. W. Griffith, Thomas H. Ince and Mark Sennett; secretary, Adam Kessel, and auditor, Charles Kessel.

Among the plans of the new organization already approaching fruition are the leasing of a chain of first-class theatres covering the large cities of the country, the engagement of as many available distinguished players as possible, revolutionary improvement of shorter films, and the conquest of foreign lands by made-in-America films.

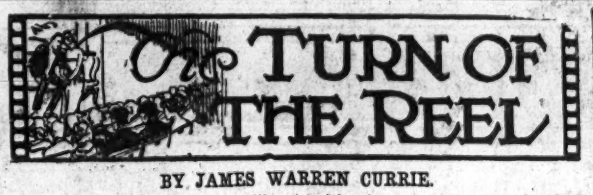
An idea of the progress already made is found in the fact that in Great Britain eighty prints of every Sennett-Keystone comedy are marketed. The Triangle Film Corporation is to be the parent company of the Triangle Film Corporations of Great Britain, Russia, France, Italy, Spain, Australia, Japan and the South American countries.

Herald 7-24

+ + +

EVALYNNE—First of all let me thank you for your letter. I am grateful to you for your appreciation of the HERALD'S movie department. Your secret is a very pleasing one—thank you. I am sorry that your age barred you from seeing "The Birth of a Nation." It is unfortunate that you had to be disappointed after standing in line so long. J. Warren Kerrigan is very popular with the fans, and I am sure if you knew all the nice things I hear about him you would change your mind. "A Woman" has come in for more or less criticism, but I imagine it is Charley's last offense of that kind. Mary Pickford is adorable. I am glad you liked my criticism of Blanche Sweet. The Strand has very good programs, and you are only one of the many fans who have written and thus expressed themselves. Write to me again

Examiner July 23 Chicag



TURN OF THE REEL

BY JAMES WARREN CURRIE.

Formation of the Triangle Film Corporation, with a capital of $5,000,000, the election of officers, and some of the things the new company proposes to do for the photoplay were discussed by Harry E. Aitken, president of the company, in an interview given here yesterday while on his way to New York.

The meeting which resulted in the forming of the company was held at La Junta, Colo., on Monday last. The officers elected were: Aitken, president; Griffith, Ince, Sennett and Adam Kessels, vice presidents, and Charles Baumann of New York, secretary. The treasurer has not been named.

"The Griffith-Ince-Sennett crowd will have unlimited authority in the making of pictures, both as to money and judgment," said Aitken. "We have contracts with many of the prominent actors and actresses on the stage, among whom are Billy Burke, De Wolf Hopper, Mary Boland, Louis Dresser, Bessie Barriscale, Sam Bernard, Dustin Farnum, Douglas Fairbanks, Bruce McRae, Bert Clarke, House Peters and Willard Mack."

David Griffith is now working on another spectacle, "The Law and the Woman," which, it is believed, will surpass "The Birth of a Nation," according to Aitken. This picture will be released through the Epoch Film Company, which is distinct from the Triangle Film Corporation, although Aitken is president of both. Griffith will work on spectacles, besides contributing his share of work in the making of plays for the Triangle Company.

* * *

Herald 7-24

Bessie Barriscale, who made such a notable success on the stage in "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch" and in "Old Kentucky," has come into the picture field and is here to stay. As one of the Tom Ince Stock Company Miss Barriscale will have ample opportunity to have the best stories and best direction obtainable. Mr. Ince has just finished a five-reel picture, "The Mating," in which this actress has the stellar role. "The Cup of Life" is another picture in which Miss Barriscale had a prominent part. She will be one of the members of the new company in the Triangle Film Corporation.

+ + +

For some reason evidently best known to themselves the members of the censorship board of Pennsylvania have refused a permit to Essanay's latest feature film, "The Blindness of Virtue."

This picture, which is now showing at the LaSalle Theater, has much to commend it and very little to condemn it. It is decisions of this sort that are working harm not only for the film manufacturer, but for the censor boards. There is no sane reason why this picture should not be exhibited. It contains much less objectionable material than did the play. Perhaps the Essanay Company will ask for an injunction restraining the Pennsylvania board from refusing a license. This is what "The Birth of a Nation" did in Chicago. Judge Cooper's decision in the latter case has established a precedent that cannot help being of aid to the film company with the courage to fight for its rights.

Who ever heard of refusing a permit to a play or book whose only fault was its endeavor to teach a lesson and drive home to the young people a necessary truth? It's an unheard of thing. Why, then, shouldn't the same be true of the motion picture?

We have much to be thankful for in Chicago's board of censors, for it, on the whole, is fair-minded and not given to exaggerated decisions in regard to

Ev. 7-24

BY ASHTON STEVENS.

PIKER ITEM.—Chicago millionaires who object to paying two dollars for a seat at the Illinois, where "The Birth of a Nation" is being unreled, may board the limited for Oakland, Cal., where Manager W. H. Bishop, one of the original Morosco family, is showing at Ye Liberty, Oakland's best theater, movies for five cents for two seats. Theater parties attend thirty storng, and even the host that pays as his guests enter says the shows are worth the money. The latest New York movie idea is two seats for a ten-dollar bill, but what chance against two for a jitney! The railroads soon will be advertising: "Become a Native Son for 2½ cents."

Herald July 23

5.

SEEN ON THE SCREEN By LOU

HARRY AITKEN, who resigned the presidency of the Mutual Film Company to head the new $5,000,000 Triangle Film Corporation, was in Chicago yesterday on his way to New York from La Junta, Cal. The new concern was organized at La Junta earlier in the week, with Mr. Aitken as the president and general manager; Adam Kessel Jr., vice president; C. O. Bauman, secretary, and David Griffith, Mack Sennett and Tom Ince, vice presidents and members of advisory board.

"It was the most harmonious meeting I ever attended in the film business," said Mr. Aitken. "These three men—Griffith, Sennett and Ince, the acknowledged leaders in the development of the picture industry—all joined hands to contribute their dramatic genius to this one corporation. We call it 'The Triangle' because of this union. It was a delightful association of the biggest film directors in the world.

"Mr. Griffith admires Mack Sennett very much. He considers him the greatest genius in his line. The Sennett comedies will supplement each drama released, and they ought to be good, with Eddie Foy, Raymond Hitchcock and the rest of the famous comedians taking part."

+ + +

"You will open your $2 houses in September as you planned?" I asked Mr. Aitken.

"We are going to open at the Knickerbocker Theater in New York, possibly with Douglas Fairbanks in a play not yet ready for announcement," was the reply. "We shall have fourteen reels—two five-reel dramas and two two-reel comedies. No drama will be released without a comedy accompanying it. Mr. Griffith, Mr. Ince and Mr. Sennett each will be director general of his own companies and will work independently. They will have six or eight companies working all the time, and while we expect each production will take two or three months to finish we shall have fourteen reels ready for release each week.

"You see, only one theater in a city can handle our films. They will be works of art, with the finest actors in America. Each big drama will cost something like $30,000 to $50,000."

+ + +

Mr. Aitken was asked if he did not feel that Mr. Griffith's and Mr. Ince's work might conflict.

"Not at all," was the emphatic answer. "Tom Ince's pictures are so different. He has Inceville, with his western cowboys, Indians and 150 horses. Griffith's pictures deal with an entirely different angle, although Billy Burke will be in the Ince company. She is on her way there now.

"One thing, I believe, is not generally understood by the layman, and that is that the Epoch Producing Company and the Triangle Film Corporation are two separate and distinct organizations. The Epoch company was formed to promote 'The Birth of a Nation' and 'the Triangle' is to manage the output of the new company.

"That will necessitate obtaining two theaters in Chicago. One for 'The Birth of a Nation' and one for the pictures to be released in September. Mr. Griffith told me before I left him in California to have Mr. McCarthy send out ten companies with 'The Birth of a Nation.' David Griffith never looked as well in his life as he does right now," went on Mr. Aitken; "he is so enthusiastic about his new venture."

+ + +

Miriam Cooper.

"A little bird whispered to me," I said, "that Julia Marlow and Edward Sothern were contemplating an alliance with the Triangle Company."

"Better not say anything about that," put in Walter Seligberg, Mr. Aitken's legal adviser.

Mr. Aitken was noncommittal, but I gathered partly from what he said, but principally from what he did not say, that it would not be the most unheard-of thing to have these two artists join the Griffith company—some day.

"Will the contract with these stars give your company the exclusive right to their services?" I asked.

"De Wolf Hopper has come to us for wto years, and the others who will appear in our pictures are Billie Burke, Mary Boland, Douglas Fairbanks, H. B. Warner, Bruce McRae, Eddie Foy, Bessie Barrisicale, Henry Woodruff, W. S. Hart, and, of course, Lillian Gish, Mae Marsh, Bobby Harron and Miriam Cooper and a number of others whom I cannot recall just now.

+ + +

"One thing of interest is that Griffith, Ince and Sennett have each signed a three-year contract, the first of the kind ever entered into by any of them."

Mr. Aitken told me that his headquarters will be in New York. He was accompanied on his trip from California by A. H. W. Banzhof, treasurer and secretary of the Epoch Producing Company, and his attorney, Mr. Seligberg.

Sat Eve Post Sunday Morningal 7-24-25

ILLINOIS THEATRE

TWICE DAILY
(INCLUDING SUNDAYS)
AFTERNOONS AT 2:15
EVENINGS AT 8:10

EVENINGS AND SATURDAY MATS.
Orchestra.....$1 and $2
First Balcony..50c, 75c and $1
Second Balcony....25c and 50c

Seats Selling 4 Weeks in Advance
MAIL and TELEGRAPH requests accompanied by check will be filled in the order of their receipt. Patrons will aid us in accommodating them by naming two dates if possible.

OTHER MATINEES
Orchestra....50c and $1
Balcony.....50c and $1
Second Balcony.....25c

D. W. GRIFFITH'S 8th WONDER OF THE WORLD

2nd MAMMOTH MONTH

5,000 SCENES

18,000 PEOPLE

THE BIRTH OF A NATION

FROM COAST TO COAST THE MOST STUPENDOUS DRAMATIC SENSATION THIS COUNTRY HAS EVER KNOWN.

NOW PLAYING TO DELIGHTED AND ENTHUSIASTIC MULTITUDES AT NEW YORK, BOSTON, BRIGHTON BEACH, SAN FRANCISCO, SEATTLE and ATLANTIC CITY, MILWAUKEE, ATLANTIC CITY

COST $500,000.00

3,000 HORSES

CHICAGO'S BIGGEST THRILL!
THE PLAY THAT MADE THE LOOP GASP!

DUE NEXT MONTH AT LONDON, ENGLAND, TO WAKE GREAT BRITAIN UP—THEN PARIS, PETROGRAD, MADRID and MILAN.

HIGHLY IMPORTANT: "The Birth of a Nation" Will Never Be Presented at Any but the Highest Class Theatres and at Prices Customarily Charged in Such Playhouses.

D. W. GRIFFITH.

Examiner 7/24

PAGE TWELVE

The TURN OF THE REEL

BY JAMES WARREN CURRIE.

The Pennsylvania State Board of Censorship has refused to grant the V. L. S. E. Corporation a permit to show Essanay's "The Blindness of Virtue" in Pennsylvania. No reason has been given. It is believed, however, that the barred picture will or has been classed under the head of "indecent" films by these custodians of community purity.

Now, "The Blindness of Virtue" ran for several seasons on the stage, with a self-admitted message to the young women of the nation. There was discussion over the stage version, but it was promoted by zealous and shrewd press agents who knew the value of argument as a magnet to draw the public. But there was no attempt to stop the play. Even Anthony Comstock hesitated and lost the opportunity to add to his laurels. He let the play alone.

The play was made into a picture by the Essanay Company, with Edna Mayo and Bryant Washburn in the leading roles. Immediately on its release it was booked in Chicago, in a downtown house, where it is running to-day under a permit from the Chicago Board of Censorship.

CUT CRIME FILMS.

Previous to this there was a picture, or a series of pictures, that dealt with all kinds of crime and race feelings and sex questions and such like. The reason that there were so many of this type of picture plays was that they furnished infinite varieties of opportunity for the introduction of the element of conflict into the stories they told.

Now, the Board of Censorship, with the realization of their responsibilities as guardians ove morals of the people of the always went to work with and a determination to use without mercy. In about cent of the cases the use of shears was desirable. It is to A lot of films that pass under Board of Censors should be But in several cases objections raised that they (the scis maimed some artistic films and their stories in a very uninteres form. The objections did little but the subsequent action of film people produced some re

LOSE CASE IN COURT.

Finally along came "The of a Nation," done into a tre dous spectacle by one David fith. There was a race que raised because the picture tol history of the Civil War by of photographs instead of w And the police authorities that it was immoral, prejudic inimical to the public peace the City of Chicago got out a junction against the owners bidding them to show the pic Griffith brought the fight into and Judge William Fra Cooper handed down a decis favor of Griffith that has be history in the development o photoplay as an art. He de against the City of Chicago.

Now the Board of Censorsh Chicago is careful, very ca about the things it cuts. They beginning to admit that the mo picture public has average int glance. And things here, excep isolated cases, are as they sh be.

Tribune 7-24

W. A. Brady Writes Drama Obituary.

NEW YORK, July 23.—William A. Brady tonight hit several hard blows at the motion picture, which he declared is killing the legitimate drama and at the legitimate drama as well, which he declared is making no attempt to defend itself.

The statement followed his receipt of the information that Robert B. Mantell, whom he raised to the spot light of fame in Shakspearean rôles, today signed a contract with the Fox Film corporation to act in canned drama, and that Genevieve Hamper, who in private life is Mrs. Mantell, also will forsake the speaking stage and appear under the same management as her husband.

"The big salaries of the motion pictures are drawing all our actors away from us," he declared. "The motion picture industry is going to kill the drama within twelve months. The Rialto has moved from Broadway to Los Angeles. Seventy-five per cent of the stars of the legitimate drama are in California now, where the majority of the big photo production companies are gathered for the opening of the picture season. They have got practically all of our best talent, from Billie Burke, Richard Carle, Raymond Hitchcock, William Farnum, and Nance O'Neil down.

"And not only have they got the actors but they have the playwrights.

"It's no use denying the motion picture industry has made giant strides, and we have been standing still or sleeping. The movies are going to hand us a couple of quick kicks soon—in fact, they are doing it already—which are going to wake us up."

Mr. Fox, head of the Fox Film corporation, tonight announced that he has decided to prohibit his stars by contract from appearing on the speaking stage while under his management.

Jour 7-24

"The Birth of a Nation"

"The Birth of a Nation" nears the end of its second great month at the Illinois theater, and still scores new achievements in record-breaking attendance. From all indications it will be rated eventually as the one big smashing success of the theatrical year in Chicago from the financial as well as the spectacular and artistic points of view. Patriotic outbursts at the showing of the Griffith masterpiece are significant of the temper of the American people at this time. "The Birth of a Nation" serves to bring back Americans to the bedrock of freedom's ideals and reaffirms the patriotic devotion of a great united nation.

Journal 7-23

With this coming week "The Birth of a Nation," the greatest spectacle drama in history, will complete its second "sell-out" month at the Illinois theater. After seven weeks, during which the "All Seats Sold" sign was moved to the fore twice daily, there is not the slightest indication of a lag in the tremendous patronage accorded the D. W. Griffith masterpiece by playgoers of Chicago and visitors from other cities.

Officials of the firm which produced "The Birth of a Nation" visited Chicago last week, and after reviewing the attendance at the Illinois came to the conclusion that this city is the new dramatic center of the United States. This is partly attributed to the tremendous advance Chicago has made as a summer resort and a mecca for tourists who formerly visited New York, Washington and other destinations for sightseers. But "The Birth of a Nation" has not visitors alone to thank for its striking success hereabouts, as the list of well-known Chicagoans who have seen the performance two and three times is a lengthy one and indicates the heavy ratio of local patronage.

The presentation of Abraham Lincoln in triumph and in tragedy is so inspiringly realistic that the great emancipator has become almost a living personage to many up-to-date Chicagoans who have witnessed "The Birth of a Nation." One feature of Griffith's great civil war epic which has not been commented upon so far consists of stray little touches of humor scattered through the long train of tremendous spectacles and national tragedy. The forlorn admiration of a union private for Miss Stoneman, daughter of the great statesman, is a gem in humorous silent acting, and is in sharp relief to the powerful situations in which it is encompassed.

T. T.
Reveiw
July 24. 1915

THEATRIC

Motion Picture Producers Seek Foreign Trade

Five Million Dollar Company Incorporated, with Messrs. Aitken, Griffith, Ince and Sennett in It.

David W. Griffith, Thomas H. Ince and Mack Sennett are directors in a new motion picture combination to be known as the Triangle Film Corporation. J. J. McCarthy, of Mr. Griffith's offices here, yesterday received a telegram from Harry E. Aitken, in La Junta, Col., stating that a company, with capital stock of $5,000,000, had been incorporated in that State.

Mr. Aitken, recent head of the Mutual interests and now associted with Mr. Griffith; Adam Kessel, Charles Kessel, Charles O. Baumann and other Eastern men, who will be executive officers of the Triangle company, met Messrs. Griffith, Ince and Sennett at La Junta to arrange the incorporation.

Mr. Griffith, producer of "The Birth of a Nation," was brought into the combination by Mr. Aitken, and Messrs. Kessell and Baumann brought the New York Motion Picture Corporation with its plant and contracts, with about thirty dramatic stars, including Miss Billie Burke, recently acquired; the Ince productions and the Sennett-Keystone line of comedy.

The ambitions of the new company, as announced last night, are the leasing of a chain of first class theatres in the larger cities, the engagement of as many prominent dramatic stars as possible, marked improvement of short films as well as the producing of features on the largest scale, and the placing of their product in all civilized nations. Each foreign country is to have a Triangle company, an offshoot of the American parent corporation.

The officers are Harry E. Aitken, president; C. O. Baumann, D. W. Griffith, Thomas H. Ince and Mack Sennett, vice presidents; Adam Kessel, secretary, and Charles Kessel, auditor.

Among the stars engaged besides Miss Burke are Misses Mary Boland, Julia Deane, Bessie Barriscale and Jane Grey, De Wolf Hopper, Raymond Hitchcock, Sam Bernard, Eddie Foy, Weber and Fields, Douglas Fairbanks, H. B. Warner, Dustin Farnum, Frank Keenan, Hale Hamilton, Willard Mack and Maurice Farkoa.

ILLINOIS THEATRE

TWICE DAILY
(INCLUDING SUNDAYS)
AFTERNOONS AT 2:15
EVENINGS AT 8:10

EVENINGS AND SATURDAY MATS.
Orchestra.....$1 and $2
First Balcony..50c, 75c and $1
Second Balcony....25c and 50c

Seats Selling 4 Weeks In Advance
MAIL and TELEGRAPH requests accompanied by check will be filled in the order of their receipt. Patrons will aid us in accommodating them by naming two dates if possible.

OTHER MATINEES
Orchestra....50c and $1
Balcony.....50c and $1
Second Balcony.....25c

D. W. GRIFFITH'S 8th WONDER OF THE WORLD

2nd STUPENDOUS MONTH

5,000 SCENES

18,000 PEOPLE

THE BIRTH OF A NATION

IT WILL MAKE A BETTER AMERICAN OF YOU

Cities built up and then destroyed by fire.

The biggest battle of the Civil War re-enacted.

Ford's Theatre, Washington, reproduced to the smallest detail for the Lincoln tragedy.

COST $500,000.00

3,000 HORSES

A series of wild rides that commandeered a county for a day and cost $10,000.
Night photography of battle scenes, invented and perfected at a cost of $12,000.
Wonderful artillery duels in which real shells—costing $80 apiece—were used.
Miles of trenches—thousands of fighters—"War as it actually is."
A Musical Score of 50 pieces, synchronized to the several thousand distinct and individual scenes.

HIGHLY IMPORTANT: "The Birth of a Nation" Will Never Be Presented at Any but the Highest Class Theatres and at Prices Customarily Charged in Such Playhouses.

D. W. GRIFFITH.

IERICAN, JULY 24, 1915.

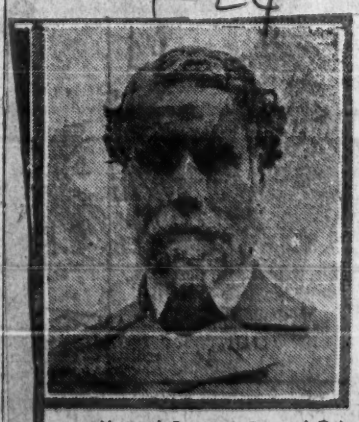
"All Seats Sold" Is the Regular Sign at "Birth of a Nation"

BY ROB REEL.

With the coming week "The Birth of a Nation," the greatest spectacle-drama in history, will complete its second sell-out" month at the Illinois Theater. After seven weeks, during which the "All Seats Sold" sign was moved to the fore twice daily, there is not the slightest indication of a lag in the tremendous patronage accorded the D. W. Griffith masterpiece by playgoers of Chicago and visitors from many other cities in surrounding states.

Officials of the controlling firm which produced "The Birth of a Nation" visited Chicago, and after reviewing the attendance at the Illinois Theater came to the conclusion that this city is now the dramatic center of the United States. This is partly attributed to the tremendous advance Chicago has made as a Summer resort and a Mecca for tourists who ormerly visited New York, Washing- and other destinations for sight- e. But "The Birth of a Nation" ot visitors alone to thank for its ing success hereabouts, as the f well-known Chicagoans who seen the performance two or imes is a lengthy one and in- the heavy ratio of local pat-

American 7-24



Howard Gaye, as General Robert E. Lee, in "Birth of a Nation," Illinois.

Ex. 7-26

'Birth of Nation' Greatest Movie

With this week "The Birth of a Nation," the greatest spectacle-drama in history, will complete its second "sell-out" month at the Illinois Theater. After seven weeks, during which the "All Seats Sold" sign was moved to the fore twice daily, there is not the slightest indication of a lag in the tremendous patronage accorded the D. W. Griffith masterpiece by playgoers of Chicago and visitors from many other cities in surrounding states.

Officials of the controlling firm which produced "The Birth of a Nation" visited Chicago last week and after reviewing the attendance at the Illinois Theater came to the conclusion that this city is the new dramatic center of the United States. This is partly attributed to the tremendous advance Chicago has made as a Summer resort and a mecca for tourists who formerly visited New York, Washington and other destinations for sightseers.

But "The Birth of a Nation" has not visitors alone to thank for its striking success hereabouts, as the list of well known Chicagoans who have seen the performance two and three times is a lengthy one and indicates the heavy ratio of local patronage.

The presentation of Abraham Lincoln in triumph and in tragedy is so inspiringly realistic that the great emancipator has become almost a living personage to many up-to-date Chicagoans who have witnessed "The Birth of a Nation."

One feature of riffith's great civil war epic which as been commented upon so far con- sists of stray little touches of humor scattered through the long train of tremendous spectacles and national tragedy. The forlorn admiration of a Union private for Miss Stoneman, daughter of the great statesman, is a gem in humorous silent acting, and is in sharp relief to the powerful situation in which it is encompassed.

62

Tribune 7-25

Movies to Aid Survivors.

The motion picture interests are astir with aims at practical assistance for the Eastland sufferers.

Yesterday while the cinemac reels kept turning in the manager's minds were mental reels going round toward the wisest, kindest course.

E. Q. Cordner, manager of Orchestra hall, declared: "We did stop seat sales for about an hour this morning, and then we decided that three days was a little too much. Nobody sympathizes in this case more than we do, but people can't moan all the time. Absolutely, we must stop for the funeral. That, of course, is the only thing to do. And as for a benefit, a day, maybe, in which all of the picture houses give their proceeds, I should think that a very good idea. That would be of more practical help than keeping closed."

The same idea prevailed in the office of the Illinois theater. "We did think of closing," said Mr. Griffith's personal representative, "and stopped our sale for a while. Then it hardly seemed right. The city is so full of gloom anyhow, that shutting down all amusements simply adds to it. However, we want to accord with the acting mayor's wishes."

George Bowles, mansger, said: "We at the Illinois haven't decided anything yet, except probably we will have a special performance at 10 o'clock in the morning, and will probably put it in the hands of some women's charitable organization."

George Moore, mansger of the Orpheum, and so speaking for the Jones, Linick, and Schaefer interests, including the Studebaker, Colonial, and La Salle picture houses, said: "We have had no official notice to stop and other houses are running and all of the amusement parks are open. However, we are perfectly willing to do whatever the authorities order."

H. A. Hahnemeyer, representing the Alfred Hamburger interests, the Fine Arts and the Ziegfeld in the loop, remarked: "It has all been so sudden there was no time to decide anything. We want to do whatever is decided as best. Mr. Hamburger has been thinking of a benefit."

A day in which all of the reels in the city would turn their quota for the benefit fund would be a fine day for picturedom's prestige in humanity's interest.

Tribune 7-26

Acting Mayor Asks City to Honor Dead.

The following proclamation was issued by Acting Mayor Moorhouse last night:

"Whereas, Chicago has been visited by a great disaster in the wrecking of the steamer Eastland, which has carried many of its citizens to their death in a moment of time and brought gloom and sorrow into hundreds of homes in this city;

"Whereas, The magnitude of this disaster, equaling if not exceeding any that has happened in the United States for years, has thoroughly overwhelmed our people and taught them that sorrow, too, 'makes the whole world kin.'

"Therefore, I, William R. Moorhouse, acting mayor of Chicago, at this time of bitter grief, when the sympathies of those untouched by this disaster are being generously extended to those who mourn their lost loved ones, do now request that tomorrow, Sunday, all places of amusement in this city, including theaters, parks, and other pleasure resorts, be closed and remain closed for two days, as a mark of respect to the dead, so suddenly snatched from life, and as an expression of universal sympathy for families bereaved by this great catastrophe.

"I also request that in all churches, at both morning and evening services, prayers be offered requesting divine help for these bereaved ones, to sustain them in their great sorrow.

"WILLIAM R. MOORHOUSE,
"Acting Mayor."

Trib-7-25

THEATRICAL MEN SEEK $50,000 FOR RELIEF FUND

Many Owners Pledge Receipts for Day to Make Up Amount.

The receipts of a monster benefit performance at the Auditorium theater on Friday afternoon; the proceeds of one performance of every moving picture theater in the city, and a percentage of receipts from special features at the amusement parks is expected to add to the general relief fund for bereaved families of Eastland victims at least $50,000.

At a meeting called by Harry Ridings, the managers of most of the loop theaters agreed to coöperate with the outlying theaters to make the contribution by the theatrical fraternity the largest of any other single profession.

Hamburger in Line.

Alfred Hamburger agreed to set aside the receipts of one performance of each of his fourteen theaters on any day selected by the committee. George Bowles, on behalf of David W. Griffith, announced a special benefit performance of "The Birth of a Nation" will be given on a date to be set by the committee.

A plan which was approved by Acting Mayor Moorhouse and Chief of Police Healy to have every policeman in the city visit the theaters in his district and request them to set aside one day's proceeds for the general relief fund was adopted by the committee.

City Cut Into Districts.

The city has been divided into three districts and dates given to each theater in the district. Following is a list of the districts and the date on which the benefit will be given in each: North side, July 28; south side, July 29; west side, July 30.

There are 600 moving picture theaters in the city. Tickets will be placed on sale at the Auditorium theater box office as soon as they are printed. Actors and actresses from all the loop attractions will contribute acts in the benefit.

Among the features and attractions to be represented are: Joseph Santley, "Maid in America;" Saranoff, Mlle. Dazie, Peggy O'Neill and company, Minerva Coverdale and chorus, Brice and King, Williams and Wolfus, Arthur Dunham, Svor and Mack, and Steindel Brothers. Silvio Hein will be general musical director.

Post 7-26

Open Emergency Headquarters.

"The Birth of a Nation" will give a benefit performance Saturday afternoon, its manager announced.

The relief committee—headed by Dr. John Dill Robertson, commissioner on all Wall Paper during July and August, (including a new shipment of mid-season specialties.)

SPECIAL DISCOUNT!

We are in positien to take care of your work on immediate notice, and we guarantee you quality goods—plus satisfactory service at

THE I. W. LOWER DECORATING CO.

Yes, We Frame Pictures.

120 South Michigan St., South Bend, Ind.

Bill of Play

"Bartola" music more than ever now, as happy thoughts bring sweet music. Oh! yes, she is a Neenah girl, and a schoolmate of Ted's.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 28.

"The Ebb Tide," a very fine 3 reel Selig, featuring our very popular Kathlyn Williams—everybody's favorite. Wait till you see her in "The Rosary." Charley Chaplin in "His Rehistoric Past," a 2 reel knockout comedy. "A Timely Interception," a Biograph (re-issue) of 4 years ago and produced by the world's greatest producer David W. Griffith, who today receives one hundred and twenty five thousand a year for producing big pictures. His latest production is "The Birth of Our Nation," in 12 reels, now on a long run at the Illinois Theater, Chicago, with prices running up to $2.00 a seat, and yours truly and wife, gave up $4.00 for two seats, but it's well worth the price and more — ask Bily Dunkle, he saw it. Had you told the people two years ago that they would see the prices up to $2 a seat to a picture show, what would the answer be? This Biograph re-issue of David Griffith's has a cast of all big stars such as: Lillian Gish, Robert Harron, who are now big stars in "The Birth of Our Nation," Lional Barrymore (Ethel's brother), Loe. McDermott, W. Chrystie Miller, the oldest actor living, now living in the Actor's Mome in New York. This is some pcture and is one cracker-jack of a good show.

THURSDAY, JULY 29.

On this day we present an extra strong special feature in 3 reels, presenting the world's greatest stars, Sir J. Forbes Robertson and Getrude Elliott. (These two great stars will be seen at The Oliver during the coming season). We present these two stars supported by their entire Drury Lane company in 'Hamlet.' This will prove to be the seasons hit. The Selig weekly of current events, liked by everybody. "The Goddess," featuring

(Program Continued on Next Page)

The Best Newspaper for the Best Homes ★★★★★ SUNDAY, JULY 25, 191[illegible]

PART ONE—PAGE EIGHT Chicago Examiner... The 25[illegible]

FOUR INQUIRIES INTO EASTLAND DISASTER ORDERED BEGUN

Acting Mayor's Proclamation Asks All Amusement Places to Close To-Day

Office of the Mayor, Chicago, July 24, 1915.

Whereas, Chicago has been visited by a great disaster in the wrecking of the steamer Eastland, which has carried hundreds of its citizens to their death in a moment of time and brought gloom and sorrow into hundreds of homes in this city;

Whereas, the magnitude of this disaster, equaling, if not exceeding, any that has happened in the United States in years, has fairly overwhelmed our people and taught them that sorrow, too, "makes the whole world kin."

Therefore, I William R. Moorhouse, acting Mayor of Chicago, at this time of bitter grief, when the sympathies of those untouched by this disaster are being generously extended to those who mourn their lost loved ones, do now request that to-morrow, Sunday, all places of amusement in this city, including theaters, parks and other pleasure resorts, be closed and remain closed for the day, as a mark of respect for the dead so suddenly snatched from life and as an expression of universal sympathy for the families bereaved in this great catastrophe.

I also request that in all churches in Chicago, at both morning and evening services, prayers be offered requesting divine help for these bereaved ones, to sustain them in their great sorrow.

WILLIAM R. MOORHOUSE,
Acting Mayor.

7/27

UNE: TUESDAY. JULY

CHICAGO RIALTO PLANS BENEFITS FOR SURVIVORS

Theatrical and Movie Men Respond Generously to the Cry of the Needy.

Four big benefit performances and scores of lesser ones will be the Chicago amusement world's contribution to the funds which are being collected for the survivors of the Eastland disaster.

George Bowles, representative of David W. Griffith, announced yesterday that a special performance of "The Birth of a Nation," the greatest motion picture spectacle ever produced, will be given at the Illinois theater Saturday morning, the entire proceeds to be turned over to THE TRIBUNE'S relief fund.

At Midway Gardens.

At Midway Gardens on Friday afternoon there will be a benefit performance, for which Mlle. Anna Pavlowa, her entire company, and the orchestra have volunteered their services. Here, too, Chicagoans will have the opportunity of seeing the most finished art of its kind in the world—the dancing of Mlle. Pavlowa—and at the same time contribute to THE TRIBUNE'S relief fund, for the entire receipts for the afternoon will be set aside for that purpose.

Then there is the big joint performance to be given under the auspices of the Chicago Theater Managers' association. After a second conference held in the afternoon at Cohan's Grand Opera house the managers announced that this will be held at the Auditorium on Tuesday afternoon, Aug. 3, and not on Friday, as originally planned.

Movies to Aid.

The proceeds of this performance will be turned over to the mayor's committee, as will those of one day's performance at moving picture theaters throughout the city, each of which will forward its receipts for a specified day to the general relief fund.

The name of Mrs. Leslie Carter was added in the afternoon to the list of performers who will appear at the Auditorium benefit. Mrs. Carter, who makes her first Chicago appearance in vaudeville next week, sent word that she will be glad to give her services for the occasion.

Others Who Volunteer.

The other players who have volunteered to appear have been recruited from the casts of the various theatrical companies now in Chicago—"Maid in America" at the Palace Music Hall, "All Over Town" at the Garrick, "The Lady in Red" at the Grand, and "Peg o' My Heart" at the Cort.

They include Joseph Santley, Peggy O'Neil, Mlle. Dazie, Valli Valli, Saranoff, Swor and Mack, Williams and Wolfus, Minerva Coverdale, Bert Clark, Coogan and Cox, Glenn Hall, Gertrude Vanderbilt, Will Phillips, Hassard Short, and Clarence Handyside. Montgomery and Moore, formerly a "team" of considerable prominence in variety circles, will be reunited for the occasion, though Mr. Montgomery is now selling automobile contraptions and Miss Moore is appearing alone in "Maid in America."

Small Theaters Generous.

Several of the smaller theaters have volunteered contributions to THE TRIBUNE'S relief fund. K. H. Hulquist, proprietor of the Omar theater, at 532 South State street, announced that 5 per cent of his gross receipts for this week will be set aside for this purpose, and A. S. Schwartz, proprietor of the Rose theater, at 2860 Milwaukee avenue, has arranged to make Friday night, Aug. 6, a TRIBUNE benefit.

A unique performance will be given Saturday morning at Orchestra hall. Here the "children's matinee," a program of motion pictures produced especially for the children, will be turned into a benefit and the proceeds will be turned over to the general relief fund, with the request that the amount be used exclusively for children bereaved by the Eastland disaster.

In addition F. M. Tracy, manager of the Strand Theater company, lessees of Orchestra hall, is formulating a plan for selling 10,000 50 cent tickets at $1 each, good for any performance in August, the entire $10,000 to go to the general relief fund.

Electric Men to Aid.

The Chicago Electric club and Jovian league, which will hold its annual outing at Ravinia park Thursday, Aug. 5, announced last night that the entire proceeds of the occasion will be turned over to the general relief fund.

The organization represents the electrical trades and industries of Chicago, and includes in its membership many of the department heads of the Western Electric company, whose employés were the principal victims of the Eastland disaster.

Tribune
7-27

FLICKER[illegible]

"Tribune" Benefit to Aid Survivors.

ON Saturday morning "The Birth of a Nation, under the auspices of THE TRIBUNE, will unreel its wonder in special aid of those bereaved by the tragic toppling over of the Eastland. The whole proceeds from the whole Illinois theater will be turned over to the benefit fund.

The performance will be at 10:30 an seats will be on sale this afternoon places where you can't miss them. N telephone reservations will be made, bu there will be plenty of tickets.

Saturday morning offers a double op portunity.

The Eastland disaster is marked by pe culiarly far reaching woe, because i makes so for ultimate material need Homes are bereft of their supporters i so many instances, and homes themselve are endangered, through the probable in ability to meet payments, which mean the loss of the money already invested.

The overturned Eastland is responsible not only for the heartache of broker family ties, but the bitterness of economic wreckage as well.

For the latter there is a little hope of salvage. "The Birth of a Nation" on Saturday morning, with the public's cooperation, offers some. It is the public's chance to act as an economic insurance agent with a very small premium required on the part of each individual of the public.

Then there's "The Birth of a Nation" itself. No investment ever paid such dividend in thrill and glow and wonder as does a ticket to that picture marvel. It is agog every minute with history, romance, love, sorrow, beauty, grimness, glory.

If you haven't seen it yet you can't afford to miss it on this specially fortunately devised opportunity, when some material good will come out of your seeing it, aside from the pleasure you get yourself.

And if you have seen it once, now is the best time in the world to fulfill your certain determination "I must see it again." It is a picture that calls everybody back. Now is the time to answer the call.

To see the impressive replica of Lincoln's assassination alone is worth the whole effort; to see the widely staged battle scenes, or that bored soldier trying to flirt with demure Miss Lillian Gish, or Mae Marsh doing anything, or the gathering and riding of the clans—any of these single things for photographic artisticness and realism and amazement are wholly worth the effort.

Put Saturday, 10:30 a. m., down in your engagement book with "Illinois" after it—and then keep the date.

* *

Examiner July 27—

THEATER MANAGERS GIVE BEST ACTS FOR BIG SHOW

Stars Playing on Chicago Stage Donate Services for Next Tuesday Afternoon Performance at Auditorium.

The Generous Offer of Mr. Morosco

LOS ANGELES, Cal., July 25.—My deepest sympathy to the sufferers of the Eastland disaster. Please accept the services of my Chicago "Peg o' My Heart" company or any part of it for the sufferers' benefit. OLIVER MOROSCO.

Arrangements were made yesterday at a meeting of the Chicago Theater Managers' Association for the monster benefit performance to be given at the Auditorium Theater next Tuesday afternoon to swell the relief fund for families of victims of the Eastland disaster.

The association is arranging the benefit with the assistance of the Chicago Examiner, and the entire receipts will go to needy families. The committee which met at Cohan's Grand Opera House yesterday afternoon to plan the benefit includes Harry J. Ridings, head of the Theater Managers' Association; George Bowles, Mort Singer, Alfred Hamburger, Harry Singer, Augustus Pitou, Jr., J. J. Garrity, W. R. Bennett, U. J. Herrmann, Silvio Hein, Sam Gerson, Ed Cordner, Lou M. Houseman and Fred Eberts.

The Winter Garden Company from the Palace Music Hall will give the best act from the musical extravaganza, "Maid in America," with Edward Cox, Minerva Coverdale, Yvette, Rita Gould and Jack Coogan in "The Girlie From the Cabaret," "Manhattan Mad," "Sister Susie" and other favorites.

Other features on the Auditorium stage at this monster benefit will be Saranoff, Williams and Wolfus, Arthur Dunham, Mlle. Dazie, Montgomery and Moore, Hazzard Short, Brice and King, Steindel Brothers, Bly Brown, Louise Mink and Clarence Handysides. The Majestic and Powers' Theaters will co-operate, and the Jones, Linick & Schaefer houses, besides helping in the Auditorium benefit, will also give benefits on their own stages.

Silvio Hein will be musical director at the Auditorium benefit. Chairman Ridings has appointed the following committees: Publicity, Sam P. Gerson, Wallace Decker and George Warren; tickets, Harry Singer, U. J. Herrmann and Mort Singer; musicians, Silvio Hein and J. J. Garrity; players, Fred Eberts and Augustus Pitou, Jr., motion pictures, Lou Houseman, Alfred Hamburger and Ed Cordner.

Notwithstanding the brilliancy and length of the bill and the immense popular demand for seats which is inevitable, the committee on arrangements has decided not to increase the prices beyond those prevailing at first-class theaters. Seats on the main floor and in the front rows in the balcony will be $2 each, other balcony seats and those in the upper balcony, $1 and box seats, $3.

TO TEST LARGE CAPACITY.

Large as is the Auditorium, it will not be large enough to accommodate all who wish to be present at this wondrous benefit performance. Those who wish seats will do well to apply early at the Auditorium.

From news given out as to the magnitude of the benefit and the number of attractions, it is certain to be the biggest and best ever given in this city. While it will be the duty of every citizen of Chicago to aid in making it a success, the event would be noteworthy even without the added inducement that it is the crowning attempt of the amusement world to join in the city's attempt to raise a suitable fund for the Eastland relief work.

The best acts from all the loop theaters will be presented, and there will be many special features not hitherto seen on any stage here.

Gertrude Vanderbilt, with fifty of the prettiest girls of "The Lady in Red" company from Cohan's Grand Opera House, will sing her famous ragtime song, and Edward Martindell and the entire cast will sing "Where's the Girl for Me?"

SANTLEY ON PROGRAM.

Joseph Santley, with twenty girls from the "All Over Town" company at the Garrick, will give the "Toddle, Toddle, All Over Town" number. The girls of the company and Santley will also appear in a humorous piece, "The Clock Shop," written by John L. Golden. More than a score of the charming girls of "The Lady in Red" will sell programmes in the lobby and aisles of the Auditorium before the curtain rises.

Glenn Hall and Mlle. Valli Valli of "The Lady in Red" will sing a duet specially written for the occasion.

Peggy O'Neil, star of "Peg o' My Heart" at the Cort Theater, with her dog Mike, will appear. Mike has appeared in about 370 performances of "Peg o' My Heart" in Chicago, and is almost as much of a popular favorite as any one on the stage to-day.

Lou Houseman has just received from France the much talked about Sarah Bernhardt films, showing the famous tragedienne in many scenes in her chateau and estate at Belle Isle. These films, which have never been seen in public in the United States, will be shown for the first time in Chicago at the Auditorium benefit next Tuesday afternoon. Another film treat on the program will be the great Wilderness battle scene from "The Birth of a Nation" at the Illinois Theater.

The Man Who Drinks
Is Putting a Heavy Mortgage on the Future

Business doesn't want him—society won't have him. Come to the Keeley Institute now—put a stop to the liquor and drug habit—regain your self-confidence, your pride and your former health. Our exceptional success during 35 years proves the worth of our methods. Charges are reasonable. Treatments are given under the constant, kindly direction of skilled specialists. Write for free illustrated booklet. Everything confidential.

THE KEELEY INSTITUTE,
Dwight, Illinois.

Chicago office—70 W. Monroe St., Suite 906. Telephone Central 3355.

DIAMONDS, watches, jewelry. Pay 50c week. Stewart & Co., Stewart Building. —Advertisement.

MOVIES TO AID EASTLAND FUND

Theater Owners Agree to Throw Open Doors for Relief of Tragedy Victims.

EXAMINER'S RELIEF FUND.

William Randolph Hearst	$1,000
Mrs. Emmons Blaine	100
W. W. Gurley	100
Albert D. Lasker	100
Charles G. Dawes	50
Hobart Chatfield Chatfield-Taylor	10
Charles A. Comiskey	10
Andrew J. Graham	10
Charles H. Mitchell	10
Mrs. F. J. Lupp	.60

Donations to the Examiner's relief fund, whether large or small, will be acknowledged in these columns. They should be sent to Cashier, Chicago Examiner. The fund will be augmented daily by the proceeds of theatrical performances and gifts of receipts of motion picture houses and amusement parks and other entertainments to be hereafter arranged. Last night a number of managers of theaters and other amusement enterprises informed the Examiner that they would set aside one day's receipts to swell its fund.

Through the generosity of motion picture theater owners, Chicago will have an opportunity to contribute to the sufferers from the Eastland disaster in the easiest manner imaginable.

By merely attending a show in their particular neighborhood, at the regular prices, all men, women and children in the city may add a mite to the relief fund. Announcement of the time will be made by posters in front of each theater.

These notices, of "one-sheet" size, will be given out to-day at room 519 Hearst Building.

The offer of film show proprietors to donate the gross receipts of one show to prevent want among the families of victims of the river tragedy is one of the most remarkable demonstrations of charity ever seen in Chicago. There are 650 of the cozy family havens throughout the city, each practically a part of the lives of those who live in its vicinity. The unique plan for a general donation of receipts promises to put many thousands of dollars into the Examiner's relief fund.

The project, however, is in the hands of the Municipal Eastland Motion Picture Relief Committee, which is acting in association with downtown theatrical men, promoting the great benefit performance to be given at the Auditorium Theater Friday afternoon. The motion picture committee appointed by Chairman Harry Ridings, manager of Cohan's Grand Opera House, consists of Lou M. Houseman, Alfred Hamburger and Ed Cordner.

HAMBURGER STRTS OFFER.

Hamburger himself owns twelve houses and at the organization meeting he started the ball rolling by pledging the gross receipts of the entire dozen for one performance.

The Hamburger theaters are the Ardmore, the Pine Grove, the Pickford, the Twentieth Century, the Willard, the Apollo, the Panorama, the Hippodrome, the Ellis Avenue, the President, the Shakespeare and the Cosmopolitan.

Loop motion picture theaters will have their benefit shows on Wednesday, also the day of the North Side houses. The following downtown theaters volunteered last night:

Orpheum, 110 South State street.
Bijou Dream, 116 South State street.
Strand, 348 South State street.
Colonial, 23 West Randolph street.
McVicker's, 21 West Madison street.
La Salle Opera House, 110 West Madison street.

All these are Jones, Linick & Schaefer houses.

Alcazar, 69 West Madison street.
Rose, 63 West Madison street.
Boston, 21 North Clark street.

These three theaters are Harry C. Moir houses.

Cozy, 40 South Clark street.
Pastime, 66 West Madison street.
By courtesy of H. W. Thompson.
Theatorium, 178 North State street.
By courtesy of W. F. Masher.
World, 61 West Randolph street.
By courtesy of J. V. Seavers.
Casino, 58 West Madison street.
Courtesy of I. L. Lesserman.
Star, 68 West Madison street.
Courtesy of John Kean.

It has been planned for the motion picture benefits to begin Wednesday night on the North Side. Thursday will be the South Side's night and Friday residents of the West Side will contribute the thousands of nickels and dimes that will mean a small fortune for the widows and orphans bereft by the Eastland horror, at the same time obtaining an evening's diversion.

The following North Side theaters will give all of Wednesday's receipts to the fund:

Lake Shore Theater, Broadway and Belmont avenue; M. J. Weil.
Ariato Theater, 2650 Lincoln avenue; A. M. Hartman.
Julian Theater, 918 Belmont avenue; Frank M. Teter.

The following North Side theaters will give the receipts of the 9:30 o'clock show Wednesday night:

Liberty Theater, 3705 Fullerton avenue; H. D. Koffman (vaudeville).
Garden Theater, 3305 North Marshfield avenue; H. D. Koffman (vaudeville).
Newberry Theater, 854 North Clark street; M. A. Choynski.
John Sheerin's Theater, 633 North Clark street.
Janet Theater, 617 West North avenue; Harry Lindner.
Iola Theater, 1238 Milwaukee avenue; A. W. Roth.
Regent Theater, 6746 Sheridan road; E. P. White.
Parkway Theater, 2736 North Clark street; H. Tipton Steck.
Park Theater, 6916 North Clark street; Molinari Booth.
Orchard Theater, Orchard and North avenue; S. Levin.
Hub Theater, 1746 West Chicago avenue; I. E. Berkson.
Avon Theater, 3327 Fullerton avenue; Hyman & Katz.
Bertha Theater, 4717 Lincoln avenue; H. L. Gumbiner.
Broadway Theater, 5206 Broadway; Ernest J. Lochrl.
Erie Amusement Company, 641 North Clark street; D. L. Swarts.
De Luxe Theater, 1141 Wilson avenue; L. A. & E. F. Cuneo.
Wilson Avenue Theater, 940 Wilson avenue; L. A. & E. F. Cuneo.

The following theaters also have planned special programs for the benefit of the fund:

Elite Theater, Waukegan; all of Wednesday night's receipts.
Bryn Mawr Theater, 1123 Bryn Mawr avenue; H. A. Gundling; all of Thursday's receipts.
Biograph Theater, 2433 Lincoln avenue; Lubliner & Trinz; Friday's matinee receipts, with a guarantee of $100.
Vitagraph Theater, 3137 Lincoln avenue; Lubliner & Trinz; Friday's matinee receipts, with a guarantee of $100.
La Salle Theater, 153 West Division street; Thomas Mitchell; all of Thursday night's receipts.
Twentieth Century Theater, 3330 West Twelfth street; David Cooper; all of Friday's receipts.
Roseland Theater, 11331 Michigan avenue; M. Berkson; all door receipts on Friday and an amount equal to half the day's expenses.
Princess Theater, Joliet; L. M. Rubens; Thursday's receipts.
Harvard Theater, Sixty-third street and Harvard avenue; M. J. Munts; proceeds of two Wednesday afternoon shows.
The Strand Theater Company, Orchestra Hall; all the receipts of the regular Saturday morning children's performance.

The Chicago Cinematograph Company will give special shows in the Harper Theater, Fifty-third street and Harper avenue, and the Halfield Theater, Fifty-fifth and Halsted streets, at a date to be announced later.

Other motion picture theaters which will announce benefit dates later are the Plaisance, 434 Parkside avenue; the Crawford, Crawford avenue and West Madison street; the Virginia, Halsted and West Madison streets; the Orpheus, 1613 West Twelfth street; the Marshfield, Marshfield avenue and West Twelfth street; the Franklin, Thirty-first street and Calumet avenue; the Hamlin, West Madison street and Hamlin avenue, and the Ashland, West Madison street and Ashland avenue.

"WATCH FOR POSTERS."

Theater managers are invited to leave names and addresses of their houses when calling for the posters, so that the public may know where and on what day they will be given an opportunity to help the Eastland fund by their attendance. The Examiner also will be glad to make any announcements desired by managers, such as changes in dates from the committee's program.

To all North Siders: Watch for the posters announcing the Eastland benefit and GO TO THE MOVIES WEDNESDAY NIGHT.

To all South Siders: Watch for the posters announcing the Eastland benefit and GO TO THE MOVIES THURSDAY NIGHT.

To all West Siders: Watch for the posters announcing the Eastland benefit and GO TO THE MOVIES FRIDAY NIGHT.

The theater owners are giving you a chance to do a great charity in a small way. They are doing their part splendidly. Do yours and go where you see the signs.

To All Owners and Managers of Motion Picture Theaters

The "one-sheet" announcements of benefit shows have been printed by the Municipal Eastland Motion Picture Relief Committee. They may be had by calling at room 519 Hearst Building.

You are invited also to register at room 519 Hearst Building the name and address of your theater and such other data concerning your Eastland sufferers' benefit show that you may desire to announce in the Examiner.

The committee suggests that the gross receipts for the 9:30 o'clock performance be donated, on the following evenings:

Wednesday, July 28—North Side houses.
Thursday, July 29—South Side houses.
Friday, July 30—West Side houses.

Those for whom the dates mentioned would be inconvenient, may select another date and time.

The proceeds will be donated to the general relief fund through the Chicago Examiner.

$5,500 in Valuables Found on Eastland

De Witt C. Cregier, city custodian, after an inventory, announced yesterday that he had in his possession $3,000 worth of jewelry, $2,500 in currency and 250 pocketbooks, all from the bodies of the Eastland disaster. Identification of the various articles must be made in person at the city custodian's office, third floor, City Hall.

Post 7-27

feature.

* * *

Alfred Hamburger closed negotiations for a protracted run of "An Alien," a photo dramatization of George Beban's famous vaudeville playlet entitled "The Sign of the Rose." Mr. Beban himself appears in the title role, repeating the character of the beloved Italian who was most devoted to his baby Rosa. The play lends itself magnificently for screening, and under the masterful direction of Thomas H. Ince has resulted in a powerful dramatic production. Mr. Ince is one of the three directors—D. W. Griffith and Mack Sennett are the others—who, with H. E. Aitken, compose the Triangle Film Company, the newest film concern, organized to produce $2 film attractions.

* * *

Aaron M. Gollos, president of the Photoplays Releasing Company, announces a private exhibition of "Sarah Bernhardt at Home," the two-reel special feature recently arrived from France, at the Illinois Theater today at noon. This picture will be reviewed in detail in tomorrow's issue of THE POST.

News 7-28

NEW JOB FOR "JOE" SULLIVAN

Leaves Senator Lewis to Become "Movie" Chief's Secretary.

Joseph R. Sullivan, who has been private secretary to James Hamilton Lewis ever since the latter became United States senator from Illinois, resigned that position to-day. He becomes secretary to Henry E. Aitken, with headquarters at 71 West 23d street, New York city. Mr. Aitken is president of the Reliance Film corporation, the Majestic Moving Picture corporation, the Epoch Producing company and the recently organized $5,000,000 Triangle Film corporation.

"Joe" Sullivan is well known in local democratic politics. He is a twin brother of William L. Sullivan, private secretary to Gov. Dunne, and a younger brother of Judge John J. Sullivan of the Municipal court. During the Dunne and Busse administrations as mayor he was confidential secretary to Chiefs of Police Collins and Shippy. Senator Lewis will take a new secretary with him when he returns to Washington.

Tribune 7-28

FLICKERINGS from FILM LAND

by KITTY KELLY

Look for the Lady in the Hoop Skirts.

LOOK for the lady in hoop skirts and ruffles, the lady who has apparently just stepped out of the pages of the past. She is to be seen in various places around town today and tomorrow and all the rest of the week and she has something that intimately concerns you, sympathizers with the Eastland sorrowers.

She is the special insurance agent to collect your help for the Eastland benefit fund, and in exchange for your offering she'll give you as a receipt your ticket—better make it tickets—to the special performance of "The Birth of a Nation" on Saturday morning at 10:30 at the Illinois theater, given under the auspices of THE TRIBUNE.

This ticket—or, better, these tickets, for it takes more than one to get the fullest enjoyment out of this tremendous photodrama—admits the bearer into a world of wonder quite beyond the possibilities of human imagination until he has seen it. That one man—namely: D. W. Griffith—could convene in his brain and execute into finished results such tremendous effects as the magnificent battle scenes, such exquisite miniatures as the dogs and kittens playing, Mae Marsh making ermine from cotton and soot, is beyond realization until "seeing is believing" proves it.

As the final achievement in photodrama to date this picture ranks first. No season in Chicago is complete without seeing it for it is heralded the country over as supreme, and it is its own best testimony as to the possibilities to which the cinemac art may attain.

People who live here cannot afford to miss it, for it is the subject on everybody's tongue, and people who are here only for a short time, visitors and students, cannot afford to go back to their homes without taking along a memory of it, to revive for "the folks" who have not been able to see it.

Saturday morning is a specially propitious occasion for fulfilling this cultural duty, for it may be combined as well with the mission humanitarian in which the whole city is engaged. Your pleasure in "The Birth of a Nation" will be so much sweetened by the idea that it is going to bring a bit of present help to some heart in sorrow over the tragic event of Saturday.

So don't forget about the little lady in the hoop skirts. Look her up and let her help you out for your Saturday forenoon. She'll be around town in various places and she'll be out at Northwestern university and the University of Chicago. And if you don't happen to see her just drop around to the Illinois theater's box office and buy your ticket from the central source of supplies.

* *

Miss Hoopskirts Selling Lieut.-Gov. O'Hara First Ticket to "Tribune" Benefit.

FOUR girl ushers from the Illinois theater, clad in their hoop skirt costumes, made a round of downtown restaurants last night selling tickets for the Eastland survivors' benefit performance of "The Birth of a Nation," arranged by "The Tribune" for Saturday morning at 10:30. The first ticket was bought by Lieut. Gov. Barratt O'Hara at the Stratford. Subsequently the hoop skirt girls visited the College Inn, the Lambs', the Bismarck Berlin room, and the La Salle roof.

Tribune 7-24

FLICKERINGS from FILM LAND

by KITTY KELLY

Want to See Henry Walthall?

Henry Walthall, whose portrayal of the Little Colonel in "The Birth of a Nation" caused him to be hailed as the world's greatest motion picture actor, will be present in person at "The Tribune's" Eastland benefit showing of the Griffith masterpiece in the Illinois theater at 10:30 o'clock Saturday morning. Mr. Walthall, who now is starring with the Essanay players, will give those who know his figure so well a chance to hear his voice.

The Melting Pot?

The Hon. (?) Thomas Dixon in proper costume. The South not satisfied with its persecution of the race below the Mason and Dixon line, sends its imps broadcast through the land.

Ct. 7-29

MAYOR RUSH MARKS OPENING OF TICKET SALE AT THEATER

Hundreds Buy Admission to All-Star Performance for Disaster Victims at Auditorium Tuesday.

Beauties of Stage Will Tour Loop in Autos to Assist Project; Manager Hardy Sees Big Success.

Mayor William Hale Thompson yesterday put the seal of his official approbation upon and gave assurance of his hearty support to the big theatrical benefit for Eastland sufferers to be given in the Auditorium Theater next Tuesday afternoon.

"This co-operation by the Chicago Theater Managers' Association and leading stage favorites is most gratifying and is worthy of the support of all Chicagoans," said the Mayor. "I shall attend the benefit and do anything I can to add to its success."

Sale of seats began with a rush yesterday at the Auditorium Theater.

To the experienced eye of the box office manager it was evident from the first that the all-star program arranged by the theater managers, with the assistance of the Examiner, will result in the sale of all seats, with the demand too great to allow all to be supplied.

In his many years of familiarity with theatrical events, Guy Hardy, manager of the Auditorium Theater, said he had never known such an eager and early popular rush for tickets.

Although there has never been a benefit whose program was as attractive as that of next Tuesday, the committee has not set the price of tickets one iota higher than those paid for ordinary performances at a first-class loop theater. There are 959 main floor tickets at $2 each, 1,073 front balcony seats at $2 each, 356 balcony seats at $1 each, 905 upper balcony seats at $1 each and 348 box seats at $2 each.

STARS EAGER TO ASSIST.

Miss Margaret Illington wired her representative, Harry S. Fulton, to subscribe for a box. She authorized an expenditure of $50, with the desire that the tickets for the box be returned to the committee for resale. Miss Illington telegraphed from Asbury Park, N. J., where she is giving three preliminary performances of the Henry Arthur Jones play, "The Lie," preparatory to her appearance at the Cort Theater August 8.

Every star and favorite now appearing in a loop theater has enlisted for the benefit, and offers of co-operation from talented and high-priced performers poured in yesterday upon the committee of managers. This committee includes Harry J. Ridings, Mort Singer, Sam P. Gerson, Lou M. Houseman, U. J. Herrmann, Louis Macloon, Augustus Pitou, Jr., George Bowles, J. J. Garrity, Harry Singer, W. R. Bennett, Silvio Hein, Wallace Decker, Fred Eberts, Ed Cordner, George Warren and Alfred Hamburger.

The difficulty that faced them in making up the program was a veritable embarras de richesse, too many stars, too many brilliant acts, too many favorites, even for a four-hour performance. Here are some of the acts selected:

Mlle. Valli Valli, Gertrude Vanderbilt, Edward Martindel and Josie Intropidi of "The Lady in Red" company from Cohan's Grand Opera House in a musical melange, including the songs, "Just Like Eve," "Beautiful Lady in Red," "Ships That Pass in the Night," "Mister Love Will Get You Yet," and two dances.

Josephine Harriman, dancer at the Hotel La Salle roof garden, in a "terpsichorean dream."

Baby Violet Stroud and two others of the Stroud Trio in "A Day in Songland."

Miss Ann Herndon, assisted by Olive Thorn and Neil Moore, all members of the "Lady in Red" Company, in the "The Pipes of Pan."

Gertrude Vanderbilt and thirty of the prettiest girls in the "Lady in Red" Company in her famous ragtime song.

Joseph Santley with the "All Beauties" chorus from the "All Over Town" Company in "Toddle, Toddle, All Over Town," and also in a humorous piece, "The Clock Shop," written by John L. Golden.

Glenn Hall and Mlle. Valli Valli of "The Lady in Red" Company in a duet specially written for the benefit.

Peggy O'Neill, star of "Peg o' My Heart," at the Cort Theater, with her dog, Mike.

Lou Houseman's films, showing Sarah Bernhardt at her chateau and estate at Belle Isle, France.

MUSICIANS OFFER SERVICES.

"Little Misses of '61" will sell flowers before and after the benefit dressed in the hoop skirts and pantalettes of the days of our grandmothers. It is also proposed by George Bowles, manager of the Illinois, to show a part of "The Birth of a Nation."

Will Phillips of Cohan's Grand Opera House will act as stage manager.

Ernest Woollett, president of the Chicago Federation of Musicians made Chairman Riddings an offer of the services of himself and fifty skilled musicians, which was gratefully accepted. President Robins of the American Posting Service volunteered to do all bill posting without charge.

Miss Annabelle Whitford, formerly of the Ziegfeld Follies, will have charge of the sale of programs.

A bevy of stage beauties, including Peggy O'Neil, star of "Peg o' My Heart" at the Cort Theater, Mlle. Valli Valli, Gertrude Vanderbilt, Phyllis Maude, Ann Herndon and Lucille Gardner of "The Lady in Red," Ruth Randall, Mignon McGibney, Dorothy Young, Beatrice Allen and Blanche Deyo of "All Over Town," and Florence Moore, Kathryn Andrews, Mlle. Yvette, Hazel Linden, Louise Mink, Minerva Coverdale, Rita Gould and Mlle. Dazie of "Maid in America" will make an automobile tour of the loop selling tickets for the performance.

F. O. Peers of the Midway Gardens

Tribune 7-30

Do you want to "DO YOUR BIT?"

Do you want to see the world's biggest photo-dramatic achievement, "The Birth of a Nation"?

Both desires can be accomplished tomorrow morning at THE TRIBUNE'S Eastland benefit showing of the picture at the Illinois theater.

Besides the picture's showing, there is going to be present in person its own hero and the recognized world's greatest film actor, Henry B. Walthall.

Several celebrities both in town and out bought tickets during the day. D. W. Griffith, who produced "The Birth of a Nation," sent the following wire from Los Angeles to Manager George Bowles of the Illinois theater:

Please buy for me one box for "Birth of Nation" account "Chicago Tribune" relief fund for Eastland sufferers for $100. Turn same over to "Tribune" to be auctioned off to the highest bidder. Extend to Mayor Thompson my sincere sympathy in Chicago's severest affliction. Thank "Tribune" for its wonderful response and cooperation.

Earlier in the day H. E. Aitken, former head of the Mutual Film corporation and now president of the newly organized Triangle Film company sent this:

Buy one gallery seat for me for "Birth of a Nation" Tribune relief fund for Eastland sufferers for $100.

Charles N. Wheeler of THE TRIBUNE will auction off the box and gallery seats at the board of trade this afternoon at 1 o'clock.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Heisen, the dancers, at the head of their ballet, buttonholed every likely spender. Peggy O'Neil, the "Peg" of "Peg O' My Heart," ran into Mrs. Neisen at the Auditorium and bought a pair of tickets.

The girls who sold tickets were: Marie Meyers, Florence Traver, Rae Cole, Pearl Germonde, Beatrice Young, Laura Lyle, Ruth Cotten, and Harriet Gustin. The first three are from the Bismarck Garden ballet; the others are members of the Heisen Follies, playing at the Stratford.

Herald 7-29

915.

SEEN ON TI

"Movie" Theater Owners Join To Aid Eastland Sufferers

THE attendance at the motion picture houses this week is divided between the interest in the pictures and the sympathetic thought of those who perished in the Eastland tragedy. The audiences laugh at the comedies and applaud the dramas, but in a half-hearted manner. Their hearts and minds are with that little colony in Hawthorne and Cicero, where nearly every little home bears the signal of mourning—streamers of crepe upon the door.

Among the first to come forward and offer financial assistance were those who own the picture houses.

\+ + +

Alfred Hamburger will give a benefit performance tomorrow afternoon at the Langley, Sixty-third street and Langely avenue; Willard, Fifty-first and Calumet avenue; Century, Forty-seventh street and Prairie avenue; Pickford, Thirty-fifth street and Michigan avenue; Pine Grove, Sheridan road and Pine Grove avenue, and Argmore, Argyle street and Kenmore avenue. In addition to these outlying houses, Mr. Hamburger will open his Ziegfeld Theater and give an entertainment consisting of "the Melting Pot" and "Puppet Crown." The theater will be open from 10 o'clock in the morning until 5:45 in the afternoon. The outlying theaters will open at 2:30 o'clock and continue until 6 o'clock.

The proceeds will be turned into the HERALD relief fund and will be used to alleviate the sufferers in this appalling disaster.

The admission price will be 25 cents. Twelve reels will be shown. This is the golden opportunity for those who wish to add their mite to the fund. Mr. Hamburger is naturally anxious to have the receipts as large as possible. Let all the "fans" and their friends join hands to make the amount as large as we can.

\+ + +

Jones, Linick & Schaefer have set aside Thursday night to help the sufferers. They will give all the receipts from their theaters to the relief fund. This will include all of the theaters in the Jones, Linick & Schaefer circuit.

"The Birth of a Nation" at the Illinois will have a benefit performance Saturday morning at 10 o'clock.

Many of the small theaters in the outlying districts will have a special performance to aid the victims of the Eastland. In fact, all the "movie" portion of Chicago will do its share toward helping the needy.

Ed Q. Cordner, manager of Orchestra Hall, has set aside Saturday morning, the children's hour, for the Eastland sufferers.

"We have subscribed to the fund," said Mr. Cordner, "and, in addition, we expect to turn over the proceeds from the Saturday morning entertainment to the benefit fund."

\+ + +

The General Film Company and Mrs. Carter H. Harrison announce that they will donate the use of Mrs. Harrison's photoplay, "The Lady of the Snows," to any picture theater or theatrical manager wishing to give a benefit performance for the Eastland sufferers.

Dates can be obtained by phoning Central 8039.

"The Lady of the Snows" is an Essanay feature in three acts, and is one of the popular pictures of the season.

The fund will be turned over to the relief committee headed by Mayor William Hale Thompson.

Tribune 7-29

"Little Colonel" at Eastland Benefit.

HENRY B. WALTHALL.

TWO Little Colonels will be seen at the special showing of "The Birth of a Nation" in the Illinois theater Saturday morning for the benefit of Eastland survivors.

One will be the Little Colonel of the screen, the other the Little Colonel of the flesh—Henry B. Walthall, hailed as a result of his work in Griffith's film masterpiece as the world's greatest motion picture actor.

With the heroic little figure of the man about whom the fastest action of "The Birth of a Nation" centers picture audiences the country over are familiar. Mr. Walthall, now starring with the Essanay company, will give Saturday morning's benefit audience a chance to hear his voice. From the stage he will talk to the Good Fellows "out front."

Every dollar the benefit tickets bring will go, through THE TRIBUNE, into Mayor Thompson's relief fund. To the last penny the Eastland orphans and the Eastland widows will have their struggle for livelihood lightened by the proceeds. The prices of seats will be just what they are at regular performances.

There were just 1,200 of the benefit to start with, and the rest will go fast when the special ticket booth in the Illinois theater lobby is opened this morning.

Good Fellows, are you going to DO YOUR BIT?

FLICKERINGS from FILM LAND

by KITTY KELLY

Want to See Henry Walthall?

Henry Walthall, whose portrayal of the Little Colonel in "The Birth of a Nation" caused him to be hailed as the world's greatest motion picture actor, will be present in person at "The Tribune's" Eastland benefit showing of the Griffith masterpiece in the Illinois theater at 10:30 o'clock Saturday morning. Mr. Walthall, who now is starring with the Essanay players, will give those who know his figure so well a chance to hear his voice.

his daughters without an exacting precocity on his part.

Mind you, "Madame Sarah Bernhardt at Home" is not a dramatic picture. It has none of the Griffith tricks, nothing of the huge Griffith drama. But it has certain naturalness that is irresistible. I've seen Sarah movied in a real play, and—to put it politely—thought it rotten.

But this is the real Sarah, without vaudevile frameup or a bogus leg. I say this only because it has been my great fortune to know Sarah Bernhardt herself.

Ex. 7-29

BERNHARDT AT HOME REAL PICTURE

Movie of House Party Shows Her Buoyant Youthfulness Infecting All.

BY ASHTON STEVENS.

LOU HOUSEMAN and George Bowles, worthy, if not needy, agents of publicity, got their friends up at noon the other day to see Sarah Bernhardt with two legs in an intimate screen entitled "Madame Sarah Bernhardt at Home."

Some of the critics, who had already squandered their vacation, were there bright and early at the Illinois; and no doubt [illegible] course of a devitalized the [illegible] season their papers [illegible] find space for their more or less classic review of how Madame Sarah used to move, look and listen when the absent member of her small legion of lower limbs was intact.

In "Madame Bernhardt at Home" we find a charming hostess who is as unafraid of the ocean as though she had been born in an American bath tub. She engages in deep-sea prawning—shrimping, as one would call it who threw his first net west of the Rockies—and also foreshore prawning, which is done not clamily with a shovel, but sportsmanly with a net as deadly as one of those used in the old Roman games.

And the brace of legs require no certification. They are lithe, active and live.

* * *

WHEN Sam Davis cabled from the '49 Camp at the World's Exposition for terms for the exhibition of the Bernhardt leg she quite properly replied, "Which one?"—thereby lifting Bob Davis' patronymic to the estate of fame held now only by Richard Harding and Oscar King.

She is a grand old Girl, is Sarah Bernhardt. San Francisco was down when I witnessed her performance of "Phedre" in the Greek theater given to the University of California by the distinguished gentleman whose most minor feat in journalism has been conspiring with his editors to keep me at work. What a Phedre! What thousands-on-thousands in the audience. Oh, for a movie of that!

But Griffith, the man that filmed "The Birth of a Nation," was then only a stock actor at San Francisco's Alcazar, and the last time I saw him he said that habitually I had reported him to the public as a notably bad actor. Far be it from me to say I drove him into the pictures. But, if he insists too hard, I'll make my modest plea of guilty.

* * *

BUE we stray from Madame Bernhardt, one of the hardest things I do. I was hers from a child. I all but hated the nights when Duse and Fiske taught me a new acting along with a new drama.

Bernhardt is all theater. Her veins run grease paint. She can cry to order. She can sing prose to arouse a composer's envy. Against all intelligence I loved her for keeping old art young.

And the one day I wanted her to act, to act all over the city, she wouldn't do it.

Arnold Genthe, the best camera artist on any continent, and I drove her through the ruins of San Francisco. She declined to act up to the terrific mise-en-scena. She was mute, with the tears cutting into her paint and powder like acid. She was dramatically useless for picture or pen.

When Sarah acts she acts, and only then.

* * *

THIS picture of her house party on Belle Isle, Brittany, shows it. Here again is she all naturalness, all buoyancy, all Sarah the friend of art and mankind. Rejoicing in her own fabulous youth, she infects it among what looks like three generations. Her son Gerald looks perfectly the second, and many of the gay girls could be

Tribune July 30

10

FLICKERINGS from FILM LAND

By KITTY KELLY

HENRY B. WALTHALL

DO you want to see Henry B. Walthall, the world's greatest motion picture leading man? Do you want to hear Henry B. Walthall, the star of more great feature productions than any other player?

As the "Little Colonel" alone in "The Birth of a Nation" he has appeared celluloidly in nearly fifteen hundred performances from Los Angeles to New York. Never once has he doubled his film appearance with a flesh one. For the first time tomorrow morning, at "The Tribune's" Eastland benefit showing of "The Birth of a Nation" at the Illinois theater, he will appear in person with his picture.

Not even in Los Angeles, where the picture was made and where he lived at the time of its opening, did he make a personal appearance in the theater showing it. He is a modest man and doesn't like to make speeches, but for the sake of the Eastland sufferers he has consented to do so, even though he has to take himself away from a scene in which he is working at the Essanay studio.

Herald

~~[illegible]~~ 7-30

THE SCREEN By LO

Signing Up Billie Burke

Tom Ince had an idea. He wished to bring Billie Burke to Inceville and convert her into a motion-picture actress. The story that Miss Burke had succumbed to the lure of the camera was flashed over the wires several weeks ago, but the long time it took to get her signature, the bundle of money demanded and the hours of lost sleep are just being related.

It's all over now, and Tom Ince sleeps peacefully, happy that he has acquired the brilliant little luminary of the theatrical firmament to shine in the "movie" constellation.

Kenneth O'Hara says: "Thomas H. Ince is not too proud to be a pursuer. He pursued the evasive almighty dollar until, by sheer determination and high artistic ability, he captured it. Little is the wonder then that he didn't hesitate to pursue Billie Burke. She will mean as much, if not a whole lot more, to the motion-picture art than either the almighty dollar or human interest. So thought Ince when he began the chase and became a member of the "Amalgamated Order of Pursuers."

The first attempt cost Mr. Ince less than a dollar. He sent a telegram. It read: "Want you to star in pictures." The reply was: "Cannot consider it now. Perhaps later."

Ince did not lose heart, but gritted his teeth and started all over again.

Time went on. Telegrams followed each other all over the United States. The necessary word was missing in each, but still Mr. Ince did not lose heart.

Miss Burke was starring in "Jerry." She came to Los Angeles to play.

By dint of much strategy and maneuvering the actress was brought to the very gates of Inceville, the place where Thomas H. reigns supreme.

Miss Burke was converted. She didn't say so that day, but the elaborate sets used by Ince and his skill as a director won her. Later, as a result of this visit, she visited the New York offices of Kessel & Bauman and wrote the much-sought name of Billie Burke opposite "Party of the first part." The amount involved is $40,000, that sum to be paid for five weeks' work.

Mr. Ince, the pursuer, captured the desired prize, and once more rests content—content in the knowledge that he has given an artist to the picture-play lovers of the world.

Tribune 7-31

Sells Tickets for Eastland Benefit.

MISS DIXIE BALDWIN
PHOTO MONFORT

This morning at 10:30 o'clock the film drama, "The Birth of a Nation," will be shown to the hundreds of persons who have bought tickets to help swell THE TRIBUNE Eastland relief fund.

Pretty girls from the Helsen Follies invaded the "pit" of the board of trade yesterday and sold the traders more than $50 worth of tickets. The Bismarck Garden Ballet sold a like amount at the garden. Miss Dixie Baldwin made the largest individual sale of the day—exceeding $28.

Flowers will be sold at the performance. Annabelle Whitford will have charge of the flower girls—Veronica McNeil, Dorothy Collins, Gertrude Jacobs, Marie Astor, Gertrude Azemar, Elsie Lowenstein, and Helen Utter.

Tribune 7-30

Promoters of film-making companies, finding the peddling of stock a fading game in New York, are working Chicago, Milwaukee, Cleveland, Pittsburgh, and Cincinnati. Their argumentative catch-line is, of course, this: "Believe me, sir, pictures are only in their infancy!"

Tribune July 30 1915

THE CHICAGO DAILY TRIBU

DOING THEIR BIT.

Diamond Jim Brady and Board of Trade Men Were Among the Purchasers of Tickets to "Birth of a Nation" Eastland Benefit for Saturday Morning

BEATRICE YOUNG OF THE HEISEN FOLLIES SELLING TICKETS TO "DIAMOND JIM" BRADY

Do you want to "DO YOUR BIT?"

Do you want to see the world's biggest photo-dramatic achievement, "The Birth of a Nation"?

Both desires can be accomplished tomorrow morning at THE TRIBUNE'S Eastland benefit showing of the picture at the Illinois theater.

Besides the picture's showing, there is going to be present in person its own hero and the recognized world's greatest film actor, Henry B. Walthall.

Several celebrities both in town and out bought tickets during the day. D. W. Griffith, who produced "The Birth of a Nation," sent the following wire from Los Angeles to Manager George Bowles of the Illinois theater:

> Please buy for me one box for "Birth of Nation" account "Chicago Tribune" relief fund for Eastland sufferers for $100. Turn same over to "Tribune" to be auctioned off to the highest bidder. Extend to Mayor Thompson my sincere sympathy in Chicago's severest affliction. Thank "Tribune" for its wonderful response and cooperation.

Earlier in the day H. E. Aitken, former head of the Mutual Film corporation and now president of the newly organized Triangle Film company sent this:

> Buy one gallery seat for me for "Birth of a Nation" Tribune relief fund for Eastland sufferers for $100.

Charles N. Wheeler of THE TRIBUNE will auction off the box and gallery seats at the board of trade this afternoon at 1 o'clock.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Heisen, the dancers, at the head of their ballet, buttonholed every likely spender. Peggy O'Neil, the "Pegs" of "Peg O' My Heart," ran into Mrs. Neisen at the Auditorium and bought a pair of tickets.

The girls who sold tickets were: Marie Meyers, Florence Traver, Rae Cole, Pearl Germonde, Beatrice Young, Laura Lyle, Ruth Cotten, and Harriet Gustin. The first three are from the Bismarck Garden ballet; the others are members of the Heisen Follies, playing at the Stratford.

Tribune 7-31.

Melville Ellis will add to his manifold other activities the designing of the costumes for D. W. Griffith's filming of "The Holy Grail." He will come to Chicago later in the season as a member of the company headed by Elsie Janis.

July 31—

THE CHICAGO DAILY TRIBUNE: SATURDAY, JULY

FLICKERINGS from FILM LAND

by KITTY KELLY

MISS LILLIAN GISH

MISS MAE MARSH

HENRY B. WALTHALL

Mae Marsh and Lillian Gish, a la celluloid, and Henry Walthall, himself and his film shadow, will be seen this morning at "The Tribune's" Eastland benefit showing of "The Birth of a Nation" at the Illinois theater. Are you going to help the survivors and at the same time see the world's greatest moving picture?

Eastland Benefits for Old and Young.

TWO stirring benefit events occupy the attention of Saturday morningers in pictureland. There is the big affair at the Illinois, where "The Birth of a Nation," filmland's sensation, unreels at 10:30 for THE TRIBUNE'S Eastland fund. Besides the picture, the star of it, Henry Walthall, is going to shine in person as well as celluloidly.

But folks have to be 21 to be able to go there, and over at Orchestra hall is a place for the folks not of age. The Strand's regular morning matinee for little folks is turned into an Eastland benefit, where happy children may help those who are unhappy. It's a joy promising program, what with "The Sleeping Beauty," a bird picture, and one about a runaway leopard, and besides, Margot, a little classic dancer, and Harry Fullan Ayres, a young violinist, will perform. The party begins at 10 o'clock.

Today has only one picture change. "The Puppet Crown" at the Ziegfeld is succeeded by "Silver Threads Among the Gold" production, containing Richard J. Jose as the hero. The further announcement is that Mr. Jose will also appear in person at every performance of the picture and at appropriate times "render" three popular ballads, among them the inspiration of the picture.

On Monday the delightful Marguerite Clark in "Seven Sisters" disappears from the Strand's screen, replaced by the always delightful Mary Pickford in one of her typical plays, "Rags."

"Sealed Valley," with Dorothy Donnelly, comes to the Studebaker, succeeding "The Second in Command," and "The Fighting Hope," with Laura Hope Crews, appears at the Colonial.

The pictures continuing are "The Melting Pot" at the Fine Arts, "The Blindness of Virtue" at the La Salle, and "The Birth of a Nation" at the Illinois.

* *

Flickers.

Harold Lockwood is going to step out of features for a while into some two reel subjects for the American company, which will let those folks who like him see him often, as he will be in a number of program releases until arrangements are completed for more feature appearances.

Dorothy Gish is doing her vacationing at the San Francisco fair. She has her mother with her, and sister Lillian, who is best known as Elsie Stoneman in "The Birth of a Nation," is at home in Los Angeles confabbing with a Paris modiste in regard to an elaborate wardrobe which she is to use in a forthcoming feature.

Signs of the times—the notes that come rolling in from old Majestic-Reliance studios at 4500 Sunset boulevard, Los Angeles, now bear the label "Griffith Studio."

Edna Mayo, Essanay, is an advocate of the "smile an hour" beauty treatment. She declares that, if carefully followed, in a week the follower will be rewarded by a better looking reflection in the mirror. In addition to the smile system she prescribes a banishment of troubled thoughts which reflect themselves physically as ugliness.

Journal July 31

ILLINOIS—"The Birth of a Nation" enters into its third record-breaking month. Every one goes away thrilled with the wonder of this greatest motion picture. Many people have seen "The Birth of a Nation" two and three times.

American 7/31

CHICAGO EVENING AME

'BIRTH OF A NATION' AN INSTITUTION

City Has Adopted the Griffith Production—Programs in Film Houses.

BY ROB REEL.

"The Birth of a Nation" now enters its third record-smashing month of public favor at the Illinois Theater. Although two performances are given daily, not one opens without the significant appearance of the placard in the foyer—All Seats Sold.

It is the "Resta driven" success on the speedway of theatrical popularity.

D. W. Griffith's masterpiece has become a good deal more than a popular attraction in Chicago. It is now firmly established entertainment that is seen over and over again by the most critical play-goers. Many of these declare that they intend to visit "The Birth of a Nation" at frequent and regular intervals, if the historic spectacle remains in Chicago a year or more.

In the itinerary of thousands of Summer visitors "The Birth of a Nation" ranks in importance with the Art Institute, the Field Museum and the park system.

Post Aug 1st

ILLINOIS—Chicago's foremost amusement institution, "The Birth of a Nation," now enters its third record-smashing month of public favor at the Illinois Theater. The "al seats sold" sign appears at both performances every day. D. W. Griffith's masterpiece has become a good deal more than a popular attraction in Chicago. It is now a firmly established entertainment that is seen over and over again by the city's most critical playgoers.

Rev 7-31

D. W. Griffith has engaged Melville Ellis to design the costumes to be worn for the feature motion picture with the story of the holy grail for its theme. Mr. Ellis, who will be seen in the fall in the comedy in which Elsie Janis will be starred, is spending the summer in California, where the picture will be taken.

Examiner 8/1

Melville Ellis is to be with Miss Elsie Janis in her new play, now called "The Missing Link." Also he is to design the costumes for D. W. Griffith's forthcoming big movie, "The Holy Grail."

Sunday ad - Aug 15th

Grand Aug 1st

ILLINOIS THEATRE

TWICE DAILY
(INCLUDING SUNDAYS)
AFTERNOONS AT 2:15
EVENINGS AT 8:10

EVENINGS AND SATURDAY MATS.
Orchestra.....$1 and $2
First Balcony..50c, 75c and $1
Second Balcony....25c and 50c

Seats Selling 4 Weeks In Advance
MAIL and TELEGRAPH requests accompanied by check will be filled in the order of their receipt. Patrons will aid us in accommodating them by naming two dates if possible.

OTHER MATINEES
Orchestra....50c and $1
Balcony.....50c and $1
Second Balcony.....25c

D. W. GRIFFITH'S 8th WONDER OF THE WORLD

THIRD TRIUMPHANT MONTH

5,000 SCENES

18,000 PEOPLE

THE BIRTH OF A NATION

LINCOLN
GRANT
LEE
APPOMATTOX
PETERSBURG
PIEDMONT
FORD'S THEATRE
THE WILD RIDES OF THE CLANS

COST $500,000.00

3,000 HORSES

A COMPOSITION OF NATIONAL FIGURES—THE UNIVERSE ITS BACKGROUND.

MOST EXTRAORDINARY AND WONDERFUL ART CONQUEST SINCE CIVILIZATION BEGAN.

TWO OF THE SWEETEST LOVE STORIES EVER TOLD.

! ITS DYNAMIC FORCE HAS ELECTRIFIED CHICAGO !

HIGHLY IMPORTANT: "The Birth of a Nation" Will Never Be Presented at Any but the Highest Class Theatres and at Prices Customarily Charged in Such Playhouses.

D. W. GRIFFITH.

Tribune 8/2/15

ILLINOIS THEATER | TWICE DAILY Including SUNDAYS

EV'GS & SAT. MAT.
Orchestra.....$1 & $2
1st Bal'cy,50c,75c & $1
2d Balcony...25c & 50c

OTHER MATINEES
Orchestra....50c & $1
1st Balcony...50c & $1
2d Balcony 25c

MATINEES 2:15—NIGHTS 8:10

D. W. GRIFFITH'S Gigantic Spectacle

The Birth 18,000 PEOPLE

3,000 HORSES of a Nation

ORCHESTRA OF 50—COST $500,000.00
SEATS SELLING 4 WEEKS AHEAD

Dreadnaught Orchestra for "Birth of a Nation"

A "dreadnaught orchestra," a musical organization worthy of playing at the head of a regiment of six-foot grenadiers, supplies the powerful accompaniments for "The Birth of a Nation" at the Illinois Theater. Every man of the fifty players is not only an accomplished artist, but a harmonic Hercules, performing a nightly endurance test which would appall a hardened athlete.

Three solid hours of playing, with only one rest interval of six minutes, is the task undertaken twice daily by the special orchestra with D. W. Griffith's spectacular masterpiece. The whole gamut of orchestra harmony, from soft plantation tunes and croons to the terrific battle music, is run by the lengthy score written for "The Birth of a Nation." The quick changes and violent contrasts from soft to heavy, from gay to tragic, impose a severe tax on the nerves of the musicians, whose vigilance must never relax for a moment during the three hours of playing.

Every musician in the Griffith orchestra was selected not only for artistic proficiency but because of hardy physique, chest measurement, lung expansion and comparative absence of "nerves."

With "The Birth of a Nation" the position of orchestra leader advances to a plane of new importance in the world of entertainment. O. L. Mayhood is the conductor. There are 214 separate music cues in a performance of "The Birth of a Nation." The cue is marked by certain action seen on the screen by the director, and this he must communicate by baton or spark lever to his many subordinates. Some of these cues call for the softest melody, dainty to the degree of gossamer. With the quickness of lightning the orchestra must plunge into the wildest, fiercest fanfare of savage war music. The sw... deness of the changes is account... by the fact that Director Griffith te... the story of "The Birth of a Natio... with swift transitions from bat... scene to quiet fireside, from swe... love episode to deed of violent mu... der. And the music of thirty mus... clans must shift in theme with t... quickness of whirling celluloid fil...

Mayhood is qualified for the lea... ership of this skillful corps of m... sicians. For two years he was in t... United States regulars as bandmas... of the Third Infantry. One of t... most stirring incidents in "The Bi... of a Nation" is the review of a co... federate regiment, leaving brave... and gaily for the front at the beg... ning of the civil war. The playing... "Dixie" by the orchestra is render... with a vim and a dash which sets t... blood of every spectator tingli... Later on "Marching Through Georgi... is rendered in the same dashing ma... ner.

Trumpet calls in the battle scen... of "The Birth of a Nation" are re... military calls, not the languid editi... of these signals given by the avera... orchestra cornist. Three trumpete... all with military experience, a... members of the orchestra. They a... able to sound "reveille" with the s... pert staccatto of an army "toote... and clarion the battle order "charg... with wild and joyous ferocity. Lik... wise they sound "taps" for the dea... with the lingering mournfulness th... reaches every heart.

The rallying call of the "Klu Klu... Klan" is a weird, haunting combina... tion of two notes and heads the m... sical theme of the second part o... "The Birth of a Nation." It is a... trumpet call peculiarly consistent... with the secret purposes of the whit... clad night riders of the South.

FLICKERINGS from FILM LAND

By KITTY KELLY

Two Loop Houses Taken by Triangle.

PROMISES by the Triangle Film corporation, recently formed by rebellious Mutualers, to give Chicagoans a chance to see its productions in two loop playhouses have been fulfilled.

The Studebaker and the Colonial have been taken over by the Griffith-Ince-Sennett combine, and Chicagoans soon will have the opportunity to see if the much heralded Triangle program fulfills its sponsors' predictions.

The advent of the new corporation into the local field also marks the retirement of two playhouses from the Jones, Linick & Schaeffer list of theaters. The Studebaker will be a permanent Triangle stronghold, opening about Sept. 6, it is understood. At that time the J., L. & S. flag will be hauled down and the Metro program now being given will be discontinued.

At the Colonial a different arrangement will be in effect. There, "The Birth of a Nation" will flip over from the Illinois on Aug. 23. It will run as long as Chicago takes enough interest to make it pay D. W. Griffith to keep it there. Film folk think this will be until about Dec. 1. At that date the $2 schedule will drop back to the present popular prices and Jones, Linick & Schaeffer will resume management with either vaudeville or feature pictures.

Another Film Row.

Well, here's a tempest in our own local motion picture teapot.

Along comes a note from Henry McRae Webster, director (or is it ex-director?) for the United Photo-Plays company, who has been at work with Gerda Holmes and Wilmuth Merkyl producing a five part feature picture, "The Victory of Virtue," announcing himself as at liberty with his company to make any production ordered by anybody. He explains also that he has made arrangements by which, if he wishes, he may take over the studios recently built at 2332 North California avenue.

Then along close on the heels of that comes a note from the United Photo-Plays company remarking firmly that Mr. Webster has not ceased relations with said company, since he is under a contract until Jan. 1 which can be canceled only by death or mutual agreement. The United Photo-Plays company express no intention either of material dissolution or of amicable relinquishment. So, once again, there y'are.

MRS. R. E. FRENCH

Sob Film Brings Hearty Laughter

"SILVER THREADS AMONG THE GOLD."

at the Ziegfeld.

Produced by K. & R. company.
Released by Celebrated Players' company.

Dick Martin	Richard J. Jose
Mrs. Martin	Mrs. R. E. French
Tom Martin	Guy D'Ennery
Jim Bradbury	Philip Quin
Mrs. Bradbury	Della Buckridge
Mary Chester	Dora Dean
Mrs. Chester	Anna Day
Judge Walcott	Jack Ridgway
Howard Baldwin	Carroll Johnson
Mrs. Baldwin	Jean Barry
Lucy Baldwin	Katherine Lee

THESE and many more contributes to the contents of the six reels, elaborated into a story out of the inspiration somebody's mind drew from the words of the old song, "Silver Threads Among the Gold."

The picture, to my notion, shares the distinction rather universally—in Chicago—accorded to one of its recent predecessors at another loop house, "Prohibition."

Maybe it is not quite so bad, and on Saturday afternoon a number of people laughed heartily—but, of course, there are two kinds of laughter and this is not a comedy.

It has in it a great many things besides people. There are crystallizations of many situations familiar from long usage.

Mr. Jose sings his ballads as per schedule, and the regular musical accompaniment for the whole picture comes from a piano and violin.

Juvenile Benefit Nets $600.

The juvenile benefit at Orchestra hall on Saturday morning was a big occasion for the little folks. A lot of them were present, to an extent that brought in nearly $600 for the Eastland fund.

* *

Triangle Film Just Business Venture, Says Its President

The interest of the public in the shares of the newly organized Triangle Film Company has been so acute since they were first quoted on the curb that President H. E. Aitken has found it necessary to publish advertisements pointing out that the corporation is the ordinary business venture and not of the bonanza type, with guaranteed profits and certainty of large return.

The personnel of the organizers of the company is largely responsible for the widespread belief that financially, the Triangle Film will be another Syndicate Film on a larger scale.

Aitken has the reputation of one who built the Mutual Film Company, of which he was president. C. O. Baumann and Adam and Charles Kessel were formerly connected with the New York Motion Picture Corporation of unparalleled prosperity. David W. Griffith, Mack Sennett and Thomas H. Ince are the three foremost art directors in the film world. Griffith achieved his greatest success in the $2-a-seat, "The Birth of a Nation." Mack Sennett will continue to produce his "Keystone Comedies" for the Triangle. Griffith and Ince each will produce a five-reel picture weekly.

Still Another "Movie" Rumor Proves Only Mere Gossip

CONTRARY to reports, the Colonial and Studebaker will remain under the management of the Jones, Linick & Schaefer Company.

"A booking arrangement has been entered into by Jones, Linick & Schaefer, operators of the Colonial Theater," said Ralph Kettering, advertising manager of this company, "whereby 'The Birth of a Nation' will be transferred from the Illinois Theater to the Colonial on Sunday, Aug. 22. The present Paramount policy of the Colonial will terminate Aug. 16, and the following six days will be devoted to renovation.

\+ \+ \+

"Jones, Linick & Schaefer," said Mr. Kettering, in a most emphatic manner, "will not give up this theater. Norman Fields will continue to represent the company as manager of the Colonial. The same $2 prices, of course, will continue.

"The Studebaker also will be under the management of Jones, Linick & Schaefer. A change in our booking policy does away with the Metro pictures and installs the new Griffith-Ince-Sennett production. The Triangle Film Company bookings will begin Sept. 15."

\+ \+ \+

"What about the Triangle management?" Mr. Kettering was asked.

"All nonsense," was the reply. "Louis J. Jones remains as manager of the Studebaker. I cannot see how any other report could have originated."

Therefore the bomb exploded yesterday in the "movie" circles announcing that Jones, Linick & Schaefer would give up two of their largest motion picture houses is like many similar reports—made of bubbles. The company will still control its own houses and keep its present managers.

The returns from the "movie" benefits show that the Eastland sufferers will receive substantial aid. The Hamburger benefit will amount to $600, while the children brought to Orchestra Hall something like $700. This with the "Birth of a Nation" benefit and the money received at the various outlying picture houses will make the "movies'" contribution to humanity worth while.

HOUSES BOOK TRIANGLE FILMS

Studebaker and Colonial Show Output of New Concern.

Negotiations have been completed by the Triangle Film company to present its feature attractions in the Studebaker and Colonial theaters, one house to be occupied permanently and the other only until the public ceases to patronize a current attraction which will be moved to it the latter part of this month. "The Birth of a Nation" will be removed from the Illinois theater to the Colonial Sunday, Aug. 22, while the Studebaker theater will present the new Triangle program at dramatic prices, beginning Sept. 15.

Both theaters are in possession of Jones, Linick & Schaefer, Chicago "movie" magnates, who will retain the management of them during the Triangle's occupancy. In a statement issued yesterday by Aaron Jones, president of the theatrical concern, he said:

"We have not relinquished our leases for the Colonial and Studebaker theaters, as was reported, but have merely entered into a booking arrangement with the film producing concern, as we would with any other theatrical or motion picture company wishing to present attractions at our playhouses. During the presentation of Triangle photo plays at our houses we will retain control of them and our managers will continue to supervise the direction of their respective theaters—Louis Jones at the Studebaker and Norman Fields at the Colonial."

The Colonial will house "The Birth of a Nation," opening August 22, but this is only a booking arrangement. The Studebaker on September 15 will begin showing the new Griffith-Ince-Sennet productions at a $2 top price. Both theaters remain under the direction of Jones, Linick & Schaefer.

* * *

Examiner Aug 3rd

Chicago Examiner...The Ba

LADY FOR EASTLAND

TWO STARS BOOKED FOR "GREATEST SHOW"

Miss Gertrude Jacobs and Miss Annabelle Whitford, who will take part in big Eastland benefit at the Auditorium today. These two are among the beauties who will make the show memorable in Chicago theatrical affairs.

CAUTION URGED FOR BOAT IN'O

Special Inspector of Eastla Warned Against Crowding o Passengers on Steamer.

Possibility of charges of crimi negligence being brought against ficials of the United States steamb Inspection service is said to lurk evidence presented yesterday bef Secretary of Comerce Redfield's

8/2/15

Warning!

From the moment the organization of the Triangle Film Corportation was announced, all sorts of fantastic tales of fabulous expenditure and still more fabulous profits, have been flying about.

Based chiefly on fact, these stories have, in some cases, grown into such gross exaggerations as to amount to misrepresentation.

Dealing with a subject that interests more than half the people of the United States, such exaggeration is not unnatural.

Most of the stock of the Triangle Film Corporation is held by Mr. Griffith, producer of "The Birth of a Nation"; Mr. Ince, producer of "The Battle of Gettysburg" and other big pictures of the big outdoors; Mr. Sennett, producer of "Keystone Comedies"; Messrs. Bauman & Kessel, proprietors of the New York Motion Picture Corportation, myself or others directly concerned in the management. All of this stock is deposited for two years and cannot come on sale.

The remainder has been underwritten by a syndicate which will in turn dispose of it through brokers in the open market.

While I, and the experienced and successful motion picture men who are with me in this Company, have every reason to believe the business will be highly profitable, and while it is, in our opinion, extremely likely that the stock will advance rapidly in value, there is no authority whatever for the statement that either the Company itself or any of its officers guarantees or promises dividends of given amount or within a stated time.

Any business yielding such amazing profits as this business yields is subject to great risks.

It is not the type of investment for the man who cannot afford the chance of loss.

The total capital is $5,000,000 — all common stock, par value $5.

There are no bonds—no notes—no preferred shares.

No matter how great nor how prompt his dividends a stockholder is not satisfied if he has been led to expect something greater or quicker.

So—

While I believe this venture will be even more profitable than any of my earlier ones, I am making no definite predictions as to date or amount And no one else has any authority to make them—

I want satisfied stockholders—

Which is why I am printing this advertisement.

H. E. Aitken

President, Triangle Film Corporation,
71 West 23d Street, New York.

Examiner Aug 4-1915

ONE OF STARS IN EASTLAND BENEFIT PERFORMANCE AND STAGE BEAUTIES WHO SOLD PROGRAMS AND FLOWERS

At the extreme left is Valli Valli and her dog. She is from "The Lady in Red" company at Cohan's Grand Opera House, and she appeared in "Do You Remember That Night in June When First We Met?" To the right, at the top, left to right, are Meta V. Peterson of the "Birth of a Nation" company at the Illinois Theater, and Louise Mink and Bly Brown of "Maid in America" at the Palace Music Hall. Below, in hoop skirts, are, left to right, Dorothy Collins and Gertrude Azemar of the "Birth of a Nation." Their efforts added considerably to the relief fund.

Examiner
THE AMERICAN PEOPLE'S
ST 4, 1915. WEDNESDAY. Registered U. S. Patent Office. PRICE ONE C

U. S. DEMAI

THAW, UNRECOGNIZED, STROLLS IN LOOP

BUYS TICKETS FOR EASTLAND BENEFIT

HARRY THAW BUYING BENEFIT TICKETS

After Harry Thaw returned from his stroll about the loop yesterday he entered the Auditorium Theater and bought ten Eastland benefit tickets at $1 apiece. He refused to pose with an actress, but agreed to have his picture taken with Miss Helen Utter, an usher.

Photo by International News Service

...to Tourist to Continue Trip to Fair When Muddy Roads Are Dried.

Harry Kendall Thaw, probably the most photographed and interviewed man in the world, for three hours yesterday rambled through the streets [illegible] dodged automobiles and [illegible] pedestrians [illegible] gressman Charles S. Wharton, a personal friend, joined him. As Thaw concluded his purchases Wharton gave the Pittsburgher's name and [illegible] was might be sent to him.

"Which one of you is Mr. Thaw?"

GERMAN VAN IS 20 MILES FROM RIGA

Lines About Warsaw Tightened; Duma to Punish Munition Lack; Russ See White 'Victory Ghost'

By International News Service.

BERLIN, Aug. 3.—General von Buelow's cavalry army, which swept through Mitau on Sunday, is now only twenty miles from the important Russian port city of Riga on the Baltic Sea.

Field Marshal von Mackensen's army, southeast of Warsaw, has also made further progress and now the gap in the semi-circle around Warsaw is only 100 miles wide at its narrowest point east of the city.

While the wings of the Austro-German forces are being drawn closer the army of Field Marshal von Hindenburg is standing firm in front of the city, and the Russian forts are being shelled by the mightiest howitzers of the Teutonic forces.

NO ATTEMPT TO STORM.

PETROGRAD, Aug. 3.—With sanguinary fighting in progress northeast and southeast of Warsaw, where the Teutonic allies are struggling to draw closer the horns of the semi- [illegible] stretches around

BENEFIT FOR EASTLAND'S SUFFERERS NETS $3,000

Auditorium Theater Packed at Star Performance Arranged by Managers, Aided by Examiner.

Mayor Praises Chicagoans for Hearty Response for Relief; Harry K. Thaw Occupies Box.

More than $3,000 was raised for the Eastland sufferers at the mammoth benefit in the Auditorium Theater yesterday, arranged by the Chicago Theater Managers' Association, with the assistance of the Chicago Examiner.

Mrs. Potter Palmer and many other society leaders sat in the boxes, and the enormous auditorium was crowded to its limit.

Mayor Thompson was loudly applauded when he appeared on the stage at the opening. He said:

"It is very gratifying to me to be permitted to participate in this noble and generous enterprise, arranged by the show folks in Chicago for the relief of the want and misery following in the wake of the Eastland disaster.

"The promptness with which this benefit was planned is typical of the people behind the movement. There was never, to my knowledge, a great public calamity involving suffering and distress that did not have the immediate and generous support of [illegible] so many men and women with warm open hearts and purses.

CELEBRATION IS ENDED.

"It is a well known fact that one of the most powerful benevolent orders in this country had its origin among the thespians, and it claims as its membership the best people on earth.

"There is an old adage to the effect that if we laugh the world laughs with us, but if we weew, we must weep alone. That is splendid optimistic doctrine, but not alays true.

"When the terrible catastrophe occurred in the Chicago River last Saturday morning a week ago there had assembled in San Francisco the Governor of Illinois and several of his official family, the Mayor of Chicago and several city officials and our own First Regiment Band, to celebrate Illinois Day and Chicago Day at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition.

"Daylight was just fairly upon the city of San Francisco, and the soldiers were in busy preparation for the ceremonies of Illinois Day, when the awful news flashed across the continent. Arms wer stacked, trumpets were stilled, the rattle and throp of martial [illegible] of a Nation," at the Illinois Theater.

Harry K. Thaw paid Miss Helen Utter $10 for two box seats.

Miss Valli Valli of the "Lady in Red" company at Cohan's Grand Opera House led her pet dog, "Royce," down the aisles and into the boxes, and collected more than $70 for the fund.

WHAT PROGRAM INCLUDED.

The program, which was staged by Henry Lehmann, Will Phillips and William T. Steward, included the following:

Overture to Rossini's "William Tell," by fifty members of the Chicago Federation of Musicians, conducted by Max Bndix.

Josephine Herriman and William Reardon, Hotel La Salle Roof Garden, in a fox trot in hunting clothes.

Charles W. Clark, barytone from the National Conservatoire, Paris, in two songs, "This Great World Is a Trouble" and "Annie Laurie."

J. Aldrich Libby, La Salle Roof Garden, in the song "Sooner or Later."

Coogan and Cox, "Maid in America" company, in "Back to Dixie Land" and a syncopated waltz, followed by a song by Baby Coogan, seven years old.

"Mayor's March," composed by Silvio Hein in honor of Mayor Thompson, played by the orchestra of fifty performers, conducted by Max Bendix.

Mlle. Yvette, cabaret entertainer from the "Maid in America" company, violin solos.

Miss Minrva Coverdale and forty-five girls from "Maid in America" company in balloon chorus, in the singing of which 1,000 balloons were let loose among the audience.

Swor and Mack of "Maid in America" company in negro comics.

Miss Joan Peers, seven years old, smallest premiere danseuse in the world, dancing the Gavotte Mignon.

Miss Rita Gould, "Maid in America" company, who sold more than $500 worth of tickets for the benefit by visiting the Stock Exchange and the hotels, in her unique dance and song, "How Times Are Changed."

Edward Martindel and twenty girls from the "Lady in Red" company of Cohans Grand Opera House, in "Roving Here and There I Go."

Miss Florence Moore and William Montgomery, "Maid in America" company, in song and dance, "I Sigh for You the Whole Day Long."

Long Tack Sam and his company of clever Chinese jugglers from the Majestic Theater, in oriental mysteries.

Williams and Wolfus, Joseph Santley company, from the Garrick Theater.

Miles, Claire and Alicia von Klein, La Salle Roof Garden, in Beethoven's minuet and pizzicato polka by Delibes.

Mlle. Dazie, "Maid in America" company, in tip-toe dancing.

Miss Valli Valli, "Lady in Red" company, in "Do You Recall That Night in June When First We Met?"

Gertrude Vanderbilt, Ann Herndon, Phyllis Maude and thirty girls from the "Lady in Red" company; songs and dances.

Saranoff of Joseph Santley's "All Over Town" company; violin obligato.

Glenn Hall, tenor, "Lady in Red" company; songs.

Joseph Santley, star of "All Over Town" company, with Miss Beatrice Allen and thirty young women of the chorus, in "Toddle Over Town" and "Parisian Trot."

Pat Rooney and Marion Bent, Majestic Theater, in a second edition of "At the Newsstand."

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Hebsen, La Salle Roof Garden, in the tango up to date and other society dances.

Mary Magdalene Not to Be Tried Alone

"For ages it has been established custom to place Mary Magdalene in the docket when the social evil was on trial," said the Rev. John F. Still of Louisville, Ky., to the International Purity Congress in San Francisco, "but to-day we are beginning to demand that she shall stand in the docket no longer alone."

"To-morrow, when the new day is here, we shall place not alone Mary Magdalene, not alone the male offender in the docket—we shall put on trial with them, as particeps criminis, the judge, the jury, the state, the school, industry, the church society. And the purpose thereof shall be not to condemn, but to redeem."

Mayor Mitchel Tries to Avert Big Strike

NEW YORK, Aug. 3. — Mayor Mitchel's council of conciliation was endeavoring to-day to formulate a plan which would prevent a strike of 60,000 members of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union. Nearly 40,000 members of the union have voted to strike unless their differences with the Cloak, Suit and Skirt Manufacturers' Protective Association are adjusted to their satisfaction. It was stated that in the event of failure of the peace move the strike would begin to-morrow.

HAROLD: Cheer up. Join the Chicago "Vacation Club" and get a diamond ring for ...DAYS Tea

...he Cup that
...heers every home
[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]
MAJESTIC — Supreme Vaudeville
MRS. LESLIE CARTER
IN A TABLOID VERSION OF "ZAZA"
PAT ROONEY & MARION BENT
LONG TACK SAM & CO.
TOM SMITH & RALPH AUSTIN
EUGENE DAMOND—KENO & GREEN
LOCKETT & WALDRON—MOLAR & CLYDE
ORPHEUM CIRCUIT TRAVEL WEEKLY
Prices 15-25-50-75c. Mats. 15-25-50c, except Sat. and Sun. Tel. Cent. 6180
PALACE | $1 Mat. Today $1
Celeste Miller Garden Success
MAID IN AMERICA
10th Big Week
N. Y. WINTER GARDEN CO. OF 125
RAVINIA PARK GRAND OPERA and Symphony Orchestra
Concert 8 p. m. Tonight 8:15 "Thais" & "Manon"
Dancing 8-9 & 10 to midnight
C. & N. W. Ry. Special Train at 7:30 Nightly
Round Trip on this train, Inc. Admission, 75c.
THE MIDWAY GAMBOL
Miss [illegible]
The Quest of the Golden Girl
National Symphony Orchestra
MAX BENDIX, Conductor
College Grove Ave. and 63th St.
STATE SHOW
MIDWAY Gardens

BENEFIT FOR EASTLAND'S SUFFERERS NETS $3,000

Auditorium Theater Packed at Star Performance Arranged by Managers, Aided by Examiner.

Mayor Praises Chicagoans for Hearty Response for Relief; Harry K. Thaw Occupies Box.

More than $3,000 was raised for the Eastland sufferers at the mammoth benefit in the Auditorium Theater yesterday, arranged by the Chicago Theater Managers' Association, with the assistance of the Chicago Examiner.

Mrs. Potter Palmer and many other society leaders sat in the boxes, and the enormous auditorium was crowded to its limit.

Mayor Thompson was loudly applauded when he appeared on the stage at the opening. He said:

"It is very gratifying to me to be permitted to participate in this noble and generous enterprise, arranged by the show folks in Chicago for the relief of the want and misery following in the wake of the Eastland disaster.

"The promptness with which this benefit was planned is typical of the people behind the movement. There was never, to my knowledge, a great public calamity involving suffering and distress that did not have the immediate and generous support of [illegible] so many men and women with warm hearts and open purses.

CELEBRATION IS ENDED.

"It is a well known fact that one of the most powerful benevolent orders in this country had its origin among the thespians, and it claims as its membership the best people on earth.

"There is an old adage to the effect that if we laugh the world laughs with us, but if we weep, we must weep alone. That is splendid optimistic doctrine, but not always true.

"When the terrible catastrophe occurred in the Chicago River last Saturday morning a week ago there had assembled in San Francisco the Governor of Illinois and several of his official family, the Mayor of Chicago and several city officials and our own First Regiment Band, to celebrate Illinois Day and Chicago Day at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition.

"Daylight was just fairly upon the city of San Francisco, and the soldiers were in busy preparation for the ceremonies of Illinois Day, when the awful news flashed across the continent. Arms were stacked, trumpets were stilled, the rattle and throb of martial music died away, while men and women, as if in the very presence of death, received the constantly growing accounts of the fatality.

JOY TURNS TO MOURNING.

"As the members of our party came together it was announced as by common impulse, 'We must go back.' All thoughts of celebration were banished, and what had been planned as a day of rejoicing became a day of mourning. The topic of conversation among our friends there, aside from exclamations of horror and sorrow, was solely on how quickly we could get back to our stricken people.

"It soon became evident that we did not mourn alone. Messages of sympathy and offers of assistance began to pour in from every part of our country. The President of the United States gave beautiful expression to the sympathy of the nation, while from across the seas my good friend, Sir Thomas Lipton, joined in the swelling chorus of sorrow, and cabled an offer of financial aid. So it was that a touch of sorrow made the whole world kin.

"Thanks are due to organizations such as yours and to the corporations and individuals which came speedily forward in the noble work of relief. There were too many to mention them singly, but each deserves a crown. Already, with what has been donated, and with the proceeds of this benefit, the committee will have ample funds for all purposes.

CHICAGO RESPONDS NOBLY.

"Chicago and her citizens responded [illegible] such bounteous measure to the [illegible]ds of our stricken people that it [illegible] not be necessary to avail our[illegible]s of the timely and generous of[illegible]rom other communities, and we [illegible] always hold them in grateful [illegible]mbrance.

"[illegible] account of a personal obliga[illegible]sire to make public acknowl[illegible]f the debt we owe those [illegible]ited men who, at a sacri[illegible]eir own personal affairs, [illegible] people so well and so [illegible]n what is known as the [illegible]ites, which had charge [illegible]rk.

of more than 600 bodies at the Reid-Murdoch warehouse, was in charge of a bevy of young women who sold programs, turning over $154.50 to the fund.

Her assistants were Mrs. Lyman A. Martin, Miss M. Nelson, Miss E. Sirbom, Louise Mink and Bly Brown of the "Maid in America" Company at the Palace Music Hall; Mrs. C. Russ Dashiel, Miss Meta V. Peterson, Miss Dorothy Collins, Miss Helen Utter and Miss Gertrude Azemar of the "Birth of a Nation," at the Illinois Theater.

Harry K. Thaw paid Miss Helen Utter $10 for two box seats.

Miss Valli Valli of the "Lady in Red" company at Cohan's Grand Opera House led her pet dog, "Royce," down in "Back to Dixie Land" and a [illegible] followed by a song by Baby Co[illegible] old.

"Mayor's March," composed by [illegible] honor of Mayor Thompson, play[illegible] chestra of fifty performers, cond[illegible] Bendix.

Mlle. Yvette, cabaret entertai[illegible] "Maid in America" company, [illegible]

Miss Minerva Coverdale and [illegible] from "Maid in America" comp[illegible] chorus, the [illegible]

[illegible]ord [illegible] Among the audience [illegible] Swor and Mack of "Maid in America" company in negro comics.

Miss Joan Peers, seven years old, smal[illegible]ntere dancerce in the world, dancing the [illegible] Mignon.

Miss Rita Gould, "Maid in America" co[illegible] who sold more than $500 worth of tickets [illegible] benefit by visiting the Rock Restaurant a[illegible] hotels, in her unique dance and song, "Times Ain't Changed."

company; violin obligato.

Glenn Hall, tenor, "Lady in Red" company; songs.

Joseph Santley, star of "All Over Town" company, with Miss Beatrice Allen and thirty young women of the chorus, in "Puddle All Over Town" and "Parisian Trot."

Pat Rooney and Marion Bent, Majestic Theater, in a second edition of "At the Newsstand."

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Rosini, Ice Balle Roof [illegible]

THAW, UNRECOGNIZED, STROLLS IN L[illegible] BUYS TICKETS FOR EASTLAND BENE[illegible]

HARRY THAW BUYING BENEFIT TICKETS

After Harry Thaw returned from his stroll he bought ten Eastland benefit tickets at $1 apiece at the Auditorium. He posed for his picture with Miss Helen Utter, an usher.

Auto Tourist to Continue Trip to Fair When Muddy Roads Are Dried.

Harry Kendall Thaw, probably the most photographed and interviewed person in the world, for three hours yesterday rambled through the streets of Chicago's loop, gazed into shop windows, dodged automobiles and surface cars, bumped into pedestrians and picked his way through crowded department store aisles without being recognized in a single instance by those around him.

He saw his picture displayed in the newspapers at every corner he passed and hear persons near him remark that he was in Chicago, and sometimes expressed the desire to see him, yet no one knew him for other than a person whose name had never been heard outside a small circle of acquaintances.

STROLL AFTER BREAKFAST.

As he finished his breakfast at the Congress Hotel he donned an ill-shapen hat showing the effects of frequent drenchings during his automobile tour from Pittsburgh to Chicago, and started for a stroll on Michigan avenue. He walked north to Madison street, and turned toward the State street department stores.

At one of the stores former Congressman Charles S. Wharton [illegible] sonal friend, joined him. A[illegible] concluded his purchases, [illegible] gave the Pittsburgher's na[illegible] hotel to the salesman that t[illegible] ages might be sent to him.

"Which one of you is Mr.[illegible] asked the salesman as he loo[illegible] one of them to the other[illegible] chuckled gleefully later a[illegible] scribed his experiences.

RECOGNIZED BY URCHIN.

Late in the day, after he [illegible] turned to his hotel and [illegible] again, his name was called [illegible] first time while he was [illegible] along Van Buren street. [illegible] urchin, who recognized hi[illegible] out:

"Hello there, Mr. Thaw."

He turned around in surp[illegible] smiled. It was a new expe[illegible] a day of many thrills. Lat[illegible] evening he was recognized [illegible] second passerby.

In the telephone booth [illegible] cove of Peacock alley the [illegible] men found him later. He gre[illegible] cheerily, told of his junket[illegible] the streets during the day, a[illegible] about what they had written of [illegible] the evening before. Then he [illegible] questions to them about the [illegible] leading from Chicago to Omaha [illegible] Denver.

REPORTERS ARE CHIDED.

[illegible] he stepped away for a minute [illegible] answer a telephone call, a gray [illegible]red, motherly inclined woman ap[illegible]ached the reporters and said:

"Why don't you leave that poor [illegible]low alone. I'm sure you'll worry [illegible] to death. He must dread to see [illegible] coming."

The Pittsburgher smiled when this [illegible]as told him as he was hurrying toward the rooms of the Chicago Automobile Club in search of advice relative to the roads west of Chicago.

"A newspaper man is a corking good fellow to have around sometimes," he said. "I should know—judging from the number of them I have talked to in my time."

"Wednesday to be fair and warm in Iowa and Nebraska," he said, after hearing of heavy rains there for the last two days. "One hot day should dry up the mud. That means I start from here Thursday morning."

Carefully he considered roads by way of Rockford, Dixon and Ottawa, deciding finally to strike out due west from Chicago.

"I am only anxious that I don't get stuck in the mud somewhere and don't get out," said he.

BUYS EASTLAND TICKETS.

Leading the newspaper men a merry chase he started back in the direction of the Congress Hotel. As he reached the Auditorium Hotel he stopped.

"What's this?" he questioned. "Eastland benefit! What is it?"

When told that it was a benefit for the sufferers in the Eastland disaster he entered the theater and purchased ten tickets at a dollar each.

He refused to pose for a photograph with an actress, but consented to a picture of him buying a program and flower from Miss Helen Utter, 7251 South Shore avenue, an usher in the theater. As the camera snapped he hurried out at a side door to avoid the crowd that had gathered, and sped across the street to the Congress Hotel.

WILL AVOID MUDDY ROADS.

"Some one told me that fifty automobiles are stuck in the mud near the Mississippi River west of here," he said. "I don't care to join them, and I'll wait here until the rains stop."

With Wharton he went to the South Shore Country Club, where he spent the early hours of the evening. Often in his conversations during the day he referred to the petitions for which he is seeking signatures, memorializing Congress to pass a law providing for the return of a citizen of one state who is acquitted of a crime in another state to his native state without further ado after his acquittal.

WEDNESDAY.

U. S.

THAW DODGES SEERS WITH SPIRIT NEWS

Secretaries Bar Mediums Who Have Messages From Father of the Pittsburgh Visitor.

Harry Strolls About Loop District Unrecognized; He Buys Ten Eastland Benefit Tickets.

Prospect of a future of utopian bliss was dangled yesterday before the eyes of Harry K. Thaw.

Spiritualistic mediums calling to see him at the Congress Hotel tendered the service of their "psychic powers" as a means of enabling him to peer into the future, and, under the guidance of kindly disposed ancestors, avoid litigations and entanglements such as have involved him for nine years.

MEDIUMS TURNED AWAY.

The mediums were met by Thaw's secretaries, who told them that he did not care to avail himself of the opportunity to "talk with his ancestors."

"We have received a message from Mr. Thaw's father which is very important," the medium said. "The message came to us to-day and is of such nature that his father wishes it given to him at once."

"Mr. Thaw is very busy," replied the secretaries. When the visitors renewed their importunings they were told to return to the hotel Saturday. At that moment Thaw expects to be drving his automobile on the Lincoln highway in Iowa.

RICHARD YATES A VISITOR.

Many persons called to see the Pittsburgh man during the day, but none were able to evade the vigilant eyes of the secretaries, and he saw only those with whom he made appointmnts.

In this number was former Governor Richard Yates of Illinois with whom Thaw visited for an hour last night. Yates was an attorney for Congressman Caleb Powers several years ago when he was charged with being a party to an alleged conspiracy to take the life of William Goebel of Covington, Ky.

While probably the most photographed and interviewed person in the world, he for three hours yesterday rambled through the streets of the loop, gazed into shop windows, dodged automobiles and surface cars, bumped into hurrying pedestrians and picked his way through crowded department store aisles without being recognized in a single instance by those aroud him.

He saw his picture displayed in the newspapers at every corner he passed and hear persons near him remark that he was in Chicago, and sometimes expressed the desire to see him, yet no one knew him for other than a person whose name had never been heard outside a small circle of acquaintances.

"Which one of you is Mr. Thaw?" asked the salesman as he looked from one of them to the other. Thaw chuckled gleefully later as he described his experiences.

"Wednesday to be fair and warm in Iowa and Nebraska," he said, after hearing of heavy rains there for the last two days. "One hot day should dry up the mud. That means I start from here Thursday morning."

Carefully he considered roads by [illegible] of Rockford, Dixon and Ottawa,

...ROWD CHEERS THOMPSON AT DISA...

...NEFIT FOR ...STLAND'S ...FFERERS ...ETS $3,000

...um Theater Packed at ...Performance Arranged by ...gers, Aided by Examiner.

...es Chicagoans for ... Response for Relief; ... K. Thaw Occupies Box.

...an $3,000 was raised for ...land sufferers at the mam... ...fit in the Auditorium The... ...rday, arranged by the Chi... ...ter Managers' Association, ...assistance of the Chicago ...

...tter Palmer and many ...ety leaders sat in the ... the enormous auditorium ...ed to its limit.

...Thompson was loudly ap... ...when he appeared on the ...te opening. He said:

"...ry gratifying to me to be ...to participate in this noble ...rous enterprise, arranged ...by fellow folks in Chicago for ...f the want and misery ...in the wake of the East... ...ter.

"...promptness with which this ...fund is planned is typical of the ...and the movement. There ...was, to my knowledge, a great ...only involving suffering ...ter that did not have the im... ...generous support of this ...

"...men and women with warm ...hearts open purses.

...TERSON IS ENDED.

"...well known fact that one ...of the most powerful benevolent or... ...in this country had its origin ...among the slums, and it claims as ...its membership the best people on ...earth.

"...the old adage to the effect ...that when the world laughs ...with us, if we weep, we must ...weep alone. That is splendid opti... ...mistic theme, but not always true. ...It is now evident that we did ...not realize. Messages of sym... ...pathy and offers of assistance began ...to pour in from every part of our ...country. The President of the United ...States sent beautiful expression to ...the sympathy of the nation, while ...from across the seas my good friend, ...Sir Thomas Lipton, joined in the ...world chorus of sorrow, and cabled ...his financial aid. So it was ...that a ray of sorrow made the ...whole world kin.

"...Thanks are due to organizations ...such as those of the corporations ...

ONE OF STARS IN EASTLAND BENEFIT PERFORMANCE AND STAGE BEAUTIES WHO SOLD PROGRA...

At the extreme left is Valli Valli and her dog. She is from "The Lady in Red" company at Cohan's Grand Opera House, and she appeared in "Do You Remember That Night in June When First We Met?" To the right, at the top, left to right, are Meta V. Peterson of the "Birth of a Nation" company at the Illinois Theater, and Louise Mink of "Maid in America" at the Palace Music Hall. Below, left to right, Dorothy Collins and Gertrude Azemar of "Birth of a Nation." Their efforts added considerably to the relief ...

William T. Steward, included the following:

Overture to Rossini's "William Tell," by fifty members of the Chicago Federation of Musicians, conducted by Max Bendix.

Josephine Harriman and William Reardon, Hotel La Salle Roof Garden, in a fox trot in hunting clothes.

Charles W. Clark, barytone from the National Conservatoire, Paris, in two songs, "This Great World Is a Trouble" and "Anne Laure."

J. Aldrich Libby, La Salle Roof Garden, in the song "Sooner or Later."

Coogan and Cox, "Maid in America" company, in "Back to Dixie Land and a Suwanee Waltz."

'WE... MY...

So Says ... Charl...

A rich ... poor one ... same wo... painted ... when D... declarat... Charles ... Henry ... in the ... began a... Bosch ... Price in ... of unlin... Bosch w... away fr... able hom... Automot... fashiona... spending ... these. P... Bosch u... it th... pr... if ... nst ... in I... ons... le.

...IH... The ... Pr... ...wa... A ... the ... A ... ...of pition true to their word of twenty years be... ...t ...ipfuness in this country the purest beers ... ...aw, and the fact that the Brewers' Association ... ...ed sure they are satisfied that they make a pure ... article of commerce that cannot be tampered ... ...ra. The very nature of beer makes this im... ...every other beverage can be, and often is, ...d it is good that and worthless. If a keg is ...

...BE "DOCTORED"

...PURE DRINK

...ignment of the German women, down to the ...day of Tacitus, the Roman historian, ...declared one of the most healthful drinks, on ...the last ...grains and hops and sterilized water, it is ...home at ...ssary for adulteration or substitution, and ...April, Pr... easily obtained by varying the process ...that Bosch ...later unnecessary. ...ice say... ...analyst for the New York State Board ...secretly o... ...liquors and made this report: ...found and no harmful ingredients has been de... ...by it malt liquors officially analyzed contained either ...poisonous substances the use of which could, from any ...d as an adulteration."

...divorc... ...ion Bill by this resolution: "We are anxious to ...pass ...of full duty in our case, as this is the shortest, ...divor... ...pended talk about adulteration. If any law can ...ppotters." ...Th... ...ter, too and drink any more stringent, this ...

...Read Examiner 'Ads'

THE ST. CHARLES
Atlantic City, N. J.
Most select location Fronting the Beach, With an established reputation for its exceptional and high-class patronage. Thoroughly modern and completely equipped. Courteous service. Delightful porches and sun parlor overlooking the Boardwalk and Ocean. Always open. Golf privileges. Illustrated booklet.
NEWLIN HAINES COMPANY

Ridgways Tea
SAFE-TEA FIRST
"The Cup that cheers every home"

STAGE STARS HELP RAISE $3,000

BENEFIT SWELLS EASTLAND FUND

Photo by INTERNATIONAL NEWS SERVICE.

Left to right, Miss Gertrude Jacobs, Miss Annabelle Whitford, (in real life now Mrs. Edward J. Buchan, wife of a physician who gave his services the day the Eastland capsized) and Miss Veronica McNeil. Miss Whitford had charge of a bevy of pretty women who sold flowers during the Eastland benefit in the Auditorium yesterday, and collected $154.50. Photo made especially for the Chicago Evening American.

Herald 8/5/15

GEORGE BOWLES denies that Eddie Foy is the author of "The Birth of a Nation."

American aug 14

D. W. Griffith has about as much use for film censors as a prima donna has for a chorus girl.

Examiner aug. 5

Girl Pictured With Thaw Loses Watch

It cost Helen Utter, 7251 South Shore avenue, a gold wrist watch to help the Eastland sufferers at the benefit in the Auditorium.

She lost the watch in her haste to get to the Illinois Theater, where she is one of the "crinoline girls" in the production of "The Birth of a Nation."

Whether it was on the L train between Jackson Park avenue and Adams street or during the excitement of being photographed with Harry K. Thaw when he purchased tickets for the benefit, Helen can't say.

Daily News 5th aug. 5 = Examiner Early Edit. 8/6

MUTUAL ADDS NEW FEATURES.

Knickerbocker Plays to Be Released on Its Program in the Future.

Closely following the news that David Horsley has withdrawn his releases from the General Film company program and has affiliated with the Mutual Film corporation comes the information that the Knickerbocker Star Features, which have marketed three reel subjects through the General, also have contracted with the Mutual.

Since the resignation of Henry E. Aitken from the Mutual Film corporation to start his Triangle Film company, John R. Freuler, the newly elected president, has been busily engaged bolstering up the Mutual program. His first acquisition was Mr. Horsley with his animal pictures, a specialty which the Mutual program lacked.

Mr. Horsley has begun producing comedies with George Ovey as the principal comedian, which will appear under the trade mark of "Cub" comedies. Other new brand photo plays will be "Banner" and "Mustang."

The Knickerbocker Star Features film dramas bring to the Mutual such stars as Sir Forbes Robertson, Gertrude Elliott, Alice Brady and Florence Nash. These players are prominent figures on the "legitimate" stage and already have been seen on the screen.

'Two-Dollar-Movies' Lease the Colonial

The D. W. Griffith forces who put the two-dollar movie"—so-called—on the theatrical map and took over the Illinois Theater early in the Summer for their first spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," have leased the Colonial Theater on Randolph street for a permanent home. The initial lease for this theater takes it from Jones, Linick and Shaeffer control and gies it to the Epoch Producing Corporation for one year. George Bowles, the manager for "The Birth of a Nation," will be in charge.

"The Birth of a Nation," which closes at the Illinois Theater Saturday night, August 21, will be moved to the new home for the first performance there Sunday afternoon, August 28. In the week previous the house will be redecorated.

The lease is dated from August 16, at which time D. W. Girffith will be in Chicago to take charge of getting his now "two-bollar photodrama house" ready for the opening. It will be his aim in the Colonial to obtain the finest production, projection, stage setting, artistic surroundings and music.

Examiner aug. 6th

$2 MOVIES TO APPEAR AT COLONIAL

D. W. Griffith Interests Lease Theater for High Grade Productions.

THE W. D. Griffith forces who put the "two-dollar movie"—so-called—on the theatrical map and took ovtr the Illinois Theater early in the Summer for their first spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," have leased the Colonial Theater on Randolph street for a permanent home. The initial lease for this theater takes it from Jones, Linick & Shaeffer control and gives it to the Epoch Producing Corporation for one year. George Bowles, the manager for "The Birth of a Nation," will be in charge.

"The Birth of a Nation," which closes at the Illinois Theater Saturday night, August 21, will be moved to the new home for the first performance there Sunday afternoon, August 28. In the week previous the house will be redecorated.

The lease is dated from August 16, at which time D. W. Griffith will be in Chicago to take charge of getting his now "two-dollar photodrama house" ready for the opening. It will be his aim in the Colonial to obtain the finest production, projection, stage setting, artistic surroundings and music.

TRIBUNE aug 1st

HERO TALKS OF MOVIE BENEFIT

Walthall Praises Sympathetic Public and Work of "The Tribune."

FLOWER GIRLS HELP.

Henry Walthall himself was there at the Illinois theater yesterday morning for THE TRIBUNE'S Eastland benefit showing of "The Birth of a Nation." Several hundred people were there also to help the Eastland cause and see and hear the little colonel in the life, the hero of the big picture.

When the curtains glided together for the intermission Mr. Walthall appeared on the stage and a round of deafening applause greeted him. Every one leaned forward, listening intently while he spoke briefly in regard to the Eastland tragedy which had drawn them all together, expressing for himself gratification that he was able to help in any way.

Praises "The Tribune."

"It seems that it takes a terrible calamity like this of the Eastland to prove to ourselves and to the world how big is the American heart and how generous the American hand. The people of Chicago have rallied wonderfully to the need. Today we owe a great deal to THE TRIBUNE and to the managers and producer of this picture, who have enabled us to help in this way."

This is the first time Mr. Walthall has appeared on the stage with the masterpiece in which he heroed, the third time he has seen it.

The pretty little crinolined, pantaletted ushers, led by Miss Annabelle Whitford, sold flowers all day long in the theater's lobby and the adjacent hotels, netting a neat sum for the fund in addition to the tickets.

Flower Girls Who Helped.

The girls dispensing the flowers were: Veronica McNeil, Dorothy Collins, Gertrude Jacobs, Gertrude Azemar, Marie Astor, Helen Utter, and Gertrude Lowenstein.

The florists contributing masses of flowers, American beauties, and blossoms of the seasons were: Pohlmann Bros., Wieter Bros., Peter Reinberg, Chicago Flower Growers, Charles W. McKellar, Zech & Mann, A. Lange, G. Mangel, J. C. Craig, George Weinhoelen, and the Atlas Flower company.

Herald 8/6

FFITH, OF MOVIE FAME, AKES OVER THE COLONIAL

mises Another "$2 Film" When "The Birth of a Nation" Completes Run.

e Colonial Theater has been ed to D. W. Griffith, producer of e Birth of a Nation," and that ctacular film will be seen there bening Aug. 22. It will remain at Illinois until then. Griffith has the olonial for one year and plans to sent there another "two-dollar m" when the initial run is finished ire.

George Bowles, manager of the presitation at the Illinois, will be manger of the Colonial beginning Aug. , when the house will be redecorated d renovated. Griffith will be here that time and will superintend the tmospheric detail of fitting the theter with the same regard to minute ccidentals as he displayed in the direction of the famous film.

Jones, Linick & Schaefer, present ssees of the Colonial, will cease to e associated in the management hen Bowles takes the reins.

Journal 8/5 — CHICAGO DAILY

a, Music and Ar

GOSSIP OF THEATERS

Journal aug. 5th

GOSSIP OF THEATERS

Tribune aug. 6th

FLICKERINGS

by KITTY

Well, Who Cares About It, Anyway?

THERE is little satisfaction to a newspaper—and much less to the public—in getting involved in a managerial controversy. Consequently THE TRIBUNE, after unintentionally starting the present Jones, Linick & Schaefer-Triangle Film corporation-Studebaker-Colonial argument, has carefully avoided taking part. Other papers leaped boldly into the ring and from latest reports have learned, probably with regret, that all "official" press agent statements are, to say the least, not "official."

Here are the facts and Flickering readers may puzzle out what it's all about if they are interested enough to wade through this, or care in the slightest who manages the theaters they attend:

On Monday morning this department printed an exclusive story, obtained from heretofore unimpeachable sources, that the new Griffith-Ince-Sennett combine, known as the Triangle Film corporation, had concluded negotiations for control of the Studebaker and Colonial.

The following day a bitter wail of distress blew in from the press agent of Jones, Linick & Schaefer, present lessees of the Colonial and operators of the Studebaker. The latter house, owned by the Studebakers, is under lease to Klaw & Erlanger.

The P. A. wail declared emphatically that J. L. & S. were not going to lose control of the Colonial and Studebaker and suggested that THE TRIBUNE should never print any news about J. L. & S. affairs unless it came from the press agent. It further declared that J. L. & S would continue to manage both houses.

The next morning the story received from the J. L. & S. offices was printed in all the other papers.

Last night a statement was received from George Bowles, manager of the "Birth of a Nation," which reads in part as follows:

"I don't like the idea of having to contradict any statements that may have been given out, but the public has a right to know that whatever theater houses a Griffith production will be Griffith controlled. We are not booking 'The Birth of a Nation' and we are not likely to book any of the Griffith productions. Whatever house we go into we will control.

"The Colonial theater has been leased for a year, all statements to the contrary notwithstanding. I shall manage the Colonial and all of the attractions that play there during the time that it remains under the control of Mr. Griffith, Mr. McCarthy, and their associates.

"As for arrangements for other theaters, I am not quite ready to make any statements, but I hope before long to have something authentic to give out."

So, there you are. Decide it for yourselves.

* *

GEORGE BOWLES, who hasn't a gray hair but who remembers when State street was a prairie, was once a newspaper man. He was discharged because, in reporting Belshazzar's Feast, he forgot to mention the handwriting on the wall.

Herald - Aug 2

Herald Aug 4

THAW LACKS EYES FOR PRETTY GIRLS

Admires Skyscrapers Along Michigan Boulevard, but Doesn't See Women.

IGNORES "MASH" NOTES

Passes Through Crowds Unrecognized Except by Newsboy; Maps Auto Route.

Harry K. Thaw has no time for Chicago's pretty girls or their "adoring" letters. He paid no heed to any of them during the three hours he visited and shopped in the loop yesterday. On Michigan boulevard he expressed his admiration for the long row of mighty skyscrapers which adorn it, but he had not even a look for the fair promenaders.

The dozens of foolish letters which women sent to him at the Congress Hotel have been destroyed by his secretary. Thaw didn't care to look at one of them. A special delivery letter received last night was marked in a corner:

"Not from a woman."

RECOGNIZED BY NEWSBOY.

Thaw went about his business in the downtown district without being recognized, except by a newsboy with a stand at Van Buren and State streets. The boy had been selling papers all day with Thaw's picture on the first page and his sharp eye picked him out from the passers-by.

"Hello there, Mr. Thaw," he said.

Thaw flashed him a startled smile and continued down the street.

HELPS EASTLAND SUFFERERS.

On the return to the hotel he was attracted by posters in front of the Auditorium Theater advertising the Eastland benefit. He bought ten tickets at a dollar each and some flowers and programs from Miss Helen Utter of 7251 South Shore avenue.

Earlier in the day he visited the Chicago Automobile Club to learn the best roads to Waterloo, Iowa.

He decided to take the Lincoln highway to Grand Center, Iowa, where he expects to call on Horace Boies, former governor of Iowa, who, after Thaw's first habeas corpus case, published in legal journals an opinion differing with that of the court which ruled against the slayer of Stanford White.

Former Governor Richard T. Yates discussed Thaw's troubles with him for more than an hour in the evening.

Thaw, accompanied by Mr. Wharton, Attorney Frank K. Johnston of New York and P. E. Pendleton of Concord, N. H., will resume his journey westward tomorrow morning.

America - Aug 4

WEDNESDAY.

TO STAGE STARS ADD $3,000 TO SHIP FUNDS

Mayor Thompson Cheered When He Addresses Great Crowd at Auditorium.

Did you attend the Eastland benefit at the Auditorium?

No?

Then you missed one of the greatest shows ever produced in Chicago.

Also, you missed seeing on the program-flower-candy selling line some of the prettiest show girls on earth.

The show and the show girls added more than $3,000 to the benefit fund.

Harry K. Thaw paid Miss Helen Utter $10 for two box seats.

Miss Valli Valli of the "Lady In Red" company at Cohan's Grand Opera House led her pet dog, "Royce," down the aisles and into the boxes, and collected more than $70 for the fund.

Mrs. Potter Palmer and many other society leaders sat in the boxes, and the enormous auditorium was crowded to its limit.

Mayor Thompson was loudly applauded when he appeared on the stage at the opening. He said:

"It is very gratifying to me to be permitted to participate in this noble and generous enterprise, arranged by the show folks in Chicago for the relief of the want and misery following in the wake of the Eastland disaster.

"It is a well known fact that one of the most powerful benevolent orders in this country had its origin among the thespians, and it claims as its membership the best people on earth.

"Thanks are due to organizations such as yours and to the corporations and individuals which came speedily forward in the noble work of relief. There were too many to mention them singly, but each deserves a crown. Already, with what has been donated, and with the proceeds of this benefit, the committee will have ample funds for all purposes.

"Chicago and her people, always dear to me, have become doubly so in this trying ordeal. Every day it is borne in upon me what a glorious honor it is to be chief executive of such a community. My pride in you is justified; my humble hope is that, as Mayor, I may measure up to the standard of citizenship set by our people in recent events in this city."

HARRY THAW AT BENEFIT.

Miss Annabelle Whitford, formerly of the Ziegfeld Follies Company, now the wife of Dr. Edward J. Buchan, who distinguished himself after the Eastland disaster by taking charge of more than 600 bodies at the Reid-Murdoch warehouse, was in charge of a bevy of young women who sold programs, turning over $154.50 to the fund.

Her assistants were Mrs. Lyman A. Martin, Miss M. Nelson, Miss E. Sirbom, Louise Mink and Bly Brown of the "Maid in America" Company at the Palace Music Hall; Mrs. C. Russ Dashiel, Miss Meta V. Peterson, Miss Dorothy Collins, Miss Helen Utter and Miss Gertrude Azemar of the "Birth of a Nation," at the Illinois Theater.

WHAT PROGRAM INCLUDED.

The program, which was staged by Henry Lehmann, Will Phillips and William T. Steward, included the following:

Overture to Rossini's "William Tell," by fifty members of the Chicago Federation of Musicians, conducted by Max Bendix.

Josephine Harriman and William Reardon, Hotel La Salle Roof Garden, in a fox trot in hunting clothes.

Charles W. Clark, barytone from the National Conservatoire, Paris, in two songs, "This Great World Is a Trouble" and "Annie Laurie."

J. Aldrich Libby, La Salle Roof Garden, in ...e song "Sooner or Later."

...gan and Cox, "Maid in America" company, ...k to Dixie Land" and a syncopated waltz, ...s a song by Baby Cougan, seven years

...ch," composed by Silvio Rein in ...Thompson, played by the or... formers, conducted by Max

...ntertainer from the ... violin solos.

... forty-five girls ... in balloon ... balloons

...or

Examiner. Aug. 1st

MARIAN COOPER in the BIRTH of a NATION at the ILLINOIS

Dreadnaught Orchestra for "Birth of a Nation"

A "dreadnaught orchestra," a musical organization worthy of playing at the head of a regiment of six-foot grenadiers, supplies the powerful accompaniments for "The Birth of a Nation" at the Illinois Theater. Every man of the fifty players is not only an accomplished artist, but a harmonic Hercules, performing a nightly endurance test which would appall a hardened athlete.

Three solid hours of playing, with only one rest interval of six minutes, is the task undertaken twice daily by the special orchestra with D. W. Griffith's spectacular masterpiece. The whole gamut of orchestra harmony, from soft plantation tunes and croons to the terrific battle music, is run by the lengthy score written for "The Birth of a Nation." The quick changes and violent contrasts from soft to heavy, from gay to tragic, impose a severe tax on the nerves of the musicians, whose vigilance must never relax for a moment during the three hours of playing.

Every musician in the Griffith orchestra was selected not only for artistic proficiency but because of hardy physique, chest measurement, lung expansion and comparative absence of "nerves."

With "The Birth of a Nation" the position of orchestra leader advances to a plane of new importance in the world of entertainment. O. L. Mayhood is the conductor. There are 214 separate music cues in a performance of "The Birth of a Nation." The cue is marked by certain action seen on the screen by the director, and this he must communicate by baton or spark lever to his many subordinates. Some of these cues call for the softest melody, dainty to the degree of gossamer. With the quickness of lightning the orchestra must plunge into the wildest, fiercest fanfare of savage war music. The suddeness of the changes is accounted by the fact that Director Griffith tells the story of "The Birth of a Nation" with swift transitions from battle scene to quiet fireside, from sweet love episode to deed of violent murder. And the music of thirty musicians must shift in theme with the quickness of whirling celluloid film.

Mayhood is qualified for the leadership of this skillful corps of musicians. For two years he was in the United States regulars as bandmaster of the Third Infantry. One of the most stirring incidents in "The Birth of a Nation" is the review of a confederate regiment, leaving bravely and gaily for the front at the beginning of the civil war. The playing of "Dixie" by the orchestra is rendered with a vim and a dash which sets the blood of every spectator tingling. Later on "Marching Through Georgia" is rendered in the same dashing manner.

Trumpet calls in the battle scenes of "The Birth of a Nation" are real military calls, not the languid edition of these signals given by the average orchestra cornist. Three trumpeters, all with military experience, are members of the orchestra. They are able to sound "revielle" with the expert staccatto of an army "tooter" and clarion the battle order "charge" with wild and joyous ferocity. Likewise they sound "taps" for the dead with the lingering mournfulness that reaches every heart.

The rallying call of the "Klu Klux Klan" is a weird, haunting combination of two notes and leads the musical theme of the second part of "The Birth of a Nation." It is a trumpet call peculiarly consistent with the secret purposes of the white-clad night riders of the South.

American 8/6

NEW $5,000,000 FILMS TO COME HERE FIRST

BY ROB REEL.

Chicago, if you please, is to get the first runs of the Triangle Film Corporation. This $5,000,000 venture, with the biggest producers and players obtainable, has planned to market the output throughout America and foreign lands, but Chicago's fashionable playhouses are to have first view of the majority of the plays. New York also will be an introduction center for part of the output.

The investing public and the financial community as well as movie fans are taking keen interest in Triangle Film this week because of trading which has opened on the New York curb. A goodly number of investors have already been attracted by the prospects of large earnings and the names associated with the enterprise.

It is realized, however, that shareholders should have the benefit of an active market for their shares, such as the curb affords. There is no use for most persons to embark their funds in a business enterprise unless the securities they acquire are easily negotiable. This is particularly true in the case of small investors—the kind that is specially invited into this enterprise by reason of the low price of shares, $5 each. They acquire not only the opportunities for the ready transfer, sale and repurchase of their holdings, but also the ready means of ascertaining the worth of their stock. The best plan, therefore, is to have it dealt in on the curb, where the actual merits of the security are determined from day to day by the "open market" selling price.

LIST OF OFFICERS.

The officers and organizers of Triangle Film Corporation are H. E. Aitken, notable for his executive skill in having upbuilt Mutual Film, of which he was formerly president; C. O. Baumann, Adam and Charles Kessel of the hugely prosperouns New York Motion Picture Corporation; David W. Griffith, Mack Sennett and Thomas H. Ince, the three foremost art directors of film manufacture. The overwhelming financial success of Griffith's celebrated $2 picture, "The Birth of a Nation," and even more particularly the enormous permanent market acquired in all lands by Mack Sennett's so-called "Keystone Comedies," would seem to indicate that the future products of such directors will continue to yield—as they have yielded in the past—the biggest financial returns.

Mr. Sennett will produce exclusively for Triangle Film his "Keystone Comedies." Mr. Griffith will personally supervise the production of a five-reel picture each week; and Mr. Ince, noted for his Western dramas and his stupendous "The Battle of Gettysburg," will likewise present an important five-reel picture-drama weekly.

FORTY STAGE STARS.

With the three art directors have been associated about forty of the most prominent stage stars of America, many of whom will make their first stage appearance under the Triangle banner.

President Aitken is giving a large amount of his personal attention to the foreign department, which is being organized with subsidiary Triangle corporations in each of the foreign countries. The studio equipment of the concern at Los Angeles, Cal., ranks with the most extensive and complete in the world.

TURN OF THE REEL

BY JAMES WARREN CURRIE.

Never out of her native State of California and working for only one firm, yet one of the most popular screen actresses of the day, is the unique record of a little red-haired lady with a childlike personality who answers to the name of Bessie Eyton and who is frequently seen in pictures made by the Selig Polyscope Company.

Miss Eyton drifted into pictures via the extra girl route in the days when the pictures were younger than they are now and when every little lady who helped make up a mob scene had good grounds for visions of herself in the leading role. The red-haired lady kept on working and polishing off parts for which you wouldn't think she was fitted. In time she became a real leading lady with the record of many successes behind her.

Miss Eyton's recipe for success she gives if pressed sufficiently by her questioner. It is very simple and rather unpopular to people of her own age who have been smitten by the desire to sine on the screen in the tinsel of a leading woman.

"I am firmly convinced," she says, that I have not yet mastered all the principles of picture craft that will place me on the top. The point I have reached has been gained by work. I learned all I know by just working it out. If you want to learn how to act—act."

* * *

George Bowles, manager of the Griffith spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," last night made the following statement regarding the leasing of the Colonial Theater by the Griffith forces:

"The Colonial Theater has been leased for a year. It has been taken over for the purpose of producing Griffith attractions, 'The Birth of a Nation,' owned and presented by the Epoch Producing Corporation, and also the future releases of that company, the general manager of which is J. J. McCarthy.

"I shall manage the Colonial and all the attractions that play there during the time that it remains under the control of Mr. Griffith, Mr. McCarthy and their associates. As for arrangements with other theaters, I am not quite ready to make any statements, but I hope before long to have something authentic to give out."

* * *

"The Children's Hour," given the Chicago kiddies each week by the Strand company, will start at 10:30 to-morrow morning as usual at Orchestra Hall with "Hans and Gretchel," the beloved fairy classic of the brothers Grimm, as the leading film feature of the weekly trip into the land of the "Little People." The other two celluloid features will be "The Kangaroo," a Pathe animal study, and "The Rivals," a Mutual production. Little Viola Harpman, juvenile elocutionist, will recite "Flo's Letter," "Somebody Did" and others. The musical program will be the kind that will interest the children.

* * *

Pauline Frederic, emotional actress, who made her debut in "The Eternal City," a Paramount production, enters Chicago lists to-morrow in another production of the same company, entitled "Sold." "Crooky," a Vitagraph comedy, with Frank Daniels in the leading role, will be the supplement of the double bill.

Examiner 8/6

Examiner aug. 6.

TURN OF THE REEL

BY JAMES WARREN CURRIE

that I have not yet mastered all the principles of picture craft that will place me on the top. The point I have reached has been gained by work. I learned all I know by just working it out. If you want to learn how to act—act."

* * *

George Bowles, manager of the Griffith spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," last night made the following statement regarding the leasing of the Colonial Theater by the Griffith forces:

"The Colonial Theater has been leased for a year. It has been taken over for the purpose of producing Griffith attractions, 'The Birth of a Nation,' owned and presented by the Epoch Producing Corporation, and also the future releases of that company, the general manager of which is J. J. McCarthy.

"I shall manage the Colonial and all the attractions that play there during the time that it remains under the control of Mr. Griffith, Mr. McCarthy and their associates. As for arrangements with other theaters, I am not quite ready to make any statements, but I hope before long to have something authentic to give out."

* * *

"The Children's Hour," given the Chicago kiddies each week by the Strand company, will start at 10:30 to-morrow morning as usual at Orchestra Hall with "Hans and Gretchel," the beloved fairy classic of the brothers Grimm, as the leading film feature of the weekly trip into the land of the "Little People." The other two celluloid features will be "The Kangaroo," a Pathe animal study, and "The Rivals," a Mutual production. Little Viola Harpman, juvenile elocutionist, will recite "Flo's Letter," "Somebody Did" and others. The musical program will be the kind that will interest the children.

* * *

Pauline Frederic, emotional actress, who made her debut in "The Eternal City," a Paramount production, enters Chicago lists to-morrow in another production of the same company, entitled "Sold." "Crooky," a Vitagraph comedy, with Frank Daniels in the leading role, will be the supplement of the double bill.

Examiner Comes 8/6

81

MUS

$2 MOVIES TO APPEAR AT COLONIAL

D. W. Griffith Interests Lease Theater for High Grade Productions.

THE W. D. Griffith forces who put the "two-dollar movie"—so-called—on the theatrical map and took ovtr the Illinois Theater early in the Summer for their first spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," have leased the Colonial Theater on Randolph street for a permanent home. The initial lease for this theater takes it from Jones, Linick & Shaeffer control and gives it to the Epoch Producing Corporation for one year. George Bowles, the manager for "The Birth of a Nation," will be in charge.

Photo by Underwood & Underwood.

"The Birth of a Nation," which closes at the Illinois Theater Saturday night, August 21, will be moved to the new home for the first performance there Sunday afternoon, August 28. In the week previous the house will be redecorated.

The lease is dated from August 16, at which time D. W. Griffith will be in Chicago to take charge of getting his new "two-dollar photo-drama house" ready for the opening. It will be his aim in the Colonial to obtain the finest production, projection, stage setting, artistic surroundings and music.

HALF THE ... be saved by ... hunting ... Ads in the

American Aug 6

NEW $5,000,000 FILMS TO COME HERE FIRST

Triangle Corporation Attracts Financiers as Well as Movie Army.

BY ROB REEL.

Chicago, if you please, is to get the first runs of the Triangle Film Corporation. This $5,000,000 venture, with the biggest producers and players obtainable, has planned to market the output throughout America and foreign lands, but Chicago's fashionable playhouses ars to have first view of the majority of the plays. New York also will be an introduction center for part of the output.

The investing public and the financial community as well as movie fans are taking keen interest in Triangle Film this week because of trading which has opened on the New York curb. A goodly number of investors have already been attracted by the prospects of large earnings and the names associated with the enterprise.

It is realized, however, that shareholders should have the benefit of an active market for their shares, such as the curb affords. There is no use for most persons to embark their funds in a business enterprise unless the securities they acquire are easily negotiable. This is particularly true in the case of small investors—the kind that is specially invited into this enterprise by reason of the low price of shares, $5 each. They acquire not only the opportunities for the ready transfer, sale and repurchase of their holdings, but also the ready means of ascertaining the worth of their stock. The best plan, therefore, is to have it dealt in on the curb, where the actual merits of the security are determined from day to day by the "open market" selling price.

LIST OF OFFICERS.

The officers and organizers of Triangle Film Corporation are H. E. Aitken, notable for his executive skill in having upbuilt Mutual Film, of which he was formerly president; C. O. Baumann, Adam and Charles Kessel of the hugely prosperouns New York Motion Picture Corporation; David W. Griffith, Mack Sennett and Thomas H. Ince, the three foremost art directors of film manufacture. The overwhelming financial success of Griffith's celebrated $2 picture, "The Birth of a Nation," and even more particularly the enormous permanent market acquired in all lands by Mack Sennett's so-called "Keystone Comedies," would seem to indicate that the future products of such directors will continue to yield—as they have yielded in the past—the biggest financial returns.

Mr. Sennett will produce exclusively for Triangle Film his "Keystone Comedies." Mr. Griffith will personally supervise the production of a five-reel picture each week; and Mr. Ince, noted for his Western dramas and his stupendous "The Battle of Gettysburg," will likewise present an important five-reel picture-drama weekly.

FORTY STAGE STARS.

With the three art directors have been associated about forty of the most prominent stage stars of America, many of whom will make their first stage appearance under the Triangle banner.

President Aitken is giving a large amount of his personal attention to the foreign department, which is being organized with subsidiary Triangle corporations in each of the foreign countries. The studio equipment of the concern at Los Angeles, Cal., ranks with the most extensive and complete in the world.

Moviegrams.

The D. W. Griffith forces, who put the "two-dollar movie"—so-called—on the theatrical map and took over the Illinois Theater early in the Summer for their first spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," have leased the Colonial Theater on Randolph street for a permanent home. George Bowles, the manager of "The Birth of a Nation," will be in charge as manager of productions in this territory and of the Colonial. "The Birth of a Nation," which closes at the Illinois Theater Saturday night, August 21, will be moved to the new home for the first performance there Sunday afternoon, August 22.

• • •

Neva Gerber, who has won the

Joseph Santley Is Reorganizing His "All Over Town" Company; George Bowles to Manage Colonial; Drury Lane Melodrama Is Renamed; Caroline Lilja for "Molly and I"; Gossip of the Stage

By O. L. HALL

The Brothers Santley—Joseph and Frederick—will do their first acting together on the night of the approaching Sabbath. Frederick is going into Joseph's show, "All Over Town," as heir to the part which Richard Tabor has been playing since the beginning of the engagement at the Garrick. Two other changes will be made in the cast Sunday night. Frank Moulan will replace Walter Jones, who will hurry away to take up the part of the burglar, which Herbert Corthell has been acting in "A Full House" ("Keep Moving"), and Roy Atwell will surrender his role of detective to Herbert Williams, the comic pianist, who will for the first time take rating as something else than a specialty performer. After closing its run at the Garrick on August 28 "All Over Town" will visit cities in the Chicago territory, beginning at Milwaukee.

Word comes from George Bowles, manager of "The Birth of a Nation," that, beginning August 22, he will be manager of the Colonial theater for one year. He explains that the Randolph street playhouse has been leased for that length of time by David W. Griffith, J. J. McCarthy and their associates in the Epoch Producing corporation, and that it will be used for showing Griffith pictures, starting with "The Birth of a Nation." "I shall manage the Colonial and all the attractions that play there during the time that it remains under the control of Mr. Griffith, Mr. McCarthy and their associates," says Bowles. "As for arrangements for other theaters, I am not quite ready to make any statements, but I hope before long to have something authentic to give out." The closing statement evidently is in reference to the report that the Epoch Producing corporation also would take over the Studebaker.

Journal Aug 7

"The Birth of a Nation"

"The Birth of a Nation," a filmed spectacle of unusual magnificence and scope, enormously popular, remains on view at the Illinois. The earlier reels unroll scenes and incidents from the civil war—Sherman's march to the sea, the battle of Petersburg, Lee's surrender, and the assassination of Lincoln—on a scale of numbers, diversity and vividness new to motion pictures in America. Then follows a pictorial chronicle of conditions in the south during the days of reconstruction, the carpet-baggers and Ku-Klux Klan, ranging from intimate domestic life to turbulent episode. Into all this is woven sentimental adventure between a soldier of the south and a woman of the north. Music points and emphasizes all the scenes of the huge spectacle.

News Aug 7

THESE ATTRACTIONS CONTINUE

"All Over Town," "Maid in America" and "Lady in Red" Stay.

Beginning to-morrow evening, Joseph Santley, at the Garrick, will begin his last three weeks in "All Over Town."

"The Lady in Red" continues at Cohan's Grand. A New York engagement is imminent at the close of the local run on Sept. 4.

The Palace Music hall continues its successful summer season with "Maid in America" as its attraction.

Walker Whiteside and "The Melting Pot" are rounding out a month's engagement at the Fine Arts theater.

The historical drama in pictures, "The Birth of a Nation," continues at the Illinois theater.

News Aug 7

ATTRACTIONS FOR NEXT WEEK.

Cohan's Grand—"The Lady in Red."
Colonial—Pictures.
Columbia—Burlesque.
Cort—Margaret Illington.
Fine Arts—Film drama.
Garrick—"All Over Town."
Great Northern Hippodrome—Varied acts.
Illinois—"Birth of a Nation" in pictures.
Majestic—Vaudeville.
McVicker's—Vaudeville.
National—"St. Elmo."
Orchestra hall—Music and pictures.
Palace Music hall—"Maid in America."
Studebaker—Pictures.
Ziegfeld—Pictures.

News Aug 7

NEW MOVIE BILLS AT THEATERS NEXT WEEK

Two Plays at Ziegfeld; Frank Daniels Makes Debut in One of Them.

'VAMPIRE' AT STUDEBAKER

Elsie Janis in "Nearly a Lady"; Other Plays Continue; "Seven Sisters" Moves to Colonial.

Alfred Hamburger inaugurates the policy of a double bill of motion pictures at the Ziegfeld theater to-day—two five reel photo plays, a comedy and a melodrama, presenting a prominent star of the stage. This week's plays are "Sold," a Famous Players production, featuring Pauline Frederick in her second film play, and "Crooky," a Vitagraph comedy, which marks the motion picture debut of Frank Daniels, comic opera star. Both pictures will be given at this playhouse for one week.

Miss Frederick gained a personal triumph in her first appearance in the "movies." She gave an impressive interpretation of Donna Roma in "The Eternal City," which the Famous Players celluloided. Her latest vehicle, "Sold," suits her histrionic abilities better than did her earlier production, it is said. Thomas Holding, who played the leading male role in "The Eternal City," also appears in "Sold." In the supporting cast are Julian L'Estrange, Lowell Sherman, Russell Bassett and Lucille Fursman.

"Sold" tells of a wife's devotion to her impoverished husband; her suffering endured to aid him; her sad predicament when her husband deliberately misconstrues her honorable intent; and, finally, her exoneration in his eyes.

Enter Frank Daniels.

Frank Daniels comes to the screen in an original play created especially for him by Paul West, author of the "In Our School" series appearing in The Daily News. The play is said to contain numberless funny situations, resulting from the confusion caused by an escaped convict's impersonation of a man of wealth and respectability.

At the Studebaker theater the weekly change brings Olga Petrova to Chicago Monday in "The Vampire." In her supporting cast are Vernon Steele, William A. Morse, Wallace Scott, Lawrence Grattan and Albert Howson.

In "The Vampire" Mme. Petrova has a role similar to one she has already played on the screen. She takes the part of a woman deceived and deserted by a married man. She vows vengeance against all men. She sets out to ruin, but ends with falling in love with a young man, only to discover he is the son of her betrayer. Her hatred is revived, but in time her heart softens.

Elsie Janis will be seen in her third film play at Orchestra hall, beginning Monday. "Nearly a Lady" is the title of the play which again brings the delightful musical comedy star to the "movies" and it comes from the studios of the Bosworth company. Owen Moore will be seen in the leading male role.

"Cowgirl" Turns Society Belle.

"Nearly a Lady" tells how a "cowgirl" from a western ranch is transformed into a radiant and popular social debutante; how she spurns a titled suitor after his character has been put to test, and how she finally accepts her western sweetheart, who had temporarily been overshadowed by his polished rival. The play gives Miss Janis excellent opportunities to display her talents.

That delightful film comedy, "Seven Sisters," in which Marguerite Clark played the role of Mici, will be shown at the Colonial theater for three days, beginning Monday, before it is released to the outlying theaters. It was shown at Orchestra hall last week. The remainder of the week at the Colonial "The Puppet Crown," shown at the Ziegfeld, with Ina Claire and Carlyle Blackwell in the leading roles, will be the offering.

"The Melting Pot" rounds out its month's engagement at the Fine Arts theater, starting to-morrow. Walker Whiteside as the star and the photographic effects of the play, together with its patriotic tenor, have brought it deserving success.

The Illinois theater continues to play "The Birth of a Nation" to crowded houses. The "All Seats Sold" continues to appear in the foyer of the theater after the performances begin.

General Film Company Rele

The following are brief s plural reel plays which w next week by the Gene
"THE RUNAWA drama in four an unscrup protracte band ne

Post Aug 7

Film Producer Controls Colonial Theater.

GEORGE BOWLES, manager of "The Birth of a Nation," makes the following statement regarding the taking over of the Colonial Theater for the display of that film drama:

"I don't like the idea of having to contradict any statements that may have been given out, but the public has a right to know that whatever theater houses a Griffith production will be Griffith-controlled. We are not booking 'The Birth of a Nation,' and we are not likely to book any of the Griffith productions. Whatever house we go into we will control.

"The Colonial Theater has been leased for a year, beginning Aug. 22, all statements to the contrary notwithstanding. It has been taken over for the purpose of producing Griffith attractions—'The Birth of a Nation'—owned and presented by the Epoch Producing Corporation, and the future releases of that company.

"I shall manage the Colonial and all of the attractions that play there during the time that it remains under the control of Mr. Griffith, and his associates. As for arrangements for other theaters, I am not quite ready to make any statements, but I hope before long to have something authentic to give out."

Aug 7

ENING POST, SATURDA

of Filmdom

"Birth of a Nation" to Move; Griffith Leases The Colonial Theater

The D. W. Griffith forces who put the "two-dollar movie"—so called—on the theatrical map and took over the Illinois Theater early in the summer for their first spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," have leased the Colonial Theater on Randolph street for a permanent home. The initial lease for this theater, which has housed many great dramatic spectacles, takes it from Jones, Linick & Schaeffer control and gives it over to the Epoch Producing Corporation for a period of one year. George Bowles, the manager for "The Birth of a Nation," will be in charge as manager of productions in this territory and of the Colonial.

"The Birth of a Nation," which closes at the Illinois Theater Saturday night, Aug. 21, will be moved to the new home for the first performance there Sunday afternoon, Aug. 22, but for the week previous the house will be given over to the decorators and other men required to put the playhouse in the best possible shape for the coming year.

The lease is dated from Aug. 16, at which time D. W. Griffith will be in Chicago to take charge of getting his new "two-dollar photo-drama house" ready for the opening. It is his purpose to rearrange everything pertaining to projection and the proper presentation of his masterpieces. He intends to give Chicagoans further reason to praise his former efforts.

He will have absolute control of the Colonial, having been given free rein in the theater to do as he pleases. Griffith devotes the same care and attention to the presentation of his pictures as he does to producing the stories. He contends that many productions have failed because of faulty projection and inartistic surroundings. It will be his aim in the Colonial to obtain the finest production—projection, stage setting, artistic surroundings and music—ever realized in this country, either for the spoken or the silent drama.

American Aug 7

Moviegrams

Yes, it's true, Douglas Fairbanks has been acclimated. At any rate he has settled down to live like a real human being in a California bungalow.

• • •

Theodore Roosevelt took one peep at Roscoe Arbuckle, the fat child of the Keystone, and remarked, "Bully!" "It's an illness that makes me look this way," replied "Fatty."

• • •

New title for Mae Marsh—"Little Sister of the Screen."

• • •

They're calling Charlie Ray the "black man from Borneo." He is so tanned he plays the part well. Charles

...RAND THEATRE CO.
...TRA HALL

or La Salle; "Kick In" Coming

tage and Gossip of Musicians

Mae Marsh, Who Is Among the Players Cinematized in "The Birth of a Nation," at the Illinois Theater.

What's in Store for Movie Fans

THERE are many interesting picture prospects in store for the next eight days, beginning this morning.

The kiddies have their regular frolic at Orchestra hall at 10:30 today, with the "Hansel and Gretel" fairy tale of the Brothers Grimm, and two small pictures, "The Rivals" and "The Kangaroo," for their special program. Mary Pickford's "Rags" will continue on until Monday, when Elsie Janis will float on to the Strand screen in "Nearly a Lady."

Today's other opening feature will be Pauline Frederick in "Sold" at the Ziegfeld, a house for which Alfred Hamburger announces he has made a new five years' lease. "Crooky," a Vitagraph feature comedy, containing Frank Daniels, will complete the double bill.

The Studebaker on Monday will substitute for Dorothy Donnelly and the forest fastnesses of "Sealed Valley," a spicily interesting combination of Olga Petrova in "The Vampire."

The double charms of Marguerite Clark and "Seven Sisters" will again see the loop light on the Colonial screen on Monday, whither also Charles brings his Chaplinesque charms in his latest effect, "The Bank."

At the Fine Arts "The Melting Pot" with Walker Whiteside continues to continue, not at all influenced by the fact that Mr. Whiteside's appearance in the flesh is scheduled for Sept. 5 at the Princess, nor does it appear that the managers of his actual appearance are worried by the proximity of his film presence. In fact, the dual playing is regarded as a happy opportunity to test out the truth of the managerial wail that the film hurts the box office popularity of the player, or the arising moan of the picture producer that the play hurts his film.

"The Blindness of Virtue" has yet a little more continuance at the La Salle before it turns to its regular musical comedy winter offering, and "The Birth of a Nation" keeps on disappointing people who drop in at the last minute looking for a seat. It is the first motion picture in this town that has made a purchasing waiting line an institution and the "sold out" sign a regular accompaniment of almost all of its performances. On Aug. 22 it will be transferred, with its complete presentation equipment to the Colonial theater.

American-Aug. 7.

CHICAGO EVENING AMER

Birth of Nation Limit Still Out of Sight

BY ROB REEL.

No attraction on record ever enjoyed a Summer run in Chicago equal in success to that of "The Birth of a Nation" at the Illinois Theater. In its third month in this city the great D. W. Griffith spectacle is smashing precedent by displaying the "All Seats Sold" label of prosperity in the foyer after the opening of every performance on the twice-daily schedule.

The tide of great world events and the necessity for a general feeling for Americanism is reflected in inspiring manner by the patriotic scenes and episodes in "The Birth of a Nation." The spirit of Abraham Lincoln flames anew in the hearts of many thousands of citizens as the result of the realistic and reverent depiction of the great war President.

Spectators who are thrilled by the sight of daring deeds of horsemanship and by maneuvers by large bodies of mounted men find added pleasure in that part of the play devoted to the uprising of the Ku Klux Klan in the Southland during the carpet-bagger period of the civil war. The sight of 500 mounted riders, clad in ghostly white with shrouded faces, plunging up hill and down, through streams and over ditches, is one that stirs the blood and creates wonderment as to the master skill of the producer.

Elsie Janis exchanges lariat and leggings for ball gown and dancing slippers, performing a social leap from a Montana ranch to the inner circles of New York's "400" in "Nearly a Lady," the gay romantic play in which she will be starred beginning Monday at Orchestra Hall. The play is based on an attractive theme. It tells how a "cowgirl" from a West ern ranch was transformed into rare and radiant favorite of York society, how she spu titled lover after his real had been put to trial, an finally accepted the " West," who had been completely by her m mirer.

"Children's Mo devoted so effe the little E week, offer bright feat day in " loved c fairy

Exam 8/7

ILLINOIS.

The most wonderful Summer run in Chicago theatrical history is being enjoyed by "The Birth of a Nation" at the Illinois Theater. In its third month in this city the Griffith spectacle is playing to greater business than in its first weeks of popularity.

The tide of great world events and the necessity for a general feeling of stout Americanism is reflected by the patriotic scenes and episodes in "The Birth of a Nation." The spirit of Abraham Lincoln flames anew in the hearts of many thousands of citizens in the depiction of the great war president in "The Birth of a Nation."

Spectators who are thrilled by the sight of daring horsemanship and maneuvers by large bodies of mounted men find excitement in that part of the play devoted to the uprising of the Ku Klux Clan during the carpet bagger period after the Civil War. The sight of 500 mounted riders clad in ghostly white and with shrouded faces, plunging through streams and over ditches, is one that creates wonderment as to the master skill of the producer.

There is more skillful and daring riding in the incidental scenes of "The Birth of a Nation" than in ten Western dramas. The "Ku Klux Kall," a peculiar combination of trumpet notes, haunts the memory of those who have witnessed the ferocious charges of the Southern knights

Tribune Aug 7-15

Tribune aug. 8.

Stock in the new Triangle Film corporation, capitalized at $5,000,000 for the 1,000,000 shares, has been listed in the New York curb market at $5 a share.

American aug 9

The Epoch Producing Company having obtained the Colonial for a year, where "The Birth of a Nation" soon will be housed under the management of George Bowles, is dickering for the control of a second big theater. Who knows which?

Examiner aug 12

Next week the Colonial goes into darkness and renovation in preparation for the housing of "The Birth of a Nation," which will go there from the Illinois on August 22.

Post aug 12

"Puppet Crown" Closes Last Half of Colonial's Last Week Under Old Reign

Ina Claire in "The Puppet Crown," a Lasky production in five parts, appears as the feature on the last half of the Colonial Theater's program. Much credit for the excellency of this production is due to the producer, George H. Melford. Miss Claire is well supported by Carlyle Blackwell and Cleo Ridgely, who plays her usual role as the villainess. The production was prepared from one of Harold McGrath's romances. The love story of a rich young American and a poor and pretty princess is not a new thing in fiction, but the fact that the story is trite is easily forgiven when it is as attractively presented as in the case of "The Puppet Crown."

Alexia, the princess, is sent to an American boarding school to get a glimpse of American freedom. Bob Carewe, a young millionaire, gets a glimpse of Alexia over the wall of the school and immediately falls in love with her. A pretty romance is interrupted by the arrival of her father's elderly adviser, who comes to take the princess back to her native country.

Meanwhile, back in Osia, the Duchess Sylvia is plotting with some of the nobles and army officials to get the crown, so when Alexia comes back she finds the small kingdom in an uproar. She and her father are extremely unpopu the duchess is the idol of the pe termined to defy public opinion, plans to give his daughter a ba reads of the disturbances in Osia out with his American dollars t kingdom and come to the resc lovely princess.

Carewe overhears a group of plotting to start a revolution on of the ball and goes to the king offer of financial aid, which the arch is glad to accept. The place as planned, and in the mid festivities the mob breaks into the The king hides, and when the mob him he has already died of shock. duchess is proclaimed ruler and Alex Carewe are accompanied to the Alexia's sorrow at losing her king presumably softened by the fact th is free to marry Carewe.

Next week the Colonial Theater closed that it may be thoroly re and brought up to the high standa comfort and beauty, following the

W. C. Anderson T

President W. C. An derson Electric Car C
the Detroit electrics number of refinements
est practices in auto
"Many of these impro ive with us. These tryify the experience

News - 8/12/15

ROOM FOR BOTH SHORT AND LONG FILM PLAYS

Thomas H. Ince Talks of One of the Problems of Movie Business These Days.

FUTURE IS DARK TO MANY

Avalanche of Features, as Well as One and Two Reelers, Continues to Flood Market, However.

With every announcement of the formation of a new film production concern comes the information that another brand of feature photoplays will be placed on the motion picture market. Some concerns have elaborate plans for old ideas, others depart from the beaten path and venture into new fields, but all agree on the length of the pictures, a five reel subject or over.

THOMAS H. INCE. (N. Y. Motion Picture Co. photo.)

The surprising growth of the feature field is filling producers of large and small subjects with apprehension over the future of the silent drama. Many are in doubt whether to continue releasing even the short pictures. Progressive ones have thrown care to the winds and are producing mammoth film plays at great expense. Whether the feature photo plays ever will supplant the shorter subject entirely is still a matter for conjecture, however.

No Difficulty Over Programs.

Meanwhile the theater owner or manager has little difficulty in picking a program from the avalanche of features which come to Chicago weekly and from the regular releases of the General Film company, Universal Film company and Mutual Film corporation. In addition to the small pictures he has his choice of Mutual masterpieces, Universal features, and the V. L. S. E., Metro, Pathe, Paramount, World, Fox, Kleine-Edison, and several other makes of feature pictures to complete his program each week.

Discussing the motion picture business generally and the feature subject particularly, Thomas H. Ince, managing director of the New York Motion Picture company and one of the three directors in the recently formed Triangle Film corporation, said:

"To say that the feature has come to stay would be putting it mildly. Not alone has it come to stay, but it has come to grow. It will not eliminate one and two reel pictures entirely, however. Both will find a market always. Neither ever will have to go begging for a place to show. Neither ever will have to fight to retain popularity with the multitudes of motion picture lovers throughout the country.

Like the Legitimate Stage.

"Motion pictures in a measure may be compared with 'legitimate' stage productions. Feature pictures rank with three or four act dramatic plays; single or two reel films with the numbers of a vaudeville program. There are those among the amusement seeking people of the world who can afford only a few moments at a time for their entertainment. They are not inclined to visit a theater where a three or four act play occupies an entire performance. So they visit a variety theater. Movie patrons are just the same.

"As an illustration, let me cite an incident of which I chanced to be a witness. It happened on Broadway, Los Angeles. Two salesgirls from one of the stores, who had about twenty minutes to spare during their lunch hour, approached two theaters in proximity to each other. At one house a feature photo play was being shown, at the other a program of one and two reel subjects. The girls promptly chose the playhouse where the short plays were being exhibited.

"That little incident proved to me that the smaller picture never will have trouble in finding a market."

Regarding the $2 "movie" idea, Mr. Ince holds that the public is prepared to patronize better picture entertainment, and will not hesitate to pay the price for it.

"We will have to provide picture plays such as have never before appeared regularly," he said. "Perfect pictures have been presented, but they lacked the '$2' punch."

Notes of Photo Plays.

Sam Bernard's advent in films will be made the 23d of this month, according to

American 8/13

The Colonial is housing Ina Claire in "The Puppet Crown" through Sunday. Next week the house goes dark for changes preceding the moving of "The Birth of a Nation" from the Illinois.

• • •

The new Brady-World Film feature a [illegible]

Post 8/13

fastest machines in Chicago.

• • •

Is there money in the picture business? Just a little. D. W. Griffith this week donated $8,000 for a 1916 Fiat limousine.

• • •

William S. Hart, after finishing "The Disciple," has dropped the western character work for a while and is now ap-

Tribune Aug 16

Plenty to Interest Loop Film Goers.

THERE are a number of interesting things to engage the picture goer's attention in prospect this coming week in the loop.

First off, this morning at 10:3[illegible] there is the Strand kiddies' party at Orchestra hall with "The Heart of a Princess," "The Ten Cent Adventure," and "A Study in Birds" programed alluringly. Until Monday there continues Elsie Janis in her "Nearly a Lady" effort and that heart stirring bit of canine and infantile acting by Shep and Baby Helen Badgley in "A Dog's Love," which they gives place to a picturization of "The Marriage of Kitty," containing Fannie Ward.

Today at 10, the Ziegfeld inaugurates its new double feature bill, with Blanche Sweet in "The Secret Orchard," and Marie Tempest in "Mrs. Plum's Pudding." With this program the contest for lay critics opens, reaching through three other double programs.

Ann Murdoch in "A Royal Family" adorns the Studebaker screen on Monday.

The Colonial closes its doors for a renovatory experience in preparation of the coming of "The Birth of a Nation," which will shift over on Sunday afternoon, Aug. 22, from the Illinois, where it has held full house since Saturday, June 5.

"The Melting Pot" goes into its second month at the Fine Arts theater with no apparent signs of stopping. When it does, "The Alien," the big feature made from George Beban's vaudeville sketch "At the Sign of the Rose," is scheduled for showing.

Post aug 16

• • •

"The Birth of a Nation," which has had such a long run at the Illinois Theater, will be transferred from that theater Saturday night, Aug. 28, and will begin Sunday, Aug. 29, at the Colonial Theater under the same management.

HERALD aug 17

New Triangle Manager

J. N. Naulty, formerly vice president and general manager of the Mutual Film Company, resigned his position to become general manager of the Triangle, the new feature company. Mr Naulty will have charge of marketing the Triangle products.

NSTON
PUBLISHED DAILY EXCEPT SU
EVANSTON, ILLINOIS, SATURDAY, AU

FORMER EVANSTONIAN NOW A PICTURE STAR

Ralph Lewis, N. U. Graduate and Athlete, Making Good as Film Player.

One of the motion picture stars, who is growing in magnitude right along, is Ralph Lewis, a native of Evanston, a graduate of Northwestern university and a member of the Phi Delta Theta fraternity. He is the son of Col. E. R. Lewis.

When in college he was an athlete of no little ability. He played right half back on the football team, and for two years was pitcher on the baseball team.

Lewis declined an offer to join the New York Giants in favor of a stage career. Eighteen years in the legitimate drama has given him a wide experience with some of the most famous stars and managers in the country, experience which he is now capitalizing in the motion picture field.

Lewis is with the Reliance-Majestic forces and played the strong role of the Judge in The Outcast, a four-reel Mutual masterpiece, based on the famous story by Thomas Nelson Page. His portraiture of the much discussed character of Stoneham, the radical leader in The Birth of a Nation, would be sufficient to rank him at the very top of the dramatic profession.

PICTURE POSTCARDS
[illegible]HEM IN TOUCH

Herald Aug 15

Bright Bulbs Bloom to Break Gloom as Randolph Street Comes Back to

RANDOLPH RIALTO AT NIGHT

After Far Wanderings Explorer Finds Every Thrill of Adventure, With All Home Comforts, in Chicago's Rollicking Rialto

By THE CHICAGO EXPLORER.

(Special Taxigram to the City Life Section.)

RANDOLPH STREET, Chicago, Aug. 14.—Bravo for good old Randolph street! It is coming back into its own. Randolph street in its new fall clothes will soon be the city's Rialto once more.

Every self-respecting city must have a Rialto, in addition to running water and gas. Even Lincoln, Ill., has a Rialto, in that giddy section where two moving picture theaters face the courthouse square. New York City has its Rialto, as you know, where hordes of actors remain out of work while waiting for the dull season. It helps keep the town up.

Rialto All Run Down.

Years ago Randolph street was officially appointed to act as Chicago's full-blown Rialto, and it did its work nobly and well. Then came parlous times for the drama, times when theaters closed and remained closed, and when theater crowds became ghost armies to haunt the old actor's memory.

After two months spent exploring suburbs and quiet residence neighborhoods in search of rest and rural repose of soul, your Explorer forged his way back to the Babylonic loop district. Mournful reports and glum rumors had prepared him for the worst. Randolph street was "dead," loophoundishly barking, he was told. The dear old days of the gaudy "first nights," social conclaves between the acts, taxicab fleet manuevers twixt theater and cabaret, rapturous processions of matinee girls—those days were gone, and the dustman of memory had begun his mournful task.

But there was nothing requiemlike in the clanging of trolley cars, the humming of motors and the patter of crowds as your Explorer turned boldly into the highway that had glittered in his youth. In another minute he was trying to keep pace with the quickstep of Randolph street crowds.

It was daylight, yet the electric signs dazzled him. They were new signs. The globe-frames were painted in white, and electricians were busily adorning them with Edison diamonds of the night.

"Two new shows already, and I've taken only one look," murmured your Explorer, as he closed his eyes to make ready for the second effort.

"Three new shows for Randolph street," corrected his guide. "And a fourth will keep on running for a record. It's going to be a real theatrical season on the gay old drag."

A flock of chorus girls—at least they wore enough feathers to array a flock—tripped past us.

"I wouldn't be seen in one o' them costumes, would you, Gertie?" protested the tall girl with brown eyes and the Queen Elizabeth walking skirt.

Apparently they were discussing the new women's bathing suits permitted on municipal bathing beaches.

Two gentlemen with felt hats and canes, one with curling hair tinged iron gray, stood at the curbside. He was admitting he had received several offers to go into the movies. The other observed that vaudeville was going to the dog pound circuit.

"He Comes Up Smiling—Sept. 5."

This was the electric sign inscription we read on the hat band of Powers' Theater entrance. It seemed to voice the spirit of Randolph street—a determination to come up smiling after a forlorn and neglected summertime.

Machines in the Weight.

"Kick In" was the terse mandate displayed in front of the Olympic Theater.

"Is it a musical comedy?" breathlessly inquired your Explorer, who was ready for anything after his lengthy exile in the woods.

"Certainly not," corrected his guide. "If 'Kick In' were a girl and melody show its title would be 'Kick Up.'"

A few doors east the genial and veracious advertising agent for Mr. Santley was announcing that 1,543,283,000 men, women and children had witnessed "All Over Town" since the opening.

In the block between Dearborn and State streets the dreadnought of Randolph street tricals was visited.

"Shades of George W. Lederer!" cried the guide, and stared through glass doors into the magnificent foyer. "What would he say about 'guess-your-weight' machines in the Colonial Theater?"

But it was presently explained that the weight machines—the only standing room permitted in a Chicago playhouse—would soon be removed from the Colonial is shortly to be rescued from its fate as a "ten-twenty-thirty" auditorium, an all-day temple of large-footed movie comedians, of juggling acts, trained geese and ragtime silhouettes of mangled melody.

Like Randolph street itself, the Colonial is going to come up smiling. A week hence it will become the permanent fall and winter home of a $2 per seat attraction. "The Birth of a Nation" comes to the Colonial after D. W. Griffith has made a complete new production of the theater's ventilating system. With it will arrive George Bowles' own troupe of mild lady ushers, beauteous in hoop skirts, crinolines and those lacy, cylindrical possessions of the frivolous '60s.

Base Threat of Reel-Alto.

Mr. Bowles threatens to make trouble when he says he intends to convert Chicago's beloved Rialto into a Reel-alto. But that's the result of mixing in moving pictures.

Joe Grein, who insists that the live crawfish, not the lobster, is the national bird of Randolph street—he sells 'em fresh every hour—declared that there was nothing to hold back the future of Randolph street, not even if you tried to speak of it in the past tense.

"Randolph street is going to show up Broadway, N. Y., one of these days, you mark my words," said Mr. Grein, permitting a playful crawfish to bite the end of his cigar. "There's only one thing left for us business men to do, and that is to stand up for our rights and insist that the front door to the city hall is located on Randolph street. We have heard enough of the idle boasts and slams of the Washington streeters, who claim the front entrance for themselves, and tell us that the door for tradesmen, peddlers and canvassers is on Randolph street. It is a matter of record that while city sealer of this municipality I secured the front door of both the city and county building for this, my own beloved Randolph street, the Rialto of the western hemisphere."

"Try a crawfish!"

Similar sentiments were expressed by other well known members of the Randolph Street Chapter, United Order of Loophounds.

Fall Styles in Electric Signs Bring Gin Grouchy and Raise Randolph S to Its Former High Estate

"Randolph street w proximity to the th Clark street to the partakes of a metr phere all its own," bett. "Here is the th theaters, and the th exchanges lend zest spirit which prevails needs is an even bre patronage to restore of vivacity and attr

Wigwagging t

Your Explorer des the rear admiral wh cabs and other light the Hotel Sherman. naval officer was w responsibilities and therefore, could not accosted by a mere suburban wilds.

Anyway, here's to May it live long, gl prosper!

We're going to ha in Chicago even if becomes extinct, and the films out for an

CHICAGO DAILY JOURNAL, SATURDAY, AUGUST 14, 1915

IN PLAYHOUSE AND PARK

Mary Carr. McVICKER'S.

Ernst Knoch. CONDUCTOR RAVINIA PARK.

Richard Bennett. "KICK IN." OLYMPIC.

D.W. Griffith. CREATOR OF "THE BIRTH OF A NATION." (PHOTOPLAY) ILLINOIS.

Swan Wood. MAJESTIC.

Examiner SUNDAY, AUGUST 15, 1915.

'ARDENS

War Shown as It Is in "Birth of a Nation"

THAT the "play spirit" in which war has been entered in the past by the American nation will never be repeated by this country, if it approaches the verge of combat, is declared by civil war veterans who have witnessed D. W. Griffith's historical spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," at the Illinois Theater.

The play graphically portrays the gay and ebullient spirit in which war was welcomed by the youth of the North and South in 1861. This festive emotion stands in tragic contrast to the later era of grim horror, of hardship and overwhelming grief which held sway over the entire nation.

"The people of this country now know what war means—even if they have not yet displayed sufficient intelligence to prepare for it," said a former officer in the Union army who saw "The Birth of a Nation" with several G. A. R. comrades the other evening. "They would not again enter a conflict with the cock-sure, joyous air which prevailed North and South at the outbreak of the rebellion, and which in some degree was repeated when the war with Spain was begun in 1898.

"No aspect of the great conflict is drawn with greater fidelity in 'The Birth of a Nation' than the festive scenes attending the departure of troops to the front in 1861. In Griffith's drama we see a magnificent ball, given in the capital city of a Southern state, on the eve of the leave-taking of a Confederate regiment for the battle line.

"Officers, elegantly uniformed, women dressed in the height of fashion of the period, dance to the music of a regimental band. At midnight wine is opened and a toast to the Confederate banner is quaffed, amid fiery strains of a Southern war melody. Bonfires are lit in the city streets and public square—a magnificent stage effect, this—and the population dances about the flames, thrilled with the false 'picnic' spirit of war.

"These scenes are spectacular, but, to my own knowledge, they are dramatic records of actual happenings all over the North and South before the battle of Bull Run and other deadly clashes had a sobering effect upon the divided nation. The celebration shown in 'The Birth of a Nation' was presented as an occurrence following the Bull Run fight, in which the untrained levies of the North suffered a disastrous defeat.

"The South, therefore, was jubilant, while in the Union States came a much needed awakening as to the harsh facts of war. Perhaps this early victory of Southern troops had a reverse effect in the long run, as it inspired over-confidence amid the Confederate ranks, but jolted the Northern forces to a realization of the stern stuff that war is made of. But there is no doubt that in the opening months of the civil war there was festal celebration which became pathetic in the light of later tragedy.

"Troops, fancifully arrayed, were feted and dined before leaving for the front. Officers were presented with costly swords and decorations, amid eulogies by political stump speakers. Nowadays, guided by our own severe experiences and having studied the progress of the world's greatest war in Europe, it is not likely that the American nation will again welcome war in a holiday mood, as so strikingly depicted in 'The Birth of a Nation.'"

Examiner Aug 16, 1915

* * *

No Work When Ikey Moulted.

GEORGE BOWLES, the prince of press agents and one of the noblest egg and hen scientists on any shore, is a man of deep experience, an experience that ranges from Anna Held's milk bath to the cigaret-smoking elephant of Barnum & Bailey's Circus. He has plenty of time to talk these days, because "The Birth of a Nation," which drove him from his Eastern hennery once more to the road, is a success that requires nothing but big ads and box-office officials who are quick on making change.

Mr. Bowles was telling me yesterday about Sam Watson, a famous clown, whose other half of his circus sketch was Ikey, a goose. Well, one day Ikey began to moult. There were enough quill pens around the big tent to make a Victorian litterateur of even the lemonade chemist. And with the loss of his quills came the loss of Ikey's trickstership. He couldn't do a single thing, and Sam Watson was six months out of a job while restoring his fowl to efficiency.

* * *

Henry's Patience Rewarded.

TO me, more or less in the trade, that is a harrowingly funny story. But to him that wants it written on the wall for runners, here is an easier one by Bowles:

Charles T. Hutchinson has charge of the big money wagon for B. & B.'s Circus, and he owned a trustful fox terrier of the trustful name of Henry. Every night after his supper Mr. Hutchinson would bring back to the money wagon the spine of a porterhouse steak. He would turn this over to the dog, and the dog, Henry, after the manner of dogs immemorial, would bury the bone. And invariably he buried it between the front wheels of the ticket wagon. One-night stands were the order, and, of course, Henry would come to in a new town every morning with not a bone on deposit in the bank between the front wheels. That went along for five years and two months. Then the money wagon happened to stand where that long ago it had stood before. The optimist, Henry, dug as ever—and at last uncovered a bone. He sniffed it and ever after dined a la carte.

Examiner 15

THEATRES ✦ AMUSEMENT

MAE MARSH in
"THE BIRTH of a NATION"
at the ILLINOIS

BLANCHE SWEET in
"The SECRET ORCHA

American aug 18

Two and a H

ILLE :-:

"Birth of a Nation" to Be Moved

TO-DAY'S FILMS.

ILLINOIS—"Birth of a Nation."

FINE ARTS—"The Melting Pot."

ZIEGFELD—"The Secret Orchard" and "Mrs. Plum's Pudding."

ORCHESTRA HALL—"Nearly a Lady"; Monday, "The Marriage of Kitty."

STUDEBAKER — "The Vampire"; Monday, "The Royal Family."

COLONIAL — "The Puppet Crown."

BY ROB REEL.

D. W. GRIFFITH'S Titan of spectacles, "The Birth of a Nation," begins its last week of record-breaking triumphs at the Illinois Theater, and after the performance next Saturday (August 21) night will occupy its new home, the Colonial.

The first performance in the completely renovated Randolph street playhouse will take place on the following (Sunday) afternoon. The same scale of prices as that prevailing at the Illinois will be in order. The engagement at the Colonial Theater will be of indefinite length. As the demand for seats is steadily on the increase, with "sold out" houses the invariable rule, it is impossible to predict how many months this classic will be on view.

This week the Colonial will be closed, that it may be thoroughly renovated and brought up to the highest standards of comfort and beauty. The work of equipping the house for its new purposes is being done by a corps of experts. The entire arrangement of the interior is to be readjusted along scientific lines to conform with the focal requirements of the cinema art. The sight lines will be accurately measured and a new scheme perfected which will permit the eye to catch the faintest detail in the elaborate picture.

In conjunction with Professor Albrecht of Bonn University, Mr. Griffith has achieved a system of stimulated ventilation, whereby the Colonial will be filled with vitalized air. This removes every dust particle from the atmosphere, particles which interfere with absolute clearness of projection.

American 8/18

WEDNESDAY.

Moviegrams

Essanay has a number of genuine Indians around the Chicago studios waiting for work in the six-reel feature film, "The Man Trail," being produced from the story by the well-known writer, Henry Oyen, with Richard Travers and June Keith in the leading parts.

• • •

Tiring of waiting for sunshiny weather for an outdoor scene of "When My Lady Smiles," Essanay altered the photoplay to call for a rainy-day scene in place of the sunshiny one. Hence, on that day at least, rain didn't keey Essanay from working outdoors.

• • •

Few people know it, but Lillian Loraine is not a New Yorker after all. She's a native Californian.

• • •

Henry MacMahon, general press representative for the Triangle, is on the coast getting "atmosphere" for film stories for his company.

• • •

Owen Moore says that while he loves his wife—and who doesn't, she's Mary Pickford—he has no desire to be known simply as "Mary Pickford's husband."

• • •

Tribune 8/15

12 VII.

MAJESTIC.

Will Morrissey and Dorothy Hackett:

"You have traveled, haven't you?"

"I was in Paris all last night."

"Did you see the ruins of Rome?"

"Did I! I ruined 'em myself."

"How do you like Hamburg?"

"With onions."

"Do you know that the cost of living in England is extremely low?"

"So?"

"Yes; you can live for a week on a guinea."

"You can do that in State street if you can find the ginny. But Italians are scarce since the war began."

"What hotels did you put up at in Paris?"

"I didn't put up 'at' any of them. I put up 'with' them."

"Now we'll stage some movies: 'Lost in the Desert,' with Mary Pickford. That's a happy death. Next we'll have, 'Why Girls Leave Home,' with Arthur Johnson. And, lastly, 'The Birth of a Nation,' assisted by Eddie Foy."

The "Eternal" Triangle! New Plans of Concern Now in Public Eye

Henry McMahon, general press representative of the Triangle interests, has made public all the arrangements of the new combination. Contrary to general opinion, the $2 scale of prices will not prevail thruout the country, but only in the cities of New York and Chicago. It has been decided that these two places are the only ones able to pay such prices.

The Triangle will lease and conduct playhouses in both cities, where their newest and best features will be released at the $2 scale of prices. Labor day will probably see the opening and first showing of the new productions. Fourteen reels will comprise the first bills, and for the opening three famous stars have been selected. Douglas Fairbanks, who is now at the Griffith studio working under the direction of Christy Cabanne and the general supervision of Griffith, will represent the Griffith interest in a feature production. Mack Sennett will arrange to release a four-reel comedy featuring Raymond Hitchcock, to provide the comedy on the bill. In the future, however, it is quite probable that all of the Keystones will be two reels in length. Thomas H. Ince has selected a picture starring Frank Keenan which he himself is directing.

After about two weeks the rest of the country will have the opportunity of witnessing these pictures at prices ranging from 25 cents to $2. Los Angeles, however, being the home of the feature, will in all probability see them at the same time they are shown in New York and Chicago.

Commenting upon the stars that have been engaged by the Triangle interests, Mr. MacMahon was authority for the statement that a weeding-out process would be in effect; that is, legitimate stars that took well before the camera and proved to be favorites with the public would find the camera work so remunerative that they would stay in the business. All in all, he conceded that two years would decide just about who would be who in the picture world so far as legitimate actors were concerned.

The Triangle is engaging all of the best possible picture material. They have already obtained about a hundred people and expect to have about that many more in the very near future.

De Wolf Hopper in "Wang."

De Wolf Hopper is expected to arrive at the Griffith studios about the 25th of this month and it has been decided that one of his productions will be a picturization of his popular success, "Wang," and probably one or two other roles that he has made famous.

Billie Burke will arrive at about the same time and will act before the camera some of the parts that have made her such a favorite with the American public.

Besides the stars that have already been filmed the Triangle have Frank Mills, Frank Campeau, Forest Winant, De Wolf Hopper, H. B. Warner, Mary Boland, Louise Dressler, Billie Burke, Weber and Fields and Bert Clarke, Owen Moore, long time with the Keystone company, has been engaged by D. W. Griffith to work in the future productions.

After much debating it has been decided that the Triangle films will be known to the public as Fine Art Films. It is now the plan of the company to raise the science of picture-making to the highest possible plane. A special corp of scenario writers are now working on all available manuscripts, and where it is not possible to purchase the rights to some play that the actress or actor engaged has made famous they will endeavor to put over something as fresh and original as possible.

It is impossible to ascertain how the next big Griffith and Ince features will be released. It is quite probable, tho, that they will not be put out under the Triangle banner, but that the same methods will be used whereby the "Birth of a Nation" was successfully launched.

Post 8/18

American aug 18

Henry MacMahon, general press representative for the Triangle, is on the coast getting "atmosphere" for film stories for his company.

• • •

Tribune aug. 19

FLICKERINGS By KITTY

"Triangle" Starts Work in Chicago.

THE Triangle eagle, which has been fluttering uncertainly over our heads in filmland for some few weeks, has finally swooped down on Chicago and perched on the thirteenth floor of the Mallers building for a permanent home. There R. C. Seery, formerly manager of the middle west for the Mutual company, has settled down, too, as the keeper.

"I got back from New York on Friday, and by noon Saturday we were moving in here," explained Mr. Seery, indicating the "here" with a sweeping gesture, which included a great stretch of floor space, with small partitions knocked out, one desk, four chairs, and a constant din of hammering. "This is the Chicago headquarters for the Triangle company."

Then Mr. Seery explained some of the local angles of the Triangle program. Following the showing of the pictures in the Studebaker, which will begin on some date not fully decided yet, in September, the films, after a brief period of rest, will circulate among between twenty and thirty of the larger houses in the outlying districts, at prices not definitely decided on, but from 15 to 50 cents, probably.

The release of fourteen reels a week which have their first showing at the Studebaker, will be divided into two programs for the smaller houses, giving them a bi-weekly change.

This will present to managers a factor quite different from the regular daily change of program, in the opinion of the Triangle representative. The house will be catering, instead of to the population of three or four blocks, to that of three or four square miles. In the several days' showing of each bill the manager will have an opportunity to build up for an audience through the folder, the billboard, and the newspaper.

A weekly rental of from $300 to $1,000 was suggested as the material consideration prevailing, the scale being based on the population of the individual theater's field, and though no names were admitted for publication some of the large local theater interests were suggested as showing a favorable inclination toward the program.

* * *

A Mi...

ROOM FOR BOTH SHORT AND LONG FILM PLAYS

Thomas H. Ince Talks of One of the Problems of Movie Business These Days.

FUTURE IS DARK TO MANY

Avalanche of Features, as Well as One and Two Reelers, Continues to Flood Market, However.

With every announcement of the formation of a new film production concern comes the information that another brand of feature photoplays will be placed on the motion picture market. Some concerns have elaborate plans for old ideas, others depart from the beaten path and venture into new fields, but all agree on the length of the pictures, a five reel subject or over.

THOMAS H. INCE. (N. Y. Motion Picture Co. photo.)

The surprising growth of the feature field is filling producers of large and small subjects with apprehension over the future of the silent drama. Many are in doubt whether to continue releasing even the short pictures. Progressive ones have thrown care to the winds and are producing mammoth film plays at great expense. Whether the feature photo plays ever will supplant the shorter subject entirely is still a matter for conjecture, however.

No Difficulty Over Programs.

Meanwhile the theater owner or manager has little difficulty in picking a program from the avalanche of features which come to Chicago weekly and from the regular releases of the General Film company, Universal Film company and Mutual Film corporation. In addition to the small pictures he has his choice of Mutual masterpieces, Universal features, and the V. L. S. E., Metro, Pathe, Paramount, World, Fox, Kleine-Edison, and several other makes of feature pictures to complete his program each week.

Discussing the motion picture business generally and the feature subject particularly, Thomas H. Ince, managing director of the New York Motion Picture company and one of the three directors in the recently formed Triangle Film corporation, said:

"To say that the feature has come to stay would be putting it mildly. Not alone has it come to stay, but it has come to grow. It will not eliminate one and two reel pictures entirely, however. Both will find a market always. Neither ever will have to go begging for a place to show. Neither ever will have to fight to retain popularity with the multitudes of motion picture lovers throughout the country.

Like the Legitimate Stage.

"Motion pictures in a measure may be compared with 'legitimate' stage productions. Feature pictures rank with three or four act dramatic plays; single or two reel films with the numbers of a vaudeville program. There are those among the amusement seeking people of the world who can afford only a few moments at a time for their entertainment. They are not inclined to visit a theater where a three or four act play occupies an entire performance. So they visit a variety theater. Movie patrons are just the same.

"As an illustration, let me cite an incident of which I chanced to be a witness. It happened on Broadway, Los Angeles. Two salesgirls from one of the stores, who had about twenty minutes to spare during their lunch hour, approached two theaters in proximity to each other. At one house a feature photo play was being shown, at the other a program of one and two reel subjects. The girls promptly chose the playhouse where the short plays were being exhibited.

"That little incident proved to me that the smaller picture never will have trouble in finding a market."

Regarding the $2 "movie" idea, Mr. Ince holds that the public is prepared to patronize better picture entertainment, and will not hesitate to pay the price for it.

"We will have to provide picture plays such as have never before appeared regularly," he said. "Perfect pictures have been presented, but they lacked the '$2' punch."

Post aug 18

The "Eternal" Triangle!
New Plans of Concern Now in Public Eye

Henry McMahon, general press representative of the Triangle interests, has made public all the arrangements of the new combination. Contrary to general opinion, the $2 scale of prices will not prevail thruout the country, but only in the cities of New York and Chicago. It has been decided that these two places are the only ones able to pay such prices.

The Triangle will lease and conduct playhouses in both cities, where their newest and best features will be released at the $2 scale of prices. Labor day will probably see the opening and first showing of the new productions. Fourteen reels will comprise the first bills, and for the opening three famous stars have been selected. Douglas Fairbanks, who is now at the Griffith studio working under the direction of Christy Cabanne and the general supervision of Griffith, will represent the Griffith interest in a feature production. Mack Sennett will arrange to release a four-reel comedy featuring Raymond Hitchcock, to provide the comedy on the bill. In the future, however, it is quite probable that all of the Keystones will be two reels in length. Thomas H. Ince has selected a picture starring Frank Keenan which he himself is directing.

After about two weeks the rest of the country will have the opportunity of witnessing these pictures at prices ranging from 25 cents to $2. Los Angeles, however, being the home of the feature, will in all probability see them at the same time they are shown in New York and Chicago.

Commenting upon the stars that have been engaged by the Triangle interests, Mr. MacMahon was authority for the statement that a weeding-out process would be in effect; that is, legitimate stars that took well before the camera and proved to be favorites with the public would find the camera work so remunerative that they would stay in the business. All in all, he conceded that two years would decide just about who would be who in the picture world so far as legitimate actors were concerned.

The Triangle is engaging all of the best possible picture material. They have already obtained about a hundred people and expect to have about that many more in the very near future.

Marion Green.

Whose solos are refreshingly in keeping with a remarkable photoplay program this week at Orchestra Hall.

De Wolf Hopper in "Wang."

De Wolf Hopper is expected to arrive at the Griffith studios about the 25th of this month and it has been decided that one of his productions will be a picturization of his popular success, "Wang," and probably one or two other roles that he has made famous.

Billie Burke will arrive at about the same time and will act before the camera some of the parts that have made her such a favorite with the American public.

Besides the stars that have already been filmed the Triangle have Frank Mills, Frank Campeau, Forest Winant, De Wolf Hopper, H. B. Warner, Mary Boland, Louise Dressler, Billie Burke, Weber and Fields and Bert Clarke. Owen Moore, long time with the Keystone company, has been engaged by D. W. Griffith to work in the future productions.

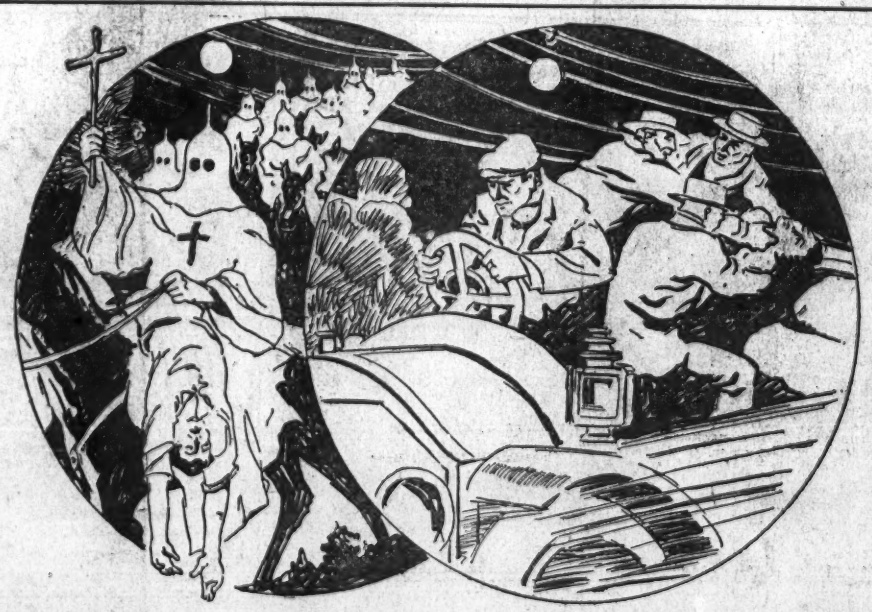
After much debating it has been decided that the Triangle films will be known to the public as Fine Art Films. It is now the plan of the company to raise the science of picture-making to the highest possible plane. A special corp of scenario writers are now working on all available manuscripts, and where it is not possible to purchase the rights to some play that the actress or actor engaged has made famous they will endeavor to put over something as fresh and original as possible.

It is impossible to ascertain how the next big Griffith and Ince features will be released. It is quite probable, tho, that they will not be put out under the Triangle banner, but that the same methods will be used whereby the "Birth of a Nation" was successfully launched.

aug 20

THE CHICAGO EVENING POST, FRIDAY,

The Clansman of 1915



Thomas Dixon, in his book, "The Clansman," built a story around the operations of the "Klu Klux Klan," composed of men who banded together, pledged themselves to secrecy and struck horror to thousands by nocturnal raids in the South during the reconstruction period following the civil war.

The clansman of that time wore a robe of white, which covered his body, was ornamented by a bright red cross at the breast and topped by a pointed helmet. The fiery cross was the insignia of the band, which traveled by horseback in the silence of the night and bore its victims to death.

Dixon was severely criticised on the charge that he misrepresented the spirit of the South, and his story, dramatized, was barred from many cities. But if Dixon were to rewrite his story, following the lynching of Leo M. Frank, he would have to make only small changes in detail.

The clansman of 1915 used no disguise and traveled by automobile. There was no note of warning, couched in half mysterious phraseology and signed by the feared "K. K. K."

But the intent, purpose and end attained was the same.

Post aug 19

Colonial Theater Made to Meet Requirements of Griffith Style of Presentation

Saturday evening at the Illinois Theater there will close the first chapter of the greatest run of a spectacular drama in Chicago. "The Birth of a Nation," the D. W. Griffith masterpiece, moves triumphantly from its first home of successes to the Colonial Theater Beautiful, and will inaugurate a new era of prosperity unique in dramatic annals at the Randolph street playhouse Sunday afternoon.

The Colonial Theater is now in splendid condition, a worthy temple for the presentation of Griffith's epic of American history in its mightiest crisis. The theater has been entirely renovated and beautified anew. At heavy expense a ventilating system has been installed which insures a plentiful breathing supply of "the great outdoors" to every patron during the lengthy but always fascinating performance. Mr. Griffith secured the scientific aid of Professor Albrecht of Bonn University in perfecting the system of stimulated ventilation which now sweeps the Colonial Theater with vitalized ozone.

The new ventilating system has another important effect. Its atmospheric powers remove dust particles which might interfere with the clarity of vision. Every advantage has been taken of the magnificent foyer of the Colonial Theater for appropriate decoration, and patrons Sunday afternoon and thereafter will be greeted by the now famous corps of "crinoline girls" who act as ushers and reflect the fashions of the 60's worn by actresses in the brilliant cast.

The same price scale which prevailed at the Illinois will be the rule at the Colonial for afternoon and evening performances. It is significant that the first piece of "property" to be moved from the Illinois to the Colonial is the faithful and hard-working placard "All Seats Sold for This Performance."

Herald aug 20

The Colonial

The Colonial has been redecorated and renovated in a way that even its own moter would fail to recognize it.

This is being done for "The Birth of a Nation," which will carry its necessary belongings from the Illinois and open Aug. 22 with a Sunday matinee. Over a hundred men were working on the theater to get it in readiness for its new tenants. John Barry, David Griffith's secretary, has already arrived for the opening in the new theater, but Mr. Griffith's arrival has not been definitely stated.

HOLD FOR ORDERS—SET AUG. 11

Sunday Aug 15th

Into the Heart of the Loop!

On Sunday, August 22

D. W. GRIFFITH'S

Gigantic Spectacle

THE BIRTH OF A NATION

FIRST TIME AT THE COLONIAL SUNDAY MATINEE, AUGUST 22nd

WILL MOVE FROM THE ILLINOIS THEATRE TO THE

COLONIAL THEATRE BEAUTIFUL

WHERE THIS MIGHTIEST OF ALL STAGE OFFERINGS WILL REMAIN INDEFINITELY

The remodeling of the Colonial to meet the focal requirements of Mr. Griffith's wonderful art work, the decorating, vitalization of air, optical and projectory adjustments and all technical details will be personally supervised by Mr. Griffith.

THE GREAT SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA IS RETAINED

THE PRICES: EVENINGS AND SATURDAY MATINEES, 25c to $2.00
OTHER MATINEES, 25c to $1.00

TICKETS on Sale Four Weeks in Advance. They May Be Purchased at Either the Illinois Theatre or the Colonial

CHICAGO (Ill.) EXAMINER
MAY 27, 1915

MAY 27, 1915

Motography June 19, 1915

The Wonderful
DAVID W. GRIFFITH
Director-General
Reliance and Majestic
Studios

Lillian Gish
Majestic Star

Mae Marsh
Reliance Star

Henry Walthall
Majestic Star

CHICAGO (Ill.) HERALD
MAY 22, 1915

"Birth of a Nation."

Chicago, May 19. — To the Editor: I have read your editorial which covertly denounces the picture play "The Birth of a Nation." I should like to say that the references to obscenity, brothels, illicit sexual relations and other indecent things, and the endeavor to connect them with this spectacle, are not only stupid but criminally vicious. There is not one incident in this offering that suggests anything obscene or immoral. On the contrary, the highest, finest and most noble emotions are aroused and only the most patriotic and high-minded thoughts are inspired by the story this picture tells. Chicago must not be denied the privilege of enjoying what New York, Boston and other liberal and progressive cities have welcomed with open arms.

WILLYAM E. WEBSTER.

Ry. Mail May 23.
Herald Chicago

State Picture Censors Fail.

Chicago, May 20.—To the Editor: A bill contemplated against home rule in Chicago. All good citizens should take interest themselves in the bills under consideration at Springfield to establish a state board of three moving picture censors. The Chicago moving picture censor board has performed its work admirably. A few years ago many people would not attend a moving picture theater, but since pictures have been censored theaters have been opened in all parts of the city and one can attend feeling sure he will not be shocked by what he sees. State censorship has been tried in several states, but from the class of pictures passed conditions do not seem to have been improved.

E. J. JOHNSON.

CHICAGO (Ill.) EXAMINER
MAY 26, 1915

The TURN OF THE REEL

BY THE REV. DR. STUART B. EDMONDSON

Pastor Evanston Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church.

At the invitation of the Examiner I attended a presentation of the great photo-drama, "The Birth of a Nation," at the Illinois Theater. It is without question the most stupendous thing of its kind ever produced. The invited guests, numbering fifty or more, were thrilled again and again, and for three hours listened and looked breathlessly.

D. W. Griffitt has condensed into these three hours fifteen or more years of American history so that, seeing it, one can never forget it. Impressions of the evil of war and bloodshed pile upon the spectators until there is born in the heart an abhorrence of the thing which never can be eradicated. I have read history, but I have never felt it before.

There are some things one naturally wishes might have been eliminated, but then, it would not be true history. The negro "klus" pursuing and frightening "Little Sister" to her death is an ugly picture, but once seen it is so dire and hateful that instinctively one declares that by education and every God-given power we propose to lift every race of mankind above that sort of thing.

AUTHOR IS WRITING HISTORY.

It is nothing against any race. The picture could possibly be portrayed of every race, but the author, as stated before, is writing history.

The picture here is no worse than that portrayed in the history of the United States written by our honored President, Woodrow Wilson. The intention of his history and of this photo-drama is to bring before the young the horrors of that dark spot in our country's history, which, please God, never will be experienced again. Its effect upon children is difficult to estimate in satisfactory measure. There are heroes of war, of course, but the devastation pictured erases much of its glory.

And as we weep with the "Camerons" and other stricken ones of the South, it seems fit that the impression made upon the mind of any clean-thinking youngster would be against war.

NEGROES NOT TO BLAME.

The negroes are not to blame, and there can be little objection there. "Stoneman," the white man, is the villain. His is the master mind that uses ignorance and superstition to further his own interests, and the negro man is shown to great advantage in the closing pictures of the drama.

The closing scene, where the King of Peace takes the place of the cruel god of war, is indeed a beautiful one. On the whole, I would say that in my judgment it does not create a war spirit or race prejudice.

The loyalty of the old Union soldier and Dr. Cameron, and the loyalty of the two faithful old slaves, who give their lives for their master, bespeak the spirit of our beautiful Union to-day—one lakes, one rivers, one country, and, thank God, one flag.

And I believe this photo-drama will create this spirit of union in the hearts of all who see it.

Mayor Agrees to See "Clansman."

The Birth of a Nation," the motion picture dramatization of the novel "The Clansman" may yet win the approval of the city authorities and be given a permit in Chicago. Mayor Thompson stated yesterday that he was willing to view the film himself should it be arranged conveniently and urged that it be sent through the board of censors where he could view it.

It was pointed out to the Mayor that he had heard only one side of the case and that he had taken the word of those who declared the film would incite race prejudice and possibly riots. Mayor Thompson first announced his intention of barring the film at a meeting held in a South Side negro church.

The film play was presented to the censor board months ago for action. At that time, Charles C. Fitzmorris, secretary to the Mayor, acted as censor and the regular board was not asked for an opinion. A permit was issued as an executive order from Mayor Harrison's office.

The producers, however, fearing a reversal of opinion with the change of administration, preferred to hold off the initial expense of showing the play in Chicago until a final ruling could be obtained from Mayor Thompson.

CHICAGO (Ill.) TRIBUNE
MAY 26, 1915

VIEWS OF FILM CENSORSHIP.

Chicago, May 25.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—The Tribune editorial on "The Birth of a Nation" this morning contains a correct statement on the subject of censorship.

That there are many films produced which should never be shown we all realize. That an arbitrary board of censorship should have the final word on this means of influencing public opinion is absolutely inconceivable in our system of government.

Prompt arrest and legal—not arbitrary—penalties for showing improper films would achieve every object which may be obtained through censorship, and would do so without the danger of the censorial system.

When we read "Cut out by censor" many of us are inclined to smile and let it pass. When we read of one of Victor Hugo's plays that "it was interdicted by the censor," we immediately have a chilling sensation of continental officialism. Between the two there is no division

CHICAGO (Ill.) EXAMINER
MAY 27, 1915

...s No Excuse for Stopping This Show

THE ... people are justly uneasy at the institution, new to us, of ... censorship.

We progressed fairly well without it until the advent of the moving picture, and our press and our stage have been cleaner and more moral than those of countries where an official has to pass on everything published or shown.

A department of censorship inevitably seeks for something to prohibit rather than something to permit.

Just now there is a question whether one of the most important film productions ever attempted, "The Birth of a Nation," should be shown in Chicago. The same sort of agitation has preceded its exhibition in every great American city, and the verdict has been uniformly in favor of the production.

There is no matter of immorality involved; it is simply a question of whether a picture based largely on the reconstruction period following the civil war would give offense or engender disorder.

The Examiner frankly suggests that this question does not come within the reviewing power of the censor.

There is no possibility that the performance would endanger public morals. The scenes and incidents, based on history, carry a story of high purpose with dramatic intensity, but there is no wantonness, nor naked brutality, beyond what the theme demands.

There was no suggestion of suppressing the book that is the foundation of the film, nor is it likely that if the play was given in ordinary theatrical guise there would be any thought of stopping it.

Why should a picture play require special restraint?

Everybody knows what the play is about. If anybody does not care to see it he does not have to attend.

Recently we had a play dealing with German spies in England. Presumably Germans would not care to witness a stage production in which their people were pictured as treacherous blunderers inevitably circumvented and defeated by astute English heroes, but nobody suggested that the theater was not within its rights in giving such a performance.

How much less is it justifiable to apply censorship to a play based on our own history, so long past that most of us were unborn at the period described?

The founders of our country realized that there was more danger in the abuse of censorship than in the abuse of freedom. Jefferson's comment that he would rather have a country without government and a free press than one with government and an enslaved press reflects the jealousy with which any trespass on the people's right to know and learn was regarded when our country was in the making.

The libel laws and the statutes against indecency have always been a sufficient safeguard against gross abuse of the privileges of literature and the stage.

The people by withholding their patronage exercise a censorship to which no showman can be indifferent. Public opinion has banished the grotesque Irishman and the caricature of the Jew—it needed no censorship to eliminate these—and no play that holds up a race to ridicule or obloquy can ever succeed.

We are told that it cost $150,000 to prepare the spectacle now under consideration. The producer is risking such an amount on a production so offensive that the sentiment of the community would repudiate it, and if the officials of Chicago are not supposed to obey the dictates of the community it is a new note in American government.

The whole plan of censorship is contrary to the spirit of our country.

If an official can impose his views on us in the moving-picture house, the next attempt will be to tell the theater what it is allowed to show, and from that it is only a step to telling the press what it may print. That would spell an end to criticism of public acts and public men. It would substitute personal interest or personal prejudice for the truth as the standard in determining the right of publication.

Mayor Thompson has indicated that he would personally pass on "The Birth of a Nation."

The Examiner would respectfully suggest that he consider the precedent of other mayors in determining this question and keep in mind the unfairness of subjecting the investments of men in legitimate undertakings to a ... power that might put them out of business with a word.

CHICAGO (Ill.) HERALD
MAY 27, 1915

SEEN ON THE SCREEN By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Terms David Wark Griffith "Belasco of the Movies"

EVER since the infancy of motion pictures, when the films were staggering bits of celluloid, presenting queer, unsteady figures, the eyes of the film world have been turned expectantly toward David Wark Griffith, the master producer of motion pictures.

It was Griffith who first lifted pictures from the mediocre and gave them the real creative power they now possess. This wizard of pictures, to whom the world owes more than it realizes, was in at the birth of this great industry and his concentrated energy and tremendous ability have made the motion picture of today a formidable rival of the spoken drama.

David Griffith is in Chicago for a few days. This man, who has made such actresses as Mary Pickford, Blanche Sweet, May Marsh and the Gish girls, is very reticent about his success.

✣ ✣ ✣

I felt that the failure of Chicago to grant a permit to his "Birth of a Nation" must be a sore trial to him. He had spent eight months in its production at a cost of over $150,000. Much to my surprise he spoke most charitably about the whole affair.

"I wish I could feel sure they had seen the picture," he said. "So many people have condemned it without even seeing it. It only seems fair for every one who fears its influence to see it before he judges. Naturally I lay the refusal of a permit to the fact that the city officials did not see the picture. New York accepted it in the light of an educational entertainment. Fifteen schools came to see the picture in lieu of a history lesson. I tried to give an exact reproduction of the reconstruction period and left out as many of the harrowing features as I could consistently. I desired the peace idea to be uppermost. I feel that is what the world needs just now."

✣ ✣ ✣

Mr. Griffith changed the subject then and did not return to "The Birth of a Nation," but I fancied I detected just a little bit of disappointment in his voice. It would be only human to desire a production of this magnitude to win approval, a production in which 18,000 persons and 3,000 horses took part.

David W. Griffith.

Perhaps in the days to come, when the "movies" have reached a higher pinnacle of fame, there will be other producers who will give us magnificent and matchless spectacular dramas; but I doubt if the world will ever have another David Griffith.

His early struggles with the camera and with raw material have helped him reach his present place. He has been director, writer and camera man, all that we might have better photo-dramas. He is the pioneer Belasco of pictures, and for his success, born both of hard work and talent, he deserves the highest praise.

Answers to Questions

M. C.—Morris Foster is the handsome man who plays opposite Miss Florence La Badie in "The Cycle of Hatred." He has been with the Thanhouser Film Company for eighteen months. One of his other well-known pictures is "God's Witness," released May 20. Francis X. Bushman says he is not married.

✣ ✣ ✣

LETTY—Mary Alden is playing opposite Harry Walthall in "Ghosts." Yes, it is still at the Bijou. I thank you for your nice letter. No, I never regarded myself quite in the light of a public benefactor, but I thank you for your good opinion, anyway.

MOTION PICTURE WORLD (N. Y. City)
MAY 22, 1915

DRASTIC LEGISLATION IN ILLINOIS.

On May 18, by a vote of 111 to 2, the lower house of the Illinois legislature passed the Jackson bill drafted for the purpose of barring from the state all pictures calculated to inspire race hatred. Jackson, the father of the bill, is a Chicago negro and aimed the bill at pictures of the "Clansman" type, but the opponents contend that it will eliminate all films raising the race issue, even to the prohibition of such pictures as "From the Manger to the Cross" and the "Passion Play." The measure has still to pass the senate.

Detroit Chicago

The Birth

with feature

RACE FILM BILL PASSES HOUSE

1915

Chicago, May 21.—A bill to prohibit the exhibition of any film that shows a lynching or unlawful hanging, and is based on the theory that presentation of such pictures tends to incite race hatred and rioting, passed the House at Springfield on May 18, by a vote of 111 to 2.

The bill was introduced by Representative Jackson, one of the two colored members from Chicago, and, if it becomes a law, such pictures as The Nigger, The Clansman and The Birth of a Nation would be barred from exhibition in Illinois.

Representative Louis J. Pierson, of Wilmette, led the fight against the bill. He made an extended argument, alleging that the bill as drawn affects much more than the negro race problems. He contended in his speech that the bill, if it becomes a law, prohibits in a religious way the use of any production of the crucifixion in any church, any film which would raise the racial issue in any way, and, in effect, would put moving pictures out of business.

CHICAGO (ILL) TRIBUNE
MAY 29, 1915

18

but on which money so paid has been

SATURDAY, MAY 29, 1915.

"Our country! In her intercourse with foreign nations may she always be in the right; but our country, right or wrong."
Stephen Decatur.

THE COURTS AND CENSORSHIP.

In New York the censor prohibited the production of a moving picture called "The Ordeal." It, like "The [illegible]ion," gave no offense to public morals or decency, but was feared as a provocative of nationalistic prejudice and bitterness. It presented the desolation and sadness in parts of France traversed by the Germans in the Franco-Prussian war. The censor held that it would offend German-Americans and refused to let it be shown.

The film company went to court, and the judge who issued an injunction restraining the commissioner of licenses from interfering with the photoplay said that national distinctions could not be urged in an American court as a reason for shaping or coloring decisions.

In the jurisdiction of the court there could be no classes of citizenship and no increase of rights by hyphenization. It is enough to give Americans a start to realize that we must have a judicial statement of this fact. The other important point is the assertion of judicial control over bureaucratic government.

The rights of the public are not to be abridged by bureaucracy, but are under the protection of the judiciary. The growth of censorship, undoubtedly stimulated by the moving picture, is a development which no American devoted to ideals of freedom can observe without alarm. The complexities in the situation are recognized and there is no disposition to push hard and fast rules to the extreme, but the censorship is an anti-American institution.

The use of censorship easily may tend to the misuse of it, and the position of the courts as a corrective to check abuse of power by what is virtually an extra legal authority and might easily become an autocratic and stupid authority, must constantly be kept in mind.

CHICAGO (ILL) TRIBUNE
MAY 29, 1915

THE BIRTH OF A NATION.

Chicago, May 28. [Editor of The Tribune.]—Relative to the views so well expressed in your editorial on "The Birth of a Nation," it may be said that Chicago is warmly to be commended for refusing to permit the show to appear within its borders. A storm of indignation has been aroused in Boston over its presentation, indignation voiced and spread by such men as Gov. Walsh, the Hon. Samuel W. McCall, and many of the clergy.

C. DE W. BROWER.

MOTION PICTURE WORLD (N. Y. City)
MAY 29, 1915

CHICAGO LETTER

BY JAS. S. McQUADE

1915

"The Birth of a Nation" Barred in Chicago.

THE fiat has gone forth from the office of Chicago's recently elected mayor, Wm. Hale Thompson, that "The Birth of a Nation" will not be permitted exhibition in this city. The scenes showing the assassination of President Lincoln and the events in the reconstruction period following the Civil War are mainly responsible for the mayor's action.

"I will not permit any theatrical man, or picture show company to operate or show a film in any theatre in Chicago which reflects on any race or nationality," said the Mayor on Saturday, May 22, after hearing arguments for and against the issuing of a permit and after viewing the picture himself. "I will not grant my permission for the exhibition of a picture just to give a theatrical man a chance to charge $2 a seat. Complaint was made to me that this particular photoplay was the cause of race riots in the east. We want nothing of that in Chicago."

On the other hand, the manufacturer of the film of this subject sought to establish the justness of his claims for exhibition in the following announcement:

"To the American people the outcome of four years of fratricidal strife, the nightmare of reconstruction, and the establishment of the south in its rightful position is the birth of a new nation. Lincoln's plan of restricting negroes to Africa was dreamed of only—never carried out. The new nation, the real United States, as the years glided by, turned away forever from the blood lust of war and anticipated with hope the world-millennium in which a brotherhood of love should bind all the nations together."

The Chicago Herald supported the mayor's action editorially, as follows.

Mayor Thompson has barred from Chicago the notorious photoplay based on the romances of racial hatred by the Rev. Thomas Dixon. Mayor Thompson is right. It should be barred.

In vain do the promoters protest that in their spectacle there is "a note of optimism, brotherly love and readjustment of racial conditions intended to soothe and brighten."

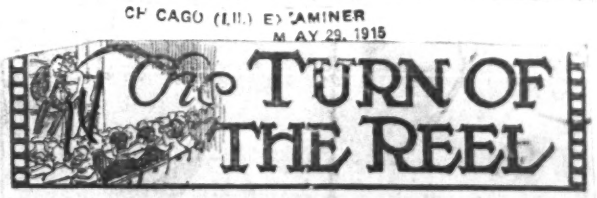
A famous French author dedicated to "My sons, when they reach the age of 20," a graphic account of the disasters that follow on yielding to enticements to enter into illicit sexual relations.

The book may, perhaps, be usefully read by many young men. Yet when presented in dramatic form it became merely the picture of a brothel and its inmates, affronting all clean-minded spectators and gratifying only the morbid emotions it stimulated.

However excellent the intentions, everything depends on the way they are carried out. The public derives no benefit from "popular" presentation of the scenes of the clinic and the confessional. This particular presentation, both in its ordinary and its film dramatization, has a riot-provoking record. Let it stay barred, so far as Chicago can bar it.

"The Birth of a Nation" was underlined in the Illinois theater program to open in that house May 1. Charles Fitzmorris, secretary to the preceding Mayor, Carter H. Harrison, inspected and passed the films some time before the primary election, in which Mayor Harrison was defeated.

CHICAGO (ILL.) EXAMINER
MAY 29, 1915



BY JAMES WARREN CURRIE.

The exhibitors of "The Birth of a Nation," a masterpiece of David Wark Griffith, are still awaiting permission to show the picture to Chicago. And daily bulletins given under stress to the newspapers and people who want to know are always the same, "The situation remains unchanged," like the monotonous response of hospital officials to the friends of a man who lies in danger of death.

I saw "The Birth of a Nation." When I left the theater I could not talk. My nerves were tense and quivering from suppressed emotions. I had seen an epic thrown boldly into the light, the sweep of armies and the clash of arms, the tears of women and the curses of men, the joy and sorrow of youthful love and the cadenced rhythm of a national hymn. For Griffith has visualized poetry.

Griffith says he conceived the idea of "The Birth of a Nation" one day while reading Woodrow Wilson's "Division and Reunion." He already knew "The Clansman," having read the book and seen the

"The era of the civil war and the reconstruction which followed," he says, "is the most dramatic part of the history of our country. I think it is the most dramatic part of the history of the world."

IDEA FROM WILSON.

So he went to work with the master mind, and the gift of welding men and women to his wishes and completed a work that savors of all the arts. "The Clansman" furnished him some dramatic incidents and some intimate knowledge of the methods of the Ku Klux Klan. Woodrow Wilson gave him the first idea of producing such a work. And libraries and paintings and a staff of scholars gave him the innumerable details that enabled him to complete it. For that is the way Griffith works.

There is a theme to "The Birth of a Nation" which is told in the name. There is not one story. "The Clansman" is one of the strands in the tapestry that tells of the little loves and hates of men on a background of tremendous struggle and history in the making.

For "The Birth of a Nation" is done in bold strokes, like a giant panel, and into the panel is painted with the tiny brush all the details of the stories of individuals. There is the panel and the miniature and one man has done both.

Before this picture all battle scenes taken before the camera were highly and justly dangerous. They were jokes. The battle scene in "The Birth of a Nation" raises the battle lust in the one who sees. There are new ideas in photography, new conceptions of the value of distances and panorama. There is a scene in which is a panorama of three miles.

STORY OF THE '60s.

The story tells of the people of the '60s. It deals strictly with history. There is nothing in it to arouse race prejudice or mob violence. The villain in the piece is the white man, always the white man. The negro is shown, as he was then, a people uncertain and a little fearful of freedom, a simple, lovable race, some members of which had been played upon by scheming and unscrupulous politicians.

And thus Griffith "splashed at a ten-league canvas with brushes of comet's hair." And there was seen a country in the throes of labor that a nation might be born, and the wild, tense struggle of a sovereign people with a force that for a while threatened them with worse than death, and the incessant sound of music, wild and soft and moody, fast or slow, or stirring, as when the klans were called with a weird trumpet note that roared in two notes like "yoho." If Chicago does not see "The Birth of a Nation" it is Chicago's loss. It is a royal painting.

WHEELING (W. Va.) REGISTER
MAY 30, 1915

[illegible] Chicago [illegible]
[illegible]tion in the [illegible]y of [illegible] Birth of a Nation."
[illegible]
[illegible]sination of President
[illegible] events in the recon-
[illegible] following the civil

CHICAGO (Ill.) POST
MAY 31, 1915

While the hue and cry concerning "The Birth of a Nation," Alfred Hamburger [illegible] derive the benefit of the notoriety given films which are objectionable on account of their race-problem possibilities. "The Nigger," which Hamburger is showing at his [illegible] Theater under the title of "The New Governor," not only continues to draw but is apparently just beginning to realize its own drawing power.

BOSTON TRAVELER
JUNE 1, 1915

CHICAGO FACING RACE FILM NOW

CHICAGO, June 1—Mayor Thompson planned to solve the question of whether Chicagoans should see the picture drama based on "The Clansman"—"The Birth of a Nation." He asked 30 or 40 Negro ministers to say whether it will or will not arouse race hatred. It is up to the Negro ministers, said the mayor, whether whites and blacks shall see the drama.

CHICAGO (Ill.) TRIBUNE
JUNE 1, 1915

COLORED PASTORS MAY PASS ON 'BIRTH OF NATION.'

Mayor Suggests 30 or 40 Negro Ministers See Film—Will Abide by Their Verdict.

Mayor Thompson has made a new proposal to the owners of "The Birth of a Nation," the moving picture drama based on "The Clansman."

"I suggested to them that they get thirty or forty colored ministers," he said yesterday, "and let them pass on the picture. The only question I have in my mind is whether it will arouse race prejudice. If the colored ministers say it won't I have no objection to the picture being shown."

The owners of the film are out of the city. No one could be found who thought they might accept the mayor's proposition.

CHICAGO (Ill.) HERALD
JUNE, 1, 1915

COLORED CLERGYMEN MAY PASS ON A FILM

Mayor Thompson Makes a Suggestion to Manager of "The Birth of a Nation."

THEIR FINDING TO STAND

A board of censors, composed of colored ministers, may view the photoplay "The Birth of a Nation" for the purpose of aiding Mayor Thompson in deciding whether the films should be exhibited in Chicago.

The mayor revoked a permit for its exhibition a week ago after protests against it had been made by representatives of the colored race. A permit for the show was granted during the last days of former Mayor Harrison's administration, but it has never been publicly presented in Chicago.

ASK FOR PERMIT RENEWAL.

Managers of the production want to place it on exhibition in the near future, and they called on the mayor yesterday, urging him to renew the permit.

"I suggested to them," said the mayor last night, "that they give an exhibition of the picture before a delegation of colored ministers. If they approve the picture I will issue a permit.

PROTEST FROM COLORED MEN.

"I have not seen the film, but colored men have come to me and declared that to show it would stir up race prejudice. If the ministers indorse it I may go to see it myself."

DUNKIRK (N. Y.) OBSERVER
JUNE, 1, 1915

UP TO COLORED POPULATION.

Chicago, June 1.— Mayor Thompson today planned to solve the much-mooted quested of whether Chicagoans should see the picture drama based on "The Clansman"—"The Birth of a Nation." He asked thirty or forty colored ministers to say whether it will or will not rouse race hatred. It is up to the negro ministers, said the mayor, whether whites and blacks shall see the drama.

CHICAGO (Ill.) TRIBUNE
JUNE 1, 1915

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION."

Chicago, May [illegible] Editor of The Tribune.]—Speaking of the photoplay called "The Birth of a Nation," you say: "It is in all essential episodes grounded on historical fact, representing the struggles of that terrible time in the south when the whites, back from war, saw their government taken over by the newly enfranchised blacks controlled by the northern carpetbaggers.

"What happened with the negro ascendant and how the white reestablished his supremacy is shown with obvious natural sympathy for the south, and no doubt with such heightening of effect as dramatic art has a right to employ. It presents what the south says and the north of our day, at least, is inclined to believe to be truth."

Exactly the reverse of this is true, for there never was a time when any one of the state governments of the south was taken over by the newly enfranchised blacks controlled by the northern carpetbaggers.

That some mistakes were made during the progress of reconstruction will not be denied. How could it be otherwise? The war had just come to an end. Sectional animosity was bitter and intense. The Republican party was looked upon as the enemy of the south. No white man could identify himself with the Republican party at that time in any one of the southern states without running the risk of being socially ostracised and publicly characterized as an enemy to his section, his state, and his race. Notwithstanding these things, not less than 25 per cent of the white men of that section—men who were to the manner born, many of them ex-Confederate soldiers, identified themselves with and became leaders of the Republican party. These, in the main, were the men that the newly enfranchised blacks selected as their leaders and whose leadership they loyally and faithfully followed.

I do not hesitate to assert that the reconstructed state governments at the south were the best governments those states ever had before or have ever had since. There never was a time when there was actual physical "Negro domination," or even carpetbag domination, in any one of the reconstructed states.

The play to which you refer, instead of being "grounded on historical facts," is grounded on historical misrepresentation, without having a single actual fact as the basis of its existence. It is fiction pure and simple, painted from a diseased and prejudiced imagination, with as false and deceptive background as a basis upon which to stand. Such a play could not be otherwise than mischievous in its inception and dangerous in its results, even if the scenes depicted were a truthful reproduction of actual occurrences. But when it is or ought to be a well known fact that the alleged scenes are pure fabrications with not a single background of truth to support them, their production can hardly be less than criminal. In the main they are false, slanderous, and malicious. They are calculated and intended to engender and intensify race prejudice and race hatred. In the interest of peace, order, truth, justice, and morality they should be suppressed. No good can come but much harm may result from them. It is, therefore, the duty of the authorities to suppress them, just as they would suppress any other nuisance that is calculated to incite crime and general disorder in the community.

In this connection allow me, as a southern man, to say, and to say whereof I know, that there are just two classes of white people at the south who keep this so-called race problem constantly before the public. The first class is composed of those who commercialize race prejudice simply for the dollars and cents they can make out of it. The second class is composed of those who utilize race prejudice for the purpose of securing political distinction and official recognition which they could never secure though any merit of their own. It makes no difference with these people how much harm to the public or injustice is done to any people or race as long as they can accomplish the purpose desired. They know there is not a particle of truth in anything they say or produce relative to this matter. But what difference does that make to them? The office seeker finds that this is his best paying political asset. What is the use, then, of considering or discussing the tariff, the financial, or any other subject or question as long as this mythical race question will answer the purpose? They find that this is the one question upon which they can hold the white men of the south in abject political subjection and upon which the average white man at the north can be easily fooled and deceived. As long, then, as the country believes, as you seem to believe, that these things are true and that public sentiment must tolerate them and approve methods that are criminal and practices that would be otherwise indefensible for the purpose of preventing "Negro domination," just so long will this state of affairs continue. Let us hope that the eyes of the people will eventually be opened and that justice and fair play for all will be the accepted rule of action in all parts of our country.

JOHN R. LYNCH,
Author of "The Facts of Reconstruction."

TOLEDO (O.) NEWS-BEE
JUNE 1, 1915

NEGRO MINISTER TO CENSOR MOVIE DRAMA

By United Press.

CHICAGO, June 1.—Mayor Thompson today planned to solve the much mooted question of whether Chicagoans should see the moving picture drama based on "The Clansman"—"The Birth of a Nation." He asked 30 or 40 colored ministers to say whether it will arouse race hatred. It is up to the negro ministers, the mayor said.

Tribune. Chicago Ill.
June 1, 1915

Rupert Hughes, gifted novelist, has crystallized in his sparkling phrase one of the finest appreciations of "The Birth of a Nation." And the way it came about was this, according to D. W. Griffith:

"I saw him at a performance and he was so affected by it that he cried, so I asked him to write something for me. He wrote this fine thing and then he wouldn't take a bit of pay. I told him to do some scenarios for us. And then he ordered his business agent never to sell anything to any company with which I was connected."

PEORIA (Ill.) [illegible]
JUNE [illegible], 1915

"THE CLANSMAN."

Forty Colored Ministers Called Upon By Mayor Thompson to Act as Censors.

Chicago, Tuesday.Mayor Thompson today planned to solve the much mooted question of whether Chicagoans should see the picture drama based on "The Clansman"—"The Birth of a Nation." He asked thirty or forty colored ministers to say whether it will or will not rouse race hatred. It is up to the negro ministers, said the mayor, whether whites and blacks shall see the drama.

AGO DAILY EXAMINER
JUNE 3, 1915

n Asked
City for f Nation'

rs of Photoplay
Superior Court
Be Prejudiced.

otion picture
ition in Superior
sking for a tem-
restraining city interfering with Chicago. Mayor
ed the permit two

fore Judge Foell.
ar the case, so it
to another judge
It was mentioned that there are five erior Court who diced against the Brushingham was ayor Thompson to ittee of ministers view the film, and to the Mayor as would tend to incite

e court action, the ingham said, the
ld not inspect the

CHICAGO (ILL.) TRIBUNE
JUNE 3, 1915

FLICKERINGS
& KIT
Ruling on Griffith Film Due Today.

Decision on the petition for an injunction restraining the city from preventing the exhibition of the film play, "The Birth of a Nation," at the Illinois theater is expected in the Superior court today.

The bill was filed yesterday by Attorneys Burkhalter & Grossberg, representing Joseph J. McCarthy, who is in charge of the film in Chicago. The attorneys state in the document that the film has been barred by reason of the activities of a group of Chicago negroes seeking notoriety among their own race. In defense of the teachings of the film it is stated that the characteristics of both white and black races as they existed during the period of reconstruction following the civil war are portrayed with truth, but that it does not pretend that the conditions of a historical period that is past exist at the present time.

The huge cost of the film is emphasized, together with the summary that the exhibition is of high artistic merit and is of great educational value both historically and geographically.

CHICAGO (ILL.) DAILY NEWS
JUNE 3, 1915

"BIRTH OF NATION" AT CRISIS

Injunction Against City as to "Movie" to Be Asked To-Morrow.

A temporary injunction restraining the city from interfering with the production of the motion picture play entitled "The Birth [redacted] will be asked in Judge Cooper's court at 10 a. m. to-morrow by the owners of the film. A petition in this connection was filed in the superior court yesterday and the petitioners went before Judge Foell, who could not hear the case. Judge Sullivan reassigned it to-day after spirited argument between the opposing attorneys.

Attorney George L. Beker, representing the city, objected at first to the assignment of the case to Judge Cooper on the ground that by such action the petitioners practically would be having their choice of judges, they having set up in their petition that five other judges of the Superior court might be prejudiced against them. Attorneys Robert P. Burkhalter and J. G. Grossberg, representing the film company, asserted that the action of the city in withdrawing the permit already given for the film production was contrary to law and an injustice to their clients, who had spent large sums of money in the preparation of the pictures.

"I could understand such high handed actions under the military regime of one of the warring European countries," said Mr. Grossberg.

Maj. M. L. C. Funkhouser was in court, but did not speak.

Photoplay Chicago, Ill. June

Griffith's Next?? DAVID W. GRIFFITH is already at work in California on a twelve-reel play which it is said will be a rival of "The Birth of A Nation" in size and impressiveness. Name and nature: very secret.

JUNE 4, 1915
CHICAGO (Ill.) HERALD

ASK WRIT TO END FIGHT AGAINST 'BIRTH OF A NATION'

Producers of "The Birth of a Nation" filed a petition in the Superior Court Wednesday asking an injunction against the City of Chicago, Mayor Thompson and other city officials restraining them from interfering with the production of the photoplay.

JUNE 4, 1915
CHICAGO (Ill.) DAILY NEWS

'REEL' TRIAL IS REAL DULL

Spirited Clash Expected at "Birth of a Nation" Hearing Absent.

Outcome May Decide Whether Film Is to Be Seen in Chicago.

"Movie fans" of Chicago received a se-[illegible]-day. They flocked into Judge Cooper's court to listen to a spirited passage at arms between warring counsel and were obliged to sit through a painfully technical argument having to do with the city's right to revoke a license. The occasion was the application for a temporary injunction to prevent the city from interfering with the production of the film entitled "The Birth of a Nation." A handful of negro listeners evidenced the interest of that race. The picture drama is "southern" and calculated, say some, to arouse race prejudice.

CHICAGO (Ill.) POST
JUNE 4, 1915

Court Arguments Over "Birth of a Nation"

Arguments were begun this morning before Judge Cooper in the Superior Court in support of the bill seeking an injunction to restrain the city from interfering with the production of "The Birth of a Nation," a motion picture. It was contended in behalf of the complainant that the city, inasmuch as it has previously issued permits for the presentation of the picture, has lost control of the matter, and is prevented from interfering. That the exercise of any discretion vested in the city has been abused was contended.

CHICAGO (Ill.) TRIBUNE
JUNE 4, 1915

More Praises for David W. Griffith

YOU can scarcely pick up a magazine nowadays without running into something or other "moviefied." And wherever you find an article on movies there you find the top notch of praise meted out to David Wark Griffith.

Rufus Steele in the current Sunset does it very interestingly: "The influx (of stage stars) followed the discovery that the screen could reproduce the shades and subtleties of acting and magnify them in the reproduction. The all-important discovery was due not so much to the actors as to the directors and to one certain director more than to the others.

"Through the brief, astonishing history of the pictures there has moved a Christopher Columbus, who has fairly leapt from threshold to threshold of unfoldment, a man in whose throbbing brain there was ever a larger dream and in whose hand there seemed always to be a magic key. Wherever pictures of intelligent sincerity are taking form the name of David Wark Griffith is spoken with a reverence that befits one who has not only led the way, but who has literally hewed the road.

"David W. Griffith is an artist who works in a more comprehensive medium than oil, a poet who expresses his thoughts on a surface broader and deeper than a printed page. No sooner had he convinced the trembling producers that the public would stand for pictures which departed from distorted clownish [illegible] than he undertook the filming of [illegible]ttle emotions.

"[illegible]evolutionist like Griffith was able [illegible]vive only because his revolutions [illegible]d to be revelations. His innova[illegible] stood the test which the doubting producers imposed. They paid."

The largest realized dream of Griffith's is "The Birth of a Nation," whose vibrant replica of life lies wrapped in its motionless reels here, while in other communities it is flashing its thrill and beauty to enthusiastic and enjoying multitudes. Being unable to dodge the subject in magazines, it seems almost like a matter of public culture—whether you like it or not—to see his picture, just as it is to read Dickens, or hear Mary Garden, or understand about wireless telegraphy.

CHICAGO (ILL.) POST
JUNE 5, 1915

...HT AGAINST ...OF A NATION"

...Enjoins Chi... From Prevent... Being Thrown ...ens Here.

...icago was enjoined this ... Cooper of the Superior ...fering with the produce... "The Birth of a Na...

...opinion Judge Cooper paid ... black race.

"There are three points upon which the city opposed the issuance of the injunction," he said.

"First, that the permit was not lawfully issued.

"Second, that the permit was revoked and, lastly, that if the full play were produced it would engender race animosity among the citizens.

Would Discredit Intelligence.

"If the court is to consider the third or last contention as sound we would have to assume that the white citizens of the present day do not recognize the fact that the story told in the play deals with things as they were a half a century ago.

"We would have to assume that people are so stupid that they cannot realize that the persons exhibited upon the canvas are of two or three generations ago and that in the last generation the negro race has advanced almost immeasurably. No race has made such progress as they have in the last two decades."

All Plays Have Villains.

The court pointed out that if the portrayal of "a bad negro" on the canvas was ground for preventing the picture's production almost every play would be prohibitive because every play contains at least one "villain."

"From the evidence I am convinced that the 'bad negro' and the 'bad white' are equally prominent features in the play.

"The law is the same for black as for white and no play could be kept from being shown in which a white man is shown to be a scoundrel or villain."

Assistant Corporation Counsel Reker appealed the decision on behalf of the city, but the order was not made interlocutory, so that the production of the play will not be interfered with pending the hearing in the higher court.

CHICAGO (ILL.) AMER...
JUNE ...

"NATION'S BIRTH" FILM IS O. K.'D

...of "The Birth of a Na... the long fight ... the right to have the picture exhibited in Chicago theaters when Judge Cooper issued an injunction enjoining the ... from interfering with its production. The court order overruled the action of Mayor Thompson in refusing a permit.

Judge Cooper, in making his decision, gave praise to the negro race and went into a discussion of the objections brought forward by those who oppose the exhibition.

The battle over "The Birth of a Nation" began many weeks ago when the first estimation of the things it portrays reached Chicago from Los Angeles, where it was produced. The chief opposition to it was based on the ground that it would stir racial hatred.

KU KLUX KLAN SHOWN.

Leading Chicago negroes severely condemned not only the photoplay, but also Thomas Dixon's novel, "The Clansman," on which it is founded. The film seeks to justify the activities of the Ku Klux Klan, the "invisible empire" of the reconstruction period in the South.

The court found also that the moment a fee for a permit is accepted in good faith, a property right is vested in the applicant with which neither the mayor nor chief of police or any other city official may interfere without good cause.

Assistant Corporation Counsel Reker appealed the decision for the city. The enjoining order is not interlocutory, and the production of the film is not to be stopped pending the decision of the higher court.

CHICAGO (ILL.) DAILY-NEWS
JUNE 5, 1915

"BIRTH OF NATION" WINS

Judge Cooper Enjoins City from Interfering with Photo Play.

Declares Negro Is Treated Fairly in Story of "The Clansman."

"The Birth of a Nation," much discussed photo play of Ku Klux days, opposed because it was alleged that its production would incite race hatred, may be exhibited in Chicago without hindrance from the city authorities. Judge Cooper in the superior court to-day enjoined the city of Chicago from interfering with the showing of the film.

"Movie" people—producers, theater owners and actors—filled the courtroom at an early hour. A sprinkling of colored folk mingled with the crowd, which waited eagerly for the reading of the court's decision. As Judge Cooper ascended the bench a double force of bailiffs stepped out of chambers and scattered in the throng. The judge prefaced the reading of his ruling with a request that no demonstration of any sort follow, but when he had finished a wave of approval swept up from the assembled "movie" crowd, necessitating sharp calls to order.

Three Points Raised by City.

"There are three points upon which the city opposed the issuance of the injunction," said Judge Cooper in his opinion. "First, that the permit was not lawfully issued; second, that the permit was revoked, and, lastly, that if the photoplay were produced it would engender race animosity among our negro citizens."

"If the court were to consider the third and last contention as sound we would have to assume that the white citizens of the present day are not able to recognize the fact that the story told in the play deals with things as they were a half century ago," the opinion continued. "We would have to assume that the witnesses are so stupid that they cannot realize that the people represented upon the screen are of two or three generations ago and that the negror race has since developed almost immeasurably. No other race has made such progress in that time.

Convinced Play Is Fair.

"And I am confident that the 'good black man' and the 'bad white man' are equally represented in the play. Each and every play has its good and its bad characters, both essential to the moral of the piece. The law is the same for the black man as the white, and no play could be kept from being shown because a white man is shown as a scoundrel. There is no contention that such a play might give rise to animosity toward the nationality of the villain."

Assistant Corporation Counsel Reker appealed the decision, but the order was not made interlocutory and so will not interfere with production of the play pending hearing in the higher court.

"It is gratifying to receive this vindication," said D. W. Griffith, the film's producer, "regardless of the loss of money involved if we were barred from showing the pictures. It is my sincere belief that the negro race would be infinitely more hurt and that race hatred would be more surely aggravated if the film were prohibited."

"The Birth of a Nation" is the photo play dramatization of Thomas Dixon's "The Clansman," a story of reconstruction days in the south.

JUNE 5, 1915
MOTION PICTURE NEWS (New York City)

Director-General D. W. Griffith of the Reliance-Majestic studios left for Chicago Saturday, where he went to attend the premier performance of "The Birth of a Nation," which will be given at the Illinois theatre. At this engagement the same prices will be charged as at New York and Boston.

It was Mr. Griffith's intention not to take additional bookings for this subject until the fall, fearing the unfavorable weather conditions would cut the season short; but it was only after numerous urgent telegrams from the Chicago people that this engagement was accepted. It is understood a long time run is promised.

CHICAGO (ILL.) HERALD
JUNE 5, 1915

SEEN ON THE SCREEN By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Fate of "Birth of a Nation" Will Be Decided Today

MOVING picture critics, playwrights, "movie" fans and forty negro ministers and their feminine cohorts crowded the court of Judge William Fenimore Cooper yesterday to hear the evidence offered in the suit filed by Joseph McCarthy for a temporary bill of injunction against the city interfering with the production of David W. Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation" in Chicago.

Judge Cooper will give his decision at 10 o'clock this morning.

Almost from the time court opened the spectators found much amusement in the testimony offered.

+ + +

J. G. Grossberg, one of the attorneys for the complainant, first cited instances where, after a license had been granted, the municipal authorities were unsuccessful in revoking the permit. He said the play in question was a "stationary mechanical," in which no change could be made after the licence was granted that could endanger the morals of a community.

Charles Reker, assistant corporation counsel, declared the permit granted was not legal. He charged it had been obtained in a roundabout way from former Mayor Harrison's secretary, Charles Fitzmorris, and that no censors were permitted to review the picture.

The first witness called was Major M. L. C. Funkhouser, who said he had not granted the permit, but that it had been given in his absence by Mrs. Eva L. Slawitsky, chief of the censors.

The major admitted seeing the picture in part before the permit was granted. The crowd laughed when he said he could remember nothing about it. He said the picture was exhibited about Feb. 23 or 24 and that Mr. Fitzmorris had stated the censor board was not to report on it.

Mrs. Slawitsky said she and probably four others of the censors had seen the picture. She failed to remember much about it.

When Judge Cooper invited anyone who had seen the picture and had anything to say against it to come forward no one responded.

C. J. Trainor, master in chancery, testified he had seen the picture, and that he considered it one of the greatest achievements of the age, both from an artistic and historical standpoint. He testified to seeing the censors taking notes and said the general supposition was that they were there to pass on the picture.

This testimony of Mr. Trainor was supported by his son, Attorney J. Fred Reever, and William Webster, a private detective.

Mr. Griffith, author and producer of "The Birth of a Nation," testified the story had not been written as a racial discussion, but rather to portray the history before and after the civil war. He said the picture had been running in New York for thirteen weeks and named Boston, Los Angeles and other cities where the picture had been shown.

+ + +

Mr. Reker asked the witness if it were true that "Gus," one of the negro characters in the play, was shown pursuing a white girl.

"I suppose so," answered Mr. Griffith. "In every play from Keystone comedies up to dramas the villain still pursues the heroine."

"Isn't he a renegade negro?"

"What is a renegade negro?" was the retort.

Mr. Reker admitted his ignorance on this question and waived it.

Mr. Griffith said there were now objections to the Italian villain, the German scoundrel and the Irish rogue, so it remained for the white American to take all the honors and be the star villain.

+ + +

Mr. Griffith showed the complimentary criticism of the national board of censorship given in New York, and also letters from the Rev. Charles Parkhurst and Thomas Gregory.

Attorney Grossberg in his closing argument called attention to $16,000 weekly expense incurred by his client in the renting of the theater and the employment of help while under the impression that the picture could be shown.

Answers to Questions

ROBERT—Send me a self-addressed, stamped envelope and I shall be delighted to answer your question. Norma Talmadge is a sister of Constance Talmadge. They are both with the Vitagraph Company.

+ + +

L. L. P.—You are very complimentary, and I am so pleased that I have friends in Atlanta. Lillian Gish, Mae Marsh and Miriam Cooper played in "The Birth of a Nation."

Billboard, Cinn., Ohio
June 5, 1915

Everyone in any way identified with the moving picture game should read an editorial, entitled "The Birth of a Nation," which was printed in The Chicago Tribune May 25.

CHICAGO (ILL.)
JUNE ...

FLICKERING ...from FILM LAND
by KITTY KELLY

"Birth of Nation" Decision Today.

THE battle for "The Birth of a Nation," the Griffith photoplay, was waged all day yesterday in the court of Judge William Fenimore Cooper, before a roomful of observers, a few of them negroes. The judge held the decision over until 10 o'clock this morning.

In the light of verbal combat a strange situation developed as existing in censorial quarters.

J. G. Grossberg of the defending firm, Burkhalter & Grossberg, stated that the permits had been granted under the two administrations, Carter H. Harrison's and William Hale Thompson's, respectively, April 25 and May 6, and the revocation made May 22. He quoted authorities to show that such action was warrantable only during the first three days after inspection, except on violation of the only provisory section in the ordinance, the admission of minors, when so conditioned.

In the ordinances he found no right of the mayor to revoke permits, and he regarded permits granted as binding the good faith of the city, making it safe for the licensee to go ahead in making contracts, as had been done in this case to an extent of a $30,000 consideration, in addition to the fortune spent in the original making of the picture.

No picture precedent existed, he said, but situations in regard to permits and buildings involving property losses were cited, in which it was shown that neither charters nor ordinances authorize the deprivation of a citizen in any invested rights, such power of forcing forfeiture resting plainly in the legislature.

Mr. Grossberg insisted that when the permits were issued and the three days allowed to lapse the judiciary power was exhausted, and that the effect of the further action by the chief of police was confiscation of the $30,000 invested on the good faith of the permits.

Assistant Corporation Counsel George Reker came back with the assurance that "E. W. Griffith knew permits had not been granted," a statement he illuminated by explaining the history of censorship from its installation in 1912, with the authorization of second deputy of police as motion picture censor, from whose office, he said, the permit of April 25 had been improperly issued, for the picture was never inspected nor authorized by the second deputy.

Thus, the permit being void or illegal, there was no occasion for a revocation, he explained, the one made simply being done to make it seem pleasant.

Mr. Reker was unable to see any element of damage in the situation to the owners of the film, declaring that none of the contracts engaged in held. He asserted that the permit was secured clandestinely by the "man who sneaked in and got it."

This aroused the interest of Judge Cooper in the physical issuing of the permits and led into a strange labyrinth. Counsel Reker didn't know who issued them—the second being shown merely as a duplicate—except that they came out of the office of the second deputy signed by a clerk.

Then Maj. Funkhouser was introduced into the situation.

"The mayor's secretary, Charles Fitzmorris," he said, "called me on the phone and asked to look at the picture the next morning (Feb. 25). He said he didn't want the censors there, so I arranged they should not be. Three or four were there unofficially, altogether about twenty people, including Mrs. Harrison. I did not go in until the ninth reel and I stayed only fifteen or twenty minutes—saw only about half of one reel.

"There was no one else there from the police department besides myself and I ordered the censor in charge to tell the censors not to view it officially.

"Mr. Fitzmorris gave instructions to issue the permit without any cuts and the records so show."

Maj. Funkhouser asserted Mr. Fitzmorris said he was the representative of the mayor to censor pictures, while he himself saw less than one reel and couldn't remember what that was about.

Counsel Reker complained that nobody had seen the picture and he expressed grievance that no colored people had been present at the city hall showing.

Judge Cooper invited any one who had seen the picture and wished to testify against its objectionability to come to the witness chair, but nobody responded, so D. W. Griffith was called upon as knowing more about it than any one.

He aroused Mr. Reker's ire and the audiences's laughter by his manipulation of the counsel's questions.

This motion picture play he declared to be founded on certain historical facts before the civil war, during the civil war, and the reconstruction period, and that it had in it no scene not portrayed in plays, dramas, and stories since the making of stories.

The question of the impropriety and indecency of the picture was battened about, but as no one opposing it had seen it and those who advocated it insisted there was nothing to question, no agreement of opinion could be arrived at.

Judge Cooper then took the case under ...

CHICAGO (ILL.) MOTOGRAPHY
JUNE 5, 1915

Boston's Film Censors

Governor Walsh of Massachusetts, on May 21, signed the new censorship bill which grants unlimited powers of censorship to Boston's mayor, police commissioner and chief justice of the Municipal Court, one clause in the bill providing that an objectionable production can be stopped by a majority vote of the three censors.

Previously the powers of censorship were vested jointly in the mayor and police commissioner, who had power only to stop plays of an immoral and obscene nature and claimed that the authority was not enough to prevent the production recently in Boston of "The Birth of a Nation."

Just before the governor signed the bill, Senator Hays of Brighton made a bitter speech attacking the measure and in his address particularly assailed the colored men employed at the state house and dared the negro voters of his district to oppose him for re-election.

BOSTON TRAVELE

JU

HICAGO F
RACE
HICAGO, June 1-anned to Chicagoans
drama based on
Birth of a Nat
40 Negro minister will or will not a
it is up to the Ne
the mayor, whether shall see the drama.

CHICAGO (Ill.) TRIB
JUNE 1

COLORED PASTO
PASS ON 'BIRTH
Mayor Suggests 30
Ministers See Fil
by Their Verdict.

Mayor Thompson has nsel to the owners of Nation," the moving pic
on "The Clansman."
"I suggested to tha
thirty or forty colore said yesterday, "and the picture. The only in my mind is whether prejudice. If the color it won't I have no obj
ture being shown."
The owners of the fil city. No one could be f
they might accept the tion.

CHICAGO (Ill.)
JUN
COLORED CL
MAY PASS
Mayor Thompson
gestion to Mana
Birth of a
THEIR FINDIN
A board of censors, ored ministers, may play "The Birth of purpose of aiding deciding whether the exhibited in Chicago.
The mayor revoked exhibition a week a against it had been sentatives of the colo
mit for the show wa
the last days of form
son's administration, been publicly present
ASK FOR PERM
Managers of the p place it on exhibitio
ture, and they calle yesterday, urging h permit.
"I suggested to mayor last night, "
exhibition of the pict ation of colored m approve the picture mit.
PROTEST FROM
"I have not seen th men have come to that to show it wo prejudice. If the min may go to see it mys

DUNKIRK (N. Y.) C
JUNE,
about C
UP TO COLORED P
Chicago, Jun Ma
today planned oly
mooted quested pe
lans should see t ict
ed on "The Clansman
ed a Nation." He ad ty colored ministers to it will or will not rou
It is up to the negro
the mayor, whether whi
shall see the drama.

CHICAGO (ILL.) MOTOGRAPHY
JUNE 5, 1915

FILM FOLK FLASHES.

Miriam Cooper, the Mutual player, is in New York for a vacation. She has a month's leave of absence and intends having a good rest. Besides her appearance in "The Birth of a Nation," Miss Cooper has worked hard the past season on her stellar appearances in a series of Mutual plays.

Mae Marsh, the Griffith-Mutual star, is "the happiest girl," to quote Miss Marsh herself, in Los Angeles these days for her sister, who is known in film circles as Margaret Loveridge, is paying her a visit. Miss Marsh is very fond of her sister and is doing her utmost to make her stay a permanent one.

Lillian and Dorothy Gish are having their dressing room in the Mutual studios at Hollywood remodelled. Designers, decorators and painters have been in charge for several days. It already begins to look as if it were to be the prettiest dressing room in Southern California.

CLIPPING FROM JUL 3 191
CHICAGO (Ill.) MOTOGRAPHY

On Wednesday last D. W. Griffith's great spectacle "The Birth of a Nation," passed its two hundredth performance at the Liberty theater in New York City, setting a record for the first $2 motion picture production which will likely stand for a long time. Special arrangements have been made to continue the run through the summer season and advance reservations for the next eight weeks can now be arranged.

CHICAGO (Ill.) TRIBUNE
JUNE 6, 1915

BIRTH OF NATION FILM ALLOWED BY COURT ORDER

Judge Cooper Holds to Bar the Picture Would Make Separate Law for Negroes.

STOPS INTERFERENCE OF CITY

After a long fight, carried into the courts over the head of Maj. M. L. C. Funkhouser, Chicago's official "movie" censor, "The Birth of a Nation" had its first local public showing in the Illinois theater last night.

The picture was shown by virtue of an injunction issued earlier in the day by Judge Cooper of the superior court, tying the hands of Maj. Funkhouser and restraining police interference of any sort.

Sets Censorship Precedent.

Judge Cooper's decision was one that is calculated to set an important precedent in future troubles of film producers with the Chicago censors.

The courtroom was crowded in the forenoon when the judge ascended the bench to give his decision. Blacks mingled with whites, as tensely interested in what was to happen to "The Birth of a Nation" as those having heavy financial interest in the case.

Fear that there might be disorder had led Judge Cooper to take certain precautions. As he came from chambers a double file of bailiffs marched into the court room and distributed themselves at strategic points. The court prefaced his decision with a request that there be no demonstration. Nevertheless, much pounding of the gavel was necessary to check a murmur of approval which swept over the room as it became apparent the censors had lost the day.

Text of Decision.

Judge Cooper proceeded to read as follows:

"The city contends against the issuance of the injunction on three grounds—that the permit to exhibit the photo play in question was not lawfully issued; that the permit issued was revoked, and that the photo play, if presented, will engender race animosity against the negro citizens of our community.

"This last ground is based purely on assumption. To find that this is a good objection to the allowing of the injunction, this court will have to assume that our white citizens will not know or appreciate the fact that the days represented in the play were nearly in the first years of the last half century.

Past Versus the Present.

"This court will have to assume that they who will witness the play will be so stupid that they will be unable to comprehend that the people represented on the canvas were of two or three generations ago, and that they do not and will not appreciate the fact that in the succeeding time the negro race has advanced almost immeasurably.

"The court cannot assume that this will be so, when we know that there is universal recognition of the fact that no race has shown such great general advancement in from two to three generations as the negro race has done.

Cites Progress of Negro.

"In our own great community the fact is recognized by all well informed citizens that we have in the various professions and higher lines of business members of that race who are ministers, dentists, lawyers, physicians, and business men of fine ability and business character, who enjoy the respect and confidence of our community.

"This court is satisfied from the evidence that in this photo play the good black man and the bad white man are equally prominent figures in the play. Every night in every fair sized community in this broad land where the stage instructs or entertains each and every play has its good characters and its bad characters portrayed, both of which are essential to a play in the rounding out of the moral of the play, and without which moral a play is of no educational value.

Peril to Theater Freedom.

"Every night in every theater there is produced the debased type of the white race of different nationalities, and if representative groups of the various nationalities so presented became acutely sensitive that such individual portrayal would cause them to suffer race hatred of their race, and all the plays in which a villain had played were stopped on that account, the theater as an educator and entertainer of the people would become a memory of the past, and there would be nothing to fill its place for the education and enjoyment of our people.

"No one race or nationality has greater right under the law than any other has. Any race or nationality so offended can best give the lie to the bad characters so presented by continusing to accept themselves as law-abiding citizens who do not expect greater rights from the law than it allows all other men or nationalities.

Same Law for White and Black.

"If white men appeal to the courts to restrain the production of a play because one of its characters portrayed that of a dissolute white man whose acting would bring race hatred against the nation which his stage character assumed, their plea would be denied for want of law to support the same, and the law should be and is the same for black and white alike.

"It is the duty of the courts to protect the individual in the enjoyment of his right of property. The complainant in this case is the owner or lessee of the play called 'The Birth of a Nation.' Under the ordinances of our city, if one who desires to present a photoplay or moving picture complies with the law and obtains a license honestly and in good faith, and the play has been censored by the proper authorities of the city, and he has paid his money for a fee, from that time on [illegible] with an individual property right, which neither the city of Chicago, nor any official, be he mayor, general superintendent of police, or be he judge, can arbitrarily deprive him of, without giving him his hearing or day in court.

Harrison Permit Stands.

"The evidence in this case satisfies the court that this play was censored by the mayor's private secretary and by Mrs. Harrison, the wife of the former mayor of Chicago. Major Funkhouser admits that he received orders from the mayor's office 'to issue a permit for the production' of this photoplay, and gave directions to that effect. A permit was issued first by James Gleason, general superintendent of police, and later on the present general superintendent of police, Charles C. Healey, issued another permit.

"I am obliged to find under the law and the evidence in this case that the complainant is entitled to the relief prayed for, and I will enter an injunction restraining the mayor, the chief of police, and the city of Chicago from interfering with the production of the play."

Griffith Highly Pleased.

D. W. Griffith, producer of the film, was probably the most interested listener.

"The decision is gratifying to me for other reasons than the fact there would be a heavy loss of money involved if the film were barred," he said. "I sincerely think more race prejudice would be aroused by the suppression of 'The Birth of a Nation' than by its exhibition. I realize, too, that such a decision took a great deal of nerve on the part of the court."

Assistant Corporation Counsel Baker announced his intention of taking the case to the Appellate court. Judge Cooper, however, expressed himself in an interview subsequently as of the opinion his injunction would stand.

Chief Healey directed Maj. Funkhouser to have four censors at last night's showing of the picture. Affidavits made by the censors will be presented to Judge Cooper Tuesday in an effort to have the injunction dissolved.

HOUSTON (TEX.) CHRONICLE
JUNE 6, 1915

about Chicago

must be handled in a big way.

BIRTH OF NATION CAN BE SHOWN TO CHICAGOANS

18

Special to The Chronicle.

Chicago, June 5.—Producers of "The Birth of Nation" today won their fight to be permitted to exhibit the moving picture in Chicago. Judge Cooper issued an injunction preventing the city authorities from interfering with its production. Mayor Thompson had refused to grant a permit for showing the film on the ground that it might stir race feeling.

Negroes of Chicago were the chief opponents of the film. Judge Cooper said that he did not consider the productions as serious as the city officials.

Field. Chicago Ill.
June 6/1915

sons for the mbitious Young Photoplaywright

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS.

USING still further the appropriate screen subject, I dwell for a moment on suspense. Every great story, play photoplay must have suspense. The intense moment, when e is uncertain, when the unreal plays upon our emotions trength of the real. All this is a vital element to the suc- photoplay, and is called suspense.

d a friend who had seen "The Birth of a Nation" in New had impressed her as being the most remarkable feature 's colossal production. She answered immediately and itation: "Its suspense. It carries you along to such a ental excitement that you fairly hang by the threads of until the climax saves the situation."

Griffith early learned the effectiveness of bringing sus- his stories. When he was just starting on the road to the Biograph company he put into his simple little single- s a suspense that made them better than any pictures were being turned out by the other film companies. Each com- used as its slogan, "As good as the Biograph pictures." In those days the film concerns were all trying to manufacture films that compared favorably with the Griffith productions.

Work of An Artist.

I have never seen a Griffith picture that did not contain suspense. "The Avenging Conscience" is full of it. David Griffith is an artist. He works upon the emotions of his audience, for he realizes that a play in which the outcome is a foregone conclusion is the essence of stupidity.

William Lord Wright says of suspense in the photoplay: "The art of suspense is another factor in constructing the photoplay plot. To keep the audience guessing, to have them breathlessly awaiting the denouement is a fine art." Mr. Wright goes on to say: "Suspense is an essential sensation to the dramatic photoplay when not overdone. It requires careful planning. Each incident must be logical, a consistent step to the next scene, and a careful preparation of earlier action is necessary to fulfill the expectation that has been deliberately fostered."

The girl is betrothed to the soldier. The false friend loves her and carries the report of the soldier's death to her. She, after much coaxing, consents to marry the friend. Meanwhile in a hospital in a distant country the soldier lies sick. The wedding day is set. The soldier gets out of bed and makes an attempt to get to his sweetheart. He is so weak he falls exhausted. The wedding festivities go on. The guests arrive; the bride and groom stand before the minister. The ceremony starts. The soldier, after harrowing experiences, arrives just before the fateful words are spoken.

That is suspense. We do not know whether the false friend or the brave soldier will win the girl. We keep up the suspense by dashing from the girl and the false friend to the soldier. We are familiar with the progress the soldier is making, but we do not know whether or not he will get to her side in time.

I am in receipt of some communications from the outside for you. I want to ask you to pardon me if I interrupt the lesson and give them to you.

A Call for Scenarios.

H. M. Herkheimer, president and general manager of the Balboa Amusement Producing Company, writes and asks me to ask any of my students who are sending scenarios to the Balboa company to kindly address them to the company. Frank Wiltermood, the editor, is no longer in his employ. There has been some difficulty in getting the scripts intended for the company. Mr. Herkheimer says:

"Our reputation is established and we will sustain it to the last ditch—i. e., we are one of the companies that pay for every scenario and every idea or title that we at any time in the past, present or future have or will use. No matter how small the price may seem, we are a company that has a clean record regarding paying or giving immediate answer on accepting or rejecting scenarios."

I have constantly urged my students to send their scenarios to the film companies and not the individual. In view of this I suggest that you profit by this letter and remember to send your scenarios addressed to the company and not to the editor.

Another letter worth our time and attention is from Mack Sennet, the well-known Keystone director. Mr. Sennet says:

"Where are all the comedy writers? Where are their minds? The world is full of comedy and yet out of all the thousands of stories that are received by the Keystone scenario department there is only an occasional idea that is new or bright. We maintain a staff of writers who do all our work simply because that is the only way we can obtain new comedy ideas. I believe the lack of comedy of a marketable sort is based on lack of study and thought on the part of the free lance writers. If they would study the comedy films that are shown and use a little analysis and brain effort they might assume the right mental attitude and increase their profits."

Read that over carefully, dear friends. Apply it to the drama as well as to the comedy. Then for the sake of your future welfare I beg of you don't submit any old idea that comes into your head. Wait until you are sure you have a "winner" and then submit it. Have as your motto, "Wait until you are sure you are right, then go ahead."

✦ ✦ ✦

N. B. E.—I wish I could help you. I would gladly criticise your scenario if I had the time, but if I were to read and suggest changes in my students' photoplays I would have to work twenty-four hours a day. I do not know of anyone that I could conscientiously recommend to assist you. Cannot you compare your scenario with those on the screen and with the sample I have given you and see wherein your difficulty lies? With your literary training this should be easy.

CHICAGO (Ill.) POST
JUNE 7, 1915

"Birth of a Nation" at Illinois Theater

Ku Klux Film Play Contains Many Thrills

A Photo-Pageant Of Fact and Myth

By Charles Collins.

THE MOTION-PICTURE exhibition called "The Birth of a Nation," having won a legal victory over official disapproval, now occupies the Illinois Theater. With pomp and circumstance, with ushers in civil-war uniforms and usherettes in crinolines, and an orchestral accompaniment that seduces the ear while the photography fascinates the eye, this $2 photo-pageant, which the movie fanatics discuss as if it were a greater achievement than "Paradise Lost," the invention of telegraphy, and the battle of the Marne rolled together, is being revealed.

There are reels and reels of it. The story spins its way from Bull Run to Appomattox, and then thru the ferment of the reconstruction period. It covers, in the peculiar, cinematographic way, the most terrible and exciting decade in the history of this nation; and it skips over that great epoch with a flamboyant sense of pictorial melodrama. It occupies the conventional three hours of theater time in its exhibition, and gives the observer a perfect gorge of film. I should say that "The Birth of a Nation" carries enough celluloid to make collars for the Russian army. I emerged after the unreeling blinking like a pop-eyed fish from the nocturnal waters of Mammoth Cave; but I must admit that my optic nerves were never made for use in the palaces of astigmatism now so much in the public favor.

The subject matter of "The Birth of a Nation" is familiar, partly thru the textbooks of American history and partly thru the novels of Thomas Dixon, that professional southerner for literary purposes who is obsessed with the fear of miscegenation. Its point of view, in its first part, is that which causes the tune of "Dixie" to be applauded in cafes—a chivalrous, romantic whimsy that is always accepted with sympathy. Its point of view, in the second part, is that of Mr. Dixon, the waver of the obsolete "bloody shirt," the stern surveyor of the color line, the Klu-Klux clansman of the pen.

Forty-five years have passed since the Klu-Klux bands put away their ghostly apparel and ceased their predatory or retributive rides by night, but Mr. Dixon still rides his hobby and carries the fiery torch. If he has children, I am sure that he compells them to address him as "Grand Cyclops" instead of father. He is the sole surviving inhabitant of the Invisible Empire. David W. Griffith, the Belasco of the films, has made that "empire" visible for him in "The Birth of a Nation," and I have no doubt but that he is sublimely content.

I shall leave Mr. Dixon to his artistic conscience, if he possesses that nonnegotiable asset, and with him, the entire question of "The Birth of a Nation," as anything but a film romance. I will state my conviction that the race conflict part of the picture (which means about three-fourths of it) touches an old sore in our national life in a clumsy, sensational, prejudiced way, but I will not argue the matter. I resent this aspect of "The Birth of a Nation," but rather than debate with the Dixon point of view I would hurl the thirteen heavy volumes of the congressional investigation of the Klu-Klux clan (an incident which closed in 1872) straight at Mr. Dixon's head, each volume with deadly aim.

Considered merely as a matter of the screen and the projecting lantern, "The Birth of a Nation" is magnificent. It is brilliant cinematography from the first to the last of its twelve reels. As a photographic stage director, Mr. Griffith deserves all of the superlatives which have been heaped upon him. He has erred in taste occasionally, but only, I think, thru the Dixonian influence. His panoramas are epic; his bits of detail, delightfully illustrative. He has visualized the civil war and the Klu-Klux aftermath, and still kept a human theme running thru the historical chaos—which is no small achievement in craftsmanship.

The battle scenes are ferociously exciting, and the representations of historical character are as exact as could be expected. The fidelity with which the assassination of Lincoln, in Ford's Theater, is shown is amazing, in every detail it follows the facts of that pitiful tragedy. For moving-picture rush, scutter and thrill, the last grand round-up of the Klu-Klux squadrons, when they race all over the State of South Carolina on their scooting quadrupeds and save the entire female population (white) from miscegenation, has never been equaled.

The music must not be forgotten. The accompaniment is constant, and is played by a fine orchestra. The score has been arranged with consummate musicianly skill, and the right melody is always played at the right time. Part of the fascination of this picture is due to the orchestra, and I suspect that photo-plays will develop more and more toward musical form.

As an antidote to Mr. Dixon's share in "The Birth of a Nation" I recommend, to all whose curiosity has been aroused in regard to the Klu-Klux, the writings of Albion W. Tourgee, referred to rather sneeringly in one of the labels that break the picture as "the carpet-baggers' judge." For a documentation of the case, take his "The Invisible Empire" written with the events at close range. It tells the story better and more fairly.

CHICAGO (Ill.) DAILY NEWS
JUNE 7, 1915

CROWDS GET THRILL AT "BIRTH OF A NATION"

David W. Griffith's Film Masterpiece Is Full to the Brim with Action.

TELLS CIVIL WAR STORY

War Scenes in Which Camera Covers Miles of Country—Fifteen Years of U. S. History.

"The Birth of a Nation," said to have cost its producers several hundred thousand dollars, lost no time in making its initial public presentation after the censorship bars had been let down by Judge William Fenimore Cooper Saturday. That same evening it made its appearance before a houseful of spectators. The audience applauded incidents depicted on the screen vociferously.

David W. Griffith, producer, has rivaled Europe's foremost producers in the staging and directing of his tremendous offering. He has, in the opinion of many, overshadowed "Cabiria," heretofore the supreme film subject, which also occupied the screen at the Illinois theater last summer, in most respects. While the foreign play was a massive production, it excelled only in its mammoth scenic splendor of especially constructed sets and the numerous supernumeraries it employed. It lacked, however, dramatic action.

Griffith has given a powerful story of historical interest, dramatically fascinating and well acted by an unusual cast of screen players. He has subordinated the spectacular, which in itself holds the spectators spellbound, for the dramatic, and thus has accomplished an unusual combination in the annals of film plays.

Great Mob and War Scenes.

The master mind and the stagecraftsmanship of the producer appear everywhere—in the acting of the individual players, settings, staging of minor as well as colossal mob and war scenes and in the directing of the thousands of men and women who frequently appear in single scenes. Seas of human being scrambling over each other lend realism to the scenes depicted. It seems as if each player in these mob scenes is living a real drama rather than acting one so determined does the average player appear. Horsemanship of the most daredevil kind is shown, with the riders speeding recklessly and falling from their running horses to the ground while the animal continues fleeing, followed by other horsemen on their steeds.

Battle scenes between actors representing northern and southern soldiers reveal the remarkable scope of the camera. The scenes apparently were obtained from a great height and show panoramic views of miles of country over which thousands of men are seen battling desperately. The staging of these scenes is a feat in itself. The action of the play and the emotion of the players are revealed splendidly in the facial expressions and in the gestures of the players, whose artistic attainments manifest themselves throughout the production.

"The Birth of a Nation" is a remarkable dramatic creation. The play interminglies pathos and humor so skillfully that sadness and grossomeness are forgotten in the funny incidents pictured. It is a study in contrasts seldom seen in motion pictures, scaling from extreme pathos to humorous situations or depicting the toll of war on the battle field and immediately afterward a peaceful home, thereby affording relief from the tensity of the situation.

Covers Period of Fifteen Years.

"The Birth of a Nation" deals with fifteen years of the reconstructive period of the south, opening before and closing after the civil war. Animated pictures are seen of Abraham Lincoln surrounded by his cabinet depicting his emancipation proclamation, and the martyred president's assassination at Ford's theater. Historic battles are pictured and other noteworthy incidents of those exciting days appear reproduced from authentic sources.

The days of the carpet bagger and the negro in the south are reenacted and the bad white man and the good negro, as well as the bad colored man and the oppressed southerner, are pictured. The activities of the historical Ku Klux Klan thrilled the spectators. Through the entire play a double romance between children of the north on one side and others of the south on the other is carried.

Henry B. Walthall heads a most imposing cast of players who share honors equally in their interpretations. Others in the cast include Lillian Gish, Mae Marsh, Miriam Cooper, Spottiswoode Aiken, Ralph Lewis, Robert Harron and George Siegmann.

CHICAGO (Ill.)
JUNE 7, 1915

CENSORS TO REPORT ON "BIRTH OF NATION" TODAY.

Four Members of Board See Griffith Film for Second Time—City to Ask New Trial.

The four censors detailed by Maj. Funkhouser to view the film The Birth of a Nation," on Saturday night were present again at the exhibition last night. They will hand a report in to Maj. Funkhouser and Assistant Corporation Counsel George L. Reker this morning. Mr. Reker, who says he will ask a new trial and take an appeal if this is denied, asserted he would drop in to see the film some time today himself.

JUNE 8, 1915
CHICAGO (Ill.) EXAMINER

WHOLE CIVIL WAR SHOWN ON SHEET"

So the Critic Summarizes "Birth of a Nation" at the Illinois.

BY ASHTON STEVENS.

ON A sheet of linen little larger than my mother used to make for the comfort of her sleepers, I witnessed the Civil War and its reconstruction as they have been flashed on a film by D. W. Griffith, the Wagner of screen. I am notoriously no friend of the movies. I am a dog too old to learn an occupation new—as we would say on blank. If these really are they, I have said, in the name of heaven retire me with whited whiskers, a la William Winter! Believe me, I went yesterday to "The Birth of a Nation" at the Illinois [illegible] in armor empowered to do his dangest.

After three hours' captivity to the spell of the show I emerged an enemy to every of him that [illegible] this Homeric film. It had to be raw to be true; it had to be grilling to be dramatic; it had to suggest the "bloody shirt" of platitude in order to make its art immediate, dynamic and plausible and sure-enough.

EPIC WITHOUT WORDS.

An epic without words, but with gorgeous poetry, is Mr. Griffith's filming of "The Birth of a Nation." It is a poet's picture. His art always is first, and he knows no black nor white to make his poem real. If Go dhad been the villain in the play, so Mr. Griffith, one takes it, would cave cast his deity.

To specialize in prejudice against this screen is to deny art in the face of a man who has picked his artist reputation on nothing less than art. How easier to have been conservative and won on a "checkerboard" (black and white) compromise! But he scorned placation. He plotted as urgently as did Eugene Walter in the best of our American plays, "The Easiest Way."

"The Birth of a Nation" is a huge, passionate, terrifying, enthralling glimpse of American history as never before has it been presented in concrete. It is perhaps the rarest pathos and poetry of our civil war that yet have been uttered. It employs a new means, new vocabulary, new senses. It is a hideous and victorious conflict against the warring of man against man. Curbed to the remotest gun-and-thunder items are its merely romantic details. Strung to their tenuous ultimate are the gross tragedies of embattlement. War, for good or evil, becomes murder in the first degree.

GRIFFITH MAKES SPEECH.

Mr. Griffith first spoke to the spectators during the nervous and necessary intermission. Or words to this effect, he said that he didn't mind telling us that his name was Griffith. He believed in the truth as advanced by the art of the camera. He had as much a right to picture as the historian had to write. Disparaging the spoken word as a medium, Mr. Griffith spoke well, winding up with loving mercy one of us, enemies included, to use his own well-picked words.

But his speech was not required to insure the success of the drama. It was a gratuitously successful as Mr. Belasco's well-known pulling of the forelock.

I met Griffith in the lobby after three hours of reel from which there was no human escape.

"You've made me late for my Western train," he said," he said. "I couldn't wait for the paper, but had to wait for your idea. When I was an actor at $5 a week you never noticed me——"

"But," se sI, "now that you are an artist at one hundred thousand per season——"

"Do we require those vulgar actions?"

"Your department of publicity has rather insisted."

CALLS IT "GREAT."

"That all comes under the head of obscene advertising," Mr. Griffith said. "I should like to know what you think of the show as an individual."

"Great," says I. "The limit—to date. Sometimes your actors hop rather than walk, but you have a wonder orchestr athat synchronizes to the last deed and syllable—yes?"

"Yes. Utterly yes," said the master photoist. "But both are speeded up to the jerk because we started late to-day."

"Are you going to eliminate the jerk from the movies?" I asked.

"I am," said Griffith; and I was very glad on account of my faith in him.

CHICAGO (Ill.) TRIBUNE
JUNE 8, 1915

Questions Motive of City in Fight on Birth of Nation

McCarthy Says Film Showing Negro's Progress Was Barred.

GRIFFITH MAKES PLEA

J. J. McCarthy, manager of "The Birth of a Nation," last night charged the municipal authorities are animated by some other motive than the advancement of the negro race.

Mr. McCarthy based his accusation on the fact that Second Deputy Funkhouser refused to issue a permit for "The New Era," a film shown as a postlude to "The Birth of a Nation." It portrays the moral and social advancement of the negro since reconstruction days.

Earlier in the day five municipal movie censors signed a report to be used in the city's court proceedings. The report was largely dictated by Assistant Corporation Counsel George L. Reker, who did not see the film till last night.

What Authorities Say.

"The city authorities say they are concerned for the negro," Mr. McCarthy said. "That is the reason they give for objecting to the photoplay.

"But there must be another explanation. Otherwise they would be anxious to have us show 'The New Era.' We prepared this part of the picture at the request of the trustees of Hampton and Tuskegee Institutes. But when we asked permission to exhibit it Maj. Funkhouser said 'Nothing doing.'

"'The New Era' gives a vivid impression of the progress of the race. It shows that in the last fifty years since the passing of the carpet bagger and his trail of evil influences over the colored people their wealth has increased from $17,000,000 to $300,000,000.

Shows Negro's Progress.

"It shows how Hampton institute is making valuable citizens. It shows the agricultural advance of the race. It exhibits progressive types of colored men and women. In fact, it is a tribute to the qualities of the race and their capabilities for industrial and social progress. Yet Maj. Funkhouser won't let us show it."

David W. Griffith, the producer of "The Birth of a Nation," made a plea last night from the stage of the Illinois theater for "a square deal for the motion picture."

"If you permit a censorship of the movies, there will soon be a censorship of the drama and then a censorship of the press. That would be Russia. I ask for the motion picture the same privilege as that accorded the historian, the dramatist, and the novelist. We should be permitted to portray the wrongs of the past in order that we may be able to avoid errors in the future."

Thanks Judge Cooper.

Mr. Griffith publicly thanked Judge Cooper—who was in the audience—for his courage in issuing an injunction against the city to restrain it from interfering with the production.

Judge Cooper saw the performance and heard the speech but he refused comment.

"I don't know myself what I think about it. I haven't allowed myself to form an opinion," he said.

Assistant Corporation Counsel George L. Reker, who has the city's case against the production in charge, was strong in his denunciation of the film.

"It is wonderful and thrilling, but it is an outrage," said Mr. Reker. "Say for me that it is a damnable insult against the negro. I am more positive than before in the dangerous effects of this production. It ought to be stopped. The negro has a hard enough battle even now in this country. This is another obstacle in his betterment. With the exception of a few conventional negro characters—the southern mammy type—there isn't a commendable action by a negro in the whole piece. They are connected definitely, all the way through, with murder and rape and debauchery."

Mr. Reker said he has not determined what course to pursue in the matter. It is expected that he will ask that the injunction against the [illegible]

CHICAGO (Ill.) TRIBUNE
JUNE 8, 1915

REKER CONDEMNS BIRTH OF NATION ERE HE VIEWS IT

Helps Out Censors by Writing Part of Their Report Assailing Film.

Five municipal movie censors yesterday signed a report concerning "The Birth of a Nation," the findings of the censors being the arguments used by Assistant Corporation Counsel George L. Reker in court.

Mr. Reker supervised the preparation of the document. Four pages of synopsis were written by Samuel Block, one of the censors. The fifth page, setting forth conclusions, was dictatd by Mr. Reker, who, up to that time, had not seen the film.

The report was drafted for the purpose of having set aside the injunction preventing the city from interfering with the exhibition of the photoplay.

Go to Court Today.

The city's lawyers will ask Judge Cooper to dissolve his injunction today. In case the motion is denied they have arranged for a hearing before the Appellate court on Monday. All the appeal papers were prepared during the day.

"The censors reported to me the nature of the scenes," Reker said, "and I told them what to emphasize in their written report. Some of the worst scenes, I understand, have been eliminated. For instance, the negro pursuing the girl with the saliva dripping from his mouth and the scene showing the negro assemblymen taking off their shoes. But the play ought't to be shown."

Mr. Reker then handed the reporters a typewritten page.

"This is the substance of the report," he said.

"But it doesn't appear in just that form in the document itself," objected one of the newspapermen.

The "Fifth Page."

"Well, we'll make it the fifth page of the report and have the censors sign it," Mr. Reker said finally.

It is as follows:

"No clear thinking, level headed man or woman viewing the film 'The Birth of a Nation,' based on Thomas Dixon's book, 'The Clansman,' can help but be impressed with the thought that the negro is shown to be a firm believer in miscegination or the intermarriage between whites and blacks.

"From Gus, the negro renegade in pursuit of little Flora Cameron, the pet sister of the 'Little Colonel,' to Silas Lynch, the protégé of the Hon. Austin Stoneman, the great radical leade, of the house, the desire uppermost in their minds is to mate with a white woman—not with the same desire of honorable marriage as the lovers Ben Cameron and Elsie Stoneman or Phil Stoneman and Margaret Cameron but in the unholy alliance of the roué and rapist.

The Renegade's Leer.

"The glances and leers of Gus, the renegade; Lynch, the educated protégé, or the negro legislators who helped to pass the intermarriage bill were different from the flashes of love and honorable passion of the two white men.

"It is true that the film contains two subtitles to the effect that the two negro villains offer honorable marriage to Flora Cameron and Elsie Stoneman, but the eyes with which they look upon the two white girls are those of rapists and sensualists.

"The scenes in the cabin where the Camerons take refuge after the doctor's escape from the negro troops, showing the two men with guns raised ready to brain their daughters if the negro soldiers succeed in entering, is the final, convincing argument that the negro, whether he is ignorant or educated, is shown to be at heart nothing but a rapist and lustful beast."

"I have instructed the law department to continue the fight against the film," Mayor Thompson said. "I do not believe the assassination of President Lincoln should be shown. They say that suggestion is the breeder of crime, and there is [illegible] for

JUNE 8, 1915
CHICAGO (Ill.) EXAMINER

FILM CENSORS ARE CENSORED

"Birth of a Nation" Report Is Guided by Attorney to "Play High Spots."

City motion picture [illegible] are not to have a free rein in preparing their synopsis of "The Birth of a Nation" and the report on which the city will ask Judge Cooper to set aside his injunction restraining the police from interfering with the film production of "The Clansman" will be dictated by the corporation counsel's opinion rather than a technical discussion of the play.

This developed yesterday when the five censors sent to prepare a synopsis of the play were instructed now to make out their report by Assistant Corporation Counsel Reker. Reker, when asked who had written the report, admitted that the censors had been told to "play up" those scenes on which the city will base its contention that the drama will excite race prejudice.

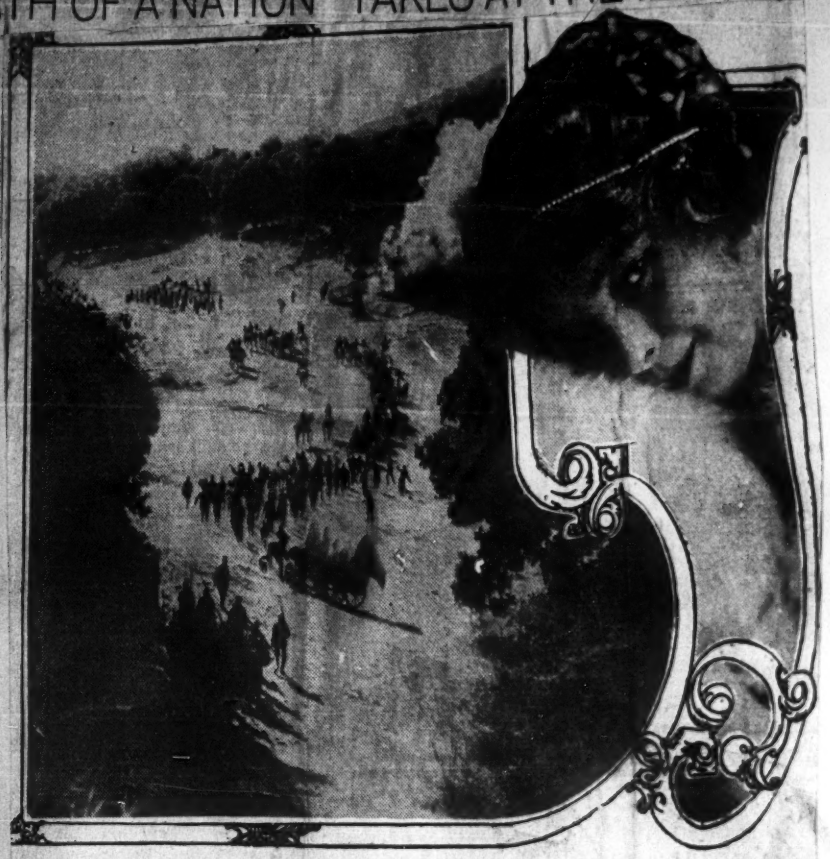
Anticipating Judge Cooper's refusal to set aside his temporary injunction, a hearing has been arranged tentatively in the Appellate Court for next Monday. The city will ask the dissolution of the restraining order to-day or to-morrow.

When the censors were told to view "The Birth of a Nation" they were instructed to confine their report to a technically written synopsis similar to that which would be prepared by any analyst of the drama or any scene writer. Reker contended that certain scenes were so biased against the negro race that a mere presentation of the synopsis would convince Judge Cooper that it was dangerous to public welfare to permit the film to continue.

Reker prepared a resume of the censors' report, but reserved the body of the report as the surprise which he intended to spring in court as the basis of his arguments. When compared with the original report of the censors, however, it was found that Reker's "resume" was in fact an expression of his own opinion and did not contain the original phrasing of the synopsis which was submitted to Second Deputy Superintendent of Police Funkhouser. Mr. Reker then attached his "resume" to the original report and the entire document will be submitted to the court signed by the censor board.

CHICAGO (Ill.) AMERICAN
JUNE 8, 1915

"BIRTH OF A NATION" TAKES AT THE ILLINOIS;



Sherman's March to the Sea, one of the many big scenes in the Griffith masterpiece, and Lillian Gish, who plays Elsie Stoneman in the "Birth of a Nati

CHICAGO (Ill.) TRIBUNE
JUNE 9, 1915

"Our country! In her intercourse with foreign nations may she always be in the right; but our country, right or wrong."
Stephen Decatur.

THE IRRATIONAL CENSOR.

The question of censorship raised by the photo play "The Birth of a Nation" has revealed as much official muddleheadedness as any one could reasonably expect to be disclosed. Mayor Thompson is quoted as saying:

"Some of my friends who have seen it say that it ought not to be shown. There are several objectionable scenes. I understand that the assassination of President Lincoln is shown. I cannot understand how any one can approve of that sort of a picture under any circumstances. Anything of that kind simply breeds crime."

We have conceded that this photo play presents an intricate question and one which might govern public policy, but Mayor Thompson makes it apparent how blunderingly officialdom will approach and handle a delicate problem.

The fact that the assassination of Abraham Lincoln is represented with great effectiveness does not constitute a valid reason for forbidding the showing of the film. The emotion produced in the spectator who sees the acting of this tremendous piece of national tragedy is in kind, if of smaller force, that which filled Ford's theater when the crime was committed. It is poignant, but to say that the sobered folk who yield to it have been under a crime breeding influence is to take a wild flight into the extravagances of unreason.

The question raised by "The Birth of a Nation" is simply and utterly one of public policy, to be determined either upon fact or upon the most intelligent presumption as to what would be found to be the facts. If the community were as intelligent as such a community ought to be, censorship would be an intolerable outrage upon it.

Intelligence does not need censorship. The greater the insistence upon censorship the greater the denial that the community has intelligence. We know that if moving pictures accessible to the immature, unreasoning, impressionable parts of the city portrayed the success of criminal acts, revealing their perpetrators in enjoyment of life easily made pleasurable, there would be an incentive to weak minds, and the public might suffer the consequences. The matter is one of public policy, and censorship, although in itself dangerous and abhorrent, is accepted as a necessary compromise.

But the question is always one of fact, and censorship, being in itself a denial of intelligence, or an acceptance of the fact that ignorance is impressionable, frequently proves that it itself is unintelligent.

The assassination of Abraham Lincoln, in whatever form it is brought to the attention, causes a reaction of profound horror and sympathy and of regret. It was a great and consequential fact in our national history. It meant immeasurable woe to the south. Few tragedies in history have had such appealing circumstance and such great consequences. And to contend that a representation of it "breeds crime" merely shows to what extremes of unreason censorship can and will go.

CHICAGO (Ill.) HERALD
JUNE 9, 1915

CENSORS FIND AGAINST 'THE BIRTH OF A NATION'

Report to Mayor Thompson That the Black-and-White Episodes Offend.

COURT FIGHT TO GO ON

An adverse report on the photoplay "The Birth of a Nation" was made by four members of the municipal censorship board yesterday. They saw the first exhibition at the Illinois Theater Saturday evening and again yesterday afternoon.

The report will be used by the city's lawyers when they appeal to Judge Cooper in the Superior Court tomorrow to set aside his injunction restraining the city authorities from interfering with the production.

THE MAYOR IN OBJECTION.

Mayor Thompson criticised the motion picture again yesterday.

"Some of my friends who have seen it say it ought not to be shown," he said. "There are several objectionable scenes. I understand that the assassination of President Lincoln is shown. I cannot understand how anyone can approve that sort of a picture under any circumstances. Anything of that kind simply breeds crime."

The "movie" censors say in part:

"No clear-thinking, level-headed man or woman viewing the film 'The Birth of a Nation,' based on Thomas Dixon's book, 'The Clansman,' can help but be impressed with the thought that the negro is shown to be a firm believer in miscegenation, or intermarriage between whites and blacks.

PRINCIPAL OBJECTIONS STATED.

"From Gus the Renegade, in pursuit of little Flora Cameron, the pet sister of the 'little colonel,' to Silas Lynch, the protege of the Hon. Austin Stoneman, the great radical leader of the house, the desire uppermost in their minds is to mate with a white woman.

"The glances and leers of Gus the Renegade, Lynch, the educated protege, or the negro legislators who helped to pass the intermarriage bill were different from the flashes of love and honorable passion of the two white men. The scenes at the meeting place where Lynch and Stoneman are present, banners with the inscription, 'Equal Rights, Equal Marriage,' also lead one to the forced belief that this is the main part of the plot in this [illegible] picture."

Kenesaw Landis 9.15
Chicago Jd.

CHICAGO (Ill.) JOURNAL
JUNE 10, 1916

PHOTOPLAY APPEAL DELAYED

City Attorneys Must Submit Bill of Exceptions to Movie Attorneys

The taking of an appeal on Judge Cooper's injunction restraining the city from interfering with the production of the motion-picture drama, "The Birth of a Nation," met with further delay in court today. Counsel representing the city appeared before Judge Cooper with a bill of exceptions and the judge ordered that the bill be submitted to attorneys for the other side for approval.

The extent of the delay will depend on the time it takes for the corporation counsel and Burkhalter and Gressberg, attorneys for the producers of the photo play, which is being shown at the Illinois theater, to come to an agreement over the bill of exceptions.

The City of Chicago has served notice on the attorneys for John McCarthy that they will appear before Judge William Fuinmore Cooper this morning at 10 o'clock to file a bill of exceptions to the injunction granted permitting the showing of "The Birth of a Nation" in order to take the case to the Appellate Court. They will ask that they be allowed to present additional affidavits. The play in question is being shown at the Illinois Theater.

CHICAGO (Ill.) AMERICAN
JUNE 10, 1916

"Birth of Nation" Appeal Is Up To-Day

The city's lawyers will appear before Judge Cooper this morning with a bill of exceptions in the "Birth of a Nation" film case, so that they may take it to the Appellate Court immediately. They will not try to have the temporary injunction, secured by Burkhalter & Gressberg as attorneys for John McCarthy, owner of the [illegible] rights in [illegible] set aside, but will appeal directly to the higher court.

CHICAGO (Ill.) EXAMINER
JUNE 11, 1915

"Birth of a Nation" Decision Out To-Day

The Appellate Court to-day will pass on the injunction suit brought by the owners of the photoplay "The Birth of a Nation" to restain the city authorities from interferring with its production. A temporary injunction has been issued and the city authorities are fighting it. Superior Court Judge Cooper yesterday allowed the matter to go to the Appellate Court.

VARIETY (New York City)
JUN 11 1915

"NATION" OPENS IN CHICAGO.

Chicago, June 9.

"The Birth of a Nation" was shown for the first time here Saturday night at the Illinois theatre. Through injunction proceedings in the Circuit court, the court ruled early Saturday the picture could be exhibited pending final decision.

The picture drew well at the opening but Sunday was the first scorching day of the summer and the Illinois suffered along with the other downtown theatres. Monday bigger business was reported with more favorable weather.

Herald, June 10 Chicago

Judge Cooper in the Superior Court yesterday allowed an appeal to be taken to the Appellate Court on his injunction, restraining the city authorities from interfering with the production of the photo-play "The Birth of a Nation."

VARIETY (New York City)
JUN 11 1915

D. W. Griffith, who obtained a permit from the outgoing Harrison administration in Chicago to show "The Birth of a Nation" at the Illinois, only to have it withdrawn by the new Mayor, Thompson, had the open support of every newspaper in Chicago in his efforts, first, to induce Thompson to reconsider the embargo, and then to obtain an injunction against the city's interfering. Chicago is not much of a negro town, even in close political scrapes; and there has been a general feeling that Griffith was treated unfairly when Thompson withdrew the permit at the request of half a dozen "representative" blacks, who held that the showing of the big film would "create race-hatred." The Tribune led the fight for Griffith's right to show the picture. Judge Cooper granted the injunction at 11 o'clock last Saturday morning—just in time to permit George Bowles, who is looking after the publicity for Griffith, to slip a half-page "To-night's the Night" ad into the later runs of the four afternoon papers. But it was the first June Saturday, divine as to weather, and half the town was in the country before the ad was seen. The first show, Saturday night, was given to half a house, most of it in on passes; but those present went wild with delight over the picture. The fate of "The Birth of a Nation" in Chicago depends on how the town will take the idea of paying $2 for a picture.

MOTION PICTURE WORLD (N. Y. City)
June 12, 1915
Chicago

I omitted to state in my last letter that a race film bill introduced by Representative Jackson, one of the two colored Republican members of the House at Springfield, hailing from Chicago, was passed by a vote of 111 to 2. "The Nigger" and "The Birth of a Nation" are barred from exhibition in Illinois by this bill. The measure prohibits the exhibition of any film that shows a lynching, or unlawful hanging, and is based on the theory that the presentation of such pictures tends to race hatred and rioting.

CHICAGO (Ill.) JOURNAL
JUNE 12, 1915

At the Film Shows

"The Birth of a Nation," greatest of the motion pictures, an illustrated history of the civil war and reconstruction periods, employing thousands of players in scenes intimate and battles spectacular, runs on at the Illinois. An orchestra plays specially composed music that effectively emphasizes and points the pictorial narrative.

The Colonial begins next week a summer season of feature pictures. A filming of Eugene Walter's play, "Fine Feathers," with Janet Beecher in it, and a variety of news and comedy pictures will be shown. An orchestra will play.

The Studebaker will keep on view Dr. George A. Dorsey's varied and interesting motion picture of life in China, which shows, among many other things, the traveler's experience on a journey up the Yangste Kiang river. Pictures of India will be shown week after next.

CHICAGO (Ill.) MOTOGRAPHY
June 12, 1915

Terriss Aims High

Tom Terriss, who has been engaged in making feature photoplays on the island of Jamaica, West Indies, for the past two months, has thrown his hat into the ring and is out with the declaration that he is soon to return to the States with the explicit purpose of producing a feature which, in size and splendor, will equal, if not surpass, D. W. Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation," which has been enjoying such phenomenal success in New York City.

The scenario for the big picture has already been prepared and is in such shape that the production can be begun immediately upon Mr. Terriss' return to the United States.

LAUGHS IN THE "BIRTH OF A NATION"

Lovesick Soldier Makes Audience Smile; China Reel Starts Second Week.

ILLINOIS.

A great deal of film comedy is horse-play, but David W. Griffith in "The Birth of a Nation" at the Illinois Theater proves that quiet, refined comedy is a big laugh-maker and pleases people better than the old-style crude methods.

One of the best laughs in "The Birth of a Nation" is the love-sick sentry in the hospital scene gazing at Elsie Stoneman. This particular bit is of the "sure fire" order, for never does an audience miss the rapt devotion of the sentinel and the haughty expression of the young lady rebuking him with a million-miles-away look.

Paul Le Blanc is the name of the young actor who has made the unexpected hit in the part. He is a New Orleans Creole by birth and played comedy roles with Mme. Bernhardt before going out to Los Angeles, where Mr. Griffith discovered him. The costuming of the young soldier is wonderfully accurate to the period of 1864. Some of the recent Civil war portraits in the magazines and newspapers are almost doubtlets of this sentry figure, showing what care Griffith has used in reproducing the Civil war type.

Miss Lillian Gish wears her costumes of Civil war and Reconstruction times that are heirlooms in her family. Through Griffith's skill all the actors in the production are made to appear as if to the manner born and not awkwardly moving about in habiliments to which they are unaccustomed.

CHICAGO (Ill.) MOTOGRAPHY
6-12-15

Incidentally, we're seriously thinking of turning this column over to Paul Woodruff, who is pulling wheeze after wheeze in his editorial headings. Last week you noticed he referred to "The Birth of a Nation's Rebellion Against Censorship," and this week we lamp by the advance proofs he is going to announce "Censorship Succumbs to the Ordeal."

The Bellevard-Ann, Ohio. 6-12-15

GRIFFITH WINS IN CHICAGO HANDILY BIRTH OF A NATION OPENED JUNE 5

Famous Producer Secures an Injunction Against

Mayor, Chief of Police and City of Chicago

In the Court of Judge William Fennimore Cooper

Chicago, June 6.—D. W. Griffith, the producer of The Birth of a Nation, succeeded yesterday afternoon in securing an injunction from Judge Wm. Fennimore Cooper restraining the Mayor, Chief of Police and city of Chicago from interfering with the production of his photoplay. The decision was broad and establishes a precedent for pictures, being the first of the kind ever given in Chicago, paralleling that rendered in New York last week on The Ordeal by Supreme Court Justice Whitaker. Judge Cooper's decision was as follows:

JUDGE COOPER'S DECISION

"The city contends against the issuance of the injunction on three grounds—that the permit to exhibit the photoplay in question was not lawfully issued; that the permit issued was revoked and that the photoplay, if presented, will engender race animosity against the negro citizens of our community.

"This last ground is based purely on assumption. To find that this is a good objection to the allowing of the injunction this court will have to assume that our white citizens will not know or appreciate the fact that the days represented in the play were nearly in the first years of the last half century.

"This court will have to assume that they who will witness the play will be so stupid that they will be unable to comprehend that the people represented on the canvas were of two or three generations ago, and that they do not and will not appreciate the fact that in the succeeding time the negro race has advanced almost immeasurably.

"In our own great community the fact is recognized by all well-informed citizens that we have in the various professions and higher lines of business members of that race who are ministers, dentists, lawyers, physicians, and business men of fine ability and business character, who enjoy the respect and confidence of our community.

"This court is satisfied from the evidence that in this photoplay the good black man and the bad white man are equally prominent figures in the play. Every night in every fair-sized community in this broad land where the stage instructs or entertains each and every play has its good characters and its bad characters portrayed, both of which are essential to a play in the rounding out of the moral of the play, and without which moral a play is of no educational value.

"Every night in every theater there is produced the debased type of the white race of different nationalities, and if representative groups of the various nationalities so presented became acutely sensitive that such individual portrayal would cause them to suffer race hatred of their race, and all the plays in which a villain had played were stopped on account, the theater as an educator and entertainer of the people would become a misery of the past, and there would be nothing to fill its place for the education and enjoyment of our people.

"No one race or nationality has greater right under the law than any other has. Any race or nationality so offended can best give the lie to the bad characters so presented by continuing to conduct themselves as law-abiding citizens who do not expect greater rights from the law than it allows all other men or nationalities.

"If white men appeal to the courts to restrain the production of a play because one of its characters portrayed that of a dissolute white man whose acting would bring race hatred against the nation of which his stage character assumed, their plea would be denied for want of law to support the same, and the law should be and is the same for black and white alike.

"It is the duty of the courts to protect the individual in the enjoyment of his right of property. The complainant in this case is the owner or lessee of the play called The Birth of a Nation. Under the ordinances of our city, if one who desires to present a photoplay or moving picture complies with the law and obtains a license honestly and in good faith, and the play has been censored by the proper authorities of the city, and he has paid his money for a fee, from that time on the owner of the play is vested with an individual property right which neither the city of Chicago, nor any official, be he mayor, general superintendent of police, or be he judge, can arbitrarily deprive him of, without giving him his hearing or day in court.

"The evidence in this case satisfies the court that this play was censored by the Mayor's private secretary and by Mrs. Harrison, the wife of the former Mayor of Chicago. Major Funkhouser admits that he received orders from the Mayor's office to issue a permit for the production of this photoplay, and gave directions to that effect. A permit was issued first by James Gleason, general superintendent of police, and later on the present general superintendent of police, Charles C. Healey, issued another permit.

"I am obliged to find under the law and the evidence in this case that the complainant is entitled to the relief prayed for, and I will enter an injunction restraining the Mayor, the Chief of police and the city of Chicago from interfering with the production of the play."

Within a few hours after the injunction was granted the Illinois Theater, gaily bedecked with flags and bunting, was crowded with spectators witnessing the first public performance in this city. Major Funkhouser is said to have had four investigators on hand to watch the play, with instructions to takes notes of anything that might be of help in Judge Cooper's Court on Tuesday, should the city decide to make an attempt to get the injunction vacated.

If any disapproval of The Birth of a Nation was felt during the showing of the pictures it was not manifested by any outward sign, while on the other hand many scenes were enthusiastically cheered. During an intermission Mr. Griffith came before the curtain and made a brief address, telling how gratified he and his colleagues were over the victory won in court, and thanked Judge Cooper for permitting the play to be produced.

D. W. GRIFFITH

Mr. Griffith, producer of The Birth of a Nation, has succeeded in getting a showing of his film in Chicago.

News, 6-12-15 Chicago Ill.

"BIRTH OF A NATION"

LILLIAN GISH AND A SENTRY, IN A SCENE FROM DAVID W. GRIFFITH'S SCREEN MASTERPIECE APPEARING AT THE ILLINOIS THEATER.

At the Illinois theater "The Birth of a Nation" has been playing to capacity audiences since the opening performance last Saturday. Chicago has fallen in line with other cities where this remarkable result of the camera is being shown and is supporting it at the usual price paid for high class dramatic productions, $2. David W. Griffith has achieved dramatic action and spectacular effects that are a revelation in detail. Henry B. Walthall, Lillian Gish, Mae Marsh and Spottiswoode Aitken [illegible]

The Times-Leader Kansas City, Mo. 6-12-15 about Chicago

The Birth of a Nation, David W. Griffith's gigantic masterpiece, began an indefinite engagement at the Illinois theatre this week at $2.00 top.

CHICAGO (Ill.) POST
JUNE 13, 1915

It [illegible] "The Birth of a Nation," David Griffith's fam[illegible]tre-reel spectacular drama founded on "The Clansman," will be shown at this theater. The remarkable run this picture enjoyed in New York is being repeated in Chicago, and the advance sale of seats is said to exceed any attraction ever before shown at this theater.

CHICAGO (Ill.) TRIBUNE
JUNE 13, 1915

"The Birth of a Nation" a Great Spectacle.

By Percy Hammond.

MR. DAVID W. GRIFFITH, the producer of the play at the Illinois, did me the honor last week to come to me to tell him, frankly, what I thought of "The Birth of a Nation" as a work of dramatic art. I say that he did me an honor by this request, because he is indubitably a great man in his way. Mr. Griffith is an authority on the beat of the human heart; he feels to an atom what retards and what accelerates the rythm of that susceptible organ. Moreover, he is a master of the means by which its contractions and dilatations in the theater are accomplished. He calculates with the uncanny intuition of a genius the cryptic relation of the eye to the right ventricle; he knows color and sound and motion to their ultimate detail, and he has the nerve and the vision to assemble them in a vast spectacle which is the peer (pictorially) of any historical pageant that I have ever seen, and I have seen them all.

I suspect, however, that "The Birth of a Nation" would be more admirable as drama were it less partial as propaganda. Mr. Griffith, the son of a confederate brigadier, explicably sees the Lost Cause as a hallowed one, with its followers suffering not ignobly the injustice and cruelty which are the prime attributes of most of their antagonists in the play.

The Ku Klux, about the holiness of whose exploits historians, President Wilson among them, express some doubt, are pictured as exalted seraphim, members of a righteous and indignant hierarchy who did no wrong. Sherman's army, on the other hand, is visualized as a drunken mob, addicted to murder and rapine, pillaging a sweet and lovely countryside. The caption to this episode infers a sneer at the "great conqueror," who marches to the sea while southern women and children, subtly brought into contrast, are hungry and in tears. Lee is to Grant as Hyperion to a wharf rat; and Thaddeus Stevens, at his worst an honest bigot, is presented as an evil and carnal miscegenist with a mulatto sweetheart. Since "The Birth of a Nation" purports to be a great historical document, it should include a picture or two of Lee's invasion of Pennsylvania, for instance, and the burning of Thaddeus Stevens' home and iron mill in Chambersburg.

Mr. Griffith was no doubt impelled to these seemingly unfair extravagances by the Rev. Mr. Dixon, his collaborator, upon whose story, "The Clansman," "The Birth of a Nation" is founded. I believe Mr. Dixon to be sincere in his abhorrence of the negro; he loathes the race and he is insistent in his aversion to the so-called Afro-American. With that emotion I have nothing to do, but I believe that were his method to be less that of a charlatan, if he were not so much a bad loser, if his squawks were less like those of a lellow dog, his mission would be more effectively accomplished. A propagandist who shows the cloven hoof so obviously as does Mr. Dixon in all his works is more or less ineffective. Mr. Griffith disavows him, but he is there just the same, eager, florid, tawdry, tricky, the apotheosis of unreconstruction, a sinister element throughout the story of "The Birth of a Nation."

Perhaps when I say "ineffective" I am wrong. The other night at the Illinois the crowd cheered the Stars and Bars, and it was not moved by the Stars and Stripes. It applauded "Dixie" and greeted "Marching Through Georgia" with silence. I confess the prejudice of one whose father and grandfather marched with Sherman to the sea, and whose best boyhood friend was the statesman who drafted the fourteenth amendment. But I do not believe that in the attitude of the audiences of "The Birth of a Nation" there is much incentive to fighting for this indifferent republic in case the present impasse should develop into war.

That off my mind, I may tell Mr. Griffith what I think of him as an artist. Photographically and as a pag-ant master he is a marvel, but as a dramatist he is expedient rather than good. The absurd coincidences of the play are juvenile, maudlin, and incredible. You cannot imagine Thaddeus Stevens, the sardonic and fanatic negro lover, going to visit the fire eating South Carolina Camerons at a time when the south's wounds were the sorest. And that expedition is the heart of the play. The whole thing is grotesque, insolent, and absolutely barren of plausibility. In the words of a shrewd director of the cinemas, "we treat our audiences like babes."

To me the most artistic thing in "The Birth of a Nation" is that real and photographic event of the assassination of Lincoln. There is a wonder work of action and stage management—with its irresistible alternation of scenes—the audience, the play, the president's box, the assassin, the confusion, everything as it should be. And the eerie Ku Klux incidents, with a thousand shrouded knights, night riding to vengeance, and the Wagnerian trumpet call of the Valkyries as they congregate to lynch the ravaging negroes. That trumpet call is an opulent device of sound applied to the silent drama. No spoken play can duplicate its thrilling cadences. That moment when the Ku Klux ride against a red horizon, swift, with uplifted emblems of vengeance, is a fine spectacular interval, and in it you forgive Mr. Griffith for other partisan events in his panorama. It is a play to see, but to reflect upon, with the chill knowledge that it is not quite square. I advise all my readers to attend it, but at the end, when the band plays "The Star Spangled Banner," to arise dubiously, wondering whether after all the Mason and Dixon line was worth what it cost.

CHICAGO (Ill.) POST
JUNE 13, 1915

Realism in "The Birth of a Nation"

Above Is a Corner of the Ten Square Mile Battlefield Before Petersburg Shown in "The Birth of a Nation" at the Illinois Theater.

At the Left, Lillian Gish, Dainty Film Star of "The Birth of a Nation," Who Is Winning Public Approval.

CHICAGO (Ill.) AMERICAN
JUNE 15, 1915

WORTH WHILE FILMS ON VIEW

"The Birth of a Nation" still holds first place as a successful motion picture spectacle at the Illinois Theater.

"Have you seen 'The Birth of a Nation?' It's great. Don't miss it!" That's the advice of almost every person who has already made a pilgrimage to the wonderful Griffith work of art. That's the secret of the large box office receipts which are reported.

JUNE 15, 1915
SPRINGFIELD (Ill.) RECORD

THE AMERICAN people do not like censors.

Sometimes they tolerate them as a novelty, but eventually they get tired of them.

Even Anthony Comstock, who has become a national institution, is now to be relegated to private life.

Comstock started his career as a censor away back in 1876. He insisted on all art being dressed up in skirts. He wormed his way into a job as post-office inspector and kept his eyes open for little words or sentences that his prudery proscribed.

A work on medicine or a treatise on social vice and methods of eradicating it was sure to fall under his ban if it discussed certain truths in a straightforward way.

"Comstockery" will be defined in the dictionary some day as a word that means over-nicety; squeamishness; prudery.

At last the post-office department has enough of Comstock. He is to be discharged as an inspector. The present postmaster general probably lacks a sense of humor and couldn't see the joke in keeping this super-pure man.

But Comstock has no monopoly on Comstockery.

Every now and then one learns that some moving picture censorship board has barred a film which ordinary folks consider all right, but which doesn't meet the lady-like and gentleman-like approval of the members of the board.

"The Birth of a Nation," a film dealing with the negro problem in the south, is one of the pictures which has been thus unfortunate. The courts have come to its rescue, however, and it is to be shown in spite of the censors.

The attempt to force a moving picture censorship board on the people of this state is progressing in the general assembly.

The bill has passed one house. Unless the people show strong disfavor at once, Illinois is likely to have an affliction of moving picture Comstockery.

The public is its best censor, and it can be trusted. No other is needed.

BOSTON TRAVELE

CHICAGO F
RACE

CHICAGO, June planned to whether Chicagoans
drama based on Birth of a Na
of 40 Negro minist
it will or will not
It is up to the Ne
the mayor, whether
shall see the drama.

CHICAGO (Ill.) TRI
JUNE

COLORED PAST
PASS ON 'BIRT

Mayor Suggests
Ministers See F
by Their Verdic

Mayor Thompson h
posal to the owners Nation," the moving
on "The Clansman."
"I suggested to th
thirty or forty colo
said yesterday, "and the picture. The onl in my mind is whethe prejudice. If the co it won't I have no o
ture being shown."
The owners of the city. No one could be they might accept th

CHICAGO (Ill.)
JU

COLORED C
MAY PASS

Mayor Thompso
gestion to Ma
Birth of

THEIR FINDI

A board of censo ored ministers, m play "The Birth o purpose of aidin deciding whether exhibited in Chica
The mayor revo exhibition a week against it had be sentatives of the mit for the show
the last days of f son's administrati been publicly pres
ASK FOR PE
Managers of the
it on exhibi
and they c terday, urging ermit.
"I suggested
mayor last night exhibit assert ernment.
The
by bure judiciary stimulat which n observe stre

DUNKIRK (N. Y
JU about

UP TO CO RED

Chicago, Jun today planned mooted quested tians should see t ed on "The Clans of a Nation." He ty colored minister
it will or will not
It is up to the ne
the mayor, whether shall see the drama

CHICAGO (Ill.) DAILY NEWS
JUNE 17, 1915

A MOTION PICTURE EDI

The critics recently have been most generous with their praise of the most wonderful film that has yet been produced, "The Birth of a Nation." For the first time the movies had a fair presentation of historical facts.

My grandfather, Judge Richard O. L. Moncure of the Supreme court of Virginia, had an estate upon which the several troops were quartered during the civil war. The relatives who still occupy the old homestead, Glencairne, near Fredericksburg, tell of horrors during the "carpet bag" period which were far worse than the miseries of war time.

There was much that was charming and picturesque about conditions in the old south even for the negro. It is a splendid thing to have a union now, a great united people, but it is well to look back upon scenes of history that will give to the north the southern view and help to weld the friendship. And it is well to ask ourselves if we are consistent in the claim that the north has solved the racial equality problem. Has it? Theory is so delightful and fact so hard and cold.

Children ought to be allowed to see "The Birth of a Nation." The lessons it teaches are certainly better than the ideas they absorb about life in the nonsensical, blood and thunder, hair raising movies they are allowed to witness. This is an excellent way to teach history through pictures.

MARY MONCURE PARKER.

CHICAGO (Ill.) POST
JUNE 18, 1915

While "The Birth of A Nation" Continues.

Because of the publication of stories to the effect that the Jackson bill has passed the second reading in the senate at Springfield, even tho it has been amended and "censored" materially, the crowds at the Illinois Theater have been increasing. Much comment is heard in the lobby about this bill, which the theatergoers seem to realize is aimed at Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation." Fear that something may be done to stop the showing of this masterpiece in Chicago seems to be the cause of the rush to see the production.

Perhaps one of the most exciting moments during the viewing of Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation" at the Illinois Theater is when the little sister of the "Little Colonel" jumps to her death from the cliff to escape the pursuing negro. "Faked," snaps the unbeliever in the dale seat. "Faked, nothing!" sneers the man behind. "How could that be faked and appear so real?" "But how could a girl do that and live for future film death?" scoffs the unbeliever. A reporter asked George Bowles. "Well, no dummy was used," smiled G. B. as he walked away. Mr. Bowles is the press agent, but he knows enough not to tell all that he knows.

CHICAGO (Ill.) EXAMINER
JUNE 18, 1915

Movie Censors Take Rights of Parents

The movie censors have taken from fathers and mothers the right to say what pictures their sons and daughters shall see, and every night there is an outpouring of wrath in the lobby of the Illinois Theater, where "The Birth of a Nation" is shown. The rule is that "no person under twenty-one years of age" may see the pictures. One man brought his wife and daughter to see it and was enraged when the young lady was barred.

JUNE 19, 1915
CHICAGO (Ill.) EXAMINER

BY JAMES WARREN CURRIE.

The reasons for the unusual activity and frequent trips across country of David Mark Griffith and H. E. Aitken, producer and financier of "The Birth of a Nation," was disclosed yesterday [redacted] from the New York offices of Aitken that a new group of Wall street forces are descending on the moving picture industry.

Their plan of campaign is a combination of motion picture productions to be placed in competition with the principal theaters of the country.

H. E. Aitken is the president of the company and he has amalgamated the services of Griffith, Thomas H. Ince and Mack Sennett of Keystone fame. These directors will turn out weekly programs in a chain of theaters where the two dollar scale of prices will prevail.

The company is capitalized at $1,000,000 and includes the men mentioned together with some Wall street interests and the Western Import Company of London.

CABLE ADDRESS CLIPBURO
CLIPPING FROM Post
Chicago Ill
6-19-15

"Birth of a Nation" Should Be Shown The Children

FF

In school we were taught that an exception was necessary to prove a rule.

A rule has been made by a few Chicagoans for the many local playgoers, but as yet there has been no exception to prove it.

And that rule is the "none-under-21-admitted" clause, which has been used and abused ever since it was put into effect.

Several times since the screaming banners barring minors have been stretched across theater fronts there have been charges that certain managers have used this device to trick the unwary into picture houses. The truth of the accusation is not the point in question. Perhaps the rule has been abused; perhaps the rule in many cases is just.

But the supposition has been that such a rule was necessary only when so-called immoral plays have been screened and exhibited.

James Griffith's masterpiece, "The Birth of a Nation," to town. Much discussion, much opposition, much legislation and legal controversy. Result, an order prohibiting persons under 21 from seeing this historical, much-debated war drama.

It has been agreed that the play is not immoral. Teachers have advised children to have their parents take them to see this record from history. Parents having seen it gave [redacted] their children see it. Men and women of education and position in Chicago have attempted to force the management to permit their sons and daughters to see the production. They have seen it in New York and their friends and their friends' children have seen it.

Why not in Chicago?

That can't understand. But the management can and must suffer to remain under the cloud of a ban that raises a question as to the theme of the play.

There is the rule.

And there is no exception to prove it by.

CHICAGO (Ill.) JOURNAL
JUNE 19, 1915

At the Film Shows

"The Birth of a Nation," greatest of the motion pictures, [redacted] history of the civil war and reconstruction periods, employing thousands of players in scenes intimate and battles spectacular, runs on at the Illinois. An orchestra plays specially composed music that effectively emphasizes and points the pictorial narrative.

Herald June 19, 1915
Chicago Ill

21

ILLINOIS—"The Birth of a Nation," D. W. Griffith's epoch-making masterpiece of the civil war and the crisis that followed, enters another prosperous week at the Illinois Theater. Crowded houses every afternoon and evening take a course in American history as vividly depicted on the screen, which makes Abraham Lincoln, Grant, Sheridan, Sewell and other great figures of the '60s real personalities to this generation. Hoop-skirted romance threads through the powerful episodes and softens the thrilling sensations of grim war and national disaster.

CLIPPING FROM Tribune
Chicago Ill
6-19-15

Dangerous Business

FF

Advertising that says the truth but in such fine print that the chance passer-by don't get it lays itself fairly open to the accusation "deceptive," for which the courts provide relief, so it is a dangerous indulgence.

The Essanay company and Chaplin have been long suffering victims of this method of attracting trade by inducing the idea of some value to be received which doesn't happen to be present, and now "The Birth of a Nation" is the latest victim.

One Madison street all night picture theater of the ten cent variety traded on the credulity of its public by announcing first through newspaper ads, which were barred out when the misstatement was caught, and then by billboard posters, in small letters under the shadow of a large capitalization of "The Birth of Our Nation" its program, so that the hasty seer might easily rush in under the impression that he was about to observe the big twelve reel spectacle.

For this latter matter court pressure was applied and the poster went down in favor of a "No Children Admitted" sign.

In the last analysis it's the advertiser himself who gets most hurt, for there's nobody so unhappy as the public bunkoed. Once done, he's done for good.

CHICAGO (Ill.) AMERICAN
JUNE 19, 1915

The Be[redacted]

ILLINOIS.

FF

The no-person-under-twenty-one-admitted rule that has to be inforced at the Illinois Theater during the run of Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation" is causing annoyance to the management and to "innocent victims." Every night about a score of young persons are stopped before they get to the box office. A gentleman and his wife and daughter drove up to the theater in a motor car. They had their tickets. As they were about to pass in they were stopped and told that the girl could not see "The Birth of a Nation." Indignant, the man, who had seen the film drama in New York, exclaimed:

"Nonsense! There's nothing immoral about the play. That rule applies only to immoral pictures. I've seen this before and I want my daughter to see it. I believe I'm competent to decide what she should see."

But he had to be turned away. Another man was arguing that his small boy should see the Griffith masterpiece when his offspring, in an effort to clinch the argument, cried heatedly:

"Why, my schoolteacher told us we should see 'The Birth of a Nation.'"

Another little fellow refused to be bought off with a two-dollar bill offered by his father, sobbing, as he was led away:

"You promised to show me the battles, daddy."

But the city says no persons under twenty-one, and the theater management must comply with the rule.

CHICAGO (Ill.) TRIBUNE
JUNE 23, 1915

FLICKERINGS from FILM LAND
By KITTY KELLY

LILLIAN GISH in "THE BIRTH OF A NATION"

One of the most telling bits in all the 12,000 feet of "The Birth of a Nation" is this quaint little bit of futile flirtation of the guard with the girl. In the midst of war's alarums and love's disasters, it never fails to stir the great audiences to laughter. It is simply and exquisitely done, as telling a human touch as occurs anywhere in the picture's length.

CHICAGO (Ill.) AMERICAN
JUNE 22, 1915

AT THE BEST PICTURE SHOWS

No "Follies" show ever drew more consistently big houses to the Illinois than Mr. Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation." The film apparently is good for a run until Fall. The public owes a vote of thanks to Mr. Griffith for his enterprise and daring. It must take nerve to spend $500,000 for a photoplay. That is what the management announces as the amount spent in registering 18,000 people and 3,000 horses in the camera. When the prices were announced for seats —$2, ranging down to 25 cents—"movie" promoters and theater men alike predicted disaster.

A steady stream of humanity by the box office is the answer of the public.

CHICAGO (Ill.) AMERICAN
JUNE 21, 1915

Ad Men to Watch "Birth of a Nation"

Photoplay Magazine will present a special performance of D. W. Griffith's great screen drama, "The Birth of a Nation," to the Advertising Convention's delegates and the wives, mothers and sisters accompanying them. All will be invited guests of the publishers of Photoplay Magazine, who arranged the performance that the advertising men of the whole country might see what has been termed the foremost example of today's motion picture art. The performance will begin at 10 a. m. Wednesday in the Illinois Theater, which regularly houses it, exactly in the manner of the evening representations. Mimic belles and beaux of ante-bellum North and South will chaperon visitors to their places.

CHICAGO (Ill.) POST
JUNE 23, 1915

Films on a Large Scale.

The new film company headed by H. E. Aitken, president of the company which financed "The Birth of a Nation," is now being incorporated with a capital of $1,000,000, backed by powerful interests in Wall street.

The services of David Wark Griffith, Thomas H. Ince and Mack Sennett have been amalgamated by Mr. Aitken with a policy that calls for the production of $2 photoplays. Griffith, Ince and Sennett, who are recognized as three of the few master directors of filmdom, will turn out pictures which will be included in a weekly program in a chain of theaters where the $2 scale will prevail. It is stated that houses have been acquired not only in this country but abroad. Included among them is a theater on Broadway where the films will first be shown.

CHICAGO (Ill.) AMERICAN
JUNE 23, 1915

Admen Delegates See "Birth of a Nation"

A "morning matinee" was attended by more than 1,000 advertising men from all sections of the country at the Illinois Theater to-day. Many "played hookey" from departmental meetings and conferences and viewed "The Birth of a Nation." Every seat was free to accredited advertising men in the city. They were guests of the Photoplay Magazine.

CHICAGO (Ill.) POST
JUNE 23, 1915

1,000 Ad Men Guests At "Birth of a Nation"

A "morning matinee" was attended by more than 1,000 advertising men from all sections of the country at the Illinois Theater this forenoon. From 10 a. m. until noon convention headquarters practically shifted to the Jackson boulevard playhouse and many "played hookey" from departmental meetings and conferences in order to view "The Birth of a Nation." Every seat in the house was free, as all accredited advertising men had been invited as guests of the Photoplay Magazine.

CHICAGO (Ill.) HERALD
JUNE 23, 1915

\+ \+ \+

Delegates to the convention will be the guests of the Photoplay Magazine this morning at a special performance of "The Birth of a Nation" at the Illinois Theater.

It has been announced by the managers of the film drama that the performance would be given "exactly as at the night representations, with an orchestra of fifty and a massed chorus in the vocal excerpts."

Members of the Metropolitan Quartet, singers of plantation melodies, have volunteered their services for the special performance.

JUNE 21, 1915
CHICAGO (Ill.) POST

Special Performance of "The Birth of a Nation" for Ad Men.

Photoplay Magazine will present a special performance of D. W. Griffith's great screen drama, "The Birth of a Nation," to the advertising convention's delegates and their ladies, who will be its invited guests. The publishers of the Photoplay Magazine arranged for this performance in order that the advertising men of the whole country, assembled, might see the foremost concrete example of today's motion-picture art and witness to this picture and in its surroundings and accompaniments the faculties of the photoplay as a dynamo of emotions and as the vehicle for a great dramatic thought.

The Photoplay Magazine performance of "The Birth of a Nation" will begin at 10 a. m. Wednesday next. The picture will be presented in the Illinois Theater, which regularly houses it, exactly in the manner of the evening representations. The orchestra of fifty men will discourse its thrilling incidental music, the choruses will be sung by a large body of trained voices and the mimic belles and beau of the North and South will chaperon the visitors to their

MOTOGRAPHY

WITH WHICH IS INCORPORATED THE NICKELODEON

Vol. XIII CHICAGO, JUNE 19, 1915 No. 25

Chicago Court's Epoch-Making Decision

OTHER IMPORTANT NEWS OF THE WEEK

ONE of the most epoch-making court decisions affecting the film business that has ever been handed down by a judge, was given on Saturday morning, June 5, when Judge Fenimore Cooper in Chicago granted an injunction restraining the city from prohibiting the exhibition of the great Griffith masterpiece, "The Birth of a Nation," at the Illinois theater in Chicago.

The case was hard fought by Mr. Griffith in person and his legal representatives and advisors, and Judge Cooper's decision undoubtedly is a victory not alone for Mr. Griffith and his picture, but for the whole film industry as well, since, following close upon the New York decision of last week on "The Ordeal," it indicates conclusively that a wave of opposition to censorship in every form is spreading throughout the country.

The decision of the Chicago judge not alone permits the showing of "The Birth of a Nation," but strongly rebukes the narrow-minded censors for even thinking of refusing to grant a permit for the picture because a certain race or nationality took offense at that film. Judge Cooper's decision in full is as follows:

The city contends against the issuance of the injunction on three grounds—that the permit to exhibit the photoplay in question was not lawfully issued; that the permit issued was revoked and that the photoplay, if presented, will engender race animosity against the negro citizens of our community.

This last ground is based purely on assumption. To find that this is a good objection to the allowing of the injunction, this court will have to assume that our white citizens will not know or appreciate the fact that the days represented in the play were nearly in the first years of the last half century.

This court will have to assume that they who will witness the play will be so stupid that they will be unable to comprehend that the people represented on the canvas were but two or three generations ago, and that they do not and will not appreciate the fact that in the succeeding time the negro race has advanced almost immeasurably.

The court cannot assume that this will be so, when we know that there is universal recognition of the fact that no race has shown such great general advancement in from two to three generations as the negro race has done.

In our own great community the fact is recognized by well informed citizens that we have in the various professional and higher lines of business members of that race, who are ministers, dentists, lawyers, physicians, and business men of fine ability and business character, who enjoy the respect and confidence of our community.

This court is satisfied from the evidence that in this photoplay the good black man and the bad white man are equally prominent figures in the play. Every night in every well sized community in this broad land where the stage interprets or entertains each and every play has its good characters and its bad characters portrayed, both of which are essential to a play in the rounding out of the moral of the play and without which moral a play is of no educational value.

Every night in every theater there is produced the debasing type of the white race of different nationalities, and if representative groups of the various nationalities so presented became acutely sensitive that such individual portrayal would cause them to suffer race hatred of their race, and all of the plays in which a villain had played were stopped on that account, the theater as an educator and entertainer of the people, would become a memory of the past, and there would be nothing to fill its place for the education and enjoyment of our people.

No one race or nationality has greater right under the law than any other has. Any race or nationality so offended can best give the lie to the bad characters so presented by continuing to conduct themselves as law abiding citizens who do not expect greater rights from the law than it allows all other men or nationalities.

If white men appeal to the courts to restrain the production of a play because one of its characters portrayed that of a dissolute white man whose acting would bring race hatred against the nation which his stage character assumed, their plea would be denied for want of law to support the same, and the law should be and is the same for black and white alike.

It is the duty of the courts to protect the individual in the enjoyment of his right of property. The complainant in this case is the owner or lessee of the play called "The Birth of a Nation." Under the ordinances of our city, if one who desires to present a photoplay or moving picture complies with the law and obtains a license honestly and in good faith, and the play has been censored by the proper authorities of the city, and he has paid his money for a fee, from that time on the owner of the play is vested with an individual property right, which neither the city of Chicago, nor any official, be he mayor, general superintendent of police, or be he judge, can arbitrarily deprive him of, without giving him his hearing or day in court.

The evidence in this case satisfies the court that this play was censored by the mayor's private secretary and by Mrs. Harrison, the wife of the former mayor of Chicago. Major Funkhouser admits that he received orders from the mayor's office to issue a permit for the production of this photoplay, and gave directions to that effect. A permit was issued first by James Gleason, general superintendent of police, and later on the present general superintendent of police, Charles C. Healey, issued another permit.

I am obliged to find under the law and the evidnce in this case that the complainant is entitled to the relief prayed for, and I will enter an injunction restraining the mayor, the chief of police, and the city of Chicago from interfering with the production of the play.

Despite the fact that the Griffith people have won such a sweeping decision it seems clearly evident that the obstreperous city administration is still longing for blood, and the corporation counsel as late as Monday of this week was still seeking columns of publicity in the newspapers in which to bitterly denounce "The Birth of a Nation" as a film that should never see the light of day, predicting that race riots and hatred would follow as a result of its showing, and generally making himself ridiculous in the eyes of the public.

At every performance of "The Birth of a Nation" at the Illinois theater, Mr. Griffith appeared in person on the stage to explain to his patrons the high motives that

Censorship Loses Again

THAT the exhibition of "The Birth of a Nation" might engender race animosity against negro citizens is a contention based purely on assumption. A license or permit to exhibit obtained honestly and in good faith vests the owner with an individual property right, which neither the city nor any official nor judge can arbitrarily deprive him of without a hearing in court. That is the nucleus of Judge William Fenimore Cooper's decision June 5, when he ordered an injunction restraining the mayor, the chief of police, and the city of Chicago from interfering with the production of the play. Thus, in the long story of censorship closes another chapter whose evidence shows the world's sentiment is turning against the censor.

Sincerity, accuracy and justice—these things the world demands of censors. It is a hard order; for the very word censor is arbitrary, arrogant and exacting. That is why it is an un-American institution, and why the world is turning against it.

The history of Chicago censors, especially, has not been a record of broad-mindedness or of "justice tempered with mercy." Always the apparent object of the board has been to find in every scene which offered any theoretical excuse for interference. We have always contended that such censoring power would not stand the test of decency, and now the record is bearing us out.

Our frequent reversals of Chicago's censorial power has not been based on prejudice. Even the present case, full in the eyes of the world and the courts, continues to bear witness to the narrow arbitrariness of those who are delegated to the "regulation" of pictures. For Chicago's argument before the court was that "The Birth of a Nation" libelled the negro race. Observe, then, the sequel to the court's decision:

At the request of two negro institutes a picture entitled "The New Era" was prepared and arranged to run as a postlude to "The Birth of a Nation." This postlude shows the development of the negro race and the important part it is taking in modern civilization. Apparently the censors should have welcomed it—doubly so after they had been enjoined from interfering with the master film. Did they receive it in all sincerity as a solution of their difficulty? They did not. Those powerful and intelligent arbiters of the people's rights refused to allow "The New Era" to be shown, on the ground that it was not a part of "The Birth of a Nation" when a permit was granted for that film. And they refused to issue a separate permit for it. Is that judicial action, or is it small-minded retaliation for defeat? What better evidence can we ask of the quality of our "censors"—those vested with the sacred and responsible duty of protecting the public morals—than that they refuse to do a good act because they resent being caught in a bad one?

One decision against the censors might not mean a great deal. If that were all the testimony we had that the world is awakening to the injustice of censorship, perhaps jubilation were unwise. But when one decision follows another in widely separated cases, when the very newspapers that were themselves violently censorious not long ago now predict the downfall of the whole censor system, there is much hope for the freedom of the picture.

Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation"

Reviewed by Neil G. Caward

CHICAGO obtained its first glimpse of the super-dreadnaught of all feature motion pictures, "The Birth of a Nation," on Saturday night, June 5, when, after a court decision of a sweeping nature, an injunction was granted by a Chicago judge restraining the city from interfering with the production.

Needless to say every man, woman and child who has attended the performance since its opening goes away amazed and awe-struck at the gigantic nature of the production and enthusiastic over its magnitude, fidelity to history and perfect direction.

It is hopeless to even try to compare "The Birth of a Nation" to any of the other feature films that have been shown, as it is so entirely different from all of the others. However, it is generally conceded that up to this time "Cabiria" may be referred to as the world's greatest production, and from the standpoint of stupendous grandeur, the number of supernumeraries handled, and the staging of spectacular battles and mob scenes, "The Birth of a Nation" in every way equals the great Itala production; and as an additional merit, the latter story, on account of its historical nature, is familiar to every school boy of the land; consequently it seems to have an even wider appeal and perhaps, therefore, merits the distinction of itself being called "the world's greatest production."

No review of the Chicago production would be complete without a special mention of the splendid orchestral accompaniment which undoubtedly adds much pleasure to the unreeling of the story. The music is so timed as to be exactly synchronous with the action of the film and weeks must have been spent in rehearsal to produce the perfect result obtained. The audience finds itself in the proper atmosphere immediately upon entering the theater, for the ushers are costumed in the quaint garb of the 60's, the girl ushers being dressed in hoop skirts and frocks of the period of 1863, while the male ushers wear Union and Confederate uniforms.

The story is so well known on account of previous reviews, at the time of its New York showing, together with feature articles that have appeared concerning its production, that it is needless to again describe it, and only necessary to mention the names of such stars as Messrs. Walthall, Aitken, Siegmann, Harron and the Misses Marsh, Gish, Alden and the other notable Mutual-Griffith photoplayers, to let every exhibitor know it is in every respect an all-star production.

CHICAGO (Ill.) MOTOGRAPHY

1917 Will Stay in Boston

A notable victory was won in Boston, Mass., on Wednesday, June 2, by "The Birth of a Nation" management that has been presenting the play at the Tremont theater in spite of the determined opposition of a group of white and colored agitators. The opponents of the play jammed through the legislature the previous week the so-called "Three-Men" censor bill, which provided that any play could be stopped without any reason being assigned and simply at the pleasure of two out of the three following officials: The mayor, the chief justice of the municipal court, and the police commissioner. The bill was promptly signed by Governor Walsh and the opponents joyfully looked forward to the end they had aimed at, namely, the driving of the Griffith spectacle out of Boston.

Mayor Curley, Chief Justice Bolster and Police Commissioner Stephen O'Meara decided to see for themselves the object of the attacks. They visited "The Birth of a Nation" at different times individually. Then on Wednesday they gave a hearing to the counsel for the negroes and the counsel for the theater. John F. Cusick, the sole theatrical counsel, was faced by former United States Assistant Attorney-General William H. Lewis and Butler R. Wilson, colored lawyers, and J. Mott Hallowell, representing the white protestants. The hearing lasted two hours, after which the board of censors went into executive session.

After a short session, Mayor Curley, in behalf of the board, issued a statement: "Having witnessed the performance, heard counsel and having given full consideration to the entire subject, we have decided that the license of the theater should not be revoked or suspended."

CHICAGO LETTER

BY JAS. S. McQUADE

Important Film Copyright Decision Just Rendered.

WHAT must be recognized as one of the most important decisions in the history of moving picture litigation has just been rendered by Judge Learned Hand, of the New York United States District Court, in the suit brought by George Kleine against Abraham Polacoff, doing business as the Quality Feature Film Co., for infringement of the plaintiff's copyright on the film called "The Golden Beetle." The decision upholds the claim of the plaintiff and directs the entry of a judgment for the costs and counsel fee against the defendant.

The interesting feature of the decision is found in the fact that it throws out the defense made on the basis that at least parts of the plaintiff's and defendant's prints of the film were made from different negatives. It states that, in spite of the fact that a number of scenes were printed from different negatives, "none the less there would be an infringement in the case, for the play is based on a scenario which is repeatedly acted, and it is part of the literary property, and the statutory copyright which is obtained under the statute, if the scenario is acted and if there are several negatives. Each one of those negatives, if obtained without the consent of the owner, would be an infringement of the dramatic rights in the motion play."

"The Golden Beetle," produced by the Cines Company, of Rome, was imported by George Kleine and copyrighted by him at Washington, April 20, 1914. In August, an unauthorized print of the film appeared in New York and was seized by the United States marshal upon complaint of Mr. Kleine as owner of the copyright. The question of the validity of this action, in regard to the copyright, was brought up before Judge Hand, and the defendant attempted to show that his film was different from the copyrighted picture.

According to his own witnesses, however, at least sixty per cent. of the scenes were identical, and the others, although evidently not printed from the same negative, nevertheless were so similar as to leave no doubt that they were different "takes" of the same story.

After Mr. Kleine's attorney, George F. Scull, had proved the facts upon which his case was based, and shown the exclusive rights of Mr. Kleine in regard to the film, Judge Hand made his decision.

During the course of the hearing the defendant testified that he had bought the unauthorized print from George Brodenburgh, of Philadelphia.

The films were purchased by the defendant from Bradenburgh in July, 1914. They were seized in August, 1914.

The suit was heard on or about Wednesday, May 26, 1915, and the decision was rendered May 28, 1915.

Following is the decision rendered by Judge Learned Hand of the United States Circuit Court, Southern District of New York, in May (1915) term:

This will be my disposition of the case: In this action it is substantially uncontroverted that there are large portions of the defendant's film which are identical with the plaintiff's film. Indeed the defendant's witnesses testify that so far as they can see, for great portions over a half or more, the films are probably produced from the identical negative. It is possible, however, and, indeed, I may say it is likely, that for very substantial portions the films of the defendant are not actually taken from the same negative. This arises from the fact that in securing these motion plays, the rehearsal is taken on the camera, and perhaps two or three performances, and each of these negatives is preserved, the final choice being the most desirable negative. Sometimes more than one negative is actually used. And, therefore, it is very easy to see that in this case what I may call this matrix negative may not have been the same as that from which the whole of the defendant's positive was produced. None the less, there would be infringement in the case, for the play is based on a scenario which is repeatedly acted, and it is part of the literary property, and the statutory copyright which is obtained under the statute, if the scenario is acted and if there are several negatives.

Each one of those negatives, if obtained without the consent of the owner, would be an infringement of the dramatic rights in the motion play. So I do not think it of very great consequence in the case, indeed I cannot see that it is of any consequence in the case, that portions of the reels may be from separate negatives.

However, that may be, and that is a question which I need not finally determine at this time, there is enough similarity between the films to justify an injunction against the whole of the defendant's film, and the first part of the disposition of this case will be so to enjoin the defendant from performing those films, as an entirely and as they stand.

The next question will be as to whether he can save any part of his own film. As I have said, there are portions which are probably from different negatives. I do not mean to say that on that account he can save those portions which are from different negatives. Without an inspection of the film I could not see whether the similarity between the two negatives was such as to make all of his negatives infringements, regardless of whether they were identical, although I must confess that the testimony seems to me to be that even in the scenes which differ there is a substantial copying of the scenario as it is written. But I am disposed to allow the defendant to try to make proof on that portion of the case. He may, therefore, take a reference to a master on this question:

Are those portions of his film which are not taken from the same negative as the plantiff's film a substantial infringement of the plaintiff's copyright? By this I mean, are they substantially a copy from the motion play based upon the scenario which was the subject matter of the negatives themselves? If there is any part of his film which is not taken from the negative which in turn does copy a motion play based upon that scenario, he may have that delivered back to him; no confiscation will go as to those portions. But if it appear that all of this is really an infringement of the motion play, defined as I have intended to define it, in that case he will recover no part of the film. The expenses of this reference in any event must be borne by the defendant, as he is the party who has by his own tort mingled the plaintiff's property with what may turn out to be his own property, and the expense of thus untangling the two is necessarily part of the costs of his wrong.

I will also reserve the question, if the case goes to a reference, as to what attorneys' fees are to be allowed to the attorney for the plaintiff under the statute for that reference, but I will fix now a fee for plaintiff's attorney up to date, and that fee I fix at $150.

There is no ground here for damages, because there has been no presentation, as I understand it.

Mr. Scull: We waive an accounting.

The Court: And the accounting is waived. The decree will be entered on notice to the defendant's attorney of one day.

Mr. Lane: But for the present, there will be no confiscation or seizure?

The Court: There will be no confiscation order until the defendant has had time to consider the question as to whether he will go to a reference. He must make that decision within ten days, and the parties will settle on the matter themselves. If you cannot settle I will fill it in, in the decree.

Mr. Scull: There is one point. If there is any portion of this film to be returned to the defendant, is it not proper that he should be enjoined from putting it out under the same title, or an analogous title as complainant's?

The Court: He will be enjoined from putting it out under the same title; and that will be included in the decree. I do not think myself that there is any possibility of his recovering any part, because that has all been on the assumption that he could recover what is not from the identical negative; and I think I have made it clear, I hope I have made it clear, in my opinion that I do not deem that the exclusive test of infringement, but there may be infringement by different rehearsals made of a motion play based upon the original scenario.

Appearances:
For Plaintiff, George F. Scull, Esq.
For Defendant, Charles F. Lane, Esq.

The Harper Theater, This City, Wins Its Case.

The trustees of the Hyde Park Presbyterian Church, this city, who have long and successfully prevailed against the opening of the Harper theater nearby, have decided to withdraw their opposition. It came about this way:

On April 23 Judge Lockwood Honore, of the Circuit Court, overruled a demurrer filed by the city of Chicago to a petition for a writ of mandamus brought by Frank Nahser, who sought a permit to open the house. The city halted this victory for the Harper theater by taking an appeal to the Supreme Court, and a state order was entered by Judge Honore, delaying execution of the mandamus until the Supreme Court had decided.

The church trustees abandoned a proposition to appeal the case when the city insisted that they should give an indemnity bond to secure the city against possible damages in case the upper court sustained Judge Honore's ruling. Mayor Thompson told the trustees that he would withhold issuance of the license to the Harper theater if they would give a sufficiently large bond. This the trustees refused to do.

It is held that Judge Honore's ruling, while it means so much to theater owners, has nothing to do with the ordinance which prohibits saloons being opened within a certain distance from a church.

Directions to the corporation counsel to redraft the building code so that it will conform with the decision which allows theaters to be operated within 200 feet of a church have been issued by the committee on buildings.

"The Birth of a Nation" Wins Second Bout.

Petition was filed in the Superior Court, this city, Wednesday, June 2, by the manufacturers of "The Birth of a Nation" asking an injunction against the City of Chicago. Mayor Thompson and other city officials restraining them from interfering with the presentation of that photoplay.

Arguments were heard before Judge William Fenimore Cooper, Friday, June 4, the complainant contending that the city, inasmuch as it had previously issued permits for the presentation of the picture, had lost control of the matter and should be prevented from further interference.

J. G. Grossberg, of counsel for the complainant, quoted authorities to show that such action was warrantable on during the first three days after inspection, except on vio tion of the only provisory section in the ordinance admission of minors, when so conditioned.

In the ordinances he found no right of the mayor

PROVIDENCE (R. I.) EVE. TRIBUNE
JUNE 27, 1915

times during the

Chicago's Verdict Confirms Boston's

False reports sent broadcast that D. W. Griffith's great Civil War and reconstruction spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," would not be allowed to play in Chicago were dissipated when the drama started Saturday evening, June 5th, a run at the Illinois Theatre there which will probably continue for the next six months or a year. The premise of the play made much of the Chicago opposition just as they asserted that Massachusetts would find means to expel the play from Boston by special legislation. The special legislation of a new censor board to judge the Boston production was indeed adopted, but the board itself astonished the fanatics by approving "The Birth of a Nation." The facts regarding Chicago are as follows:

A legal permit for the Chicago production of the play was granted three months ago by the then Mayor Carter Harrison and the censor board under his direction. This permit was subsequently "revoked" by the new Mayor, William Hale Thompson, and Police Chief Healey. Joseph J. McCarthy, general manager of the production, then took the matter to the courts. His prayer for an injunction to restrain Mayor Thompson and Chief Healey from interfering came before Judge William Fennimore Cooper of the Superior Court. Much testimony was given and much argument adduced on both sides. The result of the court proceedings was a complete victory for "The Birth of a Nation." Judge Cooper said:

"This ground that it will engender race animosity is based purely on an assumption. To find that this is a good objection to the allowing of the injunction, this court will have to assume that our white citizens will not know or appreciate the fact that the days as presented in the play were early in the first years of the last half century. This court will have to assume that they who will witness the play will be so stupid that they will be unable to comprehend that the people represented on the films were of two or three generations ago, and that they do not and will not appreciate the fact that in the succeeding time the negro race has advanced almost immeasurably. This court is satisfied from the evidence that in this photo play the good black man and the bad white man are equally prominent figures. No one race or nationality has greater rights under the law than any other has. Any race or nationality so offended can best give the lie to the bad characters as presented by continuing to conduct themselves as law-abiding citizens. I am obliged to find under the law and the evidence in this case that the complainant is entitled to the relief prayed for, and I will enter an injunction restraining the Mayor, Chief of Police and the City of Chicago from interfering with the production of the play."

MOTION PICTURE NEWS (New York City)
June 19, 1915

Chicago Court Says "Birth of a Nation" May Go On

PRODUCERS of "The Birth of a Nation" won their long fight on Saturday, June 5, for the right to have the picture exhibited in Chicago theatres when Judge Cooper issued an injunction enjoining the city from interfering with its production. The court order over-ruled the action of Mayor Thompson in refusing a permit.

Judge Cooper, in making his decision, gave praise to the negro race and went into a discussion of the objections brought forward by those who oppose the exhibition.

The battle over "The Birth of a Nation" began many weeks ago when the first intimation of the things it portrays reached Chicago from Los Angeles, where it was produced. The chief objection to it was based on the ground that it would stir racial hatred.

Leading Chicago negroes severely condemned not only the photoplay, but also Thomas Dixon's novel, "The Clansman," on which it is founded. The film seeks to justify the activities of the Ku Klux Klan, the "invisible empire" of the reconstruction period in the South.

The court found also that the moment a fee for a permit is accepted in good faith, a property right is vested in the applicant with which neither the Mayor nor chief of police or any other city official may interfere without good cause.

Assistant Corporation Counsel Reker appealed the decision for the city. The enjoining order is not interlocutory, and the production of the film is not to be stopped pending the decision of the higher court.

MOTION PICTURE WORLD (N. Y. City)
JUN 26 1915

18 FF

Those State Censorship Bills.

Concerning the Olson and Curran censorship bills, now before the Legislature at Springfield, very little has leaked out since my letter in the issue of June 5.

Nothing at all has been learned of the Curran bill. A dispatch from Springfield, June 8, revealed that the Olson bill had passed the senate by a vote of 38 to 1, the bill creating a board of censors to be appointed by the secretary of state, with the governor's approval.

The bill applies to the entire state, but provides that Chicago may retain a local censorship board which may reject films which have been approved by the state authorities. No pictures may be shown in Chicago, however, which have not been passed by the state board.

Thus moving pictures exhibited in Chicago will have to be censored twice and fees must be paid to the city and the state, if the Olson bill becomes law. Of this double censorship the Chicago Examiner says editorially:

It is not because the payment of double fees to these two official boards of censorship is grossly unfair that this city has a manifest right to protest against the proposed action of the Legislature.

It is rather because the adoption of archaic ideas of censorship would be a reactionary step that could not fail to hamper a real educational work in behalf of the rising generation. The intelligence of Chicago's citizens is too high to render censorship, except on strictly moral lines, either necessary or expedient.

The Case of "The Birth of a Nation" Goes to the Appellate Court.

Joseph J. McCarthy, general manager of "The Birth of a Nation," was notified by his attorneys on Wednesday, June 9, that they had been served notice by the city of Chicago to appear before Judge William Fenimore Cooper, Thursday morning, June 10, when the city would file a bill of exceptions to the injunction granted permitting the exhibition of "The Birth of a Nation," in order that the case might be taken to the Appellate Court.

On that date Judge Cooper, in the Superior Court, allowed an appeal to be taken to the higher court, ordering that the bill of exceptions be submitted to the attorneys of Mr. McCarthy for approval. It is expected that the Appellate Court will give an early hearing and render an immediate decision, but up to the present writing action has not been reported.

The attendance at the Illinois theater, where the picture has been presented since Saturday evening, June 5, has been of the record-breaking kind. Long lines have been standing outside the theater at matinees and nightly, notwithstanding that evening prices have been kept up strictly to the two-dollar mark, and the matinees to one dollar and under. No disturbance of any kind has occurred, and praises of the great spectacle have been heralded by the city press and the public.

Mayor Thompson is being criticized from many angles, one of them on account of the following criticism:

"Some of my friends who have seen it say that it ought not to be shown. There are several objectionable scenes. I understand that the assassination of President Lincoln is shown. I cannot understand how anyone can approve of that sort of a picture under any circumstances. Anything of that kind simply breeds crime."

For this the Chicago Tribune sharply took him to task in the following editorial:

We have conceded that this photoplay presents an intricate question and one which might govern public policy, but Mayor Thompson makes it apparent how blunderingly officialdom will approach and handle a delicate problem.

The fact that the assassination of Abraham Lincoln is represented with great effectiveness does not constitute a valid reason for forbidding the showing of the film. The emotion produced in the spectator who sees the acting of this tremendous piece of national tragedy is in kind, if of smaller force, that which filled Ford's theatre when the crime was committed. It is poignant, but to say that the sobered folk who yield to it have been under a crime breeding influence is to take a wild flight into the extravagances of unreason.

The question raised by "The Birth of a Nation" is simply and utterly one of public policy, to be determined either upon fact or upon the most intelligent presumption as to what would be found to be the facts. If the community were as inteligent as such a community ought to be, censorship would be an intolerable outrage upon it.

Intelligence does not need censorship. The greater the insistence upon censorship the greater the denial that the community has intelligence. We know that if moving pictures accessible to the immature, unreasoning impressionable parts of the city portrayed the success of criminal acts, revealing their perpetrators in enjoyment of life easily made pleasurable, there would be an incentive to weak minds, and the public might suffer the consequences. The matter is one of public policy, and censorship, although in itself dangerous and abhorrent, is accepted as a necessary compromise.

But the question is always one of fact, and censorship, being in itself a denial of intelligence, or an acceptance of the fact that ignorance is impressionable, frequently proves that it itself is unintelligent.

The assassination of Abraham Lincoln, in whatever form it is brought to the attention, causes a reaction of profound horror and sympathy and of regret. It was a great and consequential fact in our national history. It meant immeasurable woe to the south. Few tragedies in history have had such appealing circumstances and such great consequences. And to contend that a representation of it "breeds crime" merely shows to what extremes of unreason censorship can and will go.

Attorney Cusick, eastern counsel for the Epoch Producing Company, who was instrumental in bringing the contest against "The Birth of a Nation" to a successful conclusion for his clients when it was suppressed in Boston, and who is at present in Chicago, has predicted that the temporary injunction under which the picture is now being exhibited in Chicago will be made permanent.

"The legitimate producing companies are not opposed to properly defined censorship," Mr. Cusick stated. "On the contrary, they realize that they, as well as the public, are safeguarded by such supervision."

CHICAGO Herald POST JUN 26 1915

Three Feminine Film Favorites at the Illinois

FF

Appearing in "The Birth of a Nation," the Masterpiece of a Master Craftsman.

From Left to Right—Lillian Gish as Elsie Stoneman, Miriam Cooper as Margaret Cameron and Mae Marsh as Flora Cameron. Below—David Wark Griffith, the Great Genius of Photoplay Production, Who Built "The Birth of a Nation."

THE fourth week of daily victories in the battle for popular success will be entered tomorrow by "The Birth of a Nation," the world's greatest war spectacle, at the Illinois Theater. D. W. Griffith's masterpiece photodrama, depicting with realism beyond description the most terrible crisis in American history, is easily breaking attendance records and gives promise of doing so during the rest of its limited Chicago engagement.

The story of simple love between maid and man carried to eventual happiness by the tremendous tide of brutal war, is told while the spectator is led thru spectacular episodes in the great American conflict of '61-'65. From a trysting place in a southern cotton field the onlooker is whisked to battlefields where many thousands of men engage in combat to decide the fate of a continent.

Military experts, including war veterans and regular army officers, from Fort Sheridan and other posts, have spontaneously indorsed the faithful realism of these battle scenes. Sheridan's march to the sea, the battle of Petersburg and other mighty moves of the "war game" as played in the '60s are reproduced in "The Birth of a Nation." Military men pronounce the staging of these vast spectacles to be historically and technically correct.

Abraham Lincoln and his Cabinet of famous statesmen are seen exactly as in life on the screen at the Illinois Theater. The characterization of Lincoln was the result of long research and painstaking rehearsal and is declared a miraculous feat by elders who knew the great emancipator. The assassination of the President in Ford's Theater, Washington, D. C., is filmed with such dramatic accuracy that the visitor to the Illinois Theater momentarily imagines himself a witness to the blackest tragedy of the ages.

Another historical episode less hearteral Robert E. Lee to General U. S. Grant in 1865. Like those scenes pertaining to Lincoln and official life in Washington this historical climax is portrayed with inspiring fidelity. The surrender of General Lee and the disbanding of the northern and southern armies, reunited under the Stars and Stripes, is followed by an onrush of striking events during reconstruction in the Southland.

"The Birth of a Nation" contains practically three full values as far as admission price is concerned. The civil war, the last days of Abraham Lincoln and the shocking story of southern suffering following Lee's surrender would each form a separate drama worthy of world-wide fame. Two performances of the Griffith cinema classic are given, afternoon and evening, at the Illinois Theater. A large orchestra, a chorus and a system of realistic sound effects are used with complimentary effect and aid the pictorial realism of

CHICAGO (Ill.) JOURNAL
JUNE 26, 1915

At the Film Shows

"The Birth of a Nation," D. W. Griffith's, vast spectacle of the civil war and reconstruction period, blending history and romance in a lovely and thrilling spectacle, enjoys its first and growing favor at the Illinois. It is the most stupendous thing in the motion-picture world. It is a picture with a personality.

The Studebaker offers a new six-reel picture called "Prohibition." The theme has been filmed on an extensive scale. An official description of it runs so: "It is not a sermon, but the unfolding of the story of a few, unfortunate or blessed as their case may be, whose lives are intertwined with joy and sorrows alike."

Chicago Herald 6-27-15

presented in an interesting manner.

FF

ILLINOIS—"The Birth of a Nation" continues to play to crowded houses twice a day, and daily wins more friends. The flare of the mortar shells, the bursting of shrapnel and the scarlet glare of burning cities proclaim this to be the most marvelous photographical wonder of the age. The historical episode and the simple love between a man and a maid carry the interest of the audience from the horrors of war to the entertainment of an interesting story.

CHICAGO (Ill.) AMERICAN
JUNE 26, 1915

"BIRTH OF A NATION."

FF

The fourth week of daily victories in the battle for popular success will be entered to-morrow by "The Birth of a Nation," the world's greatest war spectacle, at the Illinois Theater. D. W. Griffith's masterpiece photo-drama, depicting the crisis in American history, is easily breaking attendance records and gives promise of doing so during the rest of its Chicago's engagement.

The story of simple love between maid and man carried to eventual happiness by the tremendous tide of brutal war is told while the spectator is led through spectacular episodes in the great American conflict of '61-'65. From a trysting place in a romantic southern garden the onlooker is hurled "to battle fields, where many thousands of men engage in combat to decide the fate of a continent. Military experts, including war veterans and regular army officers from Fort Sheridan and other posts, have spontaneously indorsed the realism of the battle scenes. Sheridan's march to the sea, the battle of Petersburgh and other mighty moves of the "war game" as played in the battles are reproduced in "The Birth of a Nation." Military men pronounce the staging of these vast spectacles to be historically and technically cor-

(Ill.) DAILY NEWS
JUNE 24, 1915

OPPOSED TO TWO FILMS.

Some colored citizens have made a protest for wrongs done to them, so I am now going to protest the two pictures, "The Birth of a Nation" and "The Governor," which I have lately seen in this city. I am white, a Canadian by birth and did not have to change my name when I became a citizen of this country.

The pictures are an insult to the colored race.

The colored man wants to be let alone, to forget the past and press forward, to enlighten himself, to keep to himself and his people.

Let us try to be fair to those who are seeking to get on and improve themselves. HENRY ST. L. CHANDLER.
Chicago.

CHICAGO (Ill.) DAILY NEWS
JULY 3, 1915

[illegible] to play to [illegible] at the [illegible] theater. Although in its 26th week and playing twice each day, interest in David W. Griffith's spectacle seems unabated. Judging from the crowded houses and the advance sale in seats. One of the many startling and realistic scenes in the picture is Lincoln's assassination. It is reported that the author pored over authentic books of this incident for correct details. Thus the Ford theater is reproduced with fidelity, as is the interior and the incidents leading [illegible] the crime.

CHICAGO (Ill.) POST
JULY 3, 1915

MAE MARSH

One of the Stars of "The Birth of a Nation," Which Continues at the Illinois.

PEORIA (Ills.) STAR
JULY 3, 1915

NEW YORK MILLION DOLLAR MOVIE CONCERN ORGANIZED

New York, Saturday.—A new movement in the movie world that will revolutionize even that startling and sensational industry is about completed and the plans of the organizers entertain an extension of the moving picture business on a scale heretofore not even dreamed of. H. E. Aitken is the leader behind the movement and associated with him are D. W. Griffith, producer of "The Birth of a Nation," Thomas H. Ince and Mack Sennett, the producer of the famous funny movies. Sennett has organized more comics on the screen than any other man in the business.

The plan is to book movie productions in a regular chain of theaters throughout the country, the same as legitimate shows are now seen. This will raise the movies to the level of regular theatrical plays and will assure people in every section of the country an opportunity of seeing the best screen pictures that are being made anywhere today. The price of admission probably will also be raised but the backers of the new combination believe their productions will be worth the new price scale.

Aitken has announced that a big Broadway theater has been acquired and that others in every large city in the country are under consideration. The first showing of the new combination plays will be in New York and then will start on the round of other cities, the same as road companies do.

It is predicted by Aitken the new departure will overshadow anything of the kind ever before attempted and that the weekly cost of the films released will be near $5,000,000. Wall street is behind the movement in a financial way and large sums of money will be expended on branch offices in London, Paris, Vienna, Petrograd, Rome, South America and all big American cities, which will also act as producing centers.

CHICAGO (Ill.) DAILY NEWS
JULY 3, 1915

APPROVING A FILM PLAY.

Artistically "The Bir[illegible] is overwhelming in its beauty and the wonder of its technique. In the presentation itself there is nothing to my mind that could offend the moral sense, nor would the average child see in any incident of the play the intentions which a perverted trend of thought might seek.

The play gives to us of the north a clearer comprehension of the social and political problems which confronted the white south of that day. The blame for the evils of the reconstruction period is placed where it belongs—upon the irresponsible, self seeking and therefore short sighted northern politicians and not upon the colored man, who is not pictured as responsible for his lack of wisdom in the use of his newly acquired freedom, that instrument of greatest danger in the hands of the unprepared. Since that time colored people in the mass have amply proved that, in spite of staggering handicaps testing their moral strength to the utmost, they have been able through their own endeavors to raise themselves to the status of respected citizenship. They can therefore view these portrayals with less sorrow than we of German blood can view the scenes of despoiled Belgium and France.

The period with which the play deals has passed into history. Neither the colored nor the white man is the same today. The last fifty years have taught valuable lessons to both, not the least valuable that it is not wise to feed beefsteak to a toothless baby.

Considered from an impartial historical standpoint, the play is profitable as an accurate reflection of the motives and impulses behind the thought and act of the times. Furthermore, in a more than national scope it is an object lesson which impresses the uselessness and viciousness of war more indelibly upon the mind than even "The Trojan Women." Because of its intensely human interest it is more intelligible and convincing than any number of lectures. And the far reaching extent of war's tragedies is more vividly manifested to the average individual by their enactment before his very eyes than by the most illuminating recital.

LINDA PRUSSING AZAMAR.

Maywood, Ill.

Press
July 1st

JOLTS "MOVIE" BILL HARD

Folsom Aid Calls Censor Measure Viciously Anti Home Rule.

Reker Dissects Plan Which, It Is Said, Governor Will O. K.

"The most vicious still home rule bill that has been before the legislature in many sessions."

That is Assistant Corporation Counsel George L. Reker's characterization of the bill creating a state censorship board for moving pictures, which, according to a special dispatch to The Daily News from Springfield, will be signed by Gov. Dunne. Persons who have studied the measure assert that when the state body gets into action the Chicago censor board will have no more authority than any "movie fan."

"The bill practically establishes a one man censorship board," said the municipal lawyer, "and that man the secretary of state, who will be the censor of all pictures shown in Illinois—the most cosmopolitan, perhaps, of all the states.

Hates Rule on Chicago.

"Absolutely no standard could ever be fixed which would suit the people of Waukegan and the people of Cairo too. Even in Chicago it is difficult to adopt a standard that is acceptable to people of the loop and to residents of the outlying districts.

"Chicago's foreign population and members of other races may well expect to be insulted every day if this bill goes through, as the censors, not being selected from Chicago, would be likely to censor from the standpoint of the rural communities. There would be no relief for Chicago, for proceedings to overrule the censor would have to be filed in the Sangamon county Circuit court. Under the present act proceedings to overrule the censor may be filed on a day's notice in the local courts.

Power of Secretary of State.

"If Maj. Funkhouser acts arbitrarily he hears about it from the aldermen or the people—and knows what the people want. The city council may take his power from him and give it to the superintendent of schools if it wants to. Now the plan is to give all power to the secretary of state, and however arbitrary or capricious his judgment may be, there is no relief. Never before was an individual given such autocratic power as this bill gives the secretary of state and he never was elected to exercise such powers. The bill provides for three censors, but also provides that the secretary of state may remove them.

"Censorship is opposed by people generally. It is un-American and exists only as a necessary evil. Ideal censorship, if it must exist, is what we now have."

Deplored by the Mayor.

Mayor Thompson deplored the prospective signing of the film measure, also.

"I can only say," he remarked, "that I deplore the passage of any bill that takes away the principle of home rule. That applies to this and other matters. The people must make up their minds whether municipal matters are to be administered from Springfield or here at home."

Maj. Funkhouser referred inquisitors to Mr. Reker.

CHICAGO HERALD TRIBUNE
JULY 3, 1915

"BIRTH OF A NATION" [illegible]

With the seeming arrival of the long-delayed [illegible] usually reaches a climax on the Fourth of July, there seems to be no let-up in the demand for seats and future reservations for Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation" at the Illinois Theater. For this masterpiece and its artistic presentation make up an ideal summer show.

Everything possible has been done for the comfort of the patrons. In addition there is the soothing cool that is associated with the front room of an elm-shaded country home when the blinds are drawn.

"This is the first show I ever really enjoyed in hot weather," remarked an old soldier to George Bowles, who is in charge of the production in Chicago. "I went through the war, and because Griffith's wonderful spectacle took me back to the hotter times than I ever expect to suffer again, I was cool by contrast."

As he passed out onto the street he heard a young man complain of the heat, and the veteran smiled.

It is not likely that the Colonial, now in motion pictures, will be restored to the vaudeville [illegible] are almost perfect for [illegible] with improvements, the new film policy. Beginning Thursday, an eleven-reel exhibition will be offered. This policy probably will be continued throughout the summer, and when the new theatrical season begins at the Illinois in September "The Birth of a Nation" may be moved to the Randolph street house. The great picture at the Illinois is doing a tremendous business, and its owners expect it to stay here for a year.

CHICAGO TRIBUNE
JULY 3, 1915

down.

CLASSICS IN THE MOVIES.

An interesting and charming experiment has been made by the famed producer of "The Birth of a Nation." [illegible] taken Charles Kingsley's classic, "The Sands o' Dee," and built on suggestions from the lines a poignant little play expressed in dramatic pictures of the sea. Between the episodes the eloquent quaint lines of the unforgettable ballad are thrown on the screen, and the familiar music to which it has been set is played as accompaniment.

The whole effort is really a work of art, straight, simple, expressing sentiment, not sentimentality. As such it represents a great advance on the quality of contemporary plays of sentiment which are full of bad logic and false emotional appeals.

Every producer is not a Griffith, but any producer will do better with real material than false, and any audience will adore the true, even if it may not always sense the motive. "The Sands o' Dee" [illegible] because it has a universal appeal, and Mr. Griffith has been careful in inventing a story not to falsify it.

Why could not other simple classics of English literature and of other literatures be drawn upon for the film? The Scotch ballads are full of striking material. The Ret King suggests itself from the Germans for what seem wonderful picture possibilities. This is material of the widest and deepest appeal. It has grown into the emotional and imaginative life of all nations, and it would not only touch every person, but it would bring into the moving picture art taste of real beauty and distinction which could not fail of benefiting its producers in every phase.

It is to be hoped Mr. Griffith will follow his success in "The Sands o' Dee" with other stories from the English classics, many of which he could put on the film with eternally no alteration or addition in the way of plot.

At the Film Shows

"The Birth of a Nation," D. W. Griffith's vast spectacle of the Civil war and reconstruction period, blending history and romance in a lovely and thrilling spectacle, enjoys enormous favor at the Illinois. It is the biggest thing in the motion-picture world. Very effective music, well played, points and emphasizes the pictorial narrative.

SEEING "THE BIRTH OF A NATION" AT THE ILLINOIS THEATER

CHICAGO (Ill.) AMERICAN
JULY 9, 1915

CHICAGO (Ill.) HERALD
JULY 12, 1915

WEST-BOUND DEAF-MUTES SEE "BIRTH OF A NATION"

One of the Visitors as a Child Attended the Funeral of President Lincoln.

In an effort to get first-sight information following a discussion of the war in Europe, the party of deaf-mutes stopping at the Hotel LaSalle, on their way to San Francisco from Atlantic coast cities, attended Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation" yesterday afternoon. Twelve of the thirteen in the party, led by E. A. Hodgson, editor of the Deaf-Mute Journal of New York, witnessed the production portraying the close of the civil war and the period of reconstruction following the assassination of Abraham Lincoln.

In the party was Mrs. Mary Haight of New York, who, as a little girl, remembers the assassination of Lincoln and funeral of the martyr President, which she attended. Miss Pauline Hall of New York is with the party as interpreter.

In San Francisco they will attend a convention of deaf-mutes, and while on the Pacific coast will attend both expositions.

CHICAGO (Ill.) POST
JULY 10, 1915

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION." A photo pageant of the history of the civil war, continues capacity business at the Illinois Theater. The excellent orchestral accompaniment to this spectacular photo production makes it doubly interesting.

CHICAGO (Ill.) DAILY NEWS
JULY 8, 1915

The characterization of Abraham Lincoln in "The Birth of a Nation" at the Illinois theater was the result of weeks of faithful research and dramatic experiment. A group of trained historians ransacked libraries and museums for all available portraits and prints of President Lincoln in every attitude. War veterans and statesmen still living who knew Lincoln intimately were called upon to aid in perfecting the presentation. Twelve capable actors were tried out in camera experiments. At last, when one of their number was selected for his realistic "makeup" and personality, he was put through an arduous course of drills, so that every minute gesture, every pose should duplicate the well remembered characteristics of the great emancipator. Men who knew the martyred president declare that the spectator is brought face to face with the real Lincoln in "The Birth of a Nation."

Tribune
July 7 1915

THE STATE CENSORS BILL.

The duplication of censorship which will follow the establishment of a state board of censors, so far as it affects Chicago, is an injustice from the standpoint of moving picture enterprise and an improvident as well as unnecessary regulation of public entertainment.

The movies are the people's entertainment, a great democratic development which gives legitimate amusement to all the public. They ought not to be subjected to undue official obstructions and unnecessary regulations. Some reliance should be put upon the conscience and good sense of moving picture patrons, and every extension of official control should be compelled clearly to prove its expediency. America believes in the individual and is not yet ready to put itself under the monstrosity of interminable bureaus.

A board of censors for the state means, also, an added expense for salaries and expenses, a new drain on the treasury. At a time when the governor is trying sincerely to cut expenditures and has reduced several otherwise highly desirable appropriations, such as, for example, the good roads and armory funds, the creation of a body of censors, the need for which is challenged, would seem inconsistent and uncalled for.

MOTOGRAPHY

WITH WHICH IS INCORPORATED THE NICKELODEON

Vol. XIV | CHICAGO, JULY 3, 1915 | No. 1

Freuler Elected Mutual's President

OTHER IMPORTANT NEWS OF THE WEEK

June 23, 1915.

Pd. 56 He-New York 422P 23— Motography, Chicago.

Mutual officerss president and general manager, Freuler; vice-president, Thanhouser; treasurer, Felix Kahn; secretary and counsel, Samuel Field; assistant treasurer, Naulty; executive committee, Freuler, Thanhouser, Field, Kahn, Crawford Livingston. Aitken not a candidate; Freuler's election unanimous. Seligsberg cast vote for board electing Freuler, automatically displacing himself. A. C. Roebuck nominated Freuler, seconded by Livingston. Shortest meeting yet; over at twelve forty-five.

WEDNESDAY, June 23, was an eventful day for the Mutual Film Corporation for on that day the board of directors proceeded with the election of officers for the ensuing year, and as the whole film world knows, interest in that election has been keen for many weeks past.

As MOTOGRAPHY goes to press, it is learned that John R. Freuler has been chosen as president of the Mutual Film Corporation; Edwin Thanhouser as vice-president, and Felix Kahn as treasurer, a result which was practically forecast at the annual meeting held in Richmond, Virginia, on Wednesday, June 16, when J. W. Smith of New York and S. M. Field of Milwaukee were chosen as directors to succeed Roy Aitken, a brother of H. E. Aitken, and A. P. Gleickman, who was also considered as belonging to the Aitken faction. S. M. Field now becomes secretary and general counsel.

Mr. Freuler, who is president of the North American Film Corporation and vice-president of the American Film Manufacturing Company, is, as the trade well knows, a man of lofty ideals, an advocate of clean pictures, and above all one of the best equipped film men in the country to head such a gigantic corporation as the Mutual. He was born in Monroe, Wisconsin, forty-two years ago, the family later locating in Milwaukee, where Mr. Freuler received his schooling and early business education. He started one of the first film exchanges in Wisconsin, and when that was on a paying basis extended his activities to St. Louis and Joplin, Mo., and other western points, besides establishing the Calumet Film Exchange in Chicago, which subsequently was sold to the General Film Company, when Mr. Freuler immediately opened the Western Film Exchange of New York City. With S. S. Hutchinson, Mr. Freuler organized the American Film Manufacturing Company and was one of those most actively interested in the original formation of the Mutual Film Corporation. In conjunction with Mr. Hutchinson he planned the manufacture and distribution of the continued photoplay, "The Diamond from the Sky," out of which grew the North American Film Corporation, of which Mr. Freuler is also president. It is understood he will immediately take up his residence in New York, to which city he is moving with Mrs. Freuler and their two daughters.

NEW COMPANY ORGANIZED.

As a result of the Mutual election, it develops that another company will be incorporated in New York City within a few days, headed by H. E. Aitken, former president of the Mutual, and in which other offices will be held by Messrs. Kessel, Baumann, Livingston and other prominent directors of the Mutual Film Corporation.

The new organization, it is stated, has amalgamated the services of David W. Griffith, creator of "The Birth of a Nation" and other big feature films; Thomas H. Ince, director general of the New York Motion Picture Corporation and producer of many of the Mutual Master-Pictures; and Mack Sennett, originator and still chief producer of the Keystone comedies. These directors are expected to turn out pictures which will be shown in a chain of theaters where the two dollar scale of high prices will prevail.

The new company is said to be a four million dollar corporation, and associated with Mr. Aitken in it will be a group of financiers, who are making their entry into the financial end of the moving picture business. Though Mr. Aitken has refused to discuss these reports of his new organization he has admitted that a combination will be formed in which Messrs. Griffith, Ince, Sennett, Kessel, Baumann, new Wall street interests and the Western Import Company of London will be the leading figures. Headquarters of the new concern, it is understood, will be in New York City with branch offices in London, Paris, Vienna, Petrograd, Rome, Barcelona and South America, and the new combination will acquire control of a chain of theaters throughout the world with a central house on Broadway, New York, where the attractions will be given their premier showing. All productions are to be put forth on an elaborate scale and presented at the same prices as are charged for the best class of spoken drama.

Griffith to Direct Hopper

DeWolf Hopper is the first of the big American stars to be secured for the new Griffith-Ince-Sennett combination which is to present $2 motion pictures in a chain of theaters throughout this country and Europe.

Late Saturday evening H. E. Aitken, the head of

CHICAGO (Ill.) AMERICAN
JULY 14, 1915

J. J. McCarthy, who has been in Chicago in connection with his production of Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation" at the Illinois Theater, departed for the East yesterday to make final arrangements for the Atlantic City opening.

CHICAGO (Ill.) DAILY NEWS
JUNE 24, 1915

A PHOTO PLAY CONDEMNED.

Mary Moncure Parker writes praising "The Birth of a Nation" because "for the first time the south has had a fair play representation of historical facts." If there ever was a caricature of real history it can be found in the pretense of historical fact in these wonderful films.

The pictures are founded on the negro baiting book by Thomas Dixon, "The Clansman." This exhibition is a daily insult to the union soldier, as it leaves the impression that the men in blue were a raiding, burning mob. It is too late in the day to attempt to glorify the infamous Ku-Klux Klan, which was guilty of every form of murderous atrocity.

To picture Thaddeus Stevens as a "carpet bagger" and in favor of miscegenation and going down south to help outrage southern homes is simply absurd.

The reconstruction period was a sad chapter in this nation's history, but the rule of the carpet baggers and their use of the negro in dominating some of the southern states may be paralleled by the open attempts of southern men virtually to annul negro emancipation and keep the negroes in ignorance and degradation. The best people of the south, as well as the north, are glad to cease emphasizing these painful and shameful events, for which both sections were responsible.

The pictures relating to the negro help to magnify racial prejudice. With young people and new citizens they will leave the impression that the chief characteristic of the colored people is lust. In the face of the tremendous growth and development of the colored people in education and religion and their coming up from absolute poverty to great increase of property and wealth, it is a shame that this exhibition should be allowed that tends to create hatred.

A dramatic critic says "the absurd coincidences of the play are juvenile, maudlin and incredible." He also says that the Thaddeus Stevens incident which is the heart of the play "is grotesque, insolent and absolutely barren of plausibility."

As to the averment that children ought to be allowed to see "The Birth of a Nation," the one mark of good judgment shown by the management is that children are excluded. As an old soldier and an old minister as I looked at the pictures I counted the crowning shame the use of the pictures of Abraham Lincoln and Jesus Christ.

Chicago. DUNCAN C. MILNER.

CHICAGO (Ill.) MOTOGRAPHY

JUL 17 1915

To Prepare Musical Score

Frederick Arundel, who has general charge of the music for D. W. Griffith's motion picture productions, returned to New York Tuesday from a trip to the west where he was in consultation with Mr. Griffith regarding details for future photo-spectacles which this master director is planning to bring out.

Mr. Arundel will remain in New York long enough to equip the several orchestras which are to accompany the road tours of Griffith's current masterpiece, "The Birth of a Nation." As soon as this work is finished he leaves for Palestine and the Orient, to gather material for the forthcoming score which will be made an important detail of Griffith's ambitious plan to reproduce in motion pictures "The Quest of the Holy Grail," as outlined in Edwin Abbey's immortal paintings which now adorn the walls of the Boston Public Library. Mr. Arundel, before he returns to America to complete his score, will have visited the entire field covered by the locale of this celebrated work.

CHICAGO (Ill.) MOTOGRAPHY

JUL 17 1915

To Open in London

Thomas E. Davies, one of London's best known motion picture men, has reached America to take D. W. Griffith's great spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," back to England. Mr. Davies saw the picture for the first time Monday night and is enthusiastic about it for English and foreign consumption. He predicts that it will more than duplicate its vogue in America when it reaches the other side.

Mr. Davies' present plan, which he has just completed with Mr. Griffith's consent, is to produce the picture in London at either the Alhambra or one of the more modern theaters there. Following it establishment in the British metropolis other productions will be organized for a tour of the provinces simultaneous with the run in London. In this move it is said that Mr. Davies will have the encouragement of the British military authorities who are keen for the great spectacle because of its tremendous appeal to national pride and patriotism. While it will not be used in any sense as a propaganda, the Englishmen who have seen the picture say it will be extremely useful at this time in stirring up sentiment that will encourage enlistments in the cause.

CHICAGO (Ill.) MOTOGRAPHY

JUL 17 1915

Arrangements have been completed by D. W. Griffith's forces for the presentation of "The Birth of a Nation" for a summer engagement at the Brighton Beach Music Hall beginning Friday night, July 2 and continuing indefinitely. This is the first time on record that a big Broadway hit has been duplicated for a summer engagement in the greater New York territory at the same time the original offering remains on Broadway. The same scale of prices will prevail in both places.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS (New York City)

Justice and the Advocates of Censorship

THE double victory for the motion picture industry, represented by the permission to continue granted "The Birth of a Nation" by Judge Fenimore Cooper, of Chicago, and the Boston Board of Censors, is a matter for universal congratulation.

It means something more than the defeat of the censorship agitators' efforts to mutilate a particular film. It signifies, unless we are very greatly mistaken, the beginning of a saner, calmer, fairer attitude toward motion pictures in general.

* * *

THE denouement in Boston, so far as the censor party is concerned, verges upon the ridiculous.

For weeks the friends of "the colored brother" toiled and labored for the passage of a law by the legislature that would give them the power to prohibit "The Birth of a Nation" from coming before the people.

They won. The law was passed. The officials they believed were with them were invested with authority to do precisely what the censor party wanted done.

* * *

AND then—

After due deliberation, after witnessing the drama in private and studying and analyzing its meaning and influence, reel by reel, the reformers' own censors endorse the picture, and announce that they will permit it to go on!

* * *

IN Chicago the situation was somewhat different.

But there, we have been treated to the refreshing spectacle of a judge, sitting far above the dust and smoke of prejudice, prudery and bigotry, seeing the truth as it is, and brushing aside fanaticism and hysteria to pronounce calm and uncompromising verdict.

* * *

THERE are passages in the decision of Judge Cooper that deserve repetition—not because they are remarkable for their acuteness, but because they are a sharp reminder that he is one of the first men, on or off the bench, to apply common sense and unbiased intelligence to a discussion of a motion picture.

One of the three charges brought by the Corporation Counsel of Chicago against the picture was that "the photoplay if presented will engender race animosity against the negro citizens of our community."

* * *

THE judge's rejoinder is an incisive one.

"This last ground is based purely upon assumption," he observes. "To find that this is a good objection to the allowing of the injunction" (against the Mayor's refusal to issue a permit) "this court will have to assume that our white citizens will not know or appreciate the fact that the days represented in the play were nearly in the first years of the last century.

"The court cannot assume this will be so, when we know that there is universal recognition of the fact that no race has shown such great general advancement in from two to three generations as the negro race has done."

* * *

EVERY night in every theatre there is produced the debased type of the white race of different nationalities, and if representative groups of the various nationalities so presented became acutely sensitive that such individual portrayal would cause them to suffer race hatred for their race, and all the plays in which a villain played were stopped on that account, the theatre, as educator and entertainer of the people, would become a memory of the past, and there would be nothing to fill its place for the education and enjoyment of the people.

* * *

IF white men appeal to the courts to restrain the production of a play because one of its characters portrayed [illegible] a dissolute white man whose acting would bring hatred against that nation which his stage character named, their plea would be denied for want of law [illegible] the same, and the law should be and is the same for both black and white."

* * *

WHILE there are indications that there will be an appeal to a higher court, it is difficult to see upon what ground any superior tribunal will take exception to Judge Cooper's decision.

Incidentally, it may be recalled that a number of influential club women succeeded in bull-dozing Major Funkhouser, Chicago's erstwhile censor-czar, into believing that the Irish or Hebrew comedy which has entertained millions from coast to coast on the two-a-day stage, was a gratuitous insult to both the races in question, would engender race hatred, and that the police should, and had the power to prevent their exhibition.

* * *

THIS is as good a time as any for the much-censored manufacturers of comedies to make a test case of one of these examples of police tyranny, and give the Mayor and police department of Chicago another taste of Cooper justice."

THE SURVEY, NEW YORK

JUL 10 1915

FILM AND FACT

TO THE EDITOR: I have just read with much interest and been impressed with the pictures in the article in THE SURVEY for June 19 on Booker T. Washington and his associates speaking in Louisiana. My mind at once went to the photoplay The Birth of a Nation, now exhibiting in Chicago and elsewhere to crowded houses. Mr. Washington, as you report, said in one of his speeches: "The Negro is on trial and is judged not always by the best members of his race but largely by the loafing and idling class."

This moving-picture film represents very largely the Negro as a lustful drinker, a corrupt creature. To young people and to people from foreign lands not acquainted with the truth of American history the effect of this exhibition must contribute to race prejudice and hatred. There is not a suggestion in it of the progress of the colored people of our country for the past half century. I believe that their progress in education and wealth from ignorance and poverty has hardly had a parallel in human history.

This exhibition gives a caricature of the history of the civil war and the reconstruction period. In the years after the Civil War there were many painful and disgraceful things that we might want to be forgotten.

The disgraceful things, however, done by ignorant colored people under the lead of low-down "carpet-baggers," were fully paralleled by shameful performances of scalawag white people. This picture-play attempts to glorify the Ku Klux Klan which was simply a secret society guilty of horrible atrocities against the Negro, suppressed at last by President Grant.

The pictures are certainly remarkable as works of art, but, their glitter hides dangerous and evil influences. Our leading newspapers advertise and exploit the show, and admit little criticism. Percy Hammond in the Chicago Tribune is the one exception noticed by the the writer. As a dramatic critic he condemns the play as false to history and evil.

As an old soldier and an old minister, I was especially indignant as to the use of the pictures of Abraham Lincoln and Jesus Christ, to give a gilding to scenes of horror and misrepresentation.

DUNCAN C. MILNER.

Chicago.

Tribune
Detroit Mich
627 w

CHICAGO JUDGE RULES ON "BIRTH OF NATION"

"No one race or nationality has greater rights under the law than any other has. Any race or nationality so offended can best give the lie to the bad characters so presented by continuing to conduct themselves as law-abiding citizens who do not expect greater rights from the law than it allows all other men or nationalities." The above is an extract from the decision rendered in Chicago by Judge W. F. Cooper, of the superior court, in which he enjoined Mayor Thompson and Police Chief Healey, of Chicago, from interfering with the presentation of "The Birth of a Nation." The latter had alleged that the play would engender anti-Negro animosity. The court refused to accept this assumption, and stated that as the city of Chicago had given a permit or license to "The Birth of a Nation" a property right had been conferred which it was impossible for the mayor or the chief of police to revoke. Following Judge Cooper's decision the play started a run at the Illinois theater, and the capacity business of the first fortnight, despite the handicap of the street car strike, indicates that its stay in Chicago will be long and successful.

CHICAGO (ILL.) TRIBUNE
JULY 12, 1915

39

What of Movies Without Tunes?

BY RONALD WEBSTER.

THE canny management of "The Birth of a Nation" turned the Illinois theater into a kind of psychological laboratory yesterday afternoon in an attempt to determine just what part music plays in making their pseudo-historical film a success. They invited to the theater a group of deafmutes now stopping in Chicago on their way to a convention in San Francisco.

The experiment was interesting if not enlightening. It was almost impossible to get any expression of opinion from the visitors, even through an interpreter, because of the darkness. There were, however, certain outstanding facts.

So far as could be seen, none of the deaf mutes clapped or gave any outward expression of enthusiasm. When the audience of articulate persons clapped furiously over the death of Gus, the Renegade, they appeared placid, though interested.

Scenes such as the home coming of the little colonel, chiefly conveyed through songs of the "home and mother" type, tunes which reach the consciousness of most people from earliest childhood, did not as a rule call to their faces indications of sweet and pervading sentiment.

What chiefly nullified the experiment, however, was the fact that to the visitors music has never had any significance. Sound, except as a kind of bodily vibration, seemed to have no meaning to them because they have never experienced the emotional effects of sound. One of them said she could distinguish between gun fire and cannon fire as represented by the orchestra, and many of them were conscious of vibration. Whether the vibrations made the picture more interesting or not remained unanswered.

It must not be thought that they found the drama uninteresting. They were as keenly interested as any of the other beholders, though they were certainly not so much stirred.

If the management really cares to determine just how much it owes to music, it should omit the music for a week and study the results. The game would not be worth the candle.

Tribune
Chicago Ill.
July 10, 1915.

At the Illinois "The Birth of a Nation" keeps on telling its big story to satisfactorily big audiences—audiences who have learned the lesson of securing their colored strips of pasteboard assuring them of a place to sit before they go in order that they may avoid the unpleasantness of the phlegmatic gentleman's chant: "Seats all sold. Buy 'em ahead."

CHICAGO (ILL.) JOURNAL
JULY 10, 1915

203

Clarence Handyside are in the cast.

At the Film Shows

"The Birth of a Nation," D. W. Grimth's vast [illegible] of the civil war and reconstruction period, blending history and romance in a lovely and thrilling spectacle, prospers mightily at the Illinois. Very effective music, well played, points and emphasizes the pictorial narrative.

The Story of Lillian Gish—"Most Beautiful Blonde in the World"

Post. Chicago Ill July 10 1915

CHICAGO (Ill.) JOURNAL
JUNE 7, 1915

Post. Chicago, Ill July 10

"The Birth of a Nation," the photoplay which has set all Chicago agog, both from a photoplay and a legitimate attraction standpoint, continues to play to crowded houses at the Illinois, the month of July seeming to have little effect in decreasing patronage. "The Birth of a Nation" is in twelve reels, and yet easily of sufficient strength to make one willing to sit thru it all over again after once witnessing this Griffith masterpiece.

"The Birth of a Nation" is photographed in twelve reels and the projection covers two hours and forty-five minutes. It is, with generous sentimental and romantic concessions and with various dramatic allowances, a history of the civil war and of the reconstruction period. In many respects it has exceptional value as a historical record; otherwise it is fiction. It is based in part upon "The Clansman," the novel of Thomas Dixon, a clergyman who has also undertaken to write plays and to act in them. However, "The Birth of a Nation" is Griffith's, not Dixon's. There is more real literature in the explanatory "cut ins" in the picture than there is in the entire novel of "The Clansman." But Dixon's story of the Ku-Klux-Klan and the Carpetbaggers gave Griffith a great inspiration and he answered it mightily.

It is not possible accurately to describe a motion picture, with its unlimited multiplication of scenes, with its frequent repetitions, and all its illustrative detail. Griffith's picture has two well-defined lines of interest—one the interest that lies in a historical record, the other that which lies in the mere story-telling which gives to history a sentimental and romantic foreground. The historical record, and even it may necessarily suffer from some perversion of fact, has to do with war and politics; the accompanying romantic story, concerning sons and daughters of the south and the north, has also a historical interest in that it is illustrative of individual suffering and loss. These two interests are heightened in a thousand ways. One looks now upon a far-flung battle line, a panorama of amazing vastness; he follows Sherman's army on its march to the sea; he sees the lone soldier and countless regiments of them. Here the picture reproduces easy-going southern affluence; there it shows a south desolated by war. A flicker on the curtain and Abraham Lincoln moves about the white house, and again, for historical record, is shown the assassination, a really wonderful scene in what is said to be a perfect reproduction of Ford's theater. The picture of this tragic event is believably real, and in Lincoln is the Lincoln we know in picture, statue and tradition.

CHICAGO (Ill.) MOTOGRAPHY

JUN 7 1915

ter picture films for the Mutual Company.

H. E. Aitken, energetic, businesslike, returned from La Junta, Colo., after obtaining all the signatures to incorporate arrangements for the Triangle Film Company, arriving in Chicago on the 22nd. Mr. Aitken said that his new company was going to devote ample time to the making of the very best kind of five-reel photoplays and that the product would be fully up to that demanded by the public from the three big directors who form a part of this company. The officers of the Triangle Film Company are H. E. Aitken, president; D. W. Griffith, Thomas Ince, Mack Sennett and Adam Kessel, Jr., vice-presidents; C. O. Bauman, secretary. It is understood that Mr. Kessel will also act as treasurer.

Stanly Twist arrived in town on Sat-force summ ginning

This is een dupl
k Harrito.
roadway.

CHICAGO (Ill.) MOTOGRAPHY

July 7, 1915

RECORD BREAKING RUN CONTINUES

"The Birth of a Nation" passes out of its fifth month at the Liberty theater, New York City, with the performances this week and starts the sixth month of its successful engagement at that theater with no sign of diminishing interest. At the same time D. W. Griffith's wonderful spectacle is playing record-breaking engagements in the Brighton Beach Music Hall at the sea side, and also at Boston, Chicago, San Francisco, and has begun a summer engagement in Atlantic City. The big attraction is being presented to over 50,000 people a week in these points.

This Striking Pose of Lillian Gish Shows Her as the Fans Love Her Best—Exhibiting Her Wealth of Yellow Hair.

Lillian Gish the Girl Says of Lillian Gish the Star—

MY DEBUT at the age of six years was just fun. It was a good game for me.

Mary Pickford, Vivian Prescott and I all were initiated into the stage business through the timeworn role of Little Eva.

Sister Dorothy and I owe everything we have accomplished in the picture world to David Griffith. He explains everything so carefully and he never loses his head.

Of course Dorothy and I are very jealous of one another. I'm so proud of her work and always interested in everything she does.

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS.

THE most beautiful blonde in the world," is the way David Griffith describes Lillian, the older of the famous Gish sisters. This same golden hair has been the object of deep admiration ever since Lillian, a quaint tot of 6, played Eva in "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

"Isn't it strange," said Lillian, "that Mary Pickford, Vivian Prescott and I were all initiated into the stage business in the timeworn role of little Eva?

"'I am going to join the angels, Uncle Tom. Don't weep for me,'" and Lillian did the affecting deathbed scene which for years has made so many people shed tears.

In answer to my applause Lillian said: "I have been acting ever since I was 4 years old. My schooling and Dorothy's has been largely from tutors, although I spent some months at the Ursuline convent in St. Louis. A sort of 'finish up' to my education, as it were."

✦ ✦ ✦

Lillian Gish's appearance in filmland was made in a perfectly natural way. She came into pictures by the stage door entrance, an undisputably good training school, that has served hundreds of the most proficient photoplayers.

"I was 6," volunteered Miss Gish, "when I was asked to act in 'The Little Red Schoolhouse.' I was so pleased and did not feel in the least embarrassed. It was just a good game to me, and I entered into it heart and soul. I remember the play quite well. Don't you recall that part where the little boy says to the little girl, 'Do you like chicken?' The little girl answers 'Yes,' and then the little boy says, 'Take a wing,' and holds out his arms and they go out? Well, that wee tot was I. That was my stage debut."

✦ ✦ ✦

When David Griffith was in Chicago some weeks ago he spoke of Lillian Gish as having ethereal loveliness and showing a rare depth of feeling in every part in which she was cast. These words remained in my mind, and after I had seen Lillian Gish as Elsie Cameron in "The Birth of a Nation" I was fully convinced that Mr. Griffith's compliment was not extravagant or fulsome praise.

Lillian Gish is so delicate and so pink and golden in her coloring that the word ethereal seems to fit her more nearly than any other term I have heard applied to her.

"I remember you in the old Biograph days, when you and your sister," I said, "were just starting to shine among the cinema stars. I recall especially a picture called 'Mother, Mother' something——"

✦ ✦ ✦

"You mean 'The Mothering Heart,'" supplied Miss Gish, her face lighting up with a smile. "I am so pleased that you remember that picture, because it has always been one of my favorites. Of course, I have been in much more elaborate productions, but that simple little story has a touch of heart interest that makes it stand in a class by itself."

"It is the mother thought in the picture," I said, "that bit of sentiment that gives the picture human appeal. I saw you as the little starving mother in 'Judith of Bethulia' and in 'The Battle of the Sexes' and of course as Elsie Cameron, but I want to say that through it all that one picture has remained indelibly fixed in my mind."

"Those are all Griffith pictures and naturally that places them among the masterpieces," said Miss Gish. "Do you know that I have never worked for another director?"

Like Anita Stewart, who has done all her work under the guidance of Ralph Ince, Lillian Gish says she is not quite sure she would be a success with any other producer but David Griffith.

✦ ✦ ✦

"Mr. Griffith explains everything so carefully. He is so calm and so cool. He never loses his head and never allows anything to annoy him or us. I couldn't stand to work for a director who shouts or yells and loses his temper. It would make me so nervous I could not keep my thoughts on my work.

"Of course, I think there never was such a person in the world as Mr. Griffith. Dorothy and I both owe everything we have accomplished in the motion picture business to David Griffith. Mary Pickford introduced us to Mr. Griffith and he gave us both a trial on Mary's recommendation, so, of course, we owe some of our success to her. We have always known the Pickford family, and Mary is one of my closest friends. She is a dear," said Miss Gish warmly.

✦ ✦ ✦

Lillian told me a secret. "I am to have a prominent part in Mr. Griffith's new picture, 'The Mother and the Law,'" she said. "We aren't telling very much about it, because Mr. Griffith always keeps the text and nature of his productions secret until they are ready for the market. I think it is a wise idea, because if a picture is advertised and advertised before it is finished people get tired of hearing about it."

"There is a strong resemblance between you and your sister," I said to Lillian.

✦ ✦ ✦

"Yes, I think we look alike. I have more color and I am more robust than she is. You see, we almost lost Dorothy last year. It was dreadful. She was in an automobile accident and was nearly killed. I think if anything had happened to her I would have almost died," and Lillian's pretty blue eyes filled with tears.

"Dorothy is the baby of the family. I went into pictures first and then she came a little later. Some people are unkind enough to ask if we are not jealous of each other. Did you ever hear of such a thing?" asked Lillian indignantly. "My own sister. I am so proud of everything she does, and she is so interested in my career. I think it would be very strange if we didn't sympathize with each other," and Lillian's blue eyes flashed wrathfully at the unlucky one who first put the notion of sisterly jealousy in her lovely head.

✦ ✦ ✦

The Gish girls, like many other young people who become prominent in the limelight, spend much of their time reading. Lillian has a large library and devotes a part of each week's salary to enlarging that ever-increasing list of books, which contains some very rare and valuable volumes de luxe.

"It will be a great thing, won't it," I said, "for you in after years to be able to say that you had one of the principal roles in the first $2 movie? 'The Birth of a Nation' has certainly had a [redacted] you a permanent place in filmland's hall of fame."

✦ ✦ ✦

"I am very thankful that Mr. Griffith cast me for Elsie. It took eight months of hard work to finish that picture, but it has been well worth the long months of work and the time we spent in giving our director what he wanted. Just imagine, he photographed over 75,000 feet of film for the necessary 12,000 feet. That means that we were in over five times as many scenes as you saw us on the screen. The first time that I saw myself in this big production I was as nervous as a prima donna making her first appearance. Mr. Griffith had a first night, and invited all the film folk at Los Angeles to be present. It was like performing before a room full of critics. They were all critics, but each one was kind enough to say some nice things about 'The Birth of a Nation,' and naturally that made me very happy."

I have come to the conclusion that one reason that Lillian Gish at 19 is such a recognized success is because of her sweet nature, which finds evil in no one and abundant charity for every one. She is a lovable child, is this 19-year-old star of the world's greatest photoplay. A girl deserving of all of her success, which has had only its beginning in "The Birth of a Nation."

CHICAGO (Ill.) TRIBUNE
JULY 15, 1915

FF

FLICKERINGS from FILM LAND

By KITTY KELLY

Combine Plans Huge Chain of Playhouses

THIS Griffith-Ince-Sennett combine—which, by the way, is the informal label it wears until it gets properly christened with a proper sort of name—is making some brief announcements of its plans through J. J. McCarthy, who has been confabbing in the midst of the mantpulative minds.

Early in September the first picture will appear, one of three containing De Wolf Hopper, either "Don Quixote," "David Copperfield," or "Wang," produced under the direction of D. W. Griffith.

A chain of first class theaters, dabbling in the $2 top price, will be stretched across the country in such places as New York, Chicago, Boson, Philadelphia, St. Louis, Washington, and so on, which will house these productions. It appears now to be the aim to have a weekly change of program consisting of some such production as the De Wolf Hopper one, a two reel Keystone comedy, and another five or six reeler, furnishing an evening's complete entertainment. Then, occasionally, there will be interpolations of big things akin to "The Birth of a Nation," which will run for a greater length of time.

The present big thing about the organization is that it has command of more capital than it can possibly desire. Kessel & Bauman, the financial department of the New York Motion Picture company, are allied with H. E. Aitkin in backing the project, and, furthermore, according to Mr. McCarhy, money is to be had from recognized financiers actually without the asking.

The financiers, solid ones of weight and reputation, are for the first time in the industry's history extending to it their assistance, duplicating their espousal of the automobile cause in its days of infancy.

Griffith's last production, "The Birth of a Nation," is now regarded as more than an artistic triumph. Mr. McCarthy says it is the thing that has converted Wall street to the influence of the cinema.

Other players announced to appear on the Griffith-Ince screen are Henry Miller, Douglas Fairbanks, and Nazimova, while Sennett's recruits for funland are Weber and Fields, Raymond Hitchcock, Eddie Foy, and Sam Bernard.

* *

Miss MIRIAM COOPER
"The BIRTH OF A NATION"

MISS MIRIAM COOPER, the elder southern sister, along with all the other celluloid shadows who have succeeded in putting across excellent imitations of reality to the S. R. O. crowds at the Illinois witnessing "The Birth of a Nation," is soon going to journey to London, where arrangements for showing the great picture are being made. Here in Chicago it is running near the end of its second month, but not near the end of its engagement. Yesterday afternoon, for instance, hot as it was, every seat in the house was occupied, and hundreds were turned away.

CLIPPING FROM
JUL 24 1915
CHICAGO (Ill.) MOTOGRAPHY

FF D. W. Griffith's spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," has started in on the fifth month of the run at the Liberty Theater. Summer weather has not interfered with its popularity as the theater is kept at an even temperature by special mechanical arrangements which do not mar the presentation of the wonderful film story in any degree.

CLIPPING FROM
American
Chicago Ill.
7-15-15

CHICA

"The Birth of a Nation" Is Hit of Summer

ILLINOIS. FF

"The Birth of a Nation" nears the completion of its second stupendous month at the Illinois Theater, and still scores new surplus achievements in record-breaking attendance figures. From indications it will be rated eventually as the one big smashing success of the theatrical year in Chicago from the financial as well as the spectacular and artistic points of view.

Patriotic outbursts evoked at every performance of the D. W. Griffith masterpiece are significant of the temper of the American people at this time. "The Birth of a Nation" more than any thing else serves to bring back Americans to the bedrock of freedom's ideals and the patriotic devotion of a great united nation.

Two performances of "The Birth of a Nation," visualizing the greatest crisis in American history, humanized by a charming love story, are given daily. A large orchestra of superior caliber and numerous realistic effects are adjuncts of the produc-

CHICAGO (Ill.) MOTOGRAPHY
JUL 24 1915

FF With the turning of next week, D. W. Griffith's spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," will register its 300th consecutive performance at the Liberty Theater, New York.

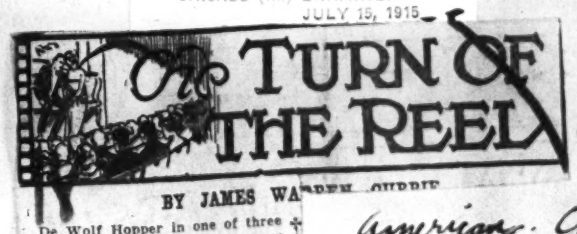
CHICAGO (Ill.) TRIBUNE
JULY 16, 1915

In Again; Out Again FF

"The Birth of a Nation" had some more of its chronic court experience yesterday afternoon when the appeal for its dispersal was presented before Judge William Fennimore Cooper. The case was not decided, however, and the Appellate court adjourns on Saturday, not to be reconvened until October, in the meantime of which the picture may go on unreeling with no legal restraint so long as it violates no ordinances. A number of negroes were present at the hearing.

It isn't often that a younger sister's fame reflects a favoring light upon that of an elder, but so it goes in the Marsh family. That is the reason Marguerite Loveridge is going to revert to her original name, Marguerite Marsh. She is the elder sister of the gifted Mae Marsh, who has achieved so many noteworthy successes, the latest being Flora Cameron in "The Birth of a Nation."

CHICAGO (Ill.) EXAMINER
JULY 15, 1915



BY JAMES WARREN CURRIE

American. Chicago Ill.
July 16, 1915

De Wolf Hopper in one of three classic productions, Cervantes' "Don Quixote," Reginald De Koven's "Wang," or Charles Dickens' "David Copperfield," will lead the first line of battle for the Griffith-Ince-Sennett forces in their battle for a $2 moving picture program which will clash with the stage for the patronage of amusement seekers.

J. J. McCarthy, general manager of the Epoch Producing Corporation, which is the name of the concern behind "The Birth of a Nation," stated yesterday that the first picture would be released in September, about the time that all the theaters come out of darkness. All of the three productions mentioned are being made under the direction of the three men. It is a question of chooce. One of the three plays will be used.

HITCHCOCK IN COMEDY.

Raymond Hitchcock will supplement De Wolf Hopper in the first comedy release of the corporation, which will be shown on the same program with the headliner. The programs of the company will be shown exclusively in a chain of first-class theaters, which have been established in all the leading cities, including New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, Boston, Cleveland, Cincinnati, St. Louis and Washington.

Each program will contain a master drama picture, a master comedy picture, the first of the regulation six-reel length or thereabouts, the latter from two to four reels. These will be supplemented by other pictures of the same quality, which because of their shortness or some other quality will take a minor place on the bill. The whole program, as it is planned, will take from three to four hours to show. This includes the intermission. The length of the bill will vary little from time to time.

A standard of $2 for the best seats will be maintained in all the theaters in the system controlled by the Griffith-Ince-Sennett interests.

OFFERED MUCH CAPITAL.

McCarthy in a statement regarding the attitude of the money powers of Wall street toward the moving picture as an investment said:

"The Griffith-Ince-Sennett interests were offered unlimited capital in the most solid banking and brokerage circles in the United States. The corporation now is a multi-million dollar one, but a capitalization of millions more might have been established had any one of the trio said the word. The reputation and the records of these three, and especially the financial success of 'The Birth of a Nation,' convinced the magnates, who, after a searching investigation of its costs, returns and prospects, announced themselves ready to put capital in any like enterprise.

"This picture of David Wark Griffith's was the last proof needed in financial circles. Time after time when they had announced their new project they were offered anything they wanted in any investment in moving pictures that the three would vouch for."

Among the first players who will be featured in the new corporation besides Hopper and Hitchcock are Henry Miller, Douglas Fairbanks and Nazimova. In the Sennett comedies will appear Weber, Fields and Eddie Foy.

The first play released under the Griffith-Ince-Sennett $5,000,000 corporation is coming through in September, according to J. J. McCarthy, general manager of the Epoch Producing Company, which is behind the D. W. Griffith masterpiece, "The Birth of a Nation." DeWolf Hopper will be the star. He will appear in "Don Quixote," "Wang" or "David Copperfield," which are now being completed.

CHICAGO (Ill.) HERALD
JULY 18, 1915

ILLINOIS – David Griffith's great spectacular drama continues playing to capacity houses. The heat has had no effect on the popularity of "The Birth of a Nation." Great crowds continue to witness every performance. The greatest photoplay of the age is not too extravagant a term.

CHICAGO (Ill.) JOURNAL
JULY 17, 1915

"The Birth of a Nation"

"The Birth of a Nation" nears the end of its second great month at the Illinois theater, and still scores new achievements in record-breaking attendance. From all indications it will be rated eventually as the one big smashing success of the theatrical year in Chicago from the financial as well as the spectacular and artistic points of view. Patriotic outbursts at the showing of the Griffith masterpiece are significant of the temper of the American people at this time. "The Birth of a Nation" serves to bring back Americans to the bedrock of freedom's ideals and reaffirms the patriotic devotion of a great united nation.

CHICAGO (Ill.) POST
JULY 17, 1915

Illinois—"The Birth of a Nation" nears the completion of its second stupendous month at the Illinois Theater, and still scores new surplus achievements in record-breaking attendance figures. From all indications it will be rated eventually as the one big smashing success of the theatrical year in Chicago from the financial as well as the spectacular and artistic point of view. Two performances are given daily. A large orchestra of superior caliber and numerous realistic effects are adjuncts of the production.

July 18, 1915
Examiner
Chicago. Ill 33

Birth of Nation Makes Record

"ATTENDANCE plus" is the twice-daily story of patronage at the Illinois Theater, where "The Birth of a Nation" nears the completion of its second month. The Griffith masterpiece probably will be rated as the one big smashing success of the theatrical year in Chicago, from the financial as well as art-spectacular point of view.

Patriotic outbursts evoked at every performance of "The Birth of a Nation" are significant of the temper of the American people at this time. Griffith's production more than anything else serves to return Americans to the bedrock of freedom's ideals and the patriotic devotion of a great united nation.

Everything has been said that can be said in description and praise of the Abraham Lincoln episodes in "The Birth of a Nation." Words fall far short of picturing the impressive, gripping realism of this dramatization of Lincoln.

Two performances of "The Birth of a Nation," visualizing the greatest crisis in American history, humanized by a charming love story, are given daily. A large orchestra and numerous realistic effects are adjuncts to the production.

Herald. Chicago. Ill.
July 19, 1915

"Mutes and Movies"

The two met last week when George Bowles of the Illinois Theater invited a number of the delegates to the deaf and dumb convention to attend a performance of "The Birth of a Nation."

Previous to that time some one had remarked that this play's success was in a measure due to the musical score prepared for it. The music that accompanies this production is beautiful, but so impressive is the picture that Mr. Bowles has been of the opinion that, were the play presented without a word of song or music, it would still be the greatest dramatic spectacle of the day. The following letter is cited in proof of this contention:

"Dear Mr. Bowles: Please allow me in behalf of the delegation of the deaf en route to California to thank you for your courtesy and generosity expressed in the invitation to witness "The Birth of a Nation."

"I have been asked if I felt or heard the musical vibrations or if the deaf people in our party did. The sound waves can be felt by many of the deaf who are high strung or supersensitive, but the sound is not palpable. It is only so in the sense that one would instinctively become aware that another person was in the same room without warning sound.

"But music is not necessary to convey the thrill of the pictures. It is inconceivable that such wonderful scenes as the gathering of the Ku Klux Klan could be brought to such a state of realism."

The letter is signed by Mr. Hodgson, who is editor of the Deaf Mutes' Journal.

Examiner
July 2nd

Chicag

MOVIE BILL TO BECOME A LAW

Governor Dunne Expected to Let Several Measures Take Effect Without His Signature.

BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., July 1.—Indications to-day were that Governor Dunne would let the moving-picture bill become a law without his signature. According to Attorney General Lucey, the law would not be operative until July 1, 1916. Former Congressman James M. Graham contends that the bill is unconstitutional for the reason that it seeks to delegate power to boards and persons outside the state of Illinois.

It is likely also that the Governor will let the bill increasing the salaries of the members of the Legislature become a law without his signature. There would be no material difference whether this bill became a law at once or a year hence, as the new Legislature will not be elected until more than a year from now.

The Governor is as yet undecided with reference to the bill authorizing engineers to enter part of the field now occupied by architects.

The Lake Calumet bill also remains in doubt. This measure would authorize the city of Chicago to rent for manufacturing and mercantile purposes any lands that might be reclaimed from the bottom of the lake. South Chicago interests are united for the measure.

A legal fight is threatened with reference to the Governor's action in "scaling down" appropriations to the extent of $7,225,000. Interests hurt by these vetoes claim that the Governor has the right to veto a bill in its entirety, but no right to cut down the amount appropriated.

The Governor, as soon as he is through with the bills, will make announcement of appointments to the new boards created by this session.

CHICAGO (Ill.) EXAMINER
JULY 19, 1915

99, LIVES LIFE ANEW AT MOVIE

Marquis De Fafayette Williams Is Examiner Guest at "The Birth of a Nation."

Marquis DeLafayette Williams, who is "ninety-nine years young," yesterday was carried back to the days when he was fifty years old. Accompanied by Mrs. H. S. Moore, wife of the superintendent of the James C. King Home for Old Men, 360 East Garfield boulevard, Mr. Williams, who because he is known as the oldest movie fan in the country is affectionately called "Kid," attended Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation" at the Illinois Theater as a guest of the Chicago Examiner.

And according to the "Kid" it was one of the treats of his life.

LIVES PART OF LIFE AGAIN.

"I have lived a part of my old age over again," he said, and when the reporter seemed not to understand his meaning he added: "Why, I was considered an old man when the civil war began. I was too old to fight, but I was financially able to send several substitutes, so I consider I served my country—perhaps better than if I had gone to the front myself.

"I remember well when Lincoln was elected. I was living in Buffalo, N. Y., at the time and I saw him when he passed through that city on his way to Washington to take his oath of office as President of the United States. A few years later—to-day as I look back upon it it seems but a very short time—I saw his body lying in state in Buffalo.

"And to-day, a half century later, I saw the tragedy which before I had never really understood. It was terrifying. Had I not been afraid of attracting too much attention I would have stood with bowed head as the pictured body of Lincoln was carried from the theater box.

KNEW GRANT AND SHERMAN.

"As for the day of reconstruction in the South right after the civil war, I fear there were but few of us who really understood what must have been the suffering below the Mason and Dixon line soon after the assassination of Lincoln. It was all more or less new to me and up to now I thought I knew and realized.

"I had the good fortune to know personally Grant and Sherman and the presentation of these characters seemed so real that I seemed to see them again in real life to-day.

"I want to thank the Examiner for giving me this opportunity to live a part of my life over [illegible]

SEE IT TWICE,' SAY 'BIRTH OF NATION' FANS

One visit to the Illinois Theater to "The Birth of a Nation" is not ough, in the opinion of many well-own Chicagoans, including leading iety women. Numerous "Nation e" have viewed D. W. Griffith's rld famous masterpiece not only ce, but three times, and have made t reservations to view the peerless ctacle for the fourth time. As e Birth of a Nation" is about to er its fifth week of twice-daily mphs at the Illinois, it is anced that the number of playgoers have already seen two complete formances will amount to many dreds.

"To see 'The Birth of a Nation' once is to see it soon again," commented an experienced observer of theatrical events. "Folks who have already seen the production not only urge their friends to see it, but offer to go along with them, saying it is the one entertainment that bears repetition."

"SOLD OUT."

Hanging out the "Sold Out" sign is a nightly ceremony in the foyer of the Illinois Theater, and the amusement world is treated to the novel sight of packed houses at $2 per main floor seat. This is accepted as proof that Mr. Griffith's achievement has inaugurated the era in which a production of this sort may outrival the quality and popularity the finest of attractions on the "Cold stage" at equal prices.

Years of study in libraries containing large collections of works on Abraham Lincoln cannot give such a true impression of the great President as the scenes at the White House and Ford's Theater in "The Birth of a Nation." Admirers and students of Lincoln, from civil war veterans to young collegians, are unqualified in their praise of the presentation of the Emancipator in the Griffith masterpiece.

THE LINCOLN PORTRAYAL.

Here it is demonstrated that a faithful portrayal of Lincoln's personality is actually possible, despite previous failures on the stage and in films. The portrayal of President Lincoln in "The Birth of a Nation" is not only realistic to the finest degree. It is sympathetic as well as true, and renews admiration for "Honest Abe" in the hearts of those who are many years removed from historical study or patriotic thrills.

No reproduction of sidelights on the European war can even faintly approach the battle scenes of "The Birth of a Nation" in showing what grim war means. And perhaps no war correspondent, aviator or experienced army officer ever viewed a field of battle, with many thousands of men engaged, to such advantage as is enjoyed by the spectator at the Illinois Theater. It is as if the "innocent bystander," immune from danger, were transported to a mountain grandstand, there to view the terrible events of a nation's strife in a warmad valley of death. Artillery duels by night and day, sorties, bayonet charges and indomitable trench fighting are revealed with a fidelity which defies criticism by military experts.

In "The Birth of a Nation" a charming love story is woven through mighty historical chapters from the outbreak of the civil war to the terrific time of the reconstruction period.

CHICAGO (Ill.) TRIBUNE
JULY 23. 1915

FLICKERINGS
More News About Triangle Combine.

THIS thing of having a great film corporation using the whole country in which to get itself formed is handy for Chicago. Yesterday H. E. Aitkin dropped into town on his way back to New York from his little jaunt out to La Junta, Colo., with some first hand news of what happened there on Tuesday, when D. W. Griffith, Mack Sennett, and Thomas Ince, having put their respective Reliance and Majestic, Keystone, Domino, Broncho, and Kay Bee companies into subdirector hands temporarily, Pullmanned off there for a little corporation fling.

The result of the party, as announced briefly in THE TRIBUNE Wednesday, was the formation of the Triangle Film corporation with a capital of $5,000,000. Mr. Aitkin brought more extensive news. The officers, for instance, all of whom were present, are, president, H. E. Aitkin; vice presidents, D. W. Griffith, Thomas Ince, and Adam Kessel; secretary, C. O. Baumann.

There is opportunity for theatrical shivering in the suggestion flung out that efforts would be directed toward having the stars engaged sign contracts not to appear on the stage for a set time, said appearance being deemed by the photoplay folks as detracting from the popularity of the picture.

The procedure of the Triangle will be a weekly release of two five reel and one two reel productions, made by the directors in chief and other directors selected by them for their competency and working under them. Two months' time is to be the regular allotment for the making of the five reelers.

To this corporation Mr. Aitkin contributed the Majestic and Reliance studios, with considerable financial backing, while Kessell and Baumann turned in the Inceville and the Keystone plants and contracts with about thirty prominent players.

The houses to be occupied here are not yet decided on. It is quite definitely stated that two are needed, one for "The Birth of a Nation" and one for the Triangle program which will begin in September. The Colonial has been glanced at, and of course, the Illinois is regarded as highly desirable, having already taught folks the way to the seeing of distinctive photodramas.

A fragment of rumor indicates the answering of Sothern and Marlowe to the celluloid call, though nothing definite is stated. Other stars already under contract are: Billie Burke, Mary Boland, Julia Dean, Bessie Barriscale, Louise Dresser, Raymond Hitchcock, H. B. Warner, Sam Bernard, Eddie Foy, Weber & Fields, Dustin Farnum, Douglas Fairbanks, Frank Keenan, Hale Hamilton Bruce McRae, Willard Mack, W. S. Hart, Forest Winant, Henry Woodruff, Orrin Johnson, Maurice Farkoa, House Peters, William Desmond, and Bert Clarke.

JU 23 1915
CHICAGO (Ill.) EXAMINER

Formation of the Triangle Film Corporation, with a capital of $5,000,000, the election of officers, and some of the things the new company proposes to do for the photoplay were discussed by Harry E. Aitken, president of the company, in an interview given here yesterday while on his way to New York.

The meeting which resulted in the forming of the company was held at La Junta, Colo., on Monday last. The officers elected were: Aitken, president; Griffith, Ince, Bennett and Adam Kessels, vice presidents, and Charles Baumann of New York, secretary. The treasurer has not been named.

"The Griffith-Ince-Sennett crowd will have unlimited authority in the making of pictures, both as to money and judgment," said Aitken. "We have contracts with many of the prominent actors and actresses on the stage, among whom are Billy Burke, De Wolf Hopper, Mary Boland, Louis Dresser, Bessie Barriscale, Sam Bernard, Dustin Farnum, Douglas Fairbanks, Bruce McRae, Bert Clarke, House Peters and Willard Mack."

David Griffith is now working on another spectacle, "The Law and the Woman," which, it is believed, will surpass "The Birth of a Nation," according to Aitken. This picture will be released through the Epoch Film Company, which is distinct from the Triangle Film Corporation, although Aitken is president of both. Griffith will work on spectacles, besides contributing his share of work in the making of plays for the Triangle Company.

* * *

JULY 22. 1915
CHICAGO (Ill.) EXAMINER

$2 ALL-YEAR MOVIES PLANNED

Moving pictures at $2 a seat are going to be shown in Chicago all the year round.

H. E. Aitken, president, and A. H. P. Banshaf, secretary-treasurer of the Epoch Producing Company, the new $5,000,000 photoplay company backed by several Wall street men, will arrive here this morning to sign a long lease on a loop theater to house their productions.

The Colonial, Olympic and Studebaker have been mentioned in connection with the deal, which is a part of a general plan to establish a string of $2 movie houses in a dozen of the largest cities. Already leases have been taken on theaters in Boston, New York and Philadelphia.

There is every reason to believe that the Colonial will be the theater obtained by the new concern. George Bowles has been attending to the preliminary arrangements, and it is said that the only hitch in the negotiations between Bowles and Jones, Linick & Schaefer is the question as to who will spend the $5,000 necessary to renovate and redecorate the theater to bring it up to the standard fixed by Aitken and his associates.

Aitken and Banshaf are coming from La Junta, Colo., where on Tuesday they met David Wark Griffiths, producer of "The Birth of a Nation." At that time contracts were signed by which Griffiths becomes the producing director of the new corporation. After the meeting he hurried back to Los Angeles, where he is directing the filming of another spectacle, which is said to be [illegible] than "The Birth of a Nation."

CLIPPING FROM Post.
Chicago Ill
6, 22-15

Feature Film Department

One Point of Detail in "The Birth of a Nation."

Detail in the eyes of D. W. Griffith, "master producer," is the most important point to be remembered in the making of a photodrama. As much as it may be criticised, even the enemies of the film play admit that "The Birth of a Nation," being shown at the Illinois Theater, is a masterpiece as much for detail as for plot and stupendous dramatic action.

Another director—perhaps any other director—might have thought to have built an exact replica of Ford's Theater. Another director might have dressed the play and directed properly the performance that the martyred Lincoln was watching. Another director might have consulted all of the authorities to set a time for the actual shooting.

But who, save D. W. Griffith, would have noted in studying the stories of the shooting the fact that the temperature fell just before the assassination on that mild spring night in Washington. And who, save Griffith, would have directed his Lincoln to change his position in the box and slip a warm cape over his shoulders just before ordering his Booth to shoot down "the South's best friend"?

The absence of such detail would have been overlooked, but, being there, it stands out as a bit of history that most of us had forgotten if we ever knew of it.

That's the detail Griffith feels and understands. And detail is what he believes will do most to insure the success of the $2 photodrama.

CHICAGO (Ill.) JOURNAL
JULY 23, 1915

With this coming week "The Birth of a Nation," the greatest spectacle drama in history, will complete its second "sell-out" month at the Illinois theater. After seven weeks during which the "All Seats Sold" sign was moved to the fore twice daily, there is not the slightest indication of a lag in the tremendous patronage accorded the D. W. Griffith masterpiece by playgoers of Chicago and visitors from other cities.

Officials of the firm which produced "The Birth of a Nation" visited Chicago last week, and after reviewing the attendance here, the Illinois came to the conclusion that this city is the new dramatic center of the United States. This is partly attributed to the tremendous advance Chicago has made as a summer resort and a mecca for tourists who formerly visited New York, Washington and other destinations for sightseers. But "The Birth of a Nation" has not visitors alone to thank for its striking success hereabouts, as the list of well-known Chicagoans who have seen the performance two and three times is a lengthy one and indicates the heavy ratio of local patronage.

The presentation of Abraham Lincoln in triumph and in tragedy is so inspiringly realistic that the great emancipator has become almost a living personage to many up-to-date Chicagoans who have witnessed "The Birth of a Nation." One feature of Griffith's great civil war epic which has not been commented upon so far consists of stray little touches of humor scattered through the long train of tremendous spectacles and national tragedy. The forlorn admiration of a union private for Miss Stoneman, daughter of the great statesman, is a gem in humorous silent acting, and in sharp relief to the powerful situations in which it is [illegible]

CABLE ADDRESS
CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK Mail

Vaudeville Plan Off

Triangle Film Corporation Is Also After Another Chicago Theatre Is Report.

(Special to The New York Review.)

CHICAGO, Ill., July 30.—"The Birth of a Nation" will be the attraction at the Colonial Theatre here indefinitely, beginning August 28. It was reported that Jones Linnick and Scachher would inaugurate a policy of vaudeville at the playhouse next month, but the booking of the "Nation" has changed their plans. It is reported that the Triangle Film Corporation is negotiating for the lease of the Studebaker Theatre here.

JULY 23. 1915
CHICAGO (Ill.) HERALD

SEEN ON THE SCREEN
By Lou

HARRY AITKEN, who resigned the presidency of the Mutual Film Company to head the new $5,000,000 Triangle Film Corporation, was in Chicago yesterday on his way to New York from La Junta, Col. The new concern was organized at La Junta earlier in the week, with Mr. Aitken as the president and general manager; Adam Kessel Jr., vice president; C. O. Bauman, secretary, and David Griffith, Mack Sennett and Tom Ince, vice presidents and members of advisory board.

"It was the most harmonious meeting I ever attended in the film business," said Mr. Aitken. "These three men—Griffith, Sennett and Ince, the acknowledged leaders in the development of the picture industry—all joined hands to concentrate their dramatic genius to this one corporation. We call it 'The Triangle' because of this union. It was a delightful association of the biggest film directors in the world.

"Mr. Griffith admires Mack Sennett very much. He considers him the greatest genius in his line. The Sennett comedies will supplement each drama released, and they ought to be good, with Eddie Foy, Raymond Hitchcock and the rest of the famous comedians taking part."

* * *

"You will open your $2 houses in September as you planned?" I asked Mr. Aitken.

"We are going to open at the Knickerbocker Theater in New York, possibly with Douglas Fairbanks in a play not yet ready for announcement," was the reply. "We shall have fourteen reels—two five-reel dramas and two two-reel comedies. No drama will be released without a comedy accompanying it. Mr. Griffith, Mr. Ince and Mr. Sennett each will be director general of his own companies and will work independently. They will have six or eight companies working all the time, and while we expect each production will take two or three months to finish we shall have fourteen reels ready for release each week.

"You see, only one theater in a city can handle our films. They will be works of art, with the finest actors in America. Each big drama will cost something like $35,000 to $50,000."

* * *

Mr. Aitken was asked if he did not feel that Mr. Griffith's and Mr. Ince's work might conflict.

"Not at all," was the emphatic answer. "Tom Ince's pictures are so different. He has Inceville, with his western cowboys, Indians and Mexicans. Griffith's pictures deal with an entirely different angle, although Billy Burke will be in the Ince company. She is on her way there now.

"One thing, I believe, is not generally understood by the layman, and that is that the Epoch Producing Company and the Triangle Film Corporation are two separate and distinct organizations. The Epoch company was formed to promote 'The Birth of a Nation' and 'The Triangle' is to manage the output of the new company.

"That will necessitate obtaining two theaters in Chicago, one for 'The Birth of a Nation' and one for the pictures to be released in September. Mr. Griffith told me before I left him in California to have Mr. McCarthy send out two companies with 'The Birth of a Nation.' David Griffith never looked as well in his life as he does right now," went on Mr. Aitken; "he is so enthusiastic about his new venture."

* * *

"A little bird whispered to me," I said, "that Julia Marlow and Edward Sothern were contemplating an alliance with the Triangle Company."

"Better not say anything about that," put in Walter Seligberg, Mr. Aitken's legal adviser.

Mr. Aitken was noncommittal, but I gathered partly from what he said, but principally from what he did not say, that it would not be the most unheard-of thing to have these two artists join the Griffith company some day.

"Will the contract with these plays give your company the exclusive right to their services?" I asked.

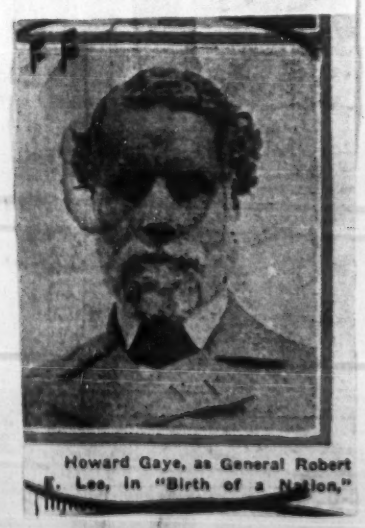
"De Wolf Hopper has come to us for six years, and the others who will appear in our pictures are Billie Burke, Mary Boland, Douglas Fairbanks, H. B. Warner, Bruce McRae, Eddie Foy, Bessie Barriscale, Henry Woodruff, W. S. Hart, and, of course, Lillian Gish, Mae Marsh, Bobby Harron and Miriam Cooper and a number of others whom I cannot recall just now.

Miriam Cooper.

"One thing of interest is that Griffith, Ince and Bennett have each signed a three-year contract, the first of the kind ever entered into by any of them."

Mr. Aitken told me that his headquarters will be in New York. He was accompanied on his trip from California by A. H. W. Banahof, treasurer and secretary of the Epoch Producing Company, and his attorney, Mr. Seligberg.

CLIPPING FROM American
Chicago Ill
Date 7-24-15



Howard Gaye, as General Robert E. Lee, in "Birth of a Nation."

CLIPPING FROM American
Chicago Ills
Date .....
7-24-15

Chicago Herald 7/24/15 3s

"All Seats Sold" Is the Regular Sign at "Birth of a Nation"

BY ROB REEL.

With the coming week "The Birth of a Nation," the greatest spectacle-drama in history, will complete its second sell-out" month at the Illinois Theater. After seven weeks, during which the "All Seats Sold" sign was moved to the fore twice daily, there is not the slightest indication of a lag in the tremendous patronage accorded the D. W. Griffith masterpiece by playgoers of Chicago and visitors from many other cities in surrounding states.

Officials of the controlling firm which produced "The Birth of a Nation" visited Chicago, and after reviewing the attendance at the Illinois Theater came to the conclusion that this city is now the dramatic center of the United States. This is partly attributed to the tremendous advance Chicago has made as a Summer resort and a Mecca for tourists who formerly visited New York, Washington and other destinations for sightseers. But "The Birth of a Nation" has not visitors alone to thank for its striking success hereabouts, as the list of well-known Chicagoans who have seen the performance two or three times in a lengthy one and indicates the heavy ratio of local patronage.

CHICAGO (Ill.) JOURNAL
JULY 24, 1915

"The Birth of a Nation"

"The Birth of a Nation" bears the seal of its second great month at the Illinois theater, and still scores new achievements in record-breaking attendance. From all indications it will be rated eventually as the one big smashing success of the theatrical year in Chicago from the financial as well as the spectacular and artistic points of view. Patriotic outbursts at the showing of the Griffith masterpiece are significant of the temper of the American people at this time. "The Birth of a Nation" serves to bring back Americans to the bedrock of freedom's ideals and reaffirms the patriotic devotion of a great united nation.

GALESBURG (Ill.) MAIL
JULY 23, 1915

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION"

Mr. D. W. Griffith used 18,000 people and 2,000 horses in this great production, the stage covered miles of carefully selected countryside. It is without doubt the greatest picture that has ever been produced. It was a great honor to be chosen as lead in this masterpiece and this honor was given to Henry Walthall who made such a great impression here in the Mutual Master picture "Ghosts." He appears again in tomorrow at the West theatre in the Essanay feature "Temper." Miss Viola Dana, the "Littlest Rebel" star in "The Stoning" is the chief attraction today.

CHICAGO (Ill.) EXAMINER
JULY 29, 1915

BY JAMES WARREN CURRIE.

The moving picture has wrought a change in the musical world and has introduced new methods by which the illusion of emotions flashed on the screen can be intensified and brought home to the photoplay-goers.

The new music is "mute music," and the effect attained is that of distance. The orchestral accompaniment of "The Birth of a Nation" is the pioneer of this style of music in Chicago. The music is distinctive. It comes in waves, coming alternately in volumes and dying away to the treble of the wood and stringed instruments. But, for the most part, it is "mute music," giving the illusion of distance or of a miniature orchestra.

BY JAMES WARREN CURRIE.

The Pennsylvania State Board of Censorship has refused to grant the K. L. S. K. Corporation a permit to show Essanay's "The Blindness of Virtue" in Pennsylvania. No reason has been given. It is believed, however, that the barred picture will or has been classed under the head of "indecent" films by these custodians of community purity.

Now, "The Blindness of Virtue" ran for several seasons on the stage, with a self-admitted message to the young women of the nation. There was discussion over the stage version, but it was promoted by zealous and shrewd press agents who knew the value of argument as a magnet to draw the public. But there was no attempt to stop the play. Even Anthony Comstock hesitated and lost the opportunity to add to his laurels. He let the play alone.

The play was made into a picture by the Essanay Company, with Edna Mayo and Bryant Washburn in the leading roles. Immediately on its release it was booked in Chicago, in a downtown house, where it is running to-day under a permit from the Chicago Board of Censorship.

CUT CRIME FILMS.

Previous to this there was a picture, or a series of pictures, that dealt with all kinds of crime and race feelings and sex questions and such like. The reason that there were so many of this type of picture plays was that they furnished infinite varieties of opportunity for the introduction of the element of conflict into the stories they told.

Now, the Board of Censorship, with the realization of their responsibilities as guardians over the morals of the people of the city, always went to work with shears and a determination to use them without mercy. In about 50 per cent of the cases the use of the shears was desirable. It is to-day. A lot of films that pass under the Board of Censors should be cut. But in several cases objections were raised that they (the scissors) maimed some artistic films and put their stories in a very uninteresting form. The objections did little good, but the subsequent action of the film people produced some results.

LOSE CASE IN COURT.

Finally along came "The Birth of a Nation," done into a tremendous spectacle by one David Griffith. There was a race question raised because the picture told the history of the Civil War by means of photographs instead of writing. And the police authorities judged that it was immoral, prejudiced and inimical to the public peace. So the City of Chicago got out an injunction against the owners, forbidding them to show the picture. Griffith brought the fight into court and Judge William Fenimore Cooper handed down a decison in favor of Griffith that has become history in the development of the photoplay as an art. He decided against the City of Chicago.

Now the Board of Censorship of Chicago is careful, very careful, about the things it cuts. They are beginning to admit that the moving picture public has average intelligence. And things here, except in isolated cases, are as they should be.

BY ASHTON STEVENS.

PIKER ITEM.—Chicago millionaires who object to paying two dollars for a seat at the Illinois, where "The Birth of a Nation" is being unreled, may board the limited for Oakland, Cal., where Manager W. H. Bishop, one of the original Morosco family, is showing at Ye Liberty, Oakland's best theater, movies for five cents for two seats. Theater parties attend thirty strong, and even the host that pays as his guests enter says the shows are worth the money. The latest New York movie idea is two seats for a ten-dollar bill, but what chance against two for a jitney! The railroads soon will be advertising: "Become a Native Son for 2½ cents."

CHICAGO (ILL.) TRIBUNE
JULY 30, 1915

FLICKERINGS from FILM LAND
by KITTY KELLY

HENRY B. WALTHALL

Do you want to see Henry B. Walthall, the world's greatest motion picture leading man? Do you want to hear Henry B. Walthall, the star of more great feature productions than any other player?

As the "Little Colonel" alone in "The Birth of a Nation" he has appeared celluloidly in nearly fifteen hundred performances from Los Angeles to New York. Never once has he doubled his film appearance with a flesh one. For the first time tomorrow morning, at "The Tribune's" Eastland benefit showing of "The Birth of a Nation" at the Illinois theater, he will appear in person with his picture.

Not even in Los Angeles, where the picture was made and where he lived at the time of its opening, did he make a personal appearance in the theater showing it. He is a modest man and doesn't like to make speeches, but for the sake of the Eastland sufferers he has consented to do so, even though he has to take himself away from a scene in which he is working at the Essanay studio.

CHICAGO (ILL.) TRIBUNE
JULY 31, 1915

Sells Tickets for Eastland Benefit.

MISS DIXIE BALDWIN
PHOTO MONFORT

This morning at 10:30 o'clock the film drama, "The Birth of a Nation," will be shown to the hundreds of persons who have bought tickets to help swell THE TRIBUNE Eastland relief fund.

Pretty girls from the Heisen Follies invaded the "pit" of the board of trade yesterday and sold the traders more than $50 worth of tickets. The Bismarck Garden Ballet sold a like amount at the garden. Miss Dixie Baldwin made the largest individual sale of the day—exceeding $28.

Flowers will be sold at the performance. Annabelle Whitford will have charge of the flower girls—Veronica McNeil, Dorothy Collins, Gertrude Jacobs, Marie Astor, Gertrude Azemar, Elsie Lowenstein, and Helen Utter.

CHICAGO (ILL.) AMERICAN
JULY 31, 1915

BIRTH OF A NATION' AN INSTITUTION

City Has Adopted the Griffith Production—Programs in Film Houses.

BY ROB REEL.

"The Birth of a Nation" now enters its third record-smashing month of public favor at the Illinois Theater. Although two performances are given daily, not one opens without the significant appearance of the placard in the foyer—All Seats Sold.

It is the "Resta driven" success on the speedway of theatrical popularity.

D. W. Griffith's masterpiece has become a good deal more than a popular attraction in Chicago. It is now firmly established entertainment that is seen over and over again by the most critical play-goers. Many of these declare that they intend to visit "The Birth of a Nation" at frequent and regular intervals, if the historic spectacle remains in Chicago a year or more.

In the itinerary of thousands of Summer visitors "The Birth of a Nation" ranks in importance with the Art Institute, the Field Museum and the park system.

CHICAGO (ILL.) DAILY NEWS
JULY 28, 1915

covered yesterday.

NEW JOB FOR "JOE" SULLIVAN

Leaves Senator Lewis to Become "Movie" Chief's Secretary.

Joseph R. Sullivan, who has been private secretary to James Hamilton Lewis ever since the latter became United States senator from Illinois, resigned that position to-day. He becomes secretary to Henry E. Aitken, with headquarters at 71 West 23d street, New York city. Mr. Aitken is president of the Reliance Film corporation, the Majestic Moving Picture corporation, the Epoch Producing company and the recently organized $5,000,000 Triangle Film corporation.

"Joe" Sullivan is well known in local democratic politics. He is a twin brother of William L. Sullivan, private secretary to Gov. Dunne, and a younger brother of Judge John J. Sullivan of the Municipal court. During the Dunne and Busse administrations as mayor he was confidential secretary to Chiefs of Police Collins and Shippy. Senator Lewis will take a new secretary with him when he returns to Washington.

CHICAGO (ILL.) TRIBUNE
JULY 28, 1915

FLICKERINGS from FILM LAND
by KITTY KELLY

Look for the Lady in the Hoop Skirts.

LOOK for the lady in hoop skirts and ruffles, the lady who has apparently just stepped out of the pages of the past. She is to be seen in various places around town today and tomorrow and all the rest of the week and she has something that intimately concerns you, sympathizers with the Eastland sorrowers.

She is the special insurance agent to collect your help for the Eastland benefit fund, and in exchange for your offering she'll give you as a receipt your ticket—better make it tickets—to the special performance of "The Birth of a Nation" on Saturday morning at 10:30 at the Illinois theater, given under the auspices of THE TRIBUNE.

This ticket—or, better, these tickets, for it takes more than one to get the fullest enjoyment out of this tremendous photo-drama—admits the bearer into a world of wonder quite beyond the possibilities of human imagination until he has seen it. That one man—namely: D. W. Griffith—could convene in his brain and execute into finished results such tremendous effects as the magnificent battle scenes, such exquisite miniatures as the dogs and kittens playing, Mae Marsh making ermine from cotton and soot, is beyond realization until "seeing is believing" proves it.

As the final achievement in photodrama to date this picture ranks first. No season in Chicago is complete without seeing it, for it is heralded the country over as supreme, and it is its own best testimony as to the possibilities to which the cinemac art may attain.

People who live here cannot afford to miss it, for it is the subject on everybody's tongue, and people who are here only for a short time, visitors and students, cannot afford to go back to their homes without taking along a memory of it, to revive for "the folks" who have not been able to see it.

Saturday morning is a specially propi- [illegible] duty, for it may be combined as well with the mission humanitarian in which the whole city is engaged. Your pleasure in "The Birth of a Nation" will be so much sweetened by the idea that it is going to bring a bit of present help to some heart th sorrow over the tragic event of Saturday.

So don't forget about the little lady in the hoop skirts. Look her up and let her help you out for your Saturday forenoon. She'll be around town in various places and she'll be out at Northwestern university and the University of Chicago. And if you don't happen to see her just drop around to the Illinois theater's box office and buy your ticket from the central source of supplies.

MISS MIRIAM COOPER.

CHICAGO (Ill.) TRIBUNE
JULY 31, 1915

FLICKERINGS from FILM LAND
by KITTY KELLY

MISS LILLIAN GISH

MISS MAE MARSH

HENRY B. WALTHALL

Mae Marsh and Lillian Gish, a la celluloid, and Henry Walthall, himself and his film shadow, will be seen this morning at "The Tribune's" Eastland benefit showing of "The Birth of a Nation" at the Illinois theater. Are you going to help the survivors and at the same time see the world's greatest moving picture?

Eastland Benefits for Old and Young.

TWO stirring benefit events occupy the attention of Saturday morningers in picturedom. There is the big affair at the Illinois, where "The Birth of a Nation," Griffith's sensation, unreels at 10:30 for THE TRIBUNE's Eastland fund. Besides the picture, the star of it, Henry Walthall, is going to shine in person as well as celluloidly.

But folks have to be 21 to be able to get there, and over at Orchestra hall is a place for the folks not of age. The Strand's regular morning matinee for little folks is turned into an Eastland benefit, where happy children may help those who are unhappy. It's a joy promising program, what with "The Sleeping Beauty," a libel picture, and one about a runaway leopard, and besides, Margot, a little classic dancer, and Harry Fullan Tyrrell, a young violinist, will perform. The party begins at 10 o'clock.

Journal, Chicago
Ill. July 31/1915

Donald Crisp.
AS GEN. U. S. GRANT.
IN "THE BIRTH OF A NATION"
ILLINOIS.

CHICAGO (Ill.) KOTOGRAPHY
JUL 31 1915

BIG THREE FORM TRIANGLE FILM

MOTOGRAPHY exclusively announces the completion of corporation details of the Triangle Film Corporation at La Junta, Colo., July 20. D. W. Griffith, Thomas Ince and Mack Sennett are to be producing directors as well as officers of the company.

Adam Kessel, Jr., Chas. Baumann of the New York Moving Picture Company are directors and officers. H. E. Aitken was agreed upon as president.

Crews, appears at the Colonial.

The pictures continuing are "The Melting Pot" at the Fine Arts, "The Blindness of Virtue" at the La Salle, and "The Birth of a Nation" at the Illinois.

* *

Flickers.

Harold Lockwood is going to step out of features for a while into some two reel subjects for the American company, which will let those folks who like him see him often, as he will be in a number of program releases until arrangements are completed for more feature appearances.

Dorothy Gish is doing her vacationing at the San Francisco fair. She has her mother with her, and sister Lillian, who is best known as Elsie Stoneman in "The Birth of a Nation," is at home in Los Angeles confabbing with a Paris modiste in regard to an elaborate wardrobe which she is to use in a forthcoming feature.

Signs of the times—the notes that come roaming in from old Majestic-Reliance studios at 4500 Sunset boulevard, Los Angeles, now bear the label "Griffith Studio."

New Chicago Ill.
July 30/1915

WHAT NEW FIRM PLANS TO DO.

Triangle Concern to Present Varied Program, Representative Says.

Henry MacMahon, general representative of the Triangle Film corporation, passed through Chicago on his way from New York to Los Angeles, where he will confer with the newly organized combine of producing directors, David W. Griffith, Mack Sennet and Thomas H. Ince. He remained long enough to divulge some of the concern's plans for future film presentations, including "The Birth of a Nation," now at the Illinois theater.

"Negotiations are pending for the lease of two theaters in Chicago to present the Triangle program," said Mr. MacMahon. "We hope to announce the names of these playhouses shortly, for we expect to offer our initial bill Sept. 6.

"I want to correct an impression which has gained circulation since the inception of our company," he continued. "We do not aim to present only such gigantic spectacles as 'The Birth of a Nation,' but rather a choice program which will appeal to the taste of the fastidious motion picture enthusiasts at dramatic prices. Such bills will include an Ince drama in plural reels, two Keystone comedies and a Griffith production. Periodically we will release an unusual offering of 'The Birth of a Nation' variety."

Ten companies will be out on the road with David W. Griffith's play between Aug. 25 and Oct. 1 to present this spectacle in the principal cities of the country. St. Louis, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, Kansas City, Omaha and other cities will have their first view of this picture then. Thus far it has appeared only in Chicago, New York, Los Angeles, San Francisco and Boston.

CHICAGO (Ill.) JOURNAL
JULY 31, 1915
203

Haggard novel, Emelie Melville, Handyside are in the cast.

"The Birth of a Nation."

"The Birth of a Nation" rolls into its third month along the road of public favor at the Illinois theater. The significant placard "All seats sold" appears in the foyer after the opening of each performance—twice daily—with the regularity of clockwork. D. W. Griffith's world masterpiece has become a good deal more than a popular attraction in Chicago. It is now an amusement institution, a firmly established entertainment which is viewed over and over again by the city's most critical playgoers. It has more truly great scenes, more momentous crises of drama and historical action, than several dozen average productions of their

CHICAGO (Ill.) TRIBUNE
JULY 27, 1915

FLICKERI

"Tribune" Benefit to Aid Survivors.

ON Saturday morning "The Birth of a Nation, under the auspices of THE TRIBUNE, will unreel its wonders in special aid of those bereaved by the tragic toppling over of the Eastland. The whole proceeds from the whole Illinois theater will be turned over to the benefit fund.

The performance will be at 10:30 and seats will be on sale this afternoon in places where you can't miss them. No telephone reservations will be made, but there will be plenty of tickets.

Saturday morning offers a double opportunity.

The Eastland disaster is marked by peculiarly far reaching woe, because it makes so for ultimate material need. Homes are bereft of their supporters in so many instances, and homes themselves are endangered, through the probable inability to meet payments, which means the loss of the money already invested.

The overturned Eastland is responsible not only for the heartache of broken family ties, but the bitterness of economic wreckage as well.

For the latter there is a little hope of salvage. "The Birth of a Nation" on Saturday morning, with the public's cooperation, offers some. It is the public's chance to act as an economic insurance agent with a very small premium required on the part of each individual of the public.

Then there's "The Birth of a Nation" itself. No investment ever paid such dividend in thrill and glow and wonder as does a ticket to that picture marvel. It is agog every minute with history, romance, love, sorrow, beauty, grimness, glory.

If you haven't seen it yet you can't afford to miss it on this specially fortunately devised opportunity, when some material good will come out of your seeing it, aside from the pleasure you get yourself.

And if you have seen it once, now is the best time in the world to fulfill your certain determination "I must see it again." It is a picture that calls everybody back. Now is the time to answer the call.

To see the impressive replica of Lincoln's assassination alone is worth the whole effort; to see the widely staged battle scenes, or that bored soldier trying to flirt with demure Miss Lillian Gish, or Mae Marsh doing anything, or the gathering and riding of the clans—any of these single things for photographic artistic-ness and realism and amazement are wholly worth the effort.

Put Saturday, 10:30 a. m., down in your engagement book with "Illinois" after it—and then keep the date.

MOTION PICTURE WORLD (N. Y. City)
JUL 31 1915

"The Birth of a Nation" will soon close its second record-breaking month at the Illinois theater. Present indications point that it will be the great, big financial success of the present theatrical year in Chicago. The final papers of the appeal granted the city by Judge Wm. Fenimore Cooper were signed Saturday, July 17. Assistant Corporation Counsel Louis B. Anderson and George L. Reker secured the papers. The Appellate Court adjourned on that date, however, and will not be convened until October, so that the exhibition of the picture will go on unrestricted in the interim, so long as no ordinances are violated. At the dedication of St. Mark's Methodist Episcopal Church, which is the largest colored church of that denomination in Chicago, last week, "The Birth of a Nation" was denounced in the sermon as being unjust in its delineation of negro character. Bishop W. F. McDowell, of Evanston, and Bishop Isaiah B. Scott, bishop of Africa, were present.

Chicago Ill. TRIBUNE
July 29 1915

"Little Colonel" at Eastland Benefit.

HENRY B. WALTHALL.

TWO Little Colonels will be seen at the special showing of "The Birth of a Nation" in the Illinois theater Saturday morning for the benefit of Eastland survivors.

One will be the Little Colonel of the screen, the other the Little Colonel of the flesh—Henry B. Walthall, hailed as a result of his work in Griffith's film masterpiece as the world's greatest motion picture actor.

With the heroic little figure of the man about whom the fastest action of "The Birth of a Nation" centers picture audiences the country over are familiar. Mr. Walthall, now starring with the Essanay company, will give Saturday morning's benefit audience a chance to hear his voice. From the stage he will talk to the Good Fellows "out front."

Every dollar the benefit tickets bring will go, through THE TRIBUNE, into Mayor Thompson's relief fund. To the last penny the Eastland orphans and the Eastland widows will have their struggle for livelihood lightened by the proceeds. The prices of seats will be just what they are at regular performances.

There were just 1,200 of the benefit to start with, and the rest will go fast when the special ticket booth in the Illinois theater lobby is opened this morning.

Good Fellows, are you going to DO YOUR BIT?

Chicago Ill. TRIBUNE
July. 30 / 915

DOING THEIR BIT.

Diamond Jim Brady and Board of Trade Men Were Among the Purchasers of Tickets to "Birth of a Nation" Eastland Benefit for Saturday Morning.

PEARL GERMONDE, BEATRICE YOUNG LAURA LYLE, RUTH COTTEN, HARRIET GUSTIN SELLING TICKETS TO SWING STARRING AND HAL WILEY OF THE BOARD OF TRADE

BEATRICE YOUNG OF THE HEISEN FOLLIES SELLING TICKETS TO "DIAMOND JIM" BRADY

Do you want to "DO YOUR BIT?"

Do you want to see the world's biggest photo-dramatic achievement, "The Birth of a Nation"?

Both desires can be accomplished tomorrow morning at THE TRIBUNE'S Eastland benefit showing of the picture at the Illinois theater.

Besides the picture's showing, there is going to be present in person its own hero and the recognized world's greatest film actor, Henry B. Walthall.

Several celebrities both in town and out bought tickets during the day. D. W. Griffith, who produced "The Birth of a Nation," sent the following wire from Los Angeles to Manager George Bowles of the Illinois theater:

Please buy for me one box for "Birth of Nation" account "Chicago Tribune" relief fund for Eastland sufferers for $100. Turn same over to "Tribune" to be auctioned off to the highest bidder. Extend to Mayor Thompson my sincere sympathy in Chicago's severest affliction. Thank "Tribune" for its wonderful response and cooperation.

Earlier in the day H. E. Aitken, former head of the Mutual Film corporation and now president of the newly organized Triangle Film company sent this:

Buy one gallery seat for me for "Birth of a Nation" Tribune relief fund for Eastland sufferers for $100.

Charles N. Wheeler of THE TRIBUNE will auction off the box and gallery seats at the board of trade this afternoon at 1 o'clock.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Heisen, the dancers, at the head of their ballet, buttonholed every likely spender. Peggy O'Neil, the "Peg" of "Peg O' My Heart," ran into Mrs. Neisen at the Auditorium and bought a pair of tickets.

The girls who sold tickets were: Maria Meyers, Florence Traver, Rae Cole, Pearl Germonde, Beatrice Young, Laura Lyle, Ruth Cotten, and Harriet Gustin. The first three are from the Bismarck Garden ballet; the others are members of the Heisen Follies, playing at the Stratford.

CHICAGO (Ill.) POST
AUG. 7, 1915

"Birth of a Nation" to Move; Griffith Leases The Colonial Theater

The D. W. Griffith forces who put the "two-dollar movie"—so called—on the theatrical map and took over the Illinois Theater early in the summer for their first spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," have leased the Colonial Theater on Randolph street for a permanent home. The initial lease for this theater, which has housed many great dramatic spectacles, takes it from Jones, Linick & Schaeffer control and gives it over to the Epoch Producing Corporation for a period of one year. George Bowles, the manager for "The Birth of a Nation," will be in charge as manager of productions in this territory and of the Colonial.

"The Birth of a Nation," which closes at the Illinois Theater Saturday night, Aug. 21, will be moved to the new home for the first performance there Sunday afternoon, Aug. 22, but for the week previous the house will be given over to the decorators and other men required to put the playhouse in the best possible shape for the coming year.

The lease is dated from Aug. 16, at which time D. W. Griffith will be in Chicago to take charge of getting his new "two-dollar photo-drama house" ready for the opening. It is his purpose to rearrange everything pertaining to projection and the proper presentation of his masterpieces. He intends to give Chicagoans further reason to praise his former efforts.

He will have absolute control of the Colonial, having been given free rein in the theater to do as he pleases. Griffith devotes the same care and attention to the presentation of his pictures as he does to producing the stories. He contends that many productions have failed because of faulty projection and inartistic surroundings. It will be his aim in the Colonial to obtain the finest production—projection, stage setting, artistic surroundings and music—ever realized in this country, either for the spoken or the silent drama.

CLIPPING FROM Post
Date Chicago Ill. 8.11.15

Theater Company, in line with its policy of securing the finest vocal talent for its programs, in which the Strand Symphony Orchestra, led by Arthur Dunham, is always a leading feature.

* * *

"The Birth of a Nation," which has had such a long run at the Illinois Theater, will be transferred from that theater Saturday night, Aug. 28, and will begin Sunday, Aug. 29, at the Colonial Theater under the same management.

HERALD. CHICAGO. ILL
AUG-1 1915

ILLINOIS—"The Birth of a Nation" enters into its third record-breaking month. Every one goes away thrilled with the wonder of this greatest motion picture. Many people have seen "The Birth of a Nation" two and three times.

CHICAGO (ILL.) AMERICAN
AUG. 2, 1915

The $5,000,000 Triangle Corporation is after the Colonial and the Studebaker, figuring on the former as a "home" for the "Birth of a Nation."

CHICAGO (ILL.) TRIBUNE
AUG. 2, 1915

Two Loop Houses Taken by Triangle.

PROMISES by the Triangle Film Corporation, recently formed by rebellious Mutualers, to give Chicagoans a chance to see its productions in two loop playhouses have been fulfilled.

The Studebaker and the Colonial have been taken over by the Griffith-Ince-Sennett combine, and Chicagoans soon will have the opportunity to see if the much heralded Triangle program fulfills its sponsors' predictions.

The advent of the new corporation into the local field also marks the retirement of two playhouses from the Jones, Linick & Schaeffer list of theaters. The Studebaker will be a permanent Triangle stronghold, opening about Sept. 6, it is understood. At that time the J., L. & S. flag will be hauled down and the Metro program now being given will be discontinued.

At the Colonial a different arrangement will be in effect. There "The Birth of a Nation" will flip over from the Illinois on Aug. 22. It will run as long as Chicago takes enough interest to make it pay D. W. Griffith to keep it there. Film folk think this will be until about Dec. 1. At that date the $2 schedule will drop back to the present popular prices and Jones, Linick & Schaeffer will resume management with either vaudeville or feature pictures.

CHICAGO (ILL.) EXAMINER
AUG. 3, 1915

[illegible] out in the [illegible] of a [illegible] Aug. [illegible] why [illegible]

A booking arrangement has been entered into by Jones, Linick & Schaeffer, operators of the Colonial Theater, by which "The Birth of a Nation" will be transferred to the Randolph street playhouse on August 22. The present Paramount policy will terminate August 14. While "The Birth of a Nation" will continue at its present prices at the new house, Jones, Linick & Schaeffer do not give up the theater. Norman E. Field, the J. L. & S. manager of the Colonial, will continue as such during the run of the film.

Another booking arrangement by the same firm with the Triangle Film Corporation installs the new productions of Griffith-Ince-Sennet, giving the Triangle company bookings at the Studebaker beginning September 15. Louis J. Jones, the J. L. & S. house manager, continues as manager under the new arrangement.

HERALD. CHICAGO.
ILL. AUG 2, 1915.

[illegible] from the "movie" benefits show that the [illegible] will receive substantial aid. The Hamburger benefit will amount to $600, while the children brought to Orchestra Hall something like $700. This with the "Birth of a Nation" benefit and the money [illegible] at the various outlying picture houses will make the "movies'" contribution to humanity worth while.

AMERICAN. CHICAGO
ILL. AUG 3, 1915

The Colonial will house "The Birth of a Nation," opening August [illegible] this is only a booking arrangement. The Studebaker on September 15 will begin showing the new Griffith-Ince-Sennet productions at a $2 top price. Both theaters remain under the direction of Jones, Linick & Schaefer.

CHICAGO (ILL.) EXAMINER
AUG. 3, 1915

Triangle Film Just Business Venture, Says Its President

The interest of the public in the shares of the newly organized Triangle Film Company has been so acute since they were first quoted on the curb that President H. E. Aitken has found it necessary to publish advertisements pointing out that the corporation is the ordinary business venture and not of the bonanza type, with guaranteed profits and certainty of large return.

The personnel of the organizers of the company is largely responsible for the widespread belief that financially, the Triangle Film will be another Syndicate Film on a larger scale.

Aitken has the reputation of one who built the Mutual Film Company, of which he was president. C. O. Baumann and Adam and Charles Kessel were formerly connected with the New York Motion Picture Corporation of unparalleled prosperity. David W. Griffith, Mack Sennett and Thomas H. Ince are the three foremost art directors in the film world. Griffith achieved his greatest success in the $2-a-seat, "The Birth of a Nation." Mack Sennett will continue to produce his "Keystone Comedies" for the Triangle. Griffith and Ince each will produce a five-reel picture weekly.

News CHICAGO
ILL. AUG 2, 1915

HOUSES BOOK TRIANGLE FILMS

Studebaker and Colonial Show Output of New Concern.

Negotiations have been completed by the Triangle Film company to present its feature attractions in the Studebaker and Colonial theaters, one house to be occupied permanently and the other only until the public ceases to patronize a current attraction which will be moved to it the latter part of this month. "The Birth of a Nation" will be removed from the Illinois theater to the Colonial Sunday, Aug. 22, while the Studebaker theater will present the new Triangle program at dramatic prices, beginning Sept. 15.

Both theaters are in possession of Jones, Linick & Schaefer, Chicago "movie" magnates, who will retain the management of them during the Triangle's occupancy. In a statement issued yesterday by Aaron Jones, president of the theatrical concern, he said:

"We have not relinquished our lesses for the Colonial and Studebaker theaters, as was reported, but have merely entered into a booking arrangement with the film producing concern, as we would with any other theatrical or motion picture company wishing to present attractions at our playhouses. During the presentation of Triangle photo plays at our houses we will retain control of them and our managers will continue to supervise the direction of their respective theaters—Louis Jones at the Studebaker and Norman Fields at the Colonial."

CHICAGO (ILL.) HERALD
AUG. 6, 1915

GRIFFITH, OF MOVIE FAME, TAKES OVER THE COLONIAL

Promises Another "$2 Film" When "The Birth of a Nation" Completes Run.

The Colonial Theater has been leased to D. W. Griffith, producer of "The Birth of a Nation," and that spectacular film will be seen there beginning Aug. 22. It will remain at the Illinois until then. Griffith has the Colonial for one year and plans to present there another "two-dollar film" when the initial run is finished here.

George Bowles, manager of the presentation at the Illinois, will be manager of the Colonial beginning Aug. 16, when the house will be redecorated and renovated. Griffith will be here at that time and will superintend the atmospheric detail of fitting the theater with the same regard to minute incidentals as he displayed in the direction of the famous film.

Jones, Linick & Schaefer, present lessees of the Colonial, will cease to be associated in the management when Bowles takes the reins.

39

IPPING [illegible] TRADER
AUG. 4, 1915

MAMMOTH PICTURE OF GREAT DRAMA TO BE SHOWN AT FAIR

With the signing of a contract for D. W. Griffith's famous new work, "The Birth of a Nation," plans have been made for a stupendous motion picture, [illegible] show attraction before the grand stand at the coming Central Canada Exhibition. This is a marked departure from the form of entertainment of other years but has been selected on account of its outstanding merit. The producer, Griffith, is said to have given the world more film favorites and devices for increasing the effectiveness of motion pictures than any other ten men in America. Not only the exhibition officers but several other Ottawa people who have seen this latest art conquest assert that it well deserves the new name it has earned, "The Eighth Wonder of the World."

In "The Birth of a Nation," a thrilling, terse history of the American Civil War over slavery is traced. The title is derived from the circumstance of the United States being reborn or reconstructed after the struggle of 14 years. Linked to the historical [illegible] is a beautiful romance in which the heroes of the war figure.

Dramatic critics of the leading New York papers were astonished at the capabilities of motion photography as revealed in "The Birth of a Nation." The standard drama was eclipsed and people are still paying up to $2 a seat in the large Liberty theatre to see the wonderful screen drama. It is never compared with the ordinary moving picture.

Eighteen thousand actors, appearing in 5,000 pictures, which cost half a million dollars, comprise "The Birth of a Nation." All the historical characters of the time, such as Lincoln and the generals, Grant and Lee, figure in the action. Sometimes a vast army fighting fills the screen and in a moment one or two of the principals occupy all the space. The devices employed in telling the story show beyond question the superiority of the motion picture to the ordinary stage for such a purpose.

Examiner
Chicago Ill.
Aug 3 15

at the MAJESTIC

[illegible] day festival of the Plattdeutsche given under the auspices of the Platt-[illegible] and Holsteiner mettwurst will be [illegible] off.

One feature of Griffith's great civil war epic which has been commented upon so far consists of stray little touches of humor scattered through the long train of tremendous spectacles and national tragedy. The forlorn admiration of a Union private for Miss Stoneman, daughter of the great statesman, is a gem in humorous silent acting, and is in sharp relief to the powerful situation in which it is encompassed.

'Birth of Nation' Greatest Movie

With this week "The Birth of a Nation," the greatest spectacle-drama in history, will complete its second "sell-out" month at the Illinois Theater. After seven weeks, during which the "All Seats Sold" sign was moved to the fore twice daily, there is not the slightest indication of a lag in the tremendous patronage accorded the D. W. Griffith masterpiece by playgoers of Chicago and visitors from many other cities in surrounding states.

Officials of the controlling firm which produced "The Birth of a Nation" visited Chicago last week and after reviewing the attendance at the Illinois Theater came to the conclusion that this city is the new dramatic center of the United States. This is partly attributed to the tremendous advance Chicago has made as a Summer resort and a mecca for tourists who formerly visited New York, Washington and other destinations for sightseers.

But "The Birth of a Nation" has not visitors alone to thank for its striking success hereabouts, as the list of well known Chicagoans who have seen the performance two and three times is a lengthy one and in-

CLIPPING FROM
Journal
Date Jan 22 15
F 5 15

[illegible] a princess (Miss Claire) and a clever [illegible]

In David W. Griffith's spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," its high points of interest are the scenes showing civil war battles, Lee's surrender at Appomattox, President Lincoln's assassination in Ford's theater fifty years ago and the wild rides of the Ku Klux Klan.

JOURNAL. CHICAGO
ILL. AUG 6, 1915

Word comes from George Bowles, manager of "The Birth of a Nation," that, beginning August 22, he will be manager of the Colonial theater for one year. He explains that the Randolph street playhouse has been leased for that length of time by David W. Griffith, J. J. McCarthy and their associates in the Epoch Producing corporation, and that it will be used for showing Griffith pictures, starting with "The Birth of a Nation." "I shall manage the Colonial and all the attractions that play there during the time that it remains under the control of Mr. Griffith, Mr. McCarthy and their associates," says Bowles. "As for arrangements for other theaters, I am not quite ready to make any statements, but I hope before long to have something authentic to give out." The closing statement evidently is in reference to the report that the Epoch Producing corporation also would take over the Studebaker.

HERALD. CHICAGO
ILL. AUG 6, 1915

GRIFFITH, OF MOVIE FAME, TAKES OVER THE COLONIAL

Promises Another "$2 Film" When "The Birth of a Nation" Completes Run.

The Colonial Theater has been leased to D. W. Griffith, producer of "The Birth of a Nation," and that spectacular film will be seen there beginning Aug. 22. It will remain at the Illinois until then. Griffith has the Colonial for one year and plans to present there another "two-dollar film" when the initial run is finished here.

George Bowles, manager of the presentation at the Illinois, will be manager of the Colonial beginning Aug. 16, when the house will be redecorated and renovated. Griffith will be here at that time and will superintend the atmospheric detail of fitting the theater with the same regard to minute incidentals as he displayed in the direction of the famous film.

Jones, Linick & Schaefer, present lessees of the Colonial, will cease to be associated in the management when Bowles takes the reins.

CHICAGO (Ill.) JOURNAL
AUG. 6, 1915

'BIRTH OF NATION' AT COLONIAL

Popular Movie Play to Move from Illinois Theater Aug. 22

"The Birth of a Nation," D. W. Griffith's filmed representation of southern life during the reconstruction period, will move from the Illinois theater to the Colonial on Aug. 22 and remain there indefinitely. For this purpose a lease has been made of the Colonial for a period of one year. George Bowles, the manager of "The Birth of a Nation," will be in charge as manager of productions in this territory and also of the Colonial.

CHICAGO (Ill.) AMERICAN
AUG. 7, 1915
177

Birth of Nation Limit Still Out of Sight

BY ROB REEL.

No attraction on record ever enjoyed a Summer run in Chicago equal in success to that of "The Birth of a Nation" at the Illinois Theater. In its third month in this city the great D. W. Griffith spectacle is smashing precedent by displaying the "All Seats Sold" label of prosperity in the foyer after the opening of every performance on the twice-daily schedule.

The tide of great world events and the necessity for a general feeling for Americanism is reflected in inspiring manner by the patriotic scenes and episodes in "The Birth of a Nation." The spirit of Abraham Lincoln flames anew in the hearts of many thousands of citizens as the result of the realistic and reverent depiction of the great war President.

Spectators who are thrilled by the sight of daring deeds of horsemanship and by maneuvers by large bodies of mounted men find added pleasure in that part of the play devoted to the uprising of the Ku Klux Klan in the Southland during the carpet-bagger period of the civil war. The sight of 500 mounted riders, clad in ghostly white with shrouded faces, plunging up hill and down, through streams and over ditches, is one that tirs the blood and creates wonderment as to the master skill of the producer.

AMERICAN. CHICAGO
ILL. AUG 6, 1915

NEW $5,000,000 FILMS TO COME HERE FIRST

Triangle Corporation Attracts Financiers as Well as Movie Army.

BY ROB REEL.

Chicago, if you please, is to get the first runs of the Triangle Film Corporation. This $5,000,000 venture, with the biggest producers and players obtainable, has planned to market the output throughout America and foreign lands, but Chicago's fashionable playhouses are to have first view of the majority of the plays. New York also will be an introduction center for part of the output.

The investing public and the financial community as well as movie fans are taking keen interest in Triangle Film this week because of trading which has opened on the New York curb. A goodly number of investors have already been attracted by the prospects of large earnings and the names associated with the enterprise.

It is realized, however, that shareholders should have the benefit of an active market for their shares, such as the curb affords. There is no use for most persons to embark their funds in a business enterprise unless the securities they acquire are easily negotiable. This is particularly true in the case of small investors—the kind that is specially invited into this enterprise by reason of the low price of shares, $5 each. They acquire not only the opportunities for the ready transfer, sale and repurchase of their holdings, but also the ready means of ascertaining the worth of their stock. The best plan, therefore, is to have it dealt in on the curb, where the actual merits of the security are determined from day to day by the "open market" selling price.

LIST OF OFFICERS.

The officers and organizers of Triangle Film Corporation are H. E. Aitken, notable for his executive skill in having upbuilt Mutual Film, of which he was formerly president; C. O. Baumann, Adam and Charles Kessel of the hugely prosperous New York Motion Picture Corporation; David W. Griffith, Mack Sennett and Thomas H. Ince, the three foremost art directors of film manufacture. The overwhelming financial success of Griffith's celebrated $2 picture, "The Birth of a Nation," and even more particularly the enormous permanent market acquired in all lands by Mack Sennett's so-called "Keystone Comedies," would seem to indicate that the future products of such directors will continue to yield —as they have yielded in the past—the biggest financial returns.

Mr. Sennett will produce exclusively for Triangle Film his "Keystone Comedies." Mr. Griffith will personally supervise the production of a five-reel picture each week; and Mr. Ince, noted for his Western dramas and his stupendous "The Battle of Gettysburg," will likewise present an important five-reel picture-drama weekly.

FORTY STAGE STARS.

With the three art directors have been associated about forty of the most prominent stage stars of America, many of whom will make their first stage appearance under the Triangle banner.

President Aitken is giving a large amount of his personal attention to the foreign department, which is being organized with subsidiary Triangle corporations in each of the foreign countries. The studio equipment of the concern at Los Angeles, Cal., ranks with the most extensive and complete in the world.

Moviegrams.

The D. W. Griffith forces, who put the "two-dollar movie"—so-called—on the theatrical map and took over the Illinois Theater early in the Summer for their first spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," have leased the Colonial Theater on Randolph street for a permanent home. George Bowles, the manager of "The Birth of a Nation," will be in charge as manager of productions in this territory and of the Colonial. "The Birth of a Nation," which closes at the Illinois Theater Saturday night, August 21, will be moved to the new home for the first performance there Sunday afternoon, August 22.

EXAMINER. CHICAGO
ILL AUG 6, 1915

$2 MOVIES TO APPEAR AT COLONIAL

D. W. Griffith Interests Lease Theater for High Grade Productions.

THE W. D. Griffith forces who put the "two-dollar movie"—so-called—on the theatrical map and took ovtr the Illinois Theater early in the Summer for their first spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," have leased the Colonial Theater on Randolph street for a permanent home. The initial lease for this theater takes it from Jones, Linick & Shaeffer control and gives it to the Epoch Producing Corporation for one year. George Bowles, the manager for "The Birth of a Nation," will be in charge.

"The Birth of a Nation," which closes at the Illinois Theater Saturday night, August 21, will be moved to the new home for the first performance there Sunday afternoon, August 23. In the week previous the house will be redecorated.

The lease is dated from August 16, at which time D. W. Griffith will be in Chicago to take charge of getting his new "two-dollar photodrama house" ready for the opening. It will be his aim in the Colonial to obtain the finest production, projection, stage setting, artistic surroundings and music.

PEORIA (Ills.) STAR
AUG. 5, 1915

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION."

Photo Play Denounced by Grand Army Men as Slanderous and False to History.

Recently George H. Thomas Post, No. 5, Department of Illinois, G. A. R., of Chicago, appointed a committee to investigate the photo play, "The Birth of a Nation." The report of the committee has been made, a copy of which was received Wednesday by Colonel John M. Snyder, Illinois department commander. It is as follows:

"The play is a remarkable work of art, but is meant to reproduce in substance the book of Thomas Dixon entitled "The Clansman," whose chief purpose is to glorify the course of secession, create and intensify hatred against the negro and to make it appear that the infamous Ku Klux Klan was an organization of chivalrous white men to defend the people.

"In the moving picture show there is one scene that represents a company of United States colored soldiers in uniform commanded by a white officer in possession of a town, shooting and burning and acting like fiends. History does not record a single instance of the kind. It is a base slander on the men who wore blue. The negroes represented in the pictures are low down criminals, and totally debased. To people ignorant of the facts they make the impression that colored people are a depraved and criminal race governed only by brutal lusts. It has no suggestion as to the great advance made by the negroes since emancipation, in religion, education, in property and usefulness as citizens.

"The main point in the play seems to be to show that as to slavery and secession the south was altogether right, and that in the civil war and reconstruction the men who defended the union were wholly wrong. The whole influence of the exhibition is to exert sectional feeling and bitterness and its representations are utterly false to history.

"We recommended the adoption of the following resolution:

"The George H. Thomas Post, No. 5, Department of Illinois, G. A. R., protests against the exhibition called 'The Birth of a Nation.'

"First—Because it contains slanderous representations as to the soldiers who fought to preserve the union and caricatures the history of the war.

"Second—It represents the infamous Ku Klux Klan as a society of patriotic, chivalrous men.

"Third—Its whole influence is to excite and intensify hatred of the negro race and perpetuate sectional bitterness."

This report and resolutions were adopted by the post.

It is understood that Department Commander Snyder will call the attention of all the posts in the Illinois

TRIBUNE. CHICAGO
ILL. AUG. 6, 1915

Well, Who Cares About It, Anyway?

THERE is little satisfaction to a newspaper—and much less to the public—in getting involved in a managerial controversy. Consequently THE TRIBUNE, after unintentionally starting the present Jones, Linick & Schaefer-Triangle Film corporation-Studebaker-Colonial argument, has carefully avoided taking part. Other papers leaped boldly into the ring and from latest reports have learned, probably with regret, that all "official" press agent statements are, to say the least, not "official."

Here are the facts and Flickering readers may puzzle out what it's all about if they are interested enough to wade through this, or care in the slightest who manages the theaters they attend:

On Monday morning this department printed an exclusive story, obtained from heretofore unimpeachable sources, that the new Griffith-Ince-Sennett combine, known as the Triangle Film corporation, had concluded negotiations for control of the Studebaker and Colonial.

The following day a bitter wail of distress blew in from the press agent of Jones, Linick & Schaefer, present lessees of the Colonial and operators of the Studebaker. The latter house, owned by the Studebakers, is under lease to Klaw & Erlanger.

The P. A. wail declared emphatically that J. L. & S. were not going to lose control of the Colonial and Studebaker and suggested that THE TRIBUNE should never print any news about J. L. & S. affairs unless it came from the press agent. It further declared that J. L. & S. would continue to manage both houses.

The next morning the story received from the J. L. & S. offices was printed in all the other papers.

Last night a statement was received from George Bowles, manager of the "Birth of a Nation," which reads in part as follows:

"I don't like the idea of having to contradict any statements that may have been given out, but the public has a right to know that whatever theater houses a Griffith production will be Griffith controlled. We are not booking 'The Birth of a Nation' and we are not likely to book any of the Griffith productions. Whatever house we go into we will control.

"The Colonial theater has been leased for a year, all statements to the contrary notwithstanding. I shall manage the Colonial and all of the attractions that play there during the time that it remains under the control of Mr. Griffith, Mr. McCarthy, and their associates.

"As for arrangements for other theaters, I am not quite ready to make any statements, but I hope before long to have something authentic to give out."

So, there you are. Decide it for yourselves.

CAGO (Ill.) JOURNAL
AUG. 7, 1915

...ing beginning ... will change bill tomorrow afternoon, offering for next week the familiar southern ... "Uncle Tom."

"The Birth of a Nation"

"The Birth ... magnificence and ... popular, remains on view ... The earlier reels unroll ... incidents from the civil war ... march to the sea, the battle of ... Lee's surrender, and the assassination of Lincoln—on a scale of numbers and vividness new to motion pictures in America. Then follows a pictorial story of conditions in the south during the days of reconstruction, the career of the Ku-Klux Klan, ranging from all domestic life to turbulent war, between this is woven sentimental romance between a soldier of the south and a woman of the north. Music portrays all the scenes of the ...

Mae Marsh, Who Is Among the Players Cinematized in "The Birth of a Nation," at the Illinois Theater.

CHICAGO (Ill.) POST
AUG. 6. 1915

Mae Marsh, Who Is Among the Players Cinematized in "The Birth of a Nation," at the Illinois Theater.

CHICAGO (Ill.) TRIBUNE
AUG. 6, 1915

FLICKERINGS
by KITTY

Well, Who Cares About It, Anyway?

THERE is little satisfaction to a newspaper—and much less to the public—in getting involved in a managerial controversy. Consequently THE TRIBUNE, after unintentionally starting the present Jones, Linick & Schaefer-Triangle Film corporation-Studebaker-Colonial argument, has carefully avoided taking part. Other papers leaped boldly into the ring and from latest reports have learned, probably with regret, that all "official" press agent statements are, to say the least, not "official."

Here are the facts and Flickering readers may puzzle out what it's all about if they are interested enough to wade through this, or care in the slightest who manages the theaters they attend:

On Monday morning this department printed an exclusive story, obtained from heretofore unimpeachable sources, that the new Griffith-Ince-Sennett combine, known as the Triangle Film corporation, had concluded negotiations for control of the Studebaker and Colonial.

The following day a bitter wail of distress blew in from the press agent of Jones, Linick & Schaefer, present lessees of the Colonial and operators of the Studebaker. The latter house, owned by the Studebakers, is under lease to Klaw & Erlanger.

The P. A. wail declared emphatically that J. L. & S. were not going to lose control of the Colonial and Studebaker and suggested that THE TRIBUNE should never print any news about J. L. & S. affairs unless it came from the press agent. It further declared that J. L. & S. would continue to manage both houses.

The next morning the story received from the J. L. & S. offices was printed in all the other papers.

Last night a statement was received from George Bowles, manager of the "Birth of a Nation," which reads in part as follows:

"I don't like the idea of having to contradict any statements that may have been given out, but the public has a right to know that whatever theater houses a Griffith production will be Griffith controlled. We are not booking 'The Birth of a Nation' and we are not likely to book any of the Griffith productions. Whatever house we go into we will control.

"The Colonial theater has been leased for a year, all statements to the contrary notwithstanding. I shall manage the Colonial and all of the attractions that play there during the time that it remains under the control of Mr. Griffith, Mr. McCarthy, and their associates.

"As for arrangements for other theaters, I am not quite ready to make any statements, but I hope before long to have something authentic to give out."

So, there you are. Decide it for yourselves.

CHICAGO (Ill.) HERALD
AUG. 8. 1915

"ILLINOIS—"The Birth of a Nation" is still at this theater. It is playing to exceptionally large summer houses and is enjoyed by large audiences.

CHICAGO (Ill.) MOTOGRAPHY

Aug. 14, 1915

H. E. Aitken discussed last week some of the plans which he has in mind for the new Triangle Film Company and one of his ideas in particular is so splendid that we do not see how, when worked out, his idea can meet with failure. It is the intention of his company to lease one of the Michigan boulevard theaters in which will be shown, as a complete show, the entire week's release of the Triangle Film Company. The pictures will be staged similar to the manner in which the "Birth of a Nation" is projected, with shadow box effects, stage fittings, and an entire orchestra will rehearse every show before it is put on, so that the musical accompaniment will be of the finest character. Every exhibitor in Chicago is to have an annual pass to this theater in order that he may see the pictures before he books them and he will see them under the finest kind of conditions. It is an axiom that a booking on Michigan boulevard will absolutely "make" a picture in Chicago, and we predict that exhibitors will take to this new venture the moment it is started. It will also have the effect of showing exhibitors how pictures should be projected and should go a long way toward eliminating some of the bad features of projection as found in the smaller houses throughout the city. If sufficient of Chicago's theater-going public pay entrance fee to see the Triangle films at the Boulevard theater to cover the expense of the house the advertising will have cost the Triangle Film Company nothing, and even if they do not get a single paid admission the venture should prove tremendously profitable.

CHICAGO (Ill.) MOTOGRAPHY

Aug 14, 1915

Theodore Mitchell, press representative for D. W. Griffith in New York, is authority for the statement that Saturday, July 31, was one of the biggest days which the Liberty Theater has had since the opening of "The Birth of a Nation" there six months ago, despite the fact New York has not experienced as hot a day for many years.

CHICAGO (Ill.) MOTOGRAPHY

Aug 14, 1915

COLONIAL AND STUDEBAKER THEATERS SECURED BY TRIANGLE

The Triangle Film Corporation which inaugurates its new service of de luxe multiple reel features from such producers as D. W. Griffith, Thomas H. Ince and Mack Sennett in the best and largest theaters of the country at $2.00 prices early in September, last week secured booking arrangements with the firm of Jones, Linick & Schaefer, by which the Triangle productions will appear exclusively in the Colonial and Studebaker theaters of Chicago.

"The Birth of a Nation," which is now nearing the beginning of its fourth month in Chicago, will be transferred from the Illinois theater, where it is at present running, to the Colonial on Sunday, August 22, the present Paramount policy of the Colonial being terminated August 16, thus permitting a brief interval in which to renovate and redecorate the theater. Norman Fields, at present manager of the Colonial theater, will continue in charge of the house, and the same $2.00 prices will prevail as during the run at the Illinois.

The Metro pictures running at the Studebaker will give way to the new Griffith-Ince-Sennett productions on September 15, and from that date onward the Triangle Film Corporation will use the big Michigan avenue house for the debut of its attractions, though Louis J. Jones will remain as manager of the Studebaker and both the Studebaker and the Colonial will continue to be known as Jones, Linick & Schaefer houses.

CHICAGO (Ill.) MOTOGRAPHY

Adam Kessel, Jr., C. O. Baumann and Charles Kessel left Los Angeles on July 27. After a few days in San Francisco they will return to New York City, where the distributing plans of the newly organized Triangle Film Corporation will be carried out under their supervision. During their stay in Los Angeles they have been the guests of Mack Sennett, managing director of the Keystone Film Company and an officer of the Triangle Corporation.

CHICAGO (Ill.) MOTOGRAPHY

AUG 14 1915

A PRIVATE EXHIBITION OF SARAH BERNHARDT PICTURES

There was a private exhibition on Tuesday, July 28, of the A. M. Gollos pictures of "Madame Sarah Bernhardt at Home." The pictures, beautifully photographed, are very interesting, as they portray the everyday life of one who is probably the most marvelous and well-known actress in the world. The pictures were run at the Illinois theater, "the theater beautiful," in Chicago, at which Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation" is having its successful run. There was a very large attendance and many satisfactory comments were heard on all sides. A very good orchestra rendered appropriate selections throughout the exhibition.

MOTION PICTURE WORLD (N. Y. City)

AUG 14 1915

Chicago.

It now appears that the Griffith-Ince-Sennett combination, known legally as the Triangle Film Corporation, has secured the Studebaker and Colonial theaters, two large Loop houses, for the presentation of their output in this city. It is said that the Studebaker will be a permanent home for Triangle features, and will open about September 6. The Colonial will take over the "Birth of a Nation" from the Illinois on or about August 23. There it will be presented as long as the receipts show paying profits, at admissions from two dollars and down. When the receipts fall below that mark, Jones, Linick & Schaefer will resume management, most likely with vaudeville.

CHICAGO (Ill.) EXAMINER
AUG. 15, 1915

War Shown as It Is in "Birth of a Nation"

THAT the "play spirit" in which war has been entered in the past by the American nation will never be repeated by this country, if it approaches the verge of combat, is declared by civil war veterans who have witnessed D. W. Griffith's historical spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," at the Illinois Theater.

The play graphically portrays the gay and ebullient spirit in which war was welcomed by the youth of the North and South in 1861. This festive emotion stands in tragic contrast to the later era of grim horror, of hardship and overwhelming grief which held sway over the entire nation.

"The people of this country now know what war means—even if they have not yet displayed sufficient intelligence to prepare for it," said a former officer in the Union army who saw "The Birth of a Nation" with several G. A. R. comrades the other evening. "They would not again enter a conflict with the cock-sure, joyous air which prevailed North and South at the outbreak of the rebellion, and which in some degree was repeated when the war with Spain was begun in 1898.

"No aspect of the great conflict is drawn with greater fidelity in 'The Birth of a Nation' than the festive scenes attending the departure of troops to the front in 1861. In Griffith's drama we see a magnificent ball, given in the capital city of a Southern state, on the eve of the leave-taking of a Confederate regiment for the battle line.

"Officers, elegantly uniformed, women dressed in the height of fashion of the period, dance to the music of a regimental band. At midnight wine is opened and a toast to the Confederate banner is quaffed, amid fiery strains of a Southern war melody. Bonfires are lit in the city streets and public square—a magnificent stage effect, this—and the population dances about the flames, thrilled with the false 'picnic' spirit of war.

"These scenes are spectacular, but, to my own knowledge, they are dramatic records of actual happenings all over the North and South before the battle of Bull Run and other deadly clashes had a sobering effect upon the divided nation. The celebration shown in 'The Birth of a Nation' was presented as an occurrence following the Bull Run fight, in which the untrained levies of the North suffered a disastrous defeat.

"The South, therefore, was jubilant, while in the Union States came a much needed awakening as to the harsh facts of war. Perhaps this early victory of Southern troops had a reverse effect in the long run, as it inspired over-confidence amid the Confederate ranks, but jolted the Northern forces to a realization of the stern stuff that war is made of. But there is no doubt that in the opening months of the civil war there was festal celebration which became pathetic in the light of later tragedy.

"Troops, fancifully arrayed, were feted and dined before leaving for the front. Officers were presented with costly swords and decorations, amid eulogies by political stump speakers. Nowadays, guided by our own severe experiences and having studied the progress of the world's greatest war in Europe, it is not likely that the American nation will again welcome war in a holiday mood, as so strikingly depicted in 'The Birth of a Nation.'"

CHICAGO (Ill.) AMERICAN
AUG. 14, 1915

"Birth of a Nation" to Be Moved

TO-DAY'S FILMS.

ILLINOIS—"Birth of a Nation."

FINE ARTS—"The Melting Pot."

ZIEGFELD—"The Secret Orchard" and "Mrs. Plum's Pudding."

ORCHESTRA HALL—"Nearly a Lady"; Monday, "The Marriage of Kitty."

STUDEBAKER — "The Vampire"; Monday, "The Royal Family."

COLONIAL — "The Puppet Crown."

BY ROB REEL.

D. W. GRIFFITH'S Titan of spectacles, "The Birth of a Nation," begins its last week of record-breaking triumphs at the Illinois Theater, and after the performance next Saturday (August 21) night will occupy its new home, the Colonial.

The first performance in the completely renovated Randolph street playhouse will take place on the following (Sunday) afternoon. The same scale of prices as that prevailing at the Illinois will be in order. The engagement at the Colonial theater will be of indefinite length, as the demand for seats is steadily on the increase, with "sold out" houses the invariable rule, it is impossible to predict how many months this classic will be on view.

This week the Colonial will be closed, that it may be thoroughly renovated and brought up to the highest standards of comfort and beauty. The work of equipping the house for its new purposes is being done by a corps of experts. The entire arrangement of the interior is to be readjusted along scientific lines to conform with the focal requirements of the cinema art. The sight lines will be accurately measured and a new scheme perfected which will permit the eye to catch the faintest detail in the elaborate picture.

In conjunction with Professor Albrecht of Bonn University, Mr. Griffith has achieved a system of stimulated ventilation, whereby the Colonial will be filled with vitalized air. This removes every dust particle from the atmosphere, particles which interfere with absolute clearness of projection.

BARRED OUT OF ONE STATE.

Beginning to-day, Alfred Hamburger will show at his Ziegfeld Theater a double feature program, a drama, "The Secret Orchard," with Blanche Sweet, and "Mrs. Plum's Pudding," a farce comedy with Marie Tempest. Miss Chicago believes in seeing everything that stands for betterment, and that is the reason why our censor board has allowed Mr. Hamburger to show "The Secret Orchard." Pennsylvania, the Quaker State, is still old maidish and its censor board has twice reviewed the play and came to the conclusion it would not do for Pennsylvanians to see on the screen the portrayal of a character who, to quote the censor, leads an "immoral life."

Perhaps Diana, who is portrayed by Miss Blanche Sweet, is not all a perfect lady should be. Maybe she did tread the borders of the primrose path, but Diana, as a character, has many a sister in the flesh and the Chicago censor board have to be complimented on allowing a play that gives such a strong moral lesson to be shown in this city. The Parisian life which Americans go abroad to see and never find are scenes that grip one in this drama.

"The Melting Pot," now at the Fine Arts Theater, is drawing large crowds. Over 100,000 people have so far seen this great drama, which pictures the Russian life as it really is, with Walker Whiteside as its leading character.

Perhaps the greatest film that was ever brought to Chicago is "An Alien," which will be shown at the Fine Arts at the close of "The Melting Pot" engagement. "An Alien" was shown at the Astor Theater for fifteen consecutive weeks. An admission price ranging from 50 cents to $2 classed it as "The play that makes dimples to catch the tears." George K. Beban will portray the leading character, Feitro, in the play.

ANN MURDOCH'S DEBUT.

Two names loom big on next week's films. They are Ann Murdoch and Fannie Ward. The latter is the Strand Theater Company's offering. In addition to this Marion Green, celebrated basso cantante, begins a limited engagement on the Orchestra Hall program.

Miss Murdoch makes her screen debut here in "A Royal Family."

CLIPPING FROM Herald
Chicago Ill.
Date 8-19-15

from [illegible]

* * *

OLIVE Speedswood Aitken was the uncle in "The Avenging Conscience." Mr. Aitken plays Mr. Cameron Sr. in "The Birth of a Nation." He is a very good actor, agree with you. Cleo Madison was the girl in "The Hour" (Gold Seal). Thank you so much for your pleasant letter. I am delighted that you enjoy the HERALD "movie" department. Write to me again. I shall be glad to hear from you.

George Rublee of Washington has been in Chicago for several days on business connected with the committee of industrial relations.

30 (Ill.) EXAMINER
AUG. 15, 1915

that a pudding sometimes can unearth a [illegible] describing persons.

FF

ILLINOIS.

The engagement of D. W. Griffith's master production, "The Birth of a Nation," ends at the Illinois with the performance next Saturday night, and will reopen promptly with a matinee at the Colonial Theater on Sunday afternoon. The engagement at the Randolph street playhouse will be of indefinite length. As the demand for seats is steadily on the increase, it is impossible to predict how many months the spectacle will be on view at the Colonial.

This week the Colonial Theater will be closed, so that it may be thoroughly renovated and brought up to the highest standards of comfort and beauty. The work of equipping the Colonial for its new purposes is being done by a corps of experts. The entire arrangement of the interior is to be readjusted along scientific lines to conform to the focal requirements of the cinema art. The sight lines will be accurately measured and a new scheme worked out which will permit the eye to catch the faintest detail in the most elaborate picture.

In conjunction with Professor Albrecht of Bonn University, Griffith has perfected a system of stimulated ventilation whereby the Colonial Theater will be filled with vitalised air. This removes every dust particle from the atmosphere, particles which interfere with absolute clearness of projection. It is Griffith's purpose to make the Colonial the ideal home for spectacular drama, worthy in every way to be the home

Ill.) EXAMINER
AUG. 15, 1915

45

FF

MAE MARSH in "THE BIRTH of a NATION" at the ILLINOIS --

CHICAGO (ILL.) EXAMINER AUG 8 1915

IN THE TURN OF THE REEL

BY JAMES WARREN CURRIE

Never out of her native State of California and working for only one firm, yet one of the most popular screen actresses of the day, is the unique record of a little red-haired lady with a childlike personality who answers to the name of Bessie Eyton and who is frequently seen in pictures made by the Selig Polyscope company.

Miss Eyton drifted into pictures via the extra girl route in the days when the pictures were younger than they are now and when every little lady who helped make up a mob scene had good grounds for visions of herself in the leading role. The red-haired lady kept on working and polishing off parts for which you wouldn't think she was fitted. In time she became a real leading lady with the record of many successes behind her.

Miss Eyton's recipe for success she gives if pressed sufficiently by her questioner. It is very simple and rather unpopular to people of her own age who have been smitten by the desire to shine on the screen in the tinsel of a leading woman.

"I am firmly convinced," she says, that I have not yet mastered all the principles of picture craft that will place me on the top. The point I have reached has been gained by work. I learned all I know by just working it out. If you want to learn how to act—act."

* * *

George Bowles, manager of the Griffith spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," last night made the following statement regarding the leasing of the Colonial Theater by the Griffith forces:

"The Colonial Theater has been leased for a year. It has been taken over for the purpose of producing Griffith attractions, 'The Birth of a Nation,' owned and presented by the Epoch Producing Corporation, and also the future releases of that company, the general manager of which is J. J. McCarthy.

"I shall manage the Colonial and all the attractions that play there during the time that it remains under the control of Mr. Griffith, Mr. McCarthy and their associates. As for arrangements with other theaters, I am not quite ready to make any statements, but I hope before long to have something authentic to give out."

* * *

"The Children's Hour," given the Chicago kiddies each week by the Strand company, will start at 10:30 to-morrow morning as usual at Orchestra Hall with "Hans and Gretchel," the beloved fairy classic of the brothers Grimm, as the leading film feature of the weekly trip into the land of the "Little People." The other two celluloid features will be "The Kangaroo," a Pathe animal study, and "The Rivals," a Mutual production. Little Viola Harpman, juvenile elocutionist, will recite "Flo's Letter," "Somebody Did" and others. The musical program will be the kind that will interest the children.

* * *

Pauline Frederic, emotional actress, who made her debut in "The Eternal City," a Paramount production, enters Chicago lists to-morrow in another production of the same company, entitled "Sold." "Crooky," a Vitagraph comedy, with Frank Daniels in the leading role, will be the supplement of the double bill.

[illegible]GRAPHY
CHICAGO
AUG 21 1915

[illegible] director of the company, is sending every energy to complete the picture in record time.

Henry B. Walthall, leading man with Essanay, made his first appearance in person before the public since his advent in photoplay work when he appeared on the stage at the showing of "The Birth of a Nation" at the Chicago Tribune's benefit performance for the victims of the Eastland disaster. Mr. Walthall made a short speech at the intermission, in which he expressed his gratification at being able to contribute in any way toward alleviating the sufferings of those bereft by the terrible tragedy.

Peggy Burke in "Gloriana's Getaway," a Falstaff, pulls some [illegible] stuff in the BIRTH OF MOB IS SHOWN IN "BIRTH OF NATION" FILM

Large Gathering at Olympic Applauds Stirring Scenes of $2 Photoplay.

By CARLOS F. HURD.

BEFORE the second act of "The Birth of a Nation," a photoplay, was put on the Olympic Theater's screen last night, announcement was made to the well-filled house that the act related to events of a half-century ago, and that the film was not intended to show "any race as it exists today." The same statement appeared, a minute later, on the screen.

Then began a drama in which negroes invaded and set fire to the homes of white families, besieged white women in huts and in cellars, drove white men from the polls, and dominating a Legislature, passed what was termed "a law for intermarriage of negroes and whites." A Southern girl of gentle breeding was pursued by a negro in soldier's uniform, and leaped to death to escape him. Before the horror of this incident had passed, a negro politician was shown, attempting to force a Northern white girl into immediate marriage with him.

Drama Is Stirring.

The scenes of this drama—and it was drama of the most stirring sort—were enacted before the motion camera within the last two years, by negroes of the present time—the negroes whom one can see in any city or town in the central, as well as the Southern, states.

But as the management gives assurance that these pictures were not representations of "any race as it exists today," doubtless everyone will view them in the calm light of history, and we need not fear a recurrence of the racial excitement, which, a few years ago, followed the presentation of the stage version of "The Clansman," and which culminated in wholesale lynchings in Springfield, Mo., and in Springfield and Cairo, Ill. Act 2 of "The Birth of a Nation" is taken from "The Clansman."

The Ku-Klux Klan appeared on the scene as the corrector of black misrule, and its sheeted members performed chivalrous deeds of rescue, such as men anywhere might be proud to perform in daylight, and without disguise. By way of giving historical authority for this portrayal of the Ku-Klux, the management showed sentences from Woodrow Wilson's historical works.

What Wilson Said.

One of these sentences told of the determination of certain northern leaders "to put the white South under the heel of the black South." In Wilson's History of the American People, from which this quotation was taken, there is also this description of the work of the Ku-Klux.

"Brutal crimes were committed; the innocent suffered with the guilty; a reign of terror was brought on, and society was infinitely more disturbed than defended."

Describing the final phase of the Ku-Klux, in the same chapter, Woodrow Wilson tells of the suppression, by Federal authority, of "the secret orders or the reckless fellows who plied their means of intimidation without scruple, or principle, or public object."

This is the view of a historian who cannot be accused of bias against the South, and who shows a discerning sympathy for the Southern people in the hardships and abuses which unquestionably attached to "carpet-bag" rule. It is worth reading, after one has seen, and has applauded, the scenes shown last night.

"The Birth of" the Mob.

The glorification of the Ku-Klux is the climax of "The Birth of a Nation." Viewed from the standpoint of history, the Ku-Klux episode might better be termed the birth of the mob, and of the mob spirit. The State of Georgia has lately given an example of the persistence of this spirit, and has learned its value as an asset to a State.

So much for the second act, which contains the scenes at issue in Prosecuting Attorney Sidener's attempt to prevent, by legal means, the repetition of this play in St. Louis. Judge Kimmel, who issued the injunction permitting last night's performance, and who set this afternoon as a time for passing on the continuance of the show for its proposed five weeks' run, was a spectator, as was Chief of Police Young.

The first act of "The Birth of a Nation" contains nothing which is likely to cause objection. It shows the Civil War, from the point of view of the South, closing with the assassination of Lincoln, "the South's best friend." The battle scene in this act is undoubtedly the greatest achievement of photo-drama. A battle takes place before the spectators, alternately at long range, when a whole battlefield is seen, and in the "close-up," where thrilling charges on intrenched positions are shown. Sherman's march, and the flight of refugees, are presented in the same fashion, with remarkable scenic power.

tion" immensely. If I were in the place of the Judge who has to pass on the continuance of this show, I would feel bound to consider the applause which greeted every scene in the second act, as well as in the first. But I would ask myself what my decision would be if it were religious prejudice, instead of race prejudice, to which the film appealed; and whether race prejudice is a safer thing to play with than religious prejudice.

Noted Figures Shown.

The first act is linked to the second by the conventional two pairs of lovers, common to all Civil War romance, and by the figure of Hon. Austin Stoneman, leader of the Radicals in Congress, and advocate of political and social equality for the negro. This is another name for Thaddeus Stevens of Pennsylvania. Charles Sumner is shown under his own name, and the figures of Lee and Grant appear in the surrender at Appomatox. Lincoln, not very satisfyingly portrayed, was in several scenes.

The film actors whose work was most effective were Henry Walthall as Col. Cameron of the Confederate army, later of the Ku-Klux; Spottiswoode Aiken as Dr. Cameron, a Southern gentleman, and George Seigmann as Silas Lynch, mulatto Lieutenant-Governor.

The audience—"audience" is correct, for a good-sized orchestra was playing all the time—liked "The Birth of a Na-

BUY a HOME! See the Real Estate pages—200 Home offers in the Post-Dispatch every Sunday

"Birth of Nation" Thrills a Big Audience at Olympic

With Bold Faithfulness to the History of the Reconstruction Period, Griffith's Photo-Spectacle Insults No One.

By Raymond A. Walsh,
Dramatic Critic, St. Louis Times.

To a gallery that stamped and shrieked its approval, to a balcony that swayed in its nervous excitement, to a parquet that applauded in that usual characteristic, manner peculiar to parquets, "The Birth of a Nation," the greatest photo-spectacle to date, was presented at the Olmpic Theater, Sunday night. It was a most representative gathering and a sort of auspicious occasion. Judge Karl Kimmel, whose temporary injunction restrained the police from interfering with the opening night's presentation, was there. Chief Young, who heads the department which was restrained, was there. And, of course, the morality squad or Censhorship Committee took due notice of each and every one of the 5000 scenes. Whether the morality squad, or so-called censors, decided that the film did or did not conform to Nicolay's or Hay's or Wilson's theories of the reconstruction period, I am unable to say. I suppose these details will be determined by the censors later—if the court grants them the right to exercise the profound judgment necessary.

If the guardians of our morals and safety insist upon censoring "The Birth of a Nation," they may as well go into the classrooms of our public schools and delete the pages of American history. If St. Louis is robbed of future presentations of "The Birth of a Nation" it will lose the opportunity of viewing one of the greatest—if not the greatest and most stirring—achievements of the theatrical world.

A Remarkable Picture of a Romantic Period.

D. W. Griffith, producer of "The Birth of a Nation," tells us that his sole purpose in placing the picture before the public was to set forth the spectacular horror of war in the interest of peace. He may have had some other very personal reason, but certainly he has demonstrated that he did not go out of his way to offend the negro nor to stir up the hatreds buried with Lee's surrender. He has given us a most vivid portrayal of the hatreds which were not buried for a time; he has stirred up no new ones. He has picturized page after page of our own history—history that has no charms, but a history that was necessary in the process of our nation's unification. And if there arises from a viewing of the picture any of those skeleton forms at which the nation might tremble, that spirit will be the result of a people's weakness or plasticity and can not be charged up to either Mr. Griffith or his picture.

We see unfolded all the atrocities which marked the years immediately following the first freedom of the negro. The Drama has failed, history has failed and writers have failed to place before us the struggle of the South with the early menace which the South stamped out. "The Birth of a Nation" by setting its terrors before us in concrete form tells the whole story. And yet in "The Birth of a Nation" we get the finer impulses which actuated the faithful negroes of the South—those impulses and characteristics that have saved the race from its conniving white and mulatto leaders. The crimes of the negroes which "The Birth of a Nation" presents are shown clearly as acts of the negro per se, but the result of a misguidance of which Stoneman, and Lynch were guilty—scroundles who forced the negro race to play its role in the history of the reconstruction.

Nothing to Offend.

"One and Inseparable" is the moral of the story—a story, told in the romantic ways of war and love, of a nation reborn through the storm and stress of internecine strife. Instead of the four to six scenes of the conventional play, its technique permits of filming literally thousands of scenes and covering a wide range of history and characters. Slavery, the prime cause of the war; Lincoln's call for troops to subdue the Southern States; the ball on the eve of Bull Run, and the first triumph of Confederate arms; the devastation wrought by Sherman's march and the awful ordeal of the siege of Petersburg; Lee's surrender to Grant of Appomattox; the assassination of the President; the harsh radical policy to the stricken South; the uprising of the Ku Klux Klan, and the overthrow of the carpetbagger regime—these great factors and events pass in review.

The love interest of the play is based on the friendships between the Camerons of South Carolina and the Stonemans of Pennsylvania, two families involved in the struggle. Ben Cameron, the gallant clansman of the Dixon stories, appears again in the role of romantic hero; the piquant Northern girl, Elsie Stoneman, as the heroine. Mr. Griffith took most of the scenes in the great out-of-doors, where nature painted the background and army men directed the battle campaigns. Altogether, it is the first time in art production that history in the large has been presented in living pictures.

Of equal importance to the scenes is the music that interprets them. It consists of an elaborate symphonic score arranged after Griffith's suggestions of the musical motifs for the leading characters. Now grave, now gay; now sounding the loud diapason of war, again sweetly harmonizing love's sighs and rhapsodies; anon bringing back the old plantation melodies, or the crash of riot and rapine, or the welcome Ku Klux Klan call that fell so gratefully on the ear of Southern whites sorely oppressed by the "servants in the master's hall"—it fits the changing scenes of the story like a flowing garment.

Among the principals are Henry B. Walthall, the distinguished Alabama actor, whose family is historically connected with the story, in the role of the Clansman; Lillian Gish as Elsie Stoneman; Mae Marsh and Miriam Cooper as Flora and Margaret; Ralph Lewis as Congressman Stoneman; Joseph Henaberry, Howard Gaye and Donald Crisp as Lincoln, Lee and Grant, respectively; George Seigmann as the mulatto Lieutenant-Governor of South Carolina; Walter Long as the renegade negro Gus, and Raoul Walsh as Wilkes Booth.

There are no revolting scenes. The pitifulness of the way the negroes were used as tools through the cupidity of the "carpet-baggers" from the North is shown, rather than any effort made to present them as acting brutally on their own initiative.

It is no exaggeration to say more than 10,000 are employed in the film's making, and it can readily be believed that the film cost more than $100,000. There will be daily matinees and night performances during the next five weeks, if the court proceedings today favor "The Birth of a Nation."

'BIRTH OF A NATION' WINS BIG APPLAUSE AT THE OLYMPIC

897 of the Audience Sign Cards Approving the Morals of the Production.

BY KATHERINE RICHARDSON.

Enthusiasm ran so high at the Olympic Theater last night at the first production of "The Birth of a Nation," the widely heralded $2 motion picture play, that 897 persons of the almost overflow audience signed cards petitioning Circuit Judge Kimmel to let the play be shown in St. Louis for the five weeks it is booked.

A temporary injunction was granted by Judge Kimmel at 10 o'clock Saturday night to permit last night's performance. A second hearing will be held by him today, and the 897 cards will be presented to him as the best argument for the play's continuance.

A master mind visualized "The Birth of a Nation" and a master hand directed its production, and David Griffith, owner of both, has produced the masterpiece of the screen. In acting, scenic arrangements, spectacular performance and true human interest the film surpasses.

No smallest detail is overlooked to render the whole a living, moving spectacle of the Civil War period, and the audience is divided in its sentiments between the North and South, only to be gathered into one cheering whole for the United States of America.

The plays follows fairly accurately the story told in "The Clansman." Griffith also makes a plea through his sub-titles for world peace, but the temper of last night's audience—reflected in its shouts of encouragement when the Confederate soldiers stormed the Union trenches—indicated a strong love of battle well fought.

As the play runs three hours, it is not possible to give any detailed description of scenes or of the story, or plot. The first part of the play deals with the events leading up to the Civil War, and shows several of the battles, and Sherman's march to the sea, and the burning of Atlanta. These are the great spectacular scenes in the first part, and the incidental music is at all times thrilling. The large symphony orchestra plays Tschaikowsky's "Burning of Moscow" during the burning of Atlanta. This picture, and that of the terrible aftermath of battle, with the dead lying on the field, are Griffith's best arguments for world peace.

Interwoven is the theme of the friendship of two Northern brothers, the Stoneman sons, for two Southern brothers, sons of Dr. Cameron of Piedmont, S. C. A Stoneman falls in love with a Cameron girl, and a Cameron girl with a Stoneman boy.

The surrender of General Lee to General Grant is shown—with the scenes adapted from historical descriptions—and the signing of the peace pacts. Abraham Lincoln is shown in several intimate studies, and his assassination by Booth in Ford Theater, Washington, provides one of the big moments of the film.

Stoneman, the radical leader of the house, comes into power, and in the second part, he is shown dispatching his carpet-baggers to the South. A reign of terror then begins, with Silas Lynch as the leader. He becomes Lieutenant Governor of the State, and a negro majority is given in the Legislature. Ensuing scenes are taken from descriptions in the history of the State.

The Ku Klux Klan is formed to protect the whites from the negroes, and the statement is made that while there were 400,000 of these men in the South, the identity of none was ever known.

The mighty rides of these clansmen; how they rescue the oppressed whites, and strike terror to the hearts of the negro, brought cheers from last night's audience.

Pittsburg Dispatch 2

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER

BIG PHOTOPLAY CREATES STIR IN PITTSBURG

"The Birth of a Nation," Under Official Ban, Wins Public Approval

A MOVIE MASTERPIECE

Temporary Injunction on Municipal Interference to Be Argued Friday

Undoubtedly the greatest motion picture entertainment ever conceived is "The Birth of a Nation," which opened to a large audience at the Nixon last night. In every phase it is a wonderful film, surprising alike to regular theatergoers and to movie fans. The theme, our Civil War, is so resourceful, so tremendous, so full of possibilities as to be overwhelming. The incidents selected for the screen are so well chosen, so neatly dove-tailed, so elaborately presented, that the auditor, whether he be old enough to remember the days of 61-65, or just a youthful student of his country's history, will carry away mental pictures that he will never forget.

The piece is splendidly cast, the principals being actors of sufficient merit to make one forget that all this is posed. The spectacular effects give one a feeling of awe—you don't want to applaud; you just want to be silent. The posing of the large scenes is stupendous beyond comprehension. The reproductions of places, scenes and events, made as historically correct as genius could devise, were so real and convincing that they were greeted by spontaneous applause. The detail is so clever that one cannot tell about it—one must see to understand. Scenically the film is a wonder, the audience sometimes looking down a vista for miles, and all full of action. The photography is the best ever seen here in film work, and there is a continuity of things, even when the picture man carries along three themes or stories at once, that amazes an audience.

May Marsh,
The pet sister in "The Birth of a Nation."

And besides the photographic and posing work, there is a story running through the film that is gripping, natural, pregnant with human interest and convincing. The literary end of the show is not deficient.

Some of the great scenes are the battles between Union and Confederate soldiers. These are fought with a fidelity to fact or possibility that makes old soldiers go into ecstacies of wonderment and appreciation. The less elaborate but none-the-less interesting scenes, such as Lee's surrender, Lincoln and his Cabinet, Lincoln's assassination, all bear the earmarks of the most careful consideration. In the whole there is a blending of pathos and tragedy that stir one's emotions to the highest point of intensity, and here and there a touch of natural comedy to relieve the strain. Part I of "The Birth of a Nation" is a historical monument.

Part II is an elaboration of Rev Dixon's play, "The Clansman," and the same objections lodged against the play will hold good to the film. Of course, an elaboration of scenario in the Ku-Klux episode makes the film much more interesting than the play, yet in both there is a too long drawn out presentation of incidents that are disagreeable. Rev Mr Dixon thought, in his books and plays, that he had a mission, and emphasized a dark page of our national history to make his point plain. This seems unessential in a masterpiece of pictorial work. The dragging out to great lengths of the chase of a girl by Renegade Gus, and of the drunken scene in Lieutenant Governor Lynch's apartments, is as unpleasant as it seems unnecessary to carry a lesson.

As a peace propaganda exhibition it is the most impressive yet put forth in any line. The horrors of war are so poignant that a lesson goes with the unrolling of the picture. Students may even find it useful in visualizing important historical events. But from any standpoint it is the most wonderful motion picture people ever saw, or are likely to see soon.

An orchestra of 25 pieces plays incidental music throughout the photoplay, and its apropos adaptations make it one of the most pleasing of all the different essential features.

When this film was first advertised in Pittsburg a delegation of colored people waited upon Mayor Armstrong and appealed to him to prohibit its showing in Pittsburg, as it was offensive to their race. The Mayor ordered it prohibited. The promoters then went into court and secured a temporary injunction upon the authorities interfering with the production. This will be argued in court tomorrow.

Pittsburg Post

Tuesday Sept 2

"Birth of Nation" Stirs Big Crowd

Swiftest succession of stirring scenes ever projected on a screen stirred last night's big attendance in the Nixon Theater to frequent applause for the marvels of animated pictures shown in D. W. Griffith's photo spectacle of "The Birth of a Nation." Action swept along with unparalleled speed. When Southern troops were represented coming through the streets of Piedmont, S. C., to the swinging march played by the special orchestra, while quick "cut-ins" pictured the rush and excitement and tearful partings between sons and mothers, the sight drew from the spectators an outburst of admiration—a tribute to the effective representation of martial spirit.

A hush followed when the scenes took the spectators to the flash and torture of the battlefield, and eyes dimmed with tears when they looked upon the sorrow of bereaved motherhood. The red flaming scene described as the torch of battle laid against the breast of Atlanta caused a murmur of wonder which broke into renewed rounds of applause at the sight of the conquering Sherman's army pictured on the march to the sea.

The entire photo spectacle, approved by the Pennsylvania board of censors, is shown at the Nixon, including such scenes as an attack on a girl representing features in the negro question confronting the South in the reconstruction period.

The musical accompaniment is a distinctive feature of this photo production. Last night's spectators were greeted in the theater by the novel vision of two girls in crinoline dress of the sixties, with white continuations fluffing around each ankle.

PITTSBURG (Pa.) POST
SEPT 9, 1915

a new picture, Dave Vanfield, comedy juggler, and the Rowland Sisters.

"David W. Griffith's stupendous photo spectacle, 'The Birth of a Nation,' the management announces, is not to be seen in any other theater within 100 miles of Pittsburgh. Since the opening performance on September 1 'The Birth of a Nation' has been seen by over 4,000 people each day. Such a record had never before been dreamed of in this city. Excursion trains from every direction are pouring crowds into the city coming to see the greatest success ever shown in a Pittsburgh theater."

KANKAKEE (Ill.) DEMOCRAT
SEPT 9, 1915

FEATURE FILM AT NEW PRINCESS

Henry B. Walthall, the world's greatest moving picture actor and star in "The Birth of a Nation," will be at the New Princess theatre Saturday in Agusta J. Evans' famous play, "Beulah," in six parts. A wonderfully acted and elaborately staged production of the heart-gripping classic of Louisiana, telling the pathetic story of Beulah, the daughter of the old south, her sorrows, her heroic struggles and her ultimate triumph in the love of a real man.

SEATTLE (Wash.) POST-INTEL.
SEPT. 9, 1915

In the Photo

New York to Hav Pictu

By CHARLES E

New Triangle Productions to Be Sho ter Prices. Photoplays Coming Sund

WISEACRES predicted that $2 motion picture productions would never succeed, but their predictions were falsified by D. W. Griffith's notable "Birth of a Nation" triumph. Now come plays produced at the Griffith-Ince-Sennett studios which are to be put forth by the Triangle Film Corporation, and for which in New York City $3 will be paid for some of the best seats. It is explained that the prices at the Knickerbocker theater will be the same as those charged now at the Liberty theater, where "The Birth of a Nation" is playing, except as to the so-called private loges. President H. E. Aitken, of the Triangle Film Corporation, has ordered the entire balcony front reconstructed. Aided by the counsel of McElfatrick, the architect of the building, small private boxes are to be built all the way around, like the famous horseshoe of the Metropolitan opera house. They will hold four seats, and $12 will be charged for each box. A private theater entrance from Thirty-eighth street and private box stairways will give direct access to the box holders, a large number of whom have already taken their sittings on the weekly subscription plan. The film plays for the opening are announced as "The Lamb," with Douglass Fairbanks in a character similar to that he played as Bertie in "The New Henrietta;" Raymond Hitchcock," in "My Valet," and Frank Keenan, in "The Coward."

PORTLAND (Ore.) TELEGRAM
SEPT 9, 1915

300 TELEGRAM CARRIERS GUESTS OF MANAGEMENT OF "BIRTH OF NATION"

Young Business Men Made Galleries Ring With Applause at Battle Scenes Depicted.

"Newspaper carriers' night" was celebrated last evening at the Heilig theater. Through the courtesy of the management of the "Birth of a Nation" and the Heilig theater the carrier boys of Portland witnessed the film that has been the talk of the town.

More than 300 Telegram carrier boys crowded the section of the gallery reserved for them. Never before has such a crowd of business boys (for that is what carrier boys are since all of them work on a commission basis) filled the gallery of the Heilig.

Applause given by the boys during the three-hour presentation was deafening. The lads enjoyed the performance and were not at all slow in manifesting it. Especially were the battle scenes and the Ku Klux Klan sections of the film applauded.

In typical boy fashion the carriers voiced their appreciation to their hosts at the conclusion of the evening. "It was 'some show,'" said the spokesman.

SAN FRANCISCO (Cal.) CALL & POST
SEPT. 9, 1915

supernatural work of Moussorgsky.

The soloist of the afternoon will be Mme. Matja Niessen-Stone, distinguished both on the concert and operatic stage, and who has sung with great success at the Metropolitan Opera House, New York, and in the principal musical centers of Europe and America. Her numbers will be the aria, "Che Fare," from Gluck's "Orpheus and Eurydice," and Bebnerg's arioso, "La Mort de Jeanne d'Arc."

"Birth of a Nation" Still Appeals

That "The Birth of a Nation," or "The Clansman," is still riding high in public favor is shown by the large audience that are being attracted to the Savoy Theater, where the great Griffith film is in the first week of its special return engagement and its ninth week in San Francisco.

The special scenic effects, the elaborate incidental music and the plantation song numbers, rendered by a chorus, add to the entertainment. Lillian Gish, Mae Marsh, Miriam Cooper and the other favorites of the screen have established followings that might well be the envy of many stars of the spoken drama.

"The Birth of a Nation" is founded on Thomas Dixon's novel, "The Clansman," but is is much more vital than the book. "The Birth of a Nation" is history vitalized and made living. The scenes where real battles were fought are its background. In it you see the counterfeit presentment of the great men of the Civil War as they were when they lived and moved and had their being—Lincoln, Grant, Lee, Sumner, Seward and a dozen others.

Lyric Vaudeville Continues Success

The attendance at the Lyric Theater on Fillmore street is holding up remarkably close to capacity since the format opening of the house last Saturday and the indications generally augur strongly for a gratifying financial success of the new indoor amusement venture.

Yesterday's midweek change of program presents a new exclusive feature photoplay and the following six Hippodrome circuit vaudeville attractions: McIntosh and his musical maids, harmony singers and instrumentalists; Early and Laight in a comedy talking skit, "On the Water Wagon"; Engle and Marshall, harmony vocalists; a veteran fireman comedy sketch entitled "The Old Fire Brigade," and introducing a collection of old time songs; Genevieve Blinn and Company in "Putting It Over," a dramatic playlet from the pen of one Ed Scott, a local writer; and Van Camp and his funny trained pigs.

PORTLAND (Ore.) TELE
SEPT 9,

GET $3 FOR MOVIE SEATS

Wiseacres predicted that $2 motion picture productions would never succeed, but their predictions were falsified by D. W. Griffith's notable "Birth of a Nation" triumph. Now come plays produced at the Griffith-Ince-Sennett studios which are to be put forth by the Triangle Film corporation, and for which in New York City $3 will be paid for some of the best seats. It is explained that the prices at the Knickerbocker theater will be the same as those charged now at the Liberty theater, where "The Birth of a Nation" is playing, except as to the so-called private loges. President H. E. Aitken, of the Triangle Film corporation, has ordered the entire balcony front reconstructed. Aided by the counsel of McElfatrick, the architect of the building, small private boxes are to be built all the way around, like the famous Horseshoe of the Metropolitan opera house. They will hold four seats, and $12 will be charged for

CLIPPING FROM
Chicago (Ill.)
Date 9-11-15

Best in the Films

BY ROB REEL.

Increasing in popularity every week, Griffith's spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," at the Colonial, this week passed even last week's record breaking figures for attendance. In spite of the arrival of a belated Summer and the uncomfortable weather the house continued to "turn them away," and the prospects for a financially successful all-Winter run are brighter than ever.

The line in front of the box office is the talk of Chicago and especially the showmen along the Rialto. The "sold out" sign has become such a regular thing that it no longer is a matter of news.

Several changes are already under way with a view to making the production even more attractive than it

PITTSBURG (Pa.) LEADER
SEPT. 10, 1915

HISTORY IS RE-ENACTED IN "BIRTH OF NATION"

Battle Scenes Are Actual Duplicates of Several Scenes in the Civil War Conflicts.

David W. Griffith's most extraordinary achievement with his new photo-spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," now playing at the Nixon theater, is that of making history live. He has touched the high peaks of American history—the introduction of slavery, the war of secession, the surrender of Appomattox, the death of Lincoln, the miseries of reconstruction and the restoration of the south to its own. These things, it would have seemed a year ago, were beyond the motion picture camera. The master producer had the faith of an enthusiast. Within 12,000 feet of celluloid film he has successfully combined a thrilling, plausible and dignified presentment of national upgrowth with a real human love story, based on Thomas Dixon's book-romance, "The Clansman." As it appears to the newspaper and magazine critics, Mr. Griffith has not only surpassed the art of the "indoor" theater, but he has also developed a new art-form far superior to the old-style history or historical novel. The best characterization of it so far is that of a very eminent public man who has called it "history by lightning."

Mr. Griffith employed 18,000 people in taking these historical pictures. The battle scenes were actual duplicates of several of the Civil war conflicts, and so were the facsimiles of important events. We see Lincoln among his counsellors issuing the call for volunteers, Grant and Lee shaking hands at Appomattox, the shot that John Wilkes Booth fired, the freedmen's bureau, the carpetbaggers' excesses, and the famous rides of the Ku-Klux. The realism is almost uncanny. Often the old war shouts are heard in the audiences from the lips of veterans who momentarily forget that it is only a picture. It is hard to keep one's feet from dancing to the well-beloved tunes of the martial music. Scenes in the latter half of the picture are so skillfully managed that often the applause is practically continuous for half to three-quarters of an hour.

"Cabiria" and "Quo Vadis" marked steps forward in the screen drama. "The Birth of a Nation" points a still more wonderful development, the old dramatic form having been thrown away and the epic or historical form substituted.

The labor involved in this newest sort of picture-making is enormous. There are 5,000 separate and individually posed scenes, involving about 200,000 interesting details. The musical score is as complex and elaborate as that of any grand opera. Although not a word is spoken on the stage, the musical and mechanical effects employ a hundred flesh-and-blood helpers nightly. In brief, the magnitude of the stupendous film dwarfs the average stage play into insignificance.

Theatrical producers and observers are wondering what will be the next evolution of the art. Will the cinema replace the text-book in the public schools? Will the Walter Scotts and the W. M. Thackerays of the future do pictures instead of novels? Will the historian be replaced by the camera man, and the still-life painter by one who, like Griffith, can turn out hundreds of Rembrandt, Corot and Turner-like scenes in an evening's entertainment?

Some of these queries seem daring now, even grotesque. Yet, in view of what is happening around us, it is hard—nay, impossible, to set any limits to the future achievements of the motion picture.

LITCHFIELD (Ill.) NEWS-HERALD
SEPT. 11, 1915

THE BIRTH OF A NATION.

"The Birth of a Nation", D. W. Grimth's mighty spectacle of Civil War and Reconstruction days, is in its second week at the Olympic theatre, St. Louis, where it has been eclipsing even its own sensational records in such cities as New York, Boston, Chicago and Los Angeles. The receipts for the first week here were larger than those of any first week in the history of the production, which is earning money for its owners faster than "Ben Hur" and "The Blue Bird" combined. The receipts from the various companies now playing in the large theatrical centers of America are at the rate of a million dollars every fifteen weeks—an earning power that eclipses in ratio to the amount of money invested any business enterprise in the world, not excepting Standard Oil.

At the Labor Day matinee, alone, 2500 people saw the spectacle, many of them out of town people, who are spreading the news of the wonders revealed among their friends in this and neighboring towns. They are telling of the marvels of the battles of the Civil War, so startlingly visualized, involving armies of 18,000 men; of the daring rides of the Ku Klux Klans on their grim, chivalrous errands; of the assassination of Lincoln, which they saw as purely as if they had been in Ford's theatre on that fatal night, and of the hundreds of other stirring scenes so vividly revealed by a special symphony orchestra of thirty skilled musicians.

The management of the spectacle announces that people of this city must see "The Birth of a Nation" in St. Louis or not at all this season. Nor will the production ever be presented in other than a first class theatre where first class prices prevail.

AT THE LYRIC.

That big five reel production tonight, "The Pit.", featuring Wilton Lackaye.

Curtis Jawdin, successful real estate dealer, is introduced to the Cressler family. He goes into a bear movement in wheat with Cressler, which is highly succesful. Jawdin meets Laura Cressler at a theatre box party and they become friends. In this scene is shown an entire theatre —a stage within a stage.

Sheldon Corthell, an artist, is in love with Laura Cressler, but Jawdin is the successful suitor. Laura is affectionate but Jawdin is heart and soul in his wheat speculations and unconsciously neglects Laura. She accidentally meets Corthell and in a fit of pique at her husband renews the old friendship.

While Jawdin is away Corthell spends the evening with Laura. Corthell's ability as an organist appeals to her imagination. They are abruptly interrupted by Jawdin's entrance. He triumphantly announces that he has made five hundred thousand dollars. He greets Corthell cordially and in the midst of the conversation falls asleep. Corthell leaves. Laura compares him with her sleeping husband and pities her neglected self.

Jawdin attempts to control a gigantic bull movement in wheat. He has a powerful adversary in Calvin Crookes.

In the fever and turmoil, Jawdin neglects Laura. The Bull corner is finally attacked by Crookes and the strongest scenes are now enacted in Jawdin and Cressler's office and on the floor of the Pit. Jawdin has pledged every dollar he possesses but cannot stem the overwhelming tide. Cressler, broken down, commits suicide.

Come to the Lyric tonight and see the remainder of the story on the screen. Come and see that wonderful picture featuring Wilton Lackaye in "The Pit".

Tomorrow Mrs. Wiggs and the Cabbage Patch.

Admission 5 and 10 cents.

CLIPPING FROM Milwaukee
Date 9-1-15

PABST.

"The Birth of a Nation," the marvelous motion picture spectacle, which was the attraction at the Davidson during a record-breaking summer engagement, will come to the Pabst on Monday for an engagement of seven days only.

This pictorial production, the most elaborate and costly venture ever undertaken in the field of motion picture photography, deals with life in the south during the Civil war and reconstruction periods. It tells a moving story of love and adventure and presents with startling realism the great and tragic events of the great war. The battle scenes, in which 18,000 men and 3,000 horses with full artillery equipment take part, are little short of marvelous. One scene embraces miles of territory and its photography by the moving picture camera was only made possible by telescopic lenses.

Historic scenes which grip the heart of every American are presented with wonderful fidelity, among them the signing of the call for troops by President Lincoln; Sherman's march to the sea; the surrender of Lee at Appamattox and the assassination of Lincoln. A symphony orchestra of forty pieces renders the music which is an important feature of the production. Two performances will be given daily at 2:15 and 8:10 o'clock.

CLIPPING FROM
News
Milwaukee
Date 9-11-15

PABST—"The Birth of a Nation"

"The Birth of a Nation," the marvelous motion picture spectacle which was the attraction at the Davidson theater during a record-breaking summer engagement, will return to the Pabst theater Monday for an engagement of seven days only. The return engagement is in response to requests from many who were unable to see this astonishing film drama during the summer as well as from others who, although they have seen it once or oftener, still desire to see it again.

This pictorial production, the most elaborate and costly venture ever undertaken in the field of motion photography, deals with life in the South during the civil war and reconstruction periods. It tells a moving story of love and adventure and presents with startling realism the great and tragic events of the great war. The battle scenes, in which 18,000 men and 3,000 horses with full artillery equipment take part, are little short of marvelous. One scene embraces miles of territory and its photography by the moving picture camera was only made possible by telescopic lenses.

Historic scenes which grip the heart of every American are presented with wonderful fidelity, among them the signing of the call for troops by President Lincoln; Sherman's march to the sea; the surrender of Lee at Appamattox and the assassination of Lincoln. A symphony orchestra of forty pieces renders the music which is an important feature of the production. Two performances will be given daily at 2:15 and 8:10 o'clock. Seats are now on sale at the Pabst box office.

LITCHFIELD (Ill.) NEWS-HERALD
SEPT. 11, 1915

THE BIRTH OF A NATION.

"The Birth of a Nation", D. W. Grimth's mighty spectacle of Civil War and Reconstruction days, is in its second week at the Olympic theatre, St. Louis, where it has been eclipsing even its own sensational records in such cities as New York, Boston, Chicago and Los Angeles. The receipts for the first week here were larger than those of any first week in the history of the production, which is earning money for its owners faster than "Ben Hur" and "The Blue Bird" combined. The receipts from the various companies now playing in the large theatrical centers of America are at the rate of a million dollars every fifteen weeks—an earning power that eclipses in ratio to the amount of money invested any business enterprise in the world, not excepting Standard Oil.

At the Labor Day matinee, alone, 2500 people saw the spectacle, many of them out of town people, who are spreading the news of the wonders revealed among their friends in this and neighboring towns. They are telling of the marvels of the battles of the Civil War, so startlingly visualized, involving armies of 18,000 men; of the daring rides of the Ku Klux Klans on their grim, chivalrous errands; of the assassination of Lincoln, which they saw as purely as if they had been in Ford's theatre on that fatal night, and of the hundreds of other stirring scenes so vividly revealed by a special symphony orchestra of thirty skilled musicians.

The management of the spectacle announces that people of this city must see "The Birth of a Nation" in St. Louis or not at all this season. Nor will the production ever be presented in other than a first class theatre where first class prices prevail.

MANCHESTER (Mass.) BREEZE
SEPT. 10, 1915 518

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION" MOVED TO MAJESTIC

Boston and New England simply would not allow to leave Boston D. W. Griffith's mighty spectacle "The Birth of a Nation," which was seen for six weeks at the Tremont Theatre by nearly half the population of Boston, and the past week at the Majestic, making its 23d big week in Boston. The 24th week begins next Monday, September 13. So insatiable has been the desire of the theatre-going population of New England to see this marvelous $500,000 production, and so forcible and overwhelming the demand for a longer stay in this city that arrangements had to be made for another theatre after its Boston home. And so the Majestic Theatre becomes the fortunate possessor of "The Birth of a Nation," as an attraction for a limited additional stay in Boston.

ST. LOUIS (Mo.) TIMES
SEPT. 11, 1915

subject of vast interest to the public. The play is one of intensely dramatic interest.

OLYMPIC: "Birth of a Nation."

D. W. Griffith, producer of "The Birth of a Nation," now being presented at the Olympic Theater, has suffered almost as much from his friends as from his enemies in the criticism of his gigantic spectacle. A case in point occurred in the lobby of the theater during a matinee intermission this week. A young woman who had just been thrilled by her first sight of a battle remarked:

"Mr. Griffith is certainly wonderful in his big spectacular pictures. I never knew anything to excite me so much as his battle of Petersburg. I was charmed, too, in the middle of it by a little incident that is frankly put in for melodramatic effect, for we can forgive Mr. Griffith a little melodrama in view of the big things he has done. It is the incident of the little Colonel pausing in the midst of the onrush to give a fallen foe a drink of water. Such things occur in story books, but never in life, and that's the reason I love story books."

The young woman was mistaken, just as are the great majority of Mr. Griffith's apologists and critics. The "little colonel" episode occurred not only once but a dozen times during the last fearful campaign of the war, when the armies of Lee and Grant were fighting at such close quarters. Some of the brightest pages of Masonic tradition are written around these incidents.

LITCHFIELD (Ill.) NEWS-HERALD
SEPT. 11, 1915

THE BIRTH OF A NATION.

"The Birth of a Nation", D. W. Grimth's mighty spectacle of Civil War and Reconstruction days, is in its second week at the Olympic theatre, St. Louis, where it has been eclipsing even its own sensational records in such cities as New York, Boston, Chicago and Los Angeles. The receipts for the first week here were larger than those of any first week in the history of the production, which is earning money for its owners faster than "Ben Hur" and "The Blue Bird" combined. The receipts from the various companies now playing in the large theatrical centers of America are at the rate of a million dollars every fifteen weeks—an earning power that eclipses in ratio to the amount of money invested any business enterprise in the world, not excepting Standard Oil.

At the Labor Day matinee, alone, 2500 people saw the spectacle, many of them out of town people, who are spreading the news of the wonders revealed among their friends in this and neighboring towns. They are telling of the marvels of the battles of the Civil War, so startlingly visualized, involving armies of 18,000 men; of the daring rides of the Ku Klux Klans on their grim, chivalrous errands; of the assassination of Lincoln, which they saw as purely as if they had been in Ford's theatre on that fatal night, and of the hundreds of other stirring scenes so vividly revealed by a special symphony orchestra of thirty skilled musicians.

The management of the spectacle announces that people of this city must see "The Birth of a Nation" in St. Louis or not at all this season. Nor will the production ever be presented in other than a first class theatre where first class prices prevail.

Date Houston 9-12-15 of Justice" the moral comes with a crash. A real final punch.

Birth of a Nation at the Prince

D. W. Griffith's master production, "The Birth of a Nation," will be the attraction at the Prince, commencing an engagement of one week on Monday, October 18.

The management says: It will be brought here in exact reproduction of the great attraction which is now in New York, where it has broken every record of the American stage. These achievements alone have aroused more comment upon the subject of this great story than was ever devoted to a theatrical enterprise before.

The merest statement regarding "The Birth of a Nation" leaps to superlatives because there is no other form in which it can be written. Simple facts in relationship to its developments sound extravagant until you have seen the production and realized a tithe of its sweep and power. It covers the essential details of American history ranging through three centuries. Actual battles are shown with tens of thousands of soldiers in the conflict. Eighteen thousand people participated in the telling of the story. Three thousand horses were used to give the cavalry and other thrilling effects of the wild dashes over miles of territory. Cities were built up only to be destroyed by fire. The total cost of the entire production was in the neighborhood of $500,000. Five hundred costumers and seamstresses worked for three months to make the costumes worn by the people. Ten thousand yards of cloth were worked into the costumes worn by the women, while 25,000 yards of white muslin were used up in the regalia of the Ku Klux Klansmen. And yet with all this a simple, human story of love and romance weaves through the vast spread of the action and grips the hearts of the audience. The narrative is filled with tears and smiles. A symphonic score accompanies the action and lends a potent force to the drama.

matinees a ring the ne court proceedings
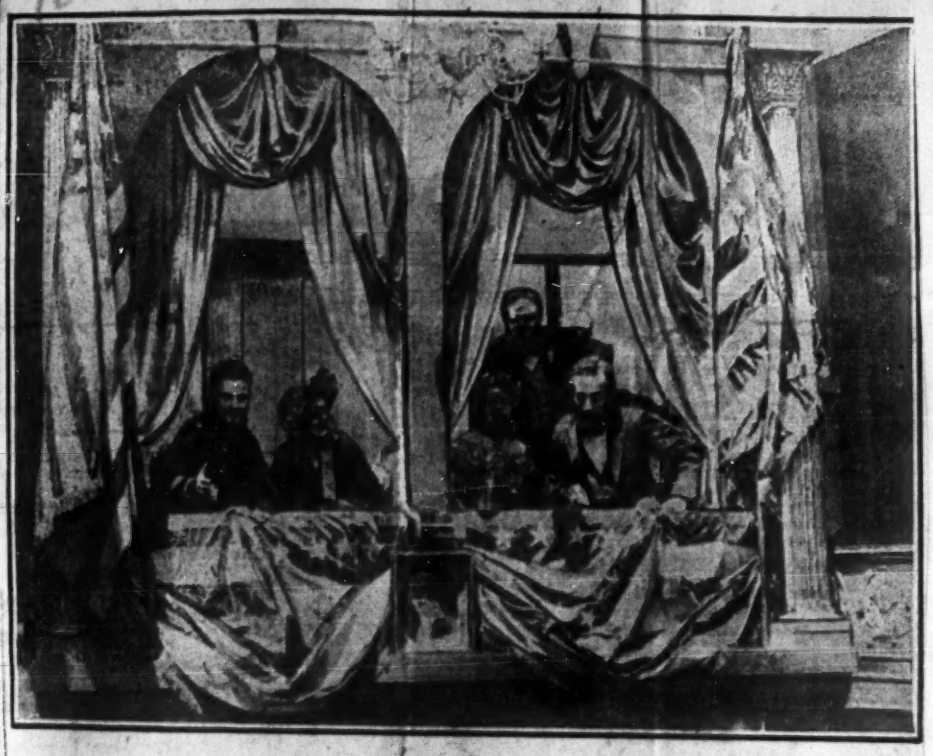
Birth of a Nation."

CLIPPING FROM
PHILADELPHIA, (PA.) PRESS
Date ..... SEP 12 1915

ADELPHIA PRESS, [illegible]

18

Realistic Scene in "Birth of a Nation"



No scene in the motion picture drama, "The Birth of a Nation," now at the Forrest Theater, is more realistic than that of Ford's Theater, Washington, on the night of April, 14, 1865, when President Lincoln was assassinated by John Wilkes Booth. It is the largest interior set ever built for a motion picture story. Numerous authentic works, several witnesses of the event, old prints, prompt books of the play and surviving actors of the cast supplied the facts regarding the appearance of the stage, orchestra, audience and of Lincoln which have been carried out to the minutest detail.

PITTSBURG (Pa.) POST
SEPT. 12, 1915

In addition to a regular photoplay, Mr. [illegible] other high-grade acts.

Nixon—"Birth of a Nation," Third Week.

David W. Griffith is conceded to have established a new art by his celebrated production, "The Birth of a Nation," entering the third week of its run at the Nixon. As disclosed at the Liberty Theater, New York, last March, and in Boston, Chicago and other big cities a little later, this photo spectacle of Civil war and reconstruction days, with music and mechanical effects, overshadowed all motion pictures. It was passed by all censor boards and it has received the overwhelming indorsement of 2,000,000 spectators.

The battle scenes pictured in the Civil war part of "The Birth of a Nation" mark the supreme achievement of motion photography up to date. The intensely vivid skirmishes and hand-to-hand struggles are not only well planned but well acted. But the most thrilling sights of all are the battles conducted on a big scale in vast stretches of field and valley. The impression made upon the spectator is that of viewing gigantic military movements from some great mountain.

Other great historic scenes in the play include skillful facsimiles of Lincoln's call for troops; Generals Lee and Grant at Appomattox; Sherman's march to the sea and the burning of Atlanta, and President Lincoln's assassination in Ford's Theater, Washington.

The second part of the spectacle is devoted to the reconstruction days, when the South threw off the carpetbaggers. The Ku Klux Klan are the protagonists of this part of the story. Their wild rides are represented on a vast scale, with thousands of men and horses and with the infinite spirit, dash and elan for which Mr. Griffith's spectacular work is so remarkable. There are two beautiful romances of the Blue and the Gray; Ben Cameron, the clansman, and his Northern sweetheart, Elsie; Captain Phil Stoneman, U. S. A., and sweet Margaret Cameron, the South Carolina lassie.

"The Birth of a Nation" took eight months to produce, cost $500,000, employed 18,000 actors, 2,000 horses. The managers of this attraction, the Epoch Producing Company, have seen to it that the production here is in every respect identical with that in New York, Boston and Chicago.

ST. LOUIS (Mo.) REPUBLIC
SEPT. 12, 1915

Olympic Theater.

In the great battle scenes of the earlier portions of "The Birth of a Nation," which will enter upon the third week of its St. Louis career at the Olympic Theater this afternoon, D. W. Griffith employed many novel appliances to get his effects. For the first time in the history of motion-picture art, he utilized the telephone extensively. Griffith, in person, handled thousands upon thousands of players in a single scene, directing them by wire.

The great battle scenes were also the first ever taken by a motion-picture camera at night. The scenes showing the escape of the refugees from Atlanta, the bonfire effects in Piedmont and the great red battle effects were all realized by night photography. Elaborate preparations for these were secretly laid, and several inventions were made on the ground to accomplish the desired end. Patented illuminators were distributed over an acre of two miles to get one midnight battle scene.

ST. LOUIS (Mo.) REPUBLIC
SEPT. 12, 1915

ANGELES (Cal.) EXAMINER
SEPT. 12, 1915

Moving Pictures

CLUNE'S AUDITORIUM—"Then We'll Sing One Song of the Old Kentucky Home." That and many more of the old-time favorites are sending their sweet strains to the hearts of the audiences at Clune's Auditorium theater as they view the romantic days of the South of long ago in "The Clansman." So much has been said of the Civil War side of the justly famous picture, but there is much that is appealingly beautiful in the play. The plantation scenes, where the darkies are called to dance for the master and his Northern guests; the harmony of a big Southern family home life. Such quaint little ladies as were raised then in both the North and the South, dainty and delicate, yet equal to the occasion when the war broke out. Is it any wonder that the demand for this beautiful picture is still so great that the management will have to give Los Angeles another week of it. The music of "The Clansman" is one of its greatest attractions. It not only carries a full orchestra, but the great pipe organ, the largest west of Chicago, is played by an artist who helps wonderfully the interpretation of the picture by his masterly playing.

LOS ANGELES (Cal.) EXAMINER
SEPT. 12, 1915

SEPT. 13. 1915
AWA (Can.) CITIZEN

THE BIRTH OF A NATION.

Of course, the big night attraction will be the wonderful motion picture production, The Birth of a Nation, which the public has heard so much about lately. This is a brilliant story of the American civil war, linking with it a splendid romance. Thousands of photographs costing large sums of money are employed in the picture presentation. Pictures of hand-to-hand fighting in charges on trenches, wonderful artillery duels, in which real shells explode on the spot, and Sherman's march to the sea, are only a few of the things to be shown on the canvass at each night performance.

In addition there will be a magnificent fireworks display each evening.

PITTSBURG (Pa.) POST
SEPT. 12, 1915

PEACE ALLEGORY in "The Birth of a Nation" photo spectacle, entering third week at the Nixon Theater. FF

An artist visiting D. W. Griffith's Los Angeles studio recently remarked on the film director's gift of composition. "Griffith," he said, "groups his figures like an artist in oils or water color rather than like a stage director. I don't know whether he ever studied perspective, composition and harmony or not, but anyhow his mass pictures to my mind have the same quality as those of the greatest artists."

This remark was occasioned by watching Mr. Griffith assemble the multitude in the scenes of war and peace in "The Birth of a Nation." The scene representing the future brotherhood of love and peace shows an effect of distance obtained by constructing two stages with rising steps, one near the camera and the other removed about 100 feet. Between the two stages there is a hollow. The principals are stationed on the near stage, then comes the intervening hollow, and finally the more distant features of the background show on the second or more remote platform. The ultimate distance fades into blackness, contrasting wonderfully with the gauzy robes and veilings of the characters at the fore. Costumes of many nations are used, but the effect is gossamer-like.

In striking contrast is Mr. Griffith's treatment, in the "Birth of a Nation," of the contrasting theme of misery of war. Wan, skeleton-like figures are selected. Their dress is of many lands and nations, but all suggestive of grime and sordidness. Some of the lean, emaciated figures are bare to the waist. Men and women are strewn about the stage like the piled-up victims of a battlefield. Arms are raised in entreaty to heaven. Utter woe stamps itself upon that picture as pure joy radiates from the other.

PITTSBURG (Pa.) LEADER
SEPT. 12, 1915

Surrender of Lee in "The Birth of a Nation," Nixon.

Among all the film actors playing historical characters in "The Birth of a Nation" spectacle, now at the Nixon theater, Howard Gaye and Donald Crisp have received the most compliments on the faithfulness of their work, the one as Gen. Robert E. Lee and the other as Gen. U. S. Grant.

The picture shows Gen. Lee surrendering to Gen. Grant in the Wilmer-McLean mansion at Appomattox Court House, Va., April 9, 1865. It is a most faithful reproduction of all the personages in the great historic scene and of the minute details of the action.

It is well known that many supporters of the defeated confederacy wished to prolong the struggle by means of a guerrilla warfare similar to that used by the Boers towards the close of the Anglo-Boer war. In fact, John Wilkes Booth supposed that in killing President Lincoln he would have the support of the south in a new struggle. But Gen. Lee was of a different temper. He realized that the south had been beaten in a fair struggle on the fields of battle and that prolonging the fighting would merely add to the horrors and miseries endured by his people. Therefore, after the Battle of Five Forks, he opened negotiations with Grant and on the morning of April 9, under the budding apple trees of an Appomattox orchard, were determined the terms of peace which were formally written down at the Wilmer-McLean house in the afternoon.

Lee had dressed for his last public occasion with great care. Grant, on the contrary, lacked his full dress and appeared in the "fatigue" and dusty jack boots of the hard campaign. Strangely enough, Gen. Lee had no pencil to write with. A pocket ink stand and pen were lent by an officer of the general staff, and it was with these that the historic document of surrender was written. Afterwards an effort was made to arrest and indict Lee for treason, but Grant, who knew Lee's nobility of character and how he had fulfilled to the letter all the surrender obligations, prevented any such disgraceful sequel to the grand event.

CHICAGO (Ill.) EXAMINER
SEPT. 12, 1915

COLONIAL THEATER. FF

PLANS are under way to make Griffith's spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," even more attractive than it is at present. Manager George Bowles of the Colonial Theater and the show announces that from time to time new ideas in presentation will be introduced for the comfort and pleasure of the audience.

"Because of the increasing popularity of the production," said Bowles yesterday, "it seems to me that it is up to us to do all we can to make our new home attractive. True, it has been said that we have the biggest show in Chicago, but that is not enough. There are numerous little details that a showman notices by their absence.

"For example, the little crinoline girls in the foyer and the auditorium have been one of the most talked of features of the production. We will have more of them—prettier, if possible—before the Winter is over. We are studying a costuming effect that should delight not alone the men who visit the theater, but the women, who are interested not alone in the styles of to-day but the gowns of civil war times.

"Director Orville Mayhood has suggested some effects that appeal to me. For example, the singing canaries in the foyer balcony have made a place for themselves. During the battle scenes they sing as if their throats would burst. Mr. Mayhood suggests that we have more of these little 'battle birds'—or 'war eagles,' as they have been called.

"W. H. Taylor, assistant manager, has made several changes already for the comfort of patrons of the house and has planned to make additional changes.

"We are continuing to break all records, each week being more successful than the one preceding."

PITTSBURG (Pa.) SUN
SEPT. 14, 1915

THE NIXON.

To crowded houses yesterday "The Birth of a Nation," D. W. Griffith's film masterpiece of the Civil war and the reconstruction period, opened on the third week of its run in the Nixon Theater. The appreciation of the Griffith spectacle swings from individual admiration to continued applause.

Quaint, drowsy, Southern streets before the war, the call for volunteers, the battlefields of the South, the historic march to the sea, and the calamity that follows in the wake of the gun and the sword, sweep by in a series of amazing pictures. The glory that comes with battle is shorn of its false trappings and what war means to the combatant and those at home is shown without the glamour. Scenes in the White House and in the Washington prison hospitals are masterpieces of historic reproduction.

The second part of the spectacle deals in a gripping manner with the "carpet-bag" government that was set up in the South after the war. The granting of the negro vote, the rise of the black man and the formation of the Ku-Klux Klan are pictured in a dramatic story of the lives of a Northern and a Southern family that are caught in the maelstrom. The horror of the life of that day is relieved by a charming romance of the North and the South that takes away the bitter taste left by harrowing scenes.

PITTSBURG (Pa.) SUN
SEPT. 14, 1915

"The Birth of a Nation" Now in Its Third Week

D. W. Griffith's remarkable spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," now in its third successful week at the Nixon is the most popular entertainment in town. A member of the United States Senate recently said: "Any one contemplating war should see this picture. I sincerely believe it will do more to deter people from engaging in war than anything written or spoken on the subject in years."

Never before has war in all of its horror been pictorialized so vividly. Sherman's devastating march to the sea, the capture and burning of Atlanta and the battle of Petersburg are shown with the vividness of reality. The whole period of the Civil war is luminously recreated.

Then follows the baneful period of reconstruction when the ex-slaves, carpet-baggers and scalawags combined to bring sorrow and suffering to the Southland. Running through this wondrous historical spectacle are two romantic love stories of surpassing heart interest. One of the most delightful features of the entertainment is the symphony orchestra of 30.

SPRINGFIELD (Mass.) STANDARD
SEPT. 14, 1915

BRIDGEPORT TO SEE FILM; THE BIRTH OF A NATION

Famous Spectacle in Motion Pictures Which Has Captivated New York to Be Shown Here.

FF

"The Birth of a Nation," the famous historical photo-spectacle which has been a sensation in New York for nearly a year will be seen in Bridgeport soon. Arrangements for its presentation at Poli's theater here were completed yesterday afternoon by Louis B. Mayer, general manager of the American Feature Film company.

The dates on which the picture will be shown here will be announced later, Mr. Mayer says. The production, the same as presented in New York, will be shown for a week, and during that time the present policy of vaudeville and photoplays will be temporarily discontinued.

Mr. Poli, owner of the theater, agreed to this temporary change in policy after Mr. Mayer had argued that Poli's theater, with its enormous seating capacity and excellent appointments, is the only playhouse in town in which "The Birth of a Nation" could be shown. Mr. Poli wanted Bridgeporters to see the great picture and after many conferences yesterday gave Mr. Mayer permission to go ahead with arrangements.

"The Birth of a Nation" is in 14 reels and requires three hours for its presentation.

Commenting on the forthcoming production, Mr. Poli said today: "I believe Bridgeport wants to see this famous picture, and so I have agreed to the temporary discontinuance, for one week, of the present popular policy at Poli's theater. The dates will be announced later. I regard the picture as the highest attainment in motion photography and, historically, it is accurate in detail and highly instructive. The regular policy of the theater will be resumed immediately upon the conclusion of the engagement of 'The Birth of a Nation.'"

PITTSBURG (Pa.) LEADER
SEPT. 14, 1915

"Birth of a Nation"

D. W. Griffith's remarkable spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," now in its third successful week at the Nixon, is the most popular entertainment in town. A member of the United States senate recently said: "Anyone contemplating war should see this picture. I sincerely believe it will do more to deter people from engaging in war than anything written or spoken on the subject in years." Never before has war in all its horror been pictorialized so vividly. Sherman's devastating march to the sea, the capture of Atlanta and the battle of Petersburg are shown with the vividness of reality. In the cast are Henry B. Walthall as the gallant little colonel, Ben Cameron; Mae Marsh and Miriam Cooper as his sisters; Lillian Gish as Elsie Stoneman, and Elmer Clifton and Robert Harron as her brothers; Spottiswoode Aiken, Josephine Crowell, Ralph Lewis, Mary Alden, George Seigmann and many others. One of the most delightful features of the entertainment is the symphony orchestra of 30.

PITTSBURG (Pa.) DISPATCH
SEPT. 12, 1915

until 11 P. M., from Monday to Saturday, inclusive.

NIXON—David W. Griffith, foremost of directors, is conceded to have established a new art by his celebrated production, "The Birth of a Nation," now in the midst of its triumphant run at the Nixon. As disclosed at the Liberty theater, New York, last March, and in Boston, Chicago and other big cities a little later, this realization of Civil war and reconstruction days by means of motion picture, music and mechanical efforts, overshadowed in its greatness all of the dramas of the older stage art and won the most extraordinary encomiums from the critics. The play was fiercely opposed by certain elements that did not like its true interpretation of American history, but it was passed by all censor boards and civic authorities, and it has received the overwhelming indorsement of the 2,000,000 spectators that have witnessed it.

The battle scenes pictured in the Civil war part of "The Birth of a Nation" mark the supreme achievement of motion photography up to date. The intensely vivid skirmishes and hand-to-hand struggles are not only well planned but well acted. You actually see death in some faces as the men fall in close combat. But the most thrilling sight of all are the battles conducted on a big scale in vast stretches of field and valley. The impression made upon the spectator is that of viewing gigantic military movements from some great mountain. The so-called war pictures sent over from Europe look tame in comparison.

Other great historic scenes in the play include skillful facsimiles of Lincoln's call for troops, Gens. Lee and Grant at Appomattox, Sherman's march to the sea and the burning of Atlanta and President Lincoln's assassination in the crowded Ford theater, Washington, April 14, 1865.

The second part of the spectacle is devoted to the reconstruction days when the south uprose a second time and threw off the carpetbagger-negro tyranny. The Ku Klux Klan are the protagonists of this part of the story. Their wild rides, rescue of harried whites and their snatching of victory from the jaws of defeat are represented on a vast scale with thousands of men and horses and with the infinite spirit, dash and elan for which Mr. Griffith's spectacular work is remarkable.

Intertwined with the mighty epical progress of the story are two beautiful romances of the Blue and the Gray—Ben Cameron, the Clansman, and his northern sweetheart, Elsie; Capt. Phil Stoneman, U. S. A., and sweet Margaret Cameron, the South Carolina lassie. Among the principals of the largest cast ever assembled for a dramatic entertainment are Henry B. Walthall, Mae Marsh, Lillian Gish, Miriam Cooper, Josephine Crowell, Spottiswoode Aiken, Ralph Lewis, Elmer Clifton, Robert Harron, Wallace Reed, Mary Alden, George Seigmann, Walter Long, Joseph Henabery, Raoul Walsh, Donald Crisp, Howard Gaye, William De Vaull, William Freeman and J. A. Beringer.

"The Birth of a Nation" took eight months to produce, cost half a million dollars, employed 18,000 actors, 3,000 horses, used real 180 shells in the artillery duels, night photography for the first time in some of the battle scenes and in all respects of magnitude, skill and artistry far surpassed anything remotely like it that has ever previously been attempted. The wonder was capped by having the thousands of scenes accurately synchronized to a sort of "grand opera" musical score played by a symphony orchestra of 30 musicians. Experts have declared that this magnificent score forms an artistic achievement fully as great as the picture itself.

The managers of this attraction, the Epoch Producing company, have seen to it that the production viewed here is in every respect identical with those of New York, Boston and Chicago.

PITTSBURG (Pa.) PRESS
SEPT. 13, 1915

Nothing was discovered by a bellboy, it is alleged. Later Patrolmen William Dillon and John Stech arrested them on the Northside.

Is Popular Entertainment.

D. W. Griffith's remarkable spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," now in its third successful week at the Nixon, is the most popular entertainment in the town. Running through this wondrous historical spectacle are two romantic love stories of surpassing heart interest. In the cast are Henry B. Walthall, as the gallant little colonel, Ben Cameron; Mae Marsh and Miriam Cooper as his sisters; Lillian Gish as Elsie Stoneman, and Elmer Clifton and Robert Harron as her brothers; Spottiswoode Aiken, Josephine Crowell, Ralph Lewis, Mary Alden, George Seigman and many others. One of the most delightful features of the entertainment is the symphony orchestra of 30.

Date 9-13-15

RE-ARRANGE STAGE FOR BIG SHOW

With the engagement of "The Birth of a Nation" at the Trent Theatre a week distant, preparations are already under way for extensive changes to the stage and auditorium of the theatre necessitated by the vastness and altogether unusual character of the offering. Space must be provided for the symphony orchestra of 30, which plays without pause throughout the three hours required for the presentation, and for the large booth and other ponderous electrical equipment carried by the company. Then, too, the stage must be fitted to receive the great quantity of contrivances utilized by 50 mechanics and supernumeraries in attaining the effects which have made the battle and other big scenes of "The Birth of a Nation" so amazingly realistic.

Taken as a whole, the big Griffith spectacle will be the one overshadowing event of the theatrical season in Trenton, and the fact that it is being shown at the Trent while other companies are presenting it to enormous business at the Liberty Thatre, New York; the Forrest Theatre, Philadelphia, as well as in Chicago, St. Louis and Pittsburgh, lends increased importance to the local engagement.

D. W. Griffith, in staging "The Birth of a Nation," used nature for his background, 150 years of American history as his subject, 18,000 people as his actors, and no less than 3,000 mounts of cavalry.

"The Gathering of the Clans," Given as One of the Most Thrilling Scenes in "The Birth of a Nation" at the Trent All Next Week.)

SEPT. 14, 1915
PITTSBURGH (Pa.) DISPATCH

"The Birth of a Nation"

The wonderful D W Griffith film, "The Birth of a Nation," entered upon its third week at the Nixon yesterday, with increased patronage.

Based on the book, "The Clansman," the photoplay breathes the spirit of that well-known work. The two great outstanding features of it are its controversial spirit and the splendor and magnificence of its production.

From the technical viewport it may be placed on a pedestal by itself. The appeal is far reaching, and there never has been a picture offered probably to the American public that can approach the "swing" of its powerful "pull" or the sometimes almost uncanny reproductions of historical scenes.

The greatness of the film is in its spectacular points and the historical reproductions, yet so clearly defined is the drama and so carefully presented that it grips the audience hard.

While too much cannot be said of the directing, the choice of scenery and the story itself, the acting is such as might be expected with a director of the type and power of Griffith.

Mr Walthall's performance is particularly fine. The parts of Stoneman and Silas Lynch are well taken care of, while Lillian Gish as Elsie Stoneman and Mae Marah as Flora Cameron are all that could be expected of these artists.

An orchestra of 25 musicians plays music especially composed, while a corps of assistants on the stage furnish the noises necessary to add to the realism of the scenes.

Briefly summed up, the picture as a whole is tremendous, the story is gripping, the photography superb, the support of the star, Mr Walthall, excellent, the detail perfect and scenery splendid.

UKEE (Wis.) SENTINEL
SEPT, 14, 1915

SENTINEL, TUESDAY,

CAROLINA WHITE HEADS GOOD BIL

Prima Donna's Appearance Thi Week Shows Improvement Over Last Year.

CRYSTAL BILL PLEASES

Saxe's Road Show Is Attraction, "Birth of a Nation" Shown at

Carolina White's appearance on Monday at the Majestic theater marked a great improvement over her first appearance in vaudeville here last spring, for her choice of selections was far more suited to her ability and was much more varied than her initial program. Opening with the "Aria of the Lure" from "Samson and Delilah," she followed with the French aria with the English song, "If Flowers Could Speak," and then concluded with a Leoncavallo serenade, thus giving the audience selections in three languages. As a concluding encore she sang her old charmer, "Mother Machree." She was effectively accompanied by Signor Enrico Barraja, who as an interlude gave Rinaldi's "Arlequinn" as a piano solo. The American prima donna achieved a great success last spring when she was here on her first tour in vaudeville, but the varying of her program this year greatly improves her drawing power.

Mme. White, however, is not the only attraction worthy of note in this week's bill. James C. Morton and Frank F. Moore, who jointly won fame in the "Tik Tok Man of Oz," and who have since been in vaudeville as separate attractions, are on the bill in a joint appearance, which is a veritable scream. Both of the men had the opportunity to display their particular brands of talent, and the two promise to be as great a hit appearing together as they were in their palmiest days in "The Tik Tok Man."

Gertrude Vanderbilt, who starred all summer as "The Lady in Red" in the Chicago presentation under that title, is here in a singing and dancing skit with George Moore as her partner, and they were also notable hits.

Claude and Fannie Usher, with their associate "Spareribs," of earlier fame in "The Straight Path," are here once more in the repetition of the story of the brother who is rescued from the life of a drunkard by his sister's sudden blindness.

The bill opens with Fred and Albert, gymnasts, whose display of strength are capped by their work in muscle lifting by one finger on each hand and completed by their derrick lifting trick.

Malita Zonconi provides the instrumental musical side of the bill with violin selections, orchestrally accompanied, and Sherman, Van and Hyman are near the close of the bill with a combination of what they fittingly term melodious nonsense. The Staines comedy circus, with its trick mule which no one can ride, completes the bill.

* * *

"The Birth of a Nation" is back. Only two weeks ago D. W. Griffiths' photoplay presentation of the civil war and reconstruction period closed a record breaking run of 114 performances at the Davidson theater. Now it has returned for a week's stay at the Pabst theater, affording Milwaukeeans, as well as state fair visitors, another opportunity to view the great spectacle.

Twining romance with history, mingling the clash of arms, the groans of the defeated and dying with the triumphant cries of the victors and deafening boom of cannon bombardments all along lines of flame streaked trenches, the first war half of the great photoplay thrilled its first Pabst audience Monday night.

Then leaving war's tragedy, tragedy not only on flame blazed battlefields, but tragedy in the homes desolated by conflict, the second part of the film stirred and tensely held emotions of the audience as it passed to the tragedy of war's aftermath, the reconstruction period in the south, ending in the wild, werid final triumphs of the Ku Klux Klan over negro and carpet bag ascendency.

Neglecting its romance and gripping dramatic thrill, "The Birth of a Nation" is most worth seeing for its historic value. Historic incidents, especially those of Lee's surrender and the assassination of President Lincoln in Ford's theater have been portrayed with careful attention.

The photodrama, with large orchestra will be seen daily at afternoon and night performances at the Pabst theater for seven days.

* * *

FROM Times
Trenton (N. J.)
Date 9-14-15

LILLIAN GISH
(Actress Whose Winsomeness Relieves Tenseness in "The Birth of a Nation," Motion-Picture Production at the Trent Theatre Next Week.)

LILLIAN GISH IN "BIRTH OF NATION"

One of the most effective minor scenes in "The Birth of a Nation," coming to the Trent Theatre for a week, beginning next Monday, shows Miss Elsie Stoneman, daughter of the "Great Commoner," who led Congress in Lincoln's time, playing a guitar to solace a wounded rebel officer in the Patents' Office Hospital.

"I haven't known you long," says the little Confederate colonel, Ben Cameron, "but I have carried you about with me for years and years." He displays a half-faded daguerreotype of the girl, a picture she had given her brother and which had fallen into Ben's hands.

Soothed by her kindness, Ben makes a rapid recovery. In the second half of the story, the scene of which shifts to South Carolina, they are sweethearts in the dread time of the second Southern uprising. To portray the fine flower of Northern womanhood throughout the whole trubious era is the task of Miss Lillian Gish, as Elsie Stoneman in this play. It took eight months to stage the Civil War and Reconstruction epic in "The Birth of a Nation." As she figures in hundreds of scenes from the early war-time to the end of Reconstruction and her marriage to Ben, Lillian Gish had hardly an idle moment.

PITTSBURG (Pa.) LEADER
SEPT. 14, 1915

"Birth of Nation" at Nixon

The triumphant, historical pictorial drama, "The Birth of a Nation," as presented by D. W. Griffith, past master in photoplay dramatization and production, entered upon the third week of its production yesterday at the Nixon theater. The popularity of this striking spectacle photoplay is unabated, for last night the theater was filled almost to capacity in spite of the torridity that tended to diminish the number of eager patrons and render less comfortable the many who "sat the picture through."

The production, truly a master achievement, presents to the eye a wonderfully vivid impression of modern photography as it has been developed in reproducing action. The production is strikingly beautiful, and amazing in its scope and grandeur. Scenes of the Civil war, cannonading from the distant hills, spectacular fighting by night, pitched battles with bayonets, and entrenched fighting, is presented in all its writhing agony. Scenes, too, of sons leaving happy family circles "for the front;" their untimely death afield, and the heart-broken families, exhibit the vast extent to which the miseries of war reach. An appealing romance is woven through the play, displaying the obstacles a Confederate soldier had to overcome to win a northern girl.

The photoplay historically is most educational to the student, and leaves a lasting impression of the tense struggle preliminary to the national adoption and recognition of the Webster doctrine: "Liberty and Union, One and Inseparable, Now and Forever."

PITTSBURG (Pa.) CHRONICLE
SEPT. 14, 1915

Nixon—"The Birth of a Nation."

With undiminished popularity, D. W. Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation" entered the third week yesterday in the Nixon Theater. The interest in the scope and power of this photo spectacle is drawing many from miles around.

The battle scenes pictured in the Civil War convey the most vivid impression of animated photography. The affecting scenes in soldiers' homes when word comes of lives sacrificed on battlefields bring tears, as they brought them when this tremendous human document was first unrolled in the Nixon.

All who see "The Birth of a Nation" are impressed by this work as a great accomplishment in photo spectacular production.

PITTSBURG (Pa.) GAZETTE-TIMES
SEPT. 14, 1915

Nixon—"Birth of a Nation."

This unusual photoplay and spectacle continues to draw large audiences to the Nixon Theater, where it began its second week yesterday. The extremely hot weather of last week was discouraging to theater going, but despite this handicap the Griffith picture was a popular center of interest. Critical reference to "The Birth of a Nation" has been so numerous, and generally so praiseful, that repetition is almost inevitable. But the observant visitor to this massive spectacle, whether he be a "movie" fan or not, will find even in the subordinate excellencies of the production certain things that he will fail to find in any of the other big film exhibits. For instance, the detail of the acting is so far superior to what one sees even in the spoken drama as to lift the artistic merit of the performance to a high level. The male members of the cast, with one or two exceptions, are particularly effective in dumb "show." The set expression that one sees on the faces of the ordinary film is largely absent in many of these Griffith players. The photography, too, is so clear as to aid this effect. Besides all this, the big scenes multiply rapidly toward the climax and the auditor is carried forward, often under bitter and resentful protest at some of the scenes, to a conclusion that leaves you amazed at the resources of this modern invention and art.

CLIPPING FROM
Philadelphia, (Pa.) North American
Date SEP 14 1915

'BIRTH OF A NATION' BEGINS NEW WEEK AT THE FORREST

Fine Acting in Stirring Scenes in Film Grips Attention

On the opening of its second week at the Forrest last night "The Birth of a Nation," D. W. Griffith's widely heralded motion-picture drama, again was viewed by hundreds of persons.

For all its "two dimensions," this play undeniably has the power to hold its audiences. The rapid succession of stirring scenes, the piling of spectacle upon spectacle, seldom fail to grip the most blase spectator and hold his attention to the end.

For competent acting it is unsurpassed in filmdom. Henry B. Walthall has unique power in the principal male role, and Mae Marsh, Miriam Cooper, Lillian Gish and Ralph Lewis do well in the minor parts.

'CASE OF BECKEY,' IN FILM, FEATURE OF STANLEY BILL

A film version of Edward Locke's famous play, "The Case of Beckey," is on view this week at the Stanley Theater. The principal roles are taken by Blanche Sweet, Carlyle Blackwell, Theodore Roberts and James Neill. A special musical program will be given at every performance.

A really important film is Cyril Maude, the eminent English comedian, in a big production of "Peer Gynt," announced for the last three days of the week at this theater.

'GIRL IN RED' IS NEW DANCER APPEARING AT TROCADERO

The Girl in Red, a new dancer, will be the special attraction with Billy Watson's United States Beauties, who furnish burlesque amusement this week at the Trocadero.

The first offering is called "Old Gloria" and the second "One Night Opera." The chiefs of a large croup of able comedians are Charles H. Boyle, Bert Marion, Tom Burnett and Charles McGuinnes.

'The Ivory Snuff Box' at Palace

Fred Arnold Kummer's novel, "The Ivory Snuff Box," furnishes the material for a film of the same name in which Holbrook Blinn is seen this week at the Palace Theater. Alma Belwin is Mr. Blinn's chief support in this romantic and thrilling tale of crime and intrigue. The production has been staged on a large scale.

CLIPPING FROM
Trenton (N. J.)
Date 9-14-15

18,000 ACTORS IN "BIRTH OF NATION"

"The Birth of a Nation," D. W. Griffith's massive spectacle, coming to the Trent theatre next week, is the largest and most important production of a decade, yet not a word is spoken throughout the performance of nearly three hours. Music supplies the absence of speech, mechanical effects and realism, whilst the wizard of the screen, David W. Griffith, unfolds in 12,000 feet of film the thrilling romance of the war between the states and the reconstruction of the southland. Some idea of its magnitude may be had from the fact that 18,000 actors and 3,000 horses took part and that the staging of this great "outdoor" drama cost half a million dollars.

Several of the actors are of southern lineage. Henry Walthall, who plays the heroic role of the little Confederate colonel, is a member of the well known Walthall family of Alabama. Miriam Cooper, who appears as Margaret Cameron, is a direct descendant of Charles Carroll, the Maryland signer of the Declaration of Independence. Mr. Griffith is the son of a brigadier general of the Confederate army.

For every character, however small, Mr. Griffith has found just the personality needed. After that his masterly direction made each one give a perfect characterization of the widely varying roles. The result was not acting but life itself. Such realism is never seen on the old-fashioned stage. The limitations of the theatre were swept away, for Nature was Mr. Griffith's stage. Panorama after panorama is revealed to the astonished eyes of the spectator. The most inventive imaginaiton could hardly picture to itself such scenes of splendor.

BRIDGEPORT (Conn.) TELEGRAM
SEPT. 14, 1915

"BIRTH OF A NATION" TO COME HERE SOON

S. Z. Poli Arranges to Present Famous Motion Picture at Poli's Theatre.

Bridgeport is to see "The Birth of a Nation," the famous photo-visualization of American history. The great picture spectacle which has been a New York sensation for almost a year will be presented at Poli's theatre here for one week in the near future.

Announcement to this effect was made yesterday by Louis B. Mayer, agent and general manager of the American Feature Film company, which holds the rights to the production in this section. The announcement followed a long conference with S. Z. Poli, the theatrical magnate who operates a large circuit of theatres, including two in Bridgeport.

Mr. Mayer, acting for the American Feature Film company, recently called upon Mr. Poli with a view to obtaining the use of Poli's theatre here for the presentation of the noted films. As "The Birth of a Nation" is a production requiring three hours, its booking necessarily would mean the temporary abandonment of the popular vaudeville and photoplay policy that has been in vogue here. This was a mighty consideration on the one hand; on the other hand, Mr. Poli sincerely wanted Bridgeporters to have a chance to see the famous photodrama.

Poli's theatre, Mr. Mayer flatly maintained, was the only theatre in Bridgeport in which he would allow "The Birth of a Nation" to be shown. Its capacity of 3,500 or more and general appointments for the production were the features that decided this.

Several conferences came to a climax yesterday afternoon, when Mr. Poli gave his assent to the use of Poli's theatre for the presentation of the great photo-spectacle. Mr. Mayer went away happy and will return here shortly to arrange for the coming of "The Birth of a Nation." The dates will be announced later.

Mr. Poli, speaking to a Telegram reporter yesterday afternoon, supplemented Mr. Mayer's announcement with the following statement:

"The bit of news that Mr. Mayer has just given you, to my mind marks one of the biggest things theatrically that has happened in Bridgeport in some time.

"Mr. Mayer has arranged with me, in behalf of his company, for the temporary abandonment for one week in the near future, of the present policy at Poli's theatre here, in order that a superb picture, 'The Birth of a Nation' may be shown at that theatre. It is my belief that the temporary interruption of the present policy, which has proved so popular here, will be accepted even with enthusiasm by my patrons when they learn that it is countenanced only that they might see this truly wonderful picture."

HARTFORD (Conn.) TIMES
SEPT. 15, 1915

POLI GETS IT.

The sole New England rights for the production of the famous picture, "The Birth of a Nation," have been secured by Sylvester Z. Poli, the well-known theatrical magnate. The contracts have been signed at Boston, where the big production is now being presented. It is unquestionably one of the biggest moving picture contracts ever consummated in this section of the country. "The Birth of a Nation" will be shown in Mr. Poli's theaters in New England, which, of course, includes Hartford.

MILWAUKEE (Wis.) JOURNAL
SEPT. 12, 1915

The Birth of a Nation, which recently played in Milwaukee for eight weeks, will return to the Pabst theater beginning Monday afternoon. Milwaukeeans do not need to be reminded of the magnitude of this production which occupied more than a year in preparation and in which the services of 18,000 men, 3,000 horses and tons of equipment were used. The production will be given exactly as during the summer run, with an orchestra of forty.

D. W. Griffith's production of Home, Sweet Home, a life drama typifying the life, work and death of John Howard Payne, author of the most generally beloved and widely appealing song of the same title, will be offered at the Princess for one day only, Monday. Hobart Bosworth and Jane Novak will be seen Tuesday in the Little Brother of the Rich.

NCORD (N. H.) MONITOR
SEPT. 14, 1915

ast of Massachusetts.

REMARKABLE SPECTACLE.

At Conn's Theater on Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

"The Birth of a Nation" the sensational and spectacular Griffith production of the Civil War period in 12 parts based on the book, "The Clansman" breathes the spirit of that well-known work. The two great outstanding features of it are its controversial spirit and splendor, and the magnificence of its production. Taken as a whole it is the most tremendous offering of its kind ever projected.

The greatness of the production is in its spectacular points and the historical reproductions, yet so clearly defined is the drama and so very carefully presented that it grips the audience hard. The appeal is far reaching and there probably never has been a production offered to the American public that can approach the "swing" of its powerful "pull" or sometimes almost uncanny reproductions of historical scenes.

From a technical viewpoint it may be placed upon a pedestal by itself. Nothing approaching "The Birth of a Nation" as a spectacle of its class has ever been seen in Concord. It is a magnificent production, wonderful in its scope, dramatic to a degree in its construction, faithful in detail and convincing in its argument. Those who may feel inclined to take offense at alleged incidents of half a century ago, and find it difficult to square such offenses with latter day conditions, should bear in mind that the traitor, Arnold, of the Revolution, was the same Arnold who, as the daring "rider of the black horse" was the hero of the siege of Quebec.

Beginning with the troublous times just preceding the Civill War "The Birth of a Nation" takes us through that awful struggle, culminating in the assassination of Lincoln, into and through the reconstruction period which has been classed by many as the darkest period of United States history. Conn's Theater will present this remarkable production on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week.

RENTON (N. J.) GAZETTE
SEPT. 15, 1915

Stage THEATRES Screen

Conducted by D. F. STEVENSON, Dramatic Editor

LILLIAN STONEMAN AND THE SENTRY.

(One of the comedy scenes which relieve the more serious moments in "The Birth of a Nation," at the Trent theatre next week).

BRIDGEPORT (CONN.) POST
SEPT. 14, 1915

POLI'S TO PRESENT THE "BIRTH OF A NATION"

Wonderful Motion Picture Now in Its Tenth Month in New York City.

"The Birth of a Nation"—the famous photoplay visualizing epochal events in American history—is to be seen in Bridgeport soon. The same big production that is now in its tenth month in New York and which has created a profound sensation, will be brought to Poli's theater for a week by the American Feature Film company.

Announcement that the great dramatic and historical spectacle is coming here was received today with geenral acclaim among all classes of theatergoers. Arrangements for its presentation were completed at a series of conferences, between Louis B. Mayer, general manager of the American Feature Film company, and S. Z. Poli, the theatrical magnate whose circuit of vaudeville houses includes two in Bridgeport.

"The Birth of a Nation" is the famous production by D. W. Griffith that marked a new era in the film world. It requires three hours for its presentation, and this fact necessarily will cause the temporary abandonment, for one week, of the present popular policy of vaudeville and photoplays at Poli's theater.

Mr. Mayer, during his conferences with Mr. Poli, insisted that the Poli theater would be the only house in Bridgeport in which he wanted to show the picture. Its enormous seating capacity and its appointments for the perfect presentation of the spectacle led him to make this decision. While Mr. Poli was loath to interrupt the present policy of the house, he was won over to Mr. Mayer's way of thinking principally because he wanted Bridgeporters to have an opportunity of seeing "The Birth of a Nation."

Mr. Poli gave his decision yesterday afternoon to Mr. Mayer. The latter immediately left for New York to complete arrangements for the production here. The dates will be announced soon, he said.

Commenting on the announcement, Mr. Poli said today: "I sincerely believe that Bridgeport patrons of my house will appreciate the temporary abandonment, for one week, of the present policy at Poli's, in order that 'The Birth of a Nation' may be shown in Bridgeport. It is really a wonderful production, and I feel certain that it will be an epochal event in Bridgeport theatricals. Immediately after the conclusion of the engagement, Poli's will immediately revert to the present policy which has proved so popular here."

CONCORD (N. H.) MONITOR
SEPT. 15, 1915

checked then it would be otherwise.

GRIFFITH'S ACCOMPLISHMENT.

His "Birth of a Nation" a Real Masterpiece.

Half a century after the actual scenes of the Civil War the film spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," the highest development of the motion picture art bears a keen relationship to current events. Aside from its dramatic appeal and poetic flight it brings back to a younger generation with a new-born realism the things which our fathers and grandfathers went through that out of the travail could come the nation we are so proud of today. It is not a case of opening old wounds but is art suggestive, the highest form of art, to point out to us the mistakes and misunderstandings of the past that we may face the crisis of the present with a calmness and determination to uphold the right.

The dramatic form has often been employed by the greatest minds of the world to express truths but few pens have been able to make as impressive a picture as Griffith has encompassed in this masterpiece. A born realist he cuts into the quick of facts that he may establish his dramatic plot. He has not been concerned with propaganda but he has made his impress upon our minds in a way which is startlingly original and a force to be reckoned with in the future.

He masses great armies upon a historic plane to reproduce the records of a mighty struggle and by the human interests of two families makes a great nation's efforts a topic of a dramatic construction which appeals to the heart and the sympathies as no bald narrative of facts could hope to do.

He writes history by flashes of lightning and with it all has built up a spectacle that brings tears to the eyes, mingles pathos with laughter, and above all else, does something fine upon a most tremendous scale.

"The Birth of a Nation" is well worth while and when one has witnessed it, it is easy to understand why it has created such a gigantic stir. The engagement of this greatest of all film spectacles opens at Conn's Theater tomorrow for three days.

SMOUTH (N. H.) CHRONICLE 718
SEPT. 15, 1915

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION"

Marvelous Spectacle in its 25th Consecutive Week in Boston, at Majestic Theatre

Tomorrow afternoon marks the 289th performance of D. W. Griffith's mighty spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation" in this city, by far the greatest number of consecutive performances for any theatrical attraction in the history of the Boston stage. After twenty weeks of capacity business at the Tremont Theatre the announcement that the engagement would end a week ago occasioned such an overwhelming demand from theatregoers all over New England that the engagement be extended, that arrangements were made to transfer the picture to the Majestic Theatre and during the past two weeks crowded houses attested to the public's appreciation of this continuation.

There is little to be said of the picture itself that has not already been said many times. In rapid sequence one scene follows another, scenes in the North and South before the Civil War, during it and immediately following it. The scene of the assassination of Lincoln and the dark days of the reconstruction period in the South during the regime of the carpet-baggers and the various thrilling battle scenes presented on a most stupendous scale are miracles of photography and necessitated the use of large areas in the South and the employment of 18,000 persons and 3,000 horses. The scene of Sherman's march to the sea, the wild ride of the Klux Klux Klan, and the destruction of whole towns occasion hearty outbursts of enthusiasm at every performance. A wonderful picture in every respect is the unanimous opinion of all who have seen it.

At the Majestic Theatre patrons will find the same augmented orchestra and comfortable environment which prevailed during the long run at the Tremont Theatre and judging by the attendance the past week, "The Birth of a Nation," is in for another long run. Performances will be given every afternoon and evening and seats may be procured for two weeks in advance.

Aug. 13-1915
Columbus Ev. Press

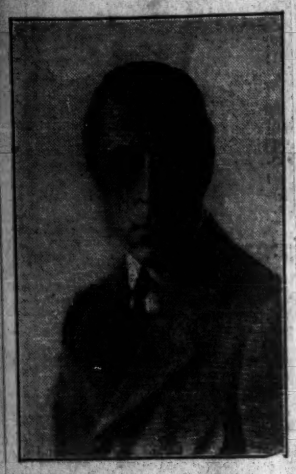
"Birth of a Nation" Returns.

Few of those in the big audience that greeted the return of "The Birth of a Nation" to the Savoy theater this afternoon had any idea of the long hours of labor that the company and the house attaches had spent in staging and synchronizing the spectacle. From the arrival of the company and their car of electrical equipment, scenery, properties, etc., Saturday afternoon, until the white shaft of light struck the screen at the Savoy this afternoon, there was no rest for anybody.

But the results fully justified the effort. The presentation was perfect to the last detail and the audience registered its verdict with bursts of applause.

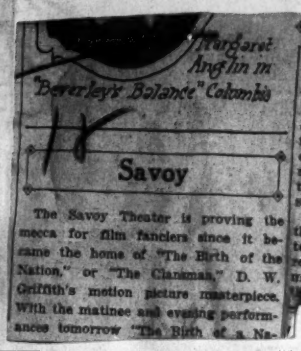
The story is one of romance and adventure linked to the most vital periods of American history. It records its facts with the rapidity of lightning and yet never departs from the fundamentals of true drama. Love and conflict are its basic theme but a myriad of details illumine the narrative and lift it so far beyond anything our stage has ever known that the usual avenues of comparison do not offer a road to follow in this instance. Linked with the drama is an operatic score which carries recurrent themes with every vital scene and character in the epic. This wonderful score which is synchronized to the drama is in itself an incomparable work of art. An orchestra of 30 travels with the attraction to handle the musical features of the presentation.

That part of history dealing with the rise and fall of the slavery problem is the vital spark upon which Griffith has built his story. The conflict which this question caused is reproduced in great battles and in all the thrilling things which are a part of war.



DAVID W. GRIFFITH.
Producer of "The Birth of a Nation," at Savoy Theater.

SAN FRANCISCO (Cal.) CALL & POST
SEPT. 11, 1915



The Savoy Theater is proving the mecca for film fanciers since it became the home of "The Birth of the Nation," or "The Clansman," D. W. Griffith's motion picture masterpiece. With the matinee and evening performances tomorrow "The Birth of a Nation" begins its twentieth week in San Francisco.

As pictures of history in the making, "The Birth of a Nation" is of tremendous value, apart from its superlative entertaining powers. It places before the eyes of the present generation events of which they have only been able to read hitherto, and shows them in a way that can not fail to impress the most stoical spectator.

The pictures of the Ku Klux Klan in their ghostly regalia, holding their mysterious rites, and their raids, when they rode like Cossacks, make for some of the most thrilling scenes ever caught by the camera.

SKIPPING FROM [illegible]
San Francisco C
9-11-1

'CLANSMAN' STILL DRAWS AT SAVOY

Film Drama Begins Its First Week of Special Return Engagement.

THAT "The Birth of a Nation; or, The Clansman," is still riding high in public favor is shown by the large audiences attracted to the Savoy Theater, where the great Griffith film is in the first week of its special return engagement and its nineteenth week in San Francisco.

The special scenic effects, the elaborate incidental music and the plantation song numbers, rendered by a chorus, add not a little to the entertainment. Lillian Gish, Mae Marsh, Miriam Cooper and the other mute favorites on the screen have established following that might well be the envy of many stars of the spoken drama.

SAN ANTONIO (Tex.) EXPRESS
SEPT. 12, 1915

his social position [illegible] newspaper world. [illegible] tance with theater and [illegible] strong [illegible] including Hebart Henley and [illegible] Royal.

"The Birth of a Nation."

D. W. Griffith's master production, "The Birth of a Nation," will be the attraction at the Grand commencing an engagement of six days on Monday, November 1.

It will be brought here in exact reproduction of the great attraction which is now in New York where it has broken every record of the American stage. These achievements alone have aroused more comment upon the subject of this great story than was ever devoted to a theatrical enterprise before.

The surest statement regarding "The Birth of a Nation" leaps to superlatives because there is no other form in which it can be written. Simple facts in relationship to its developments sound extravagant until you have seen the production and realized a tithe of its sweep and power. It covers the essential details of American history ranging through three centuries. Actual battles are shown with tens of thousands of soldiers in the conflict. Eighteen thousand people participated in the telling of the story. Three thousand horses were used to give the cavalry and other thrilling effects of the wild dashes over miles of territory. Cities were built up only to be destroyed by fire. The total cost of the entire production was in the neighborhood of $500,000. Five hundred costumers and seamstresses worked for three months to make the costumes worn by the people. Ten thousand yards of cloth were worked into the costumes worn by the women while 25,000 yards of white muslin were used up in the regalia of the Ku Klux Klansmen. And yet with all this a simple, human story of love and romance weaves through the vast spread of the action and grips the hearts of the audience. The narrative is filled with tears and smiles. A symphonic score accompanies the action and lends a potent force to the drama.

SEPT. 13, 1915
MILWAUKEE (Wis.) NEWS

"Birth of a Nation" Returns for Week

Miss Miriam Cooper.

"The Birth of a Nation" opens an engagement of seven days only at the Pabst theater this afternoon. Two performances will be given daily, afternoon and evening. The production is the same in every respect as during its record-breaking summer run at the Davidson theater, when it created the greatest sensation in the theatrical history of Milwaukee. The wonderful reproductions of battle scenes in which thousands of men participate; the amazing views of battle fields extending for miles; the presentation of such historic scenes as the assassination of Lincoln, the surrender of Lee, Sherman's march to the sea and the signing of the call for troops; the pictures of southern life in war time and in the turbulent reconstruction days, combine to make this half million dollar production the first and greatest wonder of the moving picture world.

YOUNGSTOWN (O.) VINDICATOR
SEPT. 14, 1915

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION" DRAWS GREAT CROWDS

Over 2,000 Offers for Playing Rights of Photoplay Refused

Never in the history of the theater has there been so widespread a demand for a play as there is for D. W. Griffith's magnificent spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," which is now playing a limited engagement at the Nixon theater in Pittsburgh. Over two thousand offers have been received for the playing rights of this photo drama, but all of them have been refused. As a result the only opportunity to see "The Birth of a Nation" within a radius of 100 miles of Pittsburgh will be during its present engagement at the Nixon theater. Over 2,000,000 people have seen this eighth wonder of the world. There have been over 500 performances at the Liberty theater, New York; 300 at the Tremont theater, Boston, and over 350 performances at the Illinois theater, Chicago, and it is still showing in those cities. Produced at a cost of $500,000 in a period of eight months; 18,000 people and 3,000 horses were used. There is a symphony orchestra of thirty. Few people realize that nearly 100 people are required to properly present to the public this gigantic spectacle. Musicians, expert operators and electricians, men to handle mechanical effects and men in other departments make up this roster which is as large as that of a large musical comedy company. It is the massiveness in both the subject and the manner of presentation of "The Birth of a Nation" that has made the public not only willing but eager to pay as high as $2 to witness the production. Not even Nero ever gazed upon so magnificent spectacle. The prices for this engagement for evenings and Saturday matinees are $1 and $2 for the lower floor; $1 and $1.50 for the balcony; 25 and 50 cents for the second balcony. There are matinees every day except Sunday for which the prices are lower floor and balcony 50 cents and $1; second balcony, 25 and 50 cents. Mail orders containing remittances will receive prompt attention. Those who wish to see "The Birth of a Nation" in Pittsburgh can avail themselves of the extremely low excursion rates which all the railroads are now offering on account of the Pittsburgh Exposition.

Columbus Ev. Press Sept

"BIRTH OF NATION" RETURNS TO SAVOY

Yesterday, the first day of the return of the popular "Birth of a Nation," at the Savoy, saw another large audience eager to follow the portrayal of the early history of the nation as produced by David W. Griffiths. Both audineces yesterday were as enthusiastic in their praise of the wonderful feat in photography as any that has witnessed the production.

The story is one of romance linked with one of the most vital periods in the history of the United States. In recording the facts, which it does with lightning rapidity, no departure is made from the fundamentals of true drama. The story appeals alike to the lover of the drama and the lover of history. Linked with the drama is an operatic score which carries recurrent themes with every vital scene and character. This score is a work of art in itself. An orchestra of 30 pieces travels with the attraction to handle the musical features. The picture will be at the Savoy the entire week, with a matinee daily.

LOS ANGELES (Cal.) EXPRESS
SEPT. 11, 1915

Stageddon

IN RESPONSE to popular demand the management of Clune's Auditorium theater announces The Clansman will be continued there for another week. With the matinee Monday afternoon the twenty-second week of The Clansman's record-breaking run will be ushered in.

In these days of the greatest world war the world has known, when all Europe is at loggerheads and all America is straining every nerve to hold herself aloof from the struggle, The Clansman is showing itself to be the most popular film on the screens.

The secret of The Clansman is that while it is a war picture, it is at the same time a most potent pictorial sermon against war. The Clansman historically depicts this country in the midst of its greatest struggle, and leads the onlooker through scene after scene of violence, rapine and heartache. But it also preaches that peace and the good will of peoples is the most desirable thing to be had, and by showing up war's brutality without glossing over appalling events, The Clansman presents an argument for peace that is as logical and as unanswerable as is the love of the average American for peace and chastity of home life.

TRENTON (N. J.) GAZETTE
SEPT. 13, 1915

GRIFFITH FILM TO DRAW BIG CROWDS

The unusual number of inquiries received at the box office of the Trent theatre concerning the week's engagement of "The Birth of a Nation" beginning next Monday evening, is taken as a forecast of record business for the big Griffith spectacle. So much has been read and heard of the offering in connection with its New York, Philadelphia and Atlantic City engagements that its coming to the Trent is awaited with feverish expectancy. The spectacle will be presented at the local playhouse precisely as it is being shown in the larger cities, including the realistic battle and other effects, requiring a carload of special equipment and a corps of fifty mechanics and supernumeraries. There will be thirty musicians in the orchestra, most of them solo artists carried by the company.

The seat sale will open Tuesday morning and reservations will be accepted by mail and telephone. There will be a matinee every day except Monday, and the prices will fit all purses.

"The Birth of a Nation" is one of the most widely discussed topics in the country. It established an absolutely new art in the realm of the theatre—the art of pantomimic screen spectacle with music. It also created a tremendous sensation because of its vaster and more forceful treatment of the same theme as Thomas Dixon's "The Clansman." The consequences of the Civil war in southern reconstruction are fully dealt with, and the nation reborn is apotheosized. Mr. Griffith, pioneer among directors, managed the stupendous achievement without the aid of dialogue or speech, for motion pictures, accompanying music and effects tell the coherent, logical and moving story.

(Ohio) PARAGRAPH
SEPT. 14, 1915

16

'THE BIRTH OF A NATION' DRAWS GREAT CROWDS

Over 2,000 Offers for Playing Rights of Photoplay Refused

Never in the history of the theater has there been so widespread a demand for a play as there is for D. W. Griffith's magnificent spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," which is now playing a limited engagement at the Nixon theater in Pittsburgh. Over two thousand offers have been received for the playing rights of this photo drama, but all of them have been refused. As a result the only opportunity to see "The Birth of a Nation" within a radius of 100 miles of Pittsburgh will be during its present engagement at the Nixon theater. Over 2,000,000 people have seen this eighth wonder of the world. There have been over 500 performances at the Liberty theater, New York; 300 at the Tremont theater, Boston, and over 850 performances at the Illinois theater, Chicago, and it is still showing in those cities. Produced at a cost of $500,000 in a period of eight months; 18,000 people and 3,000 horses were used. There is a symphony orchestra of thirty. Few people realize that nearly 100 people are required to properly present to the public this gigantic spectacle. Musicians, expert operators and electricians, men to handle mechanical effects and men in other departments make up this roster which is as large as that of a large musical comedy company. It is the massiveness in both the subject and the manner of presentation of "The Birth of a Nation" that has made the public not only willing but eager to pay as high as $2 to witness the production. Not even Nero ever gazed upon so magnificent spectacle. The prices for this engagement for evenings and Saturday matinees are $1 and $2 for the lower floor; $1 and $1.50 for the balcony; 25 and 50 cents for the second balcony. There are matinees every day except Sunday for which the prices are lower floor and balcony 50 cents and $1; second balcony, 25 and 50 cents. Mail orders containing remittances will receive prompt attention. Those who wish to see "The Birth of a Nation" in Pittsburgh can avail themselves of the extremely low excursion rates which all the railroads are now offering on account of the Pittsburgh Exposition.

SEPT. 11, 1915
SAN FRANCISCO (Cal.) BULLETIN

AT THE SAVOY

FF

The Savoy Theater is proving the mecca for "film fans" to witness "The Birth of a Nation, or the Clansman," D. W. Griffith's motion picture. With the matinee and evening performances tomorrow "The Birth of a Nation" begins its twentieth week in San Francisco.

It shows the Ku Klux Klan in its ghostly regalia, making raids, when they rode like Cossacks.

Then there is a series of pictures showing Sherman's march to the sea, with the devastation he left behind, and the assassination of President Lincoln, showing Ford's Theater as the stage was set on that fatal night.

TSMOUTH (N. H.) HERALD
SEPT. 14, 1915

Majestic Theatre

Tomorrow afternoon marks the 289th performance of D. W. Griffith's mighty spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation" in this city, by far the greatest number of consecutive performances for any theatrical attraction in the history of the Boston stage. After twenty weeks of capacity business at the Tremont Theatre the announcement that the engagement would end a week ago occasioned such an overwhelming demand from theatregoers all over New England that the engagement be extended, that arrangements were made to transfer the picture to the Majestic Theatre and during the past two weeks crowded houses attested to the public's appreciation of this continuation.

There is little to be said of the picture itself that has not already been said many times. In rapid sequence one scene follows another, scenes in the North and South before the Civil War, during it and immediately following it. The scene of the assassination of Lincoln and the dark days of the reconstruction period in the South during the regime of the carpet-baggers and the various thrilling battle scenes presented on a most stupendous scale are miracles of photography and necessitated the use of large areas in the South and the employment of 18,000 persons and 3,000 horses. The scene of Sherman's march to the sea, the wild ride of the Klux Klux Klan, and the destruction of whole towns occasion hearty outbursts of enthusiasm at every performance. A wonderful picture in every respect is the unanimous opinion of all who have seen it.

At the Majestic Theatre patrons will find the same augmented orchestra and comfortable environment which prevailed during the long run at the Tremont Theatre and judging by the attendance the past week, "The Birth of a Nation," is in for another long run. Performances will be given every afternoon and evening and seats may be procured for two weeks in advance.

SAN FRANCISCO (Cal.) JOURNAL OF COMMERCE
SEPT 11 1915

PABST.

FF

"The Birth of a Nation," D. W. Griffith's moving picture production, which was the attraction in the Davidson this summer, will return to the Pabst for a state fair week engagement of seven days, beginning Monday afternoon. Two performances will be given daily, at 2:15 and 8:10.

Milwaukeeans do not need to be remined of the magnitude of this production which occupied more than a year in preparation and in which the services of 18,000 men, 3,000 horses and tons of equipment were used.

The wonderful battle scenes, the historic events in which Lincoln, Grant, Lee and other great figures of history appear, the thrilling rides of the Ku Klux Klan—all these constitute a spectacle which has never been equaled in the history of dramatic representation.

The production will be given exactly as it was during the summer run with a symphony orchestra of 40 to render the music which runs throughout the presentation.

SEPT. 11, 1915
DALLAS (Tex.) HERALD

"Birth of a Nation" Pictures Coming

"The Birth of the Nation," said to be one of the greatest feature films ever produced, will be shown at the Dallas opera house for ten days, beginning Oct. 10.

This film has had a most successful run in the North and East and has been shown in many cities to picture show patrons who have paid $2 a seat. A special orchestra of eighteen pieces accompanies the film, rendering special music appropriate to the scene portrayed by the film.

Not only Dallas people are expected to see the film while it is here, but many out-of-town movie fans are expected to be in attendance.

ANGELES (Cal.) EXAMINER
SEPT. 10, 1915

Prosperity for Shows Seen

Sothern Returns to State

MARGARET CAMERON, Appearing in "The Clansman," Which Continues at Clune's Auditorium.

FF

KEYSTONE PHOTO.

By Otheman Stevens

CLIPPING FROM San Francisco Examiner 9-11-15

TRENTON (N. J.) TIMES
SEPT. 15, 1915

MAE MARSH
(Who Plays Flora Cameron in "The Birth of a Nation" at the Trent Next Week.)

MAE MARSH TO ACT "BIRTH OF NATION"

Miss Mae Marsh, who will be seen as the captivating little Flora in D. W. Griffith's spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," at the Trent Theatre for a whole week, beginning next Monday, is a prodigy of Filmdom.

The young girl, who lives near Los Angeles, met so many rebuffs at first that she almost gave up hope of a stage career. A small job at spear-holding with the "merry, merry," was at last promised her. While awaiting this, she decided one day to sneak behind "big sister" to the motion picture studio where the latter was employed. The director, Mr. Griffith, saw the young stranger and asked her whether she wanted to act. Everybody laughed, for Mae Marsh was awkward, freckle-faced and unprepossessing.

Griffith was in earnest, however. He saw under the freckles a visage born to comedy and tragedy, the high lights and deep shadows of feeling. He sensed also a temperament of electrical quality. Under his tutoring she lost some of the awkwardness and kept the rest for "slavey" parts. Fine frocks made a wonderful difference. The other actors found that Mae Marsh, with equal facility, could queen it in a palace or play in a kitchen.

This chameleon quality led the director to entrust her with important characterss. Lately he has been using her in emotional roles. Everybody in New York, when "The Birth of a Nation" was produced there, felt that the biggest individual hit—with the possible exception of Henry Walthall, playing the hero—had been achieved by Mae Marsh.

TRENTON (N. J.) GAZETTE
SEPT. 15, 1915

"Birth of a Nation" F F

The new theatric art invented by David W. Griffith in producing "The Birth of a Nation," coming to the Trent theatre next week, has enabled him to surpass by far any stage spectacle. "Ben Hur" and "The Blue Bird" were supposed to be the high-water mark of such productions. They sink into insignificance beside this epic of American history with its 5,000 scenes, 18,000 characters, 3,000 riders and 200,000 details, the result of eight months of tireless labor and the expenditure of half a million dollars.

The war plays of the stage such as "Shenandoah," "Held by the Enemy" and "Barbara Frietchie" seem tame after seeing the splendors of "The Birth of a Nation." In the Griffith spectacle the scenes of sheer beauty and strength are of Homeric grandeur. The night riding of the Ku Klux Klan looks like a company of avenging spectres sweeping along the moonlit roads. There is a pictorial punch in every scene.

This realistic picture of history in the making is of untold value to both old and young. Besides the historical worth of this great spectacle the constant emotional throb of the romantic story thrills the hearts of all. It is the supreme achievement of modern histrionism in its new guise untramelled by the limitations of the theatre.

There will be a matinee every day, excepting Monday.

NEW YORK (N. Y.) CLIPPER
SEP 18 191[illegible]

"The Birth of a Nation" is in its twenty-eighth week of big business at the Liberty, N. Y., and bids fair to break all metropolitan show records.

[illegible] (O.) CITIZEN
SEPT. 12, 1915

Joseph Carl Breil, the well-known music writer who arranged the scores for "The Clansman" and many other famous plays and pictures, has been signed for work in making scores for Fine Arts Films, Griffith's brand of Triangle releases. The composer has built himself a studio in the interior of the projection room, where he will be near the screen and at the same time away from the crowd.

Ev. Ledger Sept 7

CENSORSHIP MUST GO!

UNTIL this week the State censorship of moving pictures has been an absurdity, nothing more. Its officiousness and its petty tyranny have been tolerated because there were two adequate checks upon it in the courts and the police. Those checks, by the decision of the Allegheny County Courts, are now abolished.

From this time on the censorship is a menace to free city government. It is an institution established by the State to exercise rights which naturally belong to the cities. From its decision there is to be no appeal.

The special case in Philadelphia is of interest only in so far as it points the moral of this extraordinary situation. If riots and bloodshed should follow the showing of a film, the city officials would be powerless to stop the production of that film, because the State Censors have passed it more than a year ago.

If the Allegheny Court is right in its interpretation of the law, a new tyranny has been established in this State. It is a tyranny which will not be tolerated. The police power belongs to the cities, not to a State commission. The censorship must go!

Portland [illegible]
9-12-1[illegible]

GREAT FILM PLAY CONTINUES

"Birth of a Nation" to Show at Heilig All Week.

With the reproduction of Sherman's march to the sea, the surrender of Lee, and the assassination of Lincoln, all in vivid detail and realism, "The Birth of a Nation," which is at the Heilig for another week, each afternoon and night, attains what has heretofore been held almost impossible in a moving-picture, or, for that matter, in any way.

History of 50 and 60 years ago has been brought up to date. The living present is transported back into the historic past for three hours while one is viewing the remarkable film.

Based on the powerfully interesting novel, "The Clansman," the play is doubly interesting, for it has welded romance and history in a remarkably striking way. There is a real love story woven into it and the background is war. The scope, however, is so gigantic as to be almost beyond comprehension until it is witnessed. The bigness of the play can be better realized, however, when one considers that it took eight months to stage it; 18,000 people and 2000 horses to enact it, and cost $500,000.

It is said that of all the people who have witnessed the film, scarcely anyone has dared to deny its historical foundation and comparatively close adherence to fact and detail. The general impression is that "The Birth of a Nation" gives the younger generation a quicker and keener grasp of the Civil War period of this country and endows older heads with a better appreciation of the critical theme in American history than any other agency.

That is, from the historical standpoint, it is said to have done better work than all the school books printed insofar as giving the younger generation an idea of what the Civil War period in the South actually was. It may over-emphasize in places, but this, it is explained, is for dramatic effect.

But beyond this, which is an all-important asset to the picture and one which has made it such a sensation, the scientific achievement is not to be minimized. It is the most spectacular production ever staged or shown in America, it is said. The photography is said to be as nearly perfect as the experts hope for. Nothing has approached it heretofore in this particular.

The wide scope of the production may be understood when it is realized that the picture begins in the early slave days when negroes were imported from South Africa, and leads through American history to and after the assassination of Lincoln and the black days of the reconstruction period.

The Civil War in its most picturesque details is revealed, and also there are some of its horrors depicted. The surrender of Lee; Sherman's march to the sea; Grant's wonderful marshaling of forces; the assassination of Lincoln and the activities of the Ku Klux Klan are only a few of the vital scenes.

The characters are like life. Lincoln's portrayal is marvelously exact, and John Wilkes Booth is characterized in a way that leaves an indelible impression. Aside from the absorbing interest of the theme, the mammoth proportions of the picture make it a most striking and memorable achievement in the moving-picture evolution.

Asbury Ev. Partons Sept 15

At the Theaters

Record audiences are witnessing D. W. Griffith's mighty spectacle "The Birth of a Nation," during its return engagement at the Savoy theater. The engagement was arranged especially for townspeople who failed to see the silent drama of reconstruction days during its previous visit to Asbury Park and their demand for seats has exceeded the most sanguine expectations of the management.

The Ku Klux Klan, which forms such an interesting part of D. W. Griffith's great production, "The Birth of a Nation," was organized as a secret and social band in the state of Tennessee in May, 1866. The title was taken from the Greek word kuklos, meaning circle. The third word Klan was added by the members who were in a large percentage descended from the Scotch who settled in old Virginia. In subsequent years when the Klans went forth to put down the desperadoes who swarmed down from the north to grab everything in sight in the south the riders adopted the emblem of the fiery cross which the Scotch Highlanders had long used as a call to battle in the early days of wars in their native land.

MIRIAM COOPER
Who Appears in "The Birth of a Nation" at the Savoy."

Trenton Ev. Times Sep 16-191[illegible]

NATION" SEAT SALE ON

The sale of seats for the big film spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," was opened at the Trent Theatre this morning. It is announced that orders and reservations may be placed at the box office now for the entire week's engagement, which is to begin Monday. There will be a matinee every day excepting Monday.

MIRIAM COOPER
Who Plays the Role of Margaret Cameron in the Griffith Spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," at the Trent Theatre Next Week.

DIGNITY OF PRODUCTION OF "BIRTH OF A NATION"

That motion picture spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," produced by David W. Griffith, continues at the Forrest.

It is a remarkable story that is revealed on the screen. Slavery, the prime cause of the War of the Rebellion, is shown; then there is Lincoln's call for troops; a ball on the eve of the battle of Bull Run, the first triumph of the Confederates; Sherman's devastating march to the sea, with the burning of Atlanta and the siege of Petersburg; Lee's surrender to Grant, the assassination of Lincoln; reconstruction days, and the formation of the Ku-Klux Klan. A deep love interest is found in the friendships of members of a Northern and a Southern family, just as in the novel, "The Clansman," to which Griffith had recourse in building up his creation.

Henry B. Walthall, recognized as one of the foremost players now appearing before the camera, is at the head of the cast, and there are also Lillian Gish, Mae Marsh, Miriam Cooper, Ralph Lewis, Joseph Henabery, seen as Lincoln; George Seigmann, Walter Alden, Raoul Walsh as Wilkes Booth, Spottiswoods Aiken and others.

Success for Portrayal

Joseph Henabery, the actor who portrays President Lincoln in D. W. Griffith's historical spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," now on view at the Forrest, was selected from 20 players who were coached and prepared for the part before a choice was made.

Lincoln's appearance and mannerisms were carefully counterfeited, even to the small but interesting detail of the President reaching back for his shawl just a few minutes before Wilkes Booth attacked him. It was a spring day in Washington—April 14, 1865—but a late frost had set in that night and it was raw and cold. Mr. Lincoln felt the chill and drew the shawl around him.

The first scene in the photoplay showing the War President is that in which Lincoln signs the call for 75,000 volunteers.

Around him are his Cabinet heads and private secretaries. Lincoln fully realized the momentous character of the act, and after writing his name he slowly buried his face in his hands as if in prayer.

Another view of Lincoln's character is shown in his granting of a pardon.

As this scene opens, the uniformed diplomatic representatives are being received by the President.

They then depart and he turns to a plain, middle-aged woman dressed in sombre black, who had been waiting a hearing.

She tries to kneel to him, but he gently raises her up and talks to her, reads her petition and signs the paper granting her the life of her son.

After the Appomattox surrender the leader of Congress calls with a proposal to deal harshly with the South for its rebellion.

"I shall treat them as if they had never been away!" is the gentle answer.

Then, two or three days later, comes the awful tragedy in Ford's Theatre, Washington, when Southern hopes of clemency are blasted by the assassin's act.

That terrible scene is reproduced to the minutest historical detail. Mr. Henabery, the portrayer of the great President, has been widely commended for the sincerity, dignity and pathos of his characterization.

What Work Did

It takes endless work to produce a big motion picture.

There is also endless detail.

Let me illustrate by the concrete example of "The Birth of a Nation." First comes the scenario or written outlines of the plot.

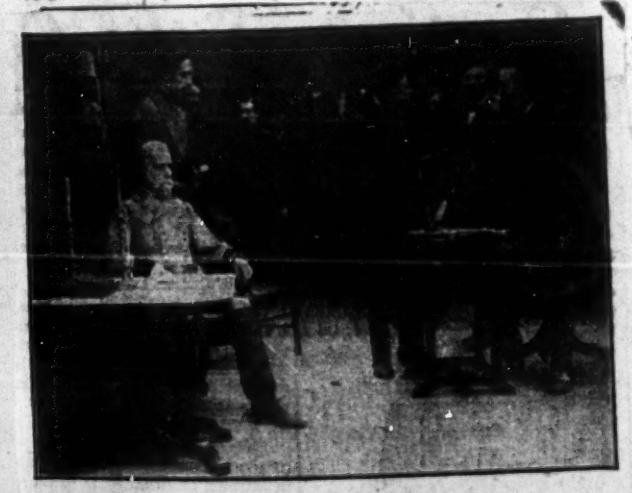
In this case there was a previous stage play.

If we are wise, we forget that as much as we can, for the motion picture is a novelizing or story-telling form, not strictly a stage form; it is epic rather than dramatic; much of the work is of the great indoors.

We have a period of history to cover, the scenes of a wide territory to revivify.

Therefore, we must prepare the locale as well as the actors—the tasks of the landscape artist and, in some sense, of the civil engineer are before us.

Asbury Park Ev Press Sep 16



SURRENDER OF LEE, IN "BIRTH OF NATION," AT SAVOY.

"Birth of Nation" Big Thriller.

"The Birth of a Nation" is brushing aside all records of the Savoy theater during its return engagement this week. Arranged especially for those who were unable to witness the spectace during its previous engagement, the return of the spectacle has attracted hundreds who thirst for a second and even a third and fourth view of the big thriller.

The engagement of "The Birth of a Nation" is notable aside from the merit of the spectacle itself because it gives one an insight of the rapid strides the motion picture industry is making ing comparison with the stage where the spoken drama flourishes. Take the case of Griffith, the man who created "The Birth of a Nation." He draws a salary of $100,000 a year. There are few big combinations of business in this extravagant age which can boast of more than one $100,000-per-yearman. The spoken stage is considerably over 100 years old in America. The "movie" has flourished about 10 years. Yet is there a $100,000 man in the motion picture business who ever heard of a director in stageland who earned a salary of $100,000 or what is more important who ever drew that much regular money from any of the big producing firms?

STORY OF KU KLUX KLAN IS THRILLING PART OF FILM

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION."
At the Nixon.

Probably the most thrilling scenes in David W. Griffith's spectacular production "The Birth of a Nation" now at the Nixon are those in which the ghostly garbed ghouls of the Ku Klux Klan ride madly to the rescue of the women and children of the south.

The Ku Klux Klan was organized as "an institution of chivalry humanity and patriotism." In its original form it was merely a social club and the name was taken from the Greek word "kuklos" meaning circle. This society was formed in Pulaski, Tenn., in May, 1866. The president of the circle was known as the Grand Cyclops, his assistant was the Grand Magi, the marshal was the Grand Turk, the treasurer guards were termed Lictors.

As the sorrows of the south under the baneful reconstruction laws began to be unbearable the organization changed its character and the name became popularized as Ku Klux Klan, the Klan having been added because most of the original members were descendants of Scotch clansmen. The fiery cross of the Scotch Highlanders was again used as a call to arms.

The empire, as the klan was known, was ruled by the grand wizard, Gen. Nathan Bedford Forrest, the gallant and dashing Confederate cavalry leader. Each state was known as a realm and the ruler was the grand dragon. He was assisted by eight hydras. A group of counties was called a dominion, ruled by a grand titan and six furies.

Each county was a province under a grand giant and four goblins. The unit of the organization was the den and the members were known as ghouls. The membership at one time numbered over 500,000. Their mysteries and ritual were never written until atfer the grand wizard dissolved the order in March, 1869.

At first the Ku Klux Klan devoted their efforts to putting down disorder. Later they went after the carpetbaggers and scalawags.

HARTFORD POST
SEP 9 1915
389

Looks from this distance as if somebody was attempting to make a political issue out of the disappearance of those "priceless state autographs."

Everyone in Hartford and vicinity will want to see that much advertised photoplay "The Birth of a Nation," when it comes to this city in the near future. This picture has received more advertising, free and paid for, than any other ever made. It has been showing in New York and Boston at $2 prices since last winter and "standing room only" signs are hung out at nearly every performance. All of which goes to prove that famous phrase "advertising pays."

PITTSBURG (Pa.) SUN
SEPT. 16, 1915

member of [illegible] ganization and in "Little Miss Fix-It," as well as on the occassion of her visits in vaudeville, this personal prestige has been [illegible] fervent applause.

"The Birth of a Nation" is now in its third record-smashing week at the Nixon. David W. Griffith's masterpiece has become more than merely a popular attraction. It is now a firmly established entertainment that is seen over and over again by the most critical play-goers. In fact, with its 5,000 swiftly changing scenes, more than one view is required to grasp all of its interesting phases. At each seeing new beauties are revealed. In its infinite variety "The Birth of a Nation" far surpasses anything that has ever been shown on the stage. In mere pictorial beautiy it excels the masterpieces in the art galleries of Paris, Rome and Munich, for it is the beauty of nature itself. There are two performances daily except Sunday.

VARIETY (New York City)
SEP 17

[illegible] by Thanhouser.

Five sets of reels showing "The Birth of a Nation," in New England last week, yielded a net profit of $23,000. This is a section of the United States where there is little or no prejudice against the negro race. It recalls the time when John H. Springer had the Grand Opera House in New York and played "The Clansman" (from which the "Nation" was adapted) three times in one season, each time to bigger business and to a larger percentage of colored folks.

VARIETY (New York City)
SEP 17 1915

NATION STAYS.

"The Birth of A Nation" is to remain at the Liberty indefinitely, according to a new arrangement completed with Klaw & Erlanger last week. The original renting contract under which the picture was at the house expired Sept 1. It called for a weekly rental of $1,000 during the summer months.

Under the new arrangement the picture remains at the house with the increased rental and a sharing basis whenever the gross goes above a certain figure.

SEPT. 12, 1915
LOS ANGELES (Cal.) TIMES

SUNDAY MORNING.

Screen.

BIG FILM STILL IS HOLDING OUT.

"Clansman" Enters Twenty-second Week.

"Little Mary" for Tally's; "Tosca," Miller's.

Superba is Taken Over by its Former Owner.

"The Clansman" will enter its twenty-second week at Clune's Auditorium tomorrow. This breaks the record for film runs. Three hundred and fifty thousand people in Los Angeles alone have viewed the big photodrama, telling the story of the United States Civil War and reconstruction period.

GATHERING OF THE KU KLUX KLAN.
(To be seen in "The Birth of a Nation," at the Trent theatre, next week).

PLAYS LINCOLN IN "BIRTH OF NATION"

Joseph Henabery, the actor who portrays President Lincoln in D. W. Griffith's historical spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," at the Trent theatre next week, was selected from twenty players who were coached and prepared for the part before the choice was made. Mr. Lincoln's appearance and mannerisms were carefully counterfeited, even to the small but interesting detail of the president reaching back for his shawl just a few minutes before Wilkes Booth attacked him. It was a spring day in Washington—April 14, 1865—but a late frost had set in that night and it was raw and cold. Mr. Lincoln felt the chill and drew the shawl around him.

The first scene in "The Birth of a Nation," showing the war president, is of Lincoln's signing the call for 75,000 volunteers. Around him are his cabinet heads and private secretaries. Lincoln fully realized the momentous character of the act that summoned federal troops to subdue the individual sovereignty of rebellious states. After the deed was done and the attending company departed, he slowly buried his face in his hands as if in prayer.

Another view of Lincoln's characetr is exhibited in his granting of a pardon. As this scene opens, the gorgeously uniformed diplomatic representatives are being received by the president. They then depart and he turns to a plain middle-aged woman dressed in sombre black who had been awaiting a hearing. She tries to kneel to him, but he gently raises her up and talks to her, reads her petition and signs the paper granting to her the life of her son.

After the Appomattox surrender the leader of congress calls with a proposal to deal harshly with the south for its rebellion. "I shall treat them as if they had never been away!" is Lincoln's gentle answer. Then, two or three days later, comes the awful tragedy in Ford's theatre, Washington, when southern hopes of clemency are blasted by the assassin Booth's maniac act. That great and terrible scene is reproduced in the play to the minutest historical detail. Mr. Henabery, the portrayer of the great president, has been widely commended for the sincerity, dignity and pathos of his characterization.

Trenton Ev. Sunday Sept 17

HENRY WALTHALL
As Ben Cameron, "The Little Colonel," in the Motion Picture Production "The Birth of a Nation," at the Trent Theatre Next Week.

Date .....
Trenton, N.J.
9-15-17

29TH WEEK FOR "NATION" FILM

New York, Sept 13.—D. W. Griffith's Birth of a Nation is in its twenty-ninth week at the Liberty Theater. This is one of the biggest records of recent years, and is the banner record for the Liberty. Heretofore The Spring Maid held the record of twenty-eight weeks.

MOTION PICTURE WORLD (N. Y. City)

SEP 18 1917

"BIRTH OF A NATION" IN OSHKOSH.

Manager J. E. Williams, of the Grand Opera House at Oshkosh, opened the season with "The Birth of a Nation" August 29 for eight days' matinee and night, turning people away for every performance at 25-50-75 and $1 prices, and gave an extra performance Saturday morning at 9.30 to a crowded house. Mgr. Williams engaged an old-time minstrel, Eli Rice, to announce with a megaphone in all the surrounding towns. He also billed the country for 100 miles around.

The Grand will play pictures hereafter on all open nights: Sept. 6-7, "Graustark"; 8-9, "Juggernaut"; 10-11, "Rosary," followed with other pictures. The Grand has been equipped with all the latest improvements including the latest and best projection machine manufactured for the presentation of motion pictures.

MOTION PICTURE WORLD (N. Y. City)

SEP 18 1917

Alice Nielsen, beloved of hundreds of thousands in this country, arrived in Chicago Saturday, September 4th. The following Sunday night she saw "The Birth of a Nation" at the Colonial. "It is the most wonderful thing I have ever seen," said Miss Nielsen afterwards. "I couldn't help crying. I had no idea there was such a picture in the world. Little Mae Marsh does some of the best work I have ever seen. She is a dear little thing and has captured me completely. Has she ever been on the stage? Why have I never heard of her?" When Miss Nielsen was told that Miss Marsh had never been on the stage and had received all her experience in acting in front of the camera, she replied: "It seems incredible. I have never seen better acting on any stage." It is understood that the Triangle Film Corporation is endeavoring to secure the services of Miss Nielsen for a forthcoming big feature. Miss Nielsen, however, who is at present on a concert tour of the country, is non-commital.

P. Bulletin Sep 18

"The Birth of the Nation" films at the Forest, have been doing so well, despite the hot weather, that they will be continued; in the case of the Griffith's spectacle, for an indefinite period.

Phila Ev Ledger Sep 18

FORREST—"The Birth of a Nation," with Henry B. Walthal, Mae Marsh and Spottiswoode Aitkin. D. W. Griffith's mammoth photoplay of the Civil War and Reconstruction, founded in part on Thomas Dixon's "Clansman." A marvelous entertainment.

ON PICTURE NEWS (New York City)

SEP 18 1917

"Nation" to Continue Remarkable Run in Boston

After Closing at Tremont Theatre on Saturday, Griffith Spectacle Is Shown Again Almost Immediately at Majestic—Two Hundred and Fiftieth Mark Already Passed

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Boston, Sept. 8.

AFTER being shown in Boston more than 250 times, which breaks all records for lengthy runs in this city, both of pictures and spoken dramas, the "Birth of a Nation" closed its run at the Tremont theatre September 4. At the same time the announcement was made that Boston would get another chance to see the Griffith spectacle without delay, since the interests which recently purchased the New England rights for $75,000 put the film on at the Majestic theatre Monday for an indefinite run.

Keeping the film in Boston is fully warranted, even after its wonderful run with the original Griffith company at the Tremont. Tom Kane, manager for Mr. Griffith, told the NEWS representative that some persons had been known to come back to see the film again more than half a dozen times. This could easily be believed since at the time Mr. Kane made the statement, which was about noon, there was a line extending from the ticket window to the street, which is an unusually long distance at the Tremont.

Louis B. Meyer, head of the American Feature Film Company in Boston and one of the purchasers of the New England rights to the film, had nothing to say as regards prices to be charged at the Majestic; but it can be stated on good authority that the two dollar scale, at least for a few seats, will be adhered to, since this is a part of the agreement accompanying the sale of those rights.

Mr. Kane has left for Asbury Park, where he will remain a week with the film being shown there. He will then take charge of the film and company which will tour the Southeastern cities, opening in Norfolk at one of the Wells houses on September 29 and then playing forty weeks all the way to New Orleans and back.

Fred W. Zweifel, formerly in Boston with the film and until recently in Asbury Park, has left for St. Louis to take out the Southwestern Film Company through Tennessee and Texas.

CHICAGO (Ill.) MOTOGRAPHY

SEP 18 1915

MANY OF NOTED REAL STARS ARE BECOMING REEL STARS

Hailed as a marvel of mimetic art, surpassing all expectations of the merits of motion picture creation, "The Birth of a Nation," now in its eighth month of prosperity at the Liberty Theater, New York, began its Philadelphia engagement Saturday evening (September 4) at the Forrest. Within a few weeks another famous Quaker City playhouse will also be offering picture dramas at the regular scale of theater prices. In New York before the end of the month, when the Knickerbocker opens with Triangle Film Corporation plays at these prices, there will be three Broadway theaters devoted to the new art at the old scale of prices for the spoken and singing attraction.

On the other hand, the flesh-and blood stellar attractions are being offered at cut prices. For example, Robert Edeson has just finished an engagement at the Walnut Street Theater, Philadelphia, at 15-25-50-75 cents. Emma Dunn, formerly featured by Belasco and Brady, is the visiting star there this week at similar cheap prices.

Such a momentous revolution has the new era of stage art brought about. More than a hundred of the most popular stars have been snared by the Triangle. De Wolf Hopper is now in California for a year before the camera, making the jump from legitimate to the motion picture play direct and not by the usual route, via stock and vaudeville. Billie Burke, Raymond Hitchcock, Douglas Fairbanks, and a host of others merely postpone the opening of their regular seasons to devote their art to the new theater.

Many of those who are not under long contract to work under Griffith, Ince and Sennett will soon be playing in the flesh on one side of Broadway while their California work is shown in Triangle star combinations at the Knickerbocker Theater across the way.

MOTION PICTURE WORLD (N. Y. City)

SEP 18 1915

Klu Klux Film in Phila.

Director of Public Safety Porter Enjoined by Judge Ferguson from Interfering with Showing of the Big Griffith Spectacle—Full Police Protection Was Given the Show, but Even the Colored People in Audience Applauded.

Special to Moving Picture World, from Philadelphia News Service.

ACCORDING to a decision handed down by Judge William C. Ferguson, Common Pleas Court No. 4, a preliminary injunction was granted restraining Director of Public Safety Porter from interfering with the showing of "The Birth of a Nation" at the Forrest theater, Broad and Sansom streets, for a period of five days. The restraining order was granted after a hearing of a suit brought by the Nixon and Zimmerman Theater Company to enjoin the police department from stopping the picture under orders from Director Porter.

Judge Ferguson declared that after the five days' time expires either party can go before a judge with a motion to have the injunction vacated or made permanent.

Under direct order from Director Porter a detail of fifteen detectives, headed by Captain Cameron, were seated at various points throughout the theater and were prepared to act immediately in case any demonstration was made against the film. A detail of policemen were also stationed in front of the theater and many private detectives were to be found in the audience.

However, there was absolutely no need for any police protection of any description. The huge audience seemed to enjoy the picture to the extreme and continued applause could be heard throughout the exhibition. Many negroes were scattered throughout the house and it is very pleasing to note that they were numbered among the most ardent applauders.

Moving picture interests are more than pleased with the outcome of the affair and are unanimous in expressing their opinion that the injunction will not be requested to be vacated at the termination of the five-day period. Director Porter is particularly pleased with the manner in which trouble was averted and declared that as long as there is no disturbance created the picture may run for an indefinite period of time.

CHICAGO (Ill.) MOTOGRAPHY

SEP 18 1915

MISSOURI.

A delegation of negroes called upon Mayor Kiel of St. Louis, Mo., and protested against the exhibition of the moving picture drama, "The Birth of a Nation," claiming that the picture depicted scenes in the South during reconstruction days which reflected upon the negro race and which were liable to cause race prejudices and cause trouble. Mayor Kiel took the matter up with City counselor Dawes, who rendered the opinion that the Mayor has no power to interfere with the production, as there was no city ordinance against the exhibition of any moving picture production in the City of St. Louis.

An ordinance to delegate to the park commissioner of St. Louis, Missouri, the power to censor moving-picture films, before their exhibition in St. Louis has been introduced in the Board of Aldermen. The ordinance was drafted by Commissioner Cunliff, as the result of numerous protests against the production of films purporting to depict the history of the Leo Frank case, now being shown in several St. Louis theaters.

The new charter provides that the park commissioner may be given power to exercise "supervision and control" over public recreation functions, amusements and entertainments not connected with the city.

An injunction restraining the police department and Prosecuting Attorney Howard Sidener, of St. Louis, Missouri, from interfering with the production of the film play "The Birth of a Nation," which began a five weeks' engagement at the Olympic Theater August 29, was granted by Circuit Judge Kimmel at his home.

A petition asking for a restraining order was filed after closing hours of the Epoch Producing Company, and named as defendants the Board of Police Commissioners, Chief of Police Young, Chief of Detectives Aliendar and Prosecutor Sidener. The suit was filed after Prosecutor Sidener announced that he would do everything in his power to prevent the production of the film play, on the grounds that the film contained scenes which reflected unjustly on the negro race and would tend to produce race prejudices.

The petition filed by the Epoch Company alleged that the film play had been approved by the National Board of Censors, and that the report of the board dated last January 20, "enthusiastically indorsed the spectacle, and declared it was a great step forward in motion picture productions."

The petition stated that the film had been produced for many weeks in Boston, New York, Chicago, Milwaukee and other places and had not created any prejudice. It was further alleged that the defendants without warrant or authority of law, threatened to arrest the plaintiffs, if they produced the spectacle.

The plaintiffs stated that in carrying out the contract to produce the play in St. Louis it has already incurred an expense of $5,000, all of which amount it will lose and also additional sums unless a restraining order is maintained.

Delegations of white citizens have also done the same, notably a committee representing the Civic League.

In the meantime, while the matter is being fought out in the courts, the theaters showing the film "The Birth of a Nation," are reaping a harvest, the theater being crowded to capacity both afternoon and at night.

President Breckinridge Jones, of the Mississippi Valley Trust Company, was confronted with the problem and his consent was given to the staging of the play in the trust company's office on a Sunday, and to the having of such officers and employes as were willing to do so, enact their every day characters as trust company attaches.

Grant. Sunday Times Sept 19

BIG PHOTOPLAY COMING TO TRENT

"The Birth of a Nation," World's Greatest Film Spectacle, Booked for Entire Week

Still in the first cycle of its popularity in New York, Chicago, Philadelphia and other metropolitan centers, "The Birth of a Nation" comes to the Trent Theatre for a week's engagement, beginning Monday night, September 20.

The big Griffith spectacle will be shown at the Trent exactly as it is being seen at the Liberty Theatre, New York, where its record stands at more than 500 performances, and at the Forrest Theatre, Philadelphia, where it will probably be held as an all-winter attraction. A stroke of enterprise on the part of the local management has brought it to the Trent for a whole week, and it is announced that it will be seen no nearer this city than New York and Philadelphia. Upwards of 75 people will be employed in attaining the elaborate musical and stage effects, this number embracing 30 musicians and a corps of mechanics, electricians and supernumeraries.

Many circumstances have conspired to make "The Birth of a Nation" the most widely discussed play in the world. Suggested by Thomas Dixon's novels, it embraces a far wider scope than "The Clansman" play. Mr. Griffith's new art covers 150 years of history and pictorializes the greatest events of the war between the states. Lincoln, Lee and Grant; the early glories of the Confederacy; the devastation of General Sherman's march to the sea; the awful siege of Petersburg; the signing of peace at Appomattox; the assassination of the President in Ford's Theatre, and the succeeding orgy of hate and oppression of the South. These personages and incidents pass rapidly before the enthralled spectator and lead up to the terrific climaxes. The wild adventures and achievements of the Ku Klux Klan dominate the final scenes, which yield a happy ending of a double romance of Southern and Northern sweethearts.

Mr. Griffith's treatment of the theme is so much greater and grander than the original play that there can be no comparison. For example, he presents 18,000 actors and 3,000 horses instead of the tiny "armies" of the theatric boards. He shows 5,000 scenes in place of four or five; far-flung battle lines of many, many miles, and Ku Klux "rides" right out in the open, which surpass in thrills any Vanderbilt cup race. Yet the individual acting is as fine and artistic as in a "short case" drama, the work of Henry Walthall as the Clansman and of Mae Marsh as Flora, in particular, rising to heights of genius.

Ev. Ledger Sep 18-1915

MAKING LINCOLN LIVE AGAIN

When word first came that Lincoln was to figure in a photoplay there were plenty of people who thought it something close to sacrilege. Even the figures of lesser men, like Grant and Lee, they expected to find repellent in a motion picture entertainment. These men were too big. They lived in the memory; bringing them back in the flesh seemed a tawdry, cheapening business.

Yet it is just these people who have found one of the greatest charms of "The Birth of a Nation" in its reconstruction of the country's great men. Though Lincoln, Grant, Lee and Sumner are only incidental figures to the story of the Stonemans and the Camerons, they are handled with such admirable fidelity and restraint that the effect is only dignified and fitting.

Lincoln is the best example of Mr. Griffith's tact in this matter. The President's signing of the call for volunteers carries a moment of sorrow that humanizes the great man, but does not descend to the banal. The intercession of Mrs. Cameron for the life of her son is just as skilfully handled. It makes Lincoln a part of the story only as a great figure that is drawn in for a moment to play an objective part. As for the assassination at Ford's, it is simple history. It speaks as the event itself.

CHICAGO (Ill.) MOTOGRAPHY

SEP 18 19

"THE MIRTH OF A NATION" A FILM BURLESQUE IS NOW IN THE MAKING

FF The Universal will soon commence the work of production on "The Mirth of a Nation," a seven-reel travesty by H. H. Van Loan and Pat Rooney. The photoplay is "based on Mason and Dixon's famous novel, 'The Clansmen,'" and is "copyrighted 1915 by the Universal Film Mfg. Co."

Harry Myers, who produced the Universal Broadway Feature, "The Earl of Pawtucket," will direct "The Mirth of a Nation" in which Pat Rooney and Marion Bent will be featured. Rosemary Theby will be assigned to an important role, while Harry himself will browse around in the picture now and then.

Little Jimmie Rosen, who played "The Kid" in "The Newlyweds" and who also originated the role of "Buster Brown" in the stage, will cavort about in all the dignity of his two feet eight inches. Lee Kohlmar, who played with David Warfield for three years in "The Music Master," will be assigned to a comedy role. Work of production will commence at Coytesville, N. J., but, as Harry Myers wails, "Lord only knows where we'll wind up." Myers declares that "The Mirth of a Nation" is the funniest thing that ever escaped being put into a drug user's retreat. And Myers, the producer of "Baby," ought to know what's funny.

"The Mirth of a Nation" cast includes Hezekiah Spuffendike, Rumhouser Skynch, a kickapoo octoroon, General Nuisance and General Electric Graflexius Camera and an all star cast of Civil War veterans. It tells all about the horrible "slotter" at the battle of Bay Rum, and of the "carpet jag period" following the close of the war and the nefarious operations of the Cluck Cluck Clansmen.

Ev. Ledger Sep 18-1915

Close Ups

David Wark Griffith, who startled America with his "Birth of a Nation," is a native of Kentucky. He began his public career as an extra actor in a Louisville stock company. He also studied grand opera and developed a good baritone voice. He became interested in pictures as a scenario writer, but the technical side of the work fascinated him. In less than three years from his first entrance into a motion-picture studio he was the most promising figure among American directors. His numerous inventions and his wonderful judgment soon placed him at the forefront of the ranks. He was the first to use "closeups" and "cutbacks." His principal work has been done for the Biograph, the Majestic-Reliance Company of the Mutual program and now for the Triangle. He is recognized as the greatest director of motion-picture productions in the world today.

Ev. Ledger Sep 18-15

PHILADELPHIA TAKES A LOOK AT THE HEIGHTS OF THE PHOTOPLAY ART

The Dramatic Season, Abdicating to King Movie, Gives Us "Cabiria" and "The Birth of Nation" to Compare

By the DRAMATIC EDITOR

BETWEEN hot weather, failures and the theatrical manager's new-found caution the movies seem to have a monopoly of the new season. "The Birth of a Nation" and the Triangle plans for the Chestnut Street Opera House make it almost impossible for that dual personality, the dramatic and photoplay editor, to tell when he is which. And with feature films promised at the Metropolitan Opera House next Saturday, he is inclined to let the music editor in for a little of the trouble

All the same, this plethora of movies has its decided advantages. It makes for comparisons. A wide-awake person can get a sort of notion of where the art is going. By the enterprise of Manager Jacobs, of the Imperial, four large audiences got a chance to compare the art of Europe at its best—"Cabiria"—with the best specimen of American photoplay so far produced—"The Birth of a Nation."

"Cabiria" is old now, particularly if you judge time by the lightning development of the movies. Its film is scratched with "rain." Yet how much it can still show America. How much it has already shown, can be judged by all the departures of "Cabiria," which have now become the commonplace of filmdom. Many a photoplay has borrowed shamelessly and profitably from the Itala film. Even Griffith's apotheoses—in "The Avenging Conscience," for example—might be traced back to that far superior close of "Cabiria," the circling maidens.

Comparison of "Cabiria" and the Griffith piece are a little difficult; the period and spirit are so different. "Cabiria" is romantic melodrama; "The Birth of a Nation" comes close to modern reality. The producer of the Italian film could go to bizarre lengths in scenery and costumes; while Griffith had to duplicate an almost familiar reality and to depend on sheer dramatic drive and spectacular battles for his effect.

Old as "Cabiria" is, it excels "The Birth of a Nation" on a number of technical points, notably the lighting. Griffith achieves wonders of gradations and contrasts in out-of-door light; no American excels him in that field. But no American has yet realized how much can be accomplished with a single centre of illumination. They are still following that foolish old habit of the stage—bathing a room in a blaze of light from every direction. They have not realized that, even more effectively than in the theatre, they can use the play of deep shadow and high lights as a dramatic element, as well as a matter of sheer beauty. "Peer Gynt," at the Stanley, proved inferior to expectations, but in the scene in the slaver's cabin, it showed what wonderful results a single source of light can give. In "Cabiria" almost every interior goes to prove the same thing.

This concentration of light is particularly necessary in fire scenes. On the whole, those in "Cabiria" hardly equal Griffith's, for they are spoiled with some manifestly artificial flames flapping in front of the lense. But, barring those "close up" tongues of light, the Italian conflagrations achieve a finer effect by concentrating their light and bringing it out from the spot where the fire is supposed to rage. Thus only natural glares and shadows are thrown upon the surroundings, and, when tinted red, the film shows in high light just those spots that would shine in reality.

On another technical point—and just as vital a one—"Cabiria" is inferior. It is not a good photoplay from the point of view of action. It has scenes of catastrophe—earthquake, fire, battle—that are quite as good as anything in The Birth of a Nation." Many of these scenes excel. But they are not built into a dramatic whole of streaming, accumulating interest. Half the story runs consecutively and excitingly. The last half—the most important half—has no climax. The story becomes complicated and hard to follow, instead of inevitable. There is no great moment of spectacular or dramatic action. There is none of that exciting use of "cut backs" which makes the Ku Klux rides so engrossing.

Within the limits of Griffith's story, he achieves much more than the Italian producer in his. But what a far more wonderful field the man has who goes back to picturesque antiquity for his spectacles! The costumes and even the elaborate and curious temples, towers and towns built for "Cabiria," can be far excelled in novelty and beauty by a stage artist of the modern school. Such beautiful visions as Hannibal crossing the Alps, war elephants and camels sludging along, can all be equaled in whatever period chosen. The one necessity is a unifying intelligence like Griffith's, a man to choose scenerio-writer, scenic designer and actors, and then to fuse all the elements with the fire of beauty and excitement. Griffith will do it yet. Wait for his "Holy Grail."

St Louis Times Sep 18

"Birth of a Nation" Starts on Its Fourth Big Week

Lillian Gish, Star of the Griffith Masterpiece.

The rapid strides of the motion picture industry in comparison with the stage where the spoken drama flourishes is astonishing when figures are studied. Take the case of "The Birth of a Nation," which enters upon its fourth week at the Olympic Theater tomorrow. The gross receipts of the half-score companies now presenting the spectacle in the various large amusement centers of America are in the neighborhood of a million dollars every 15 weeks. It is estimated, on the showing of the past nine months, that "The Birth of a Nation" will net for its producers a round $10,000,000 before it is laid aside. In 300 years the most popular play ever written in the English language, "The Merchant of Venice," has drawn into the box office but $35,000,000, from which the clear profits can scarcely exceed $15,000,000.

Then, too, the stage of the spoken drama has flourished in America about 100 years without producing a single director who draws a salary of $100,000 annually. The motion picture industry, in only about 10 years, has produced one such prodigy, D. W. Griffith, who staged "The Birth of a Nation." Mr. Griffith is one of the very few men in any line of business in America who pays an income tax on such an enormous salary.

Daily State Gazette Trenton N.J. Sep 1 8-15

59

"BIRTH OF NATION" AT TRENT MONDAY

The one theatrical offering that hundreds of residents of this section of New Jersey have been waiting for, "The Birth of a Nation," comes to the Trent theatre for a week's engagement, beginning Monday evening. Except on Monday, when the afternoon will be required for installing the massive production, there will be daily matinees.

While the engagement of the big Griffith spectacle is noteworthy in itself, unusual interest attaches to its coming to Trenton. Many local residents fortunate enough to witness it during its engagements either in New York or Philadelphia, have come home enthusiastically praising it and in the rush for seats since the sale opened Thursday morning there have been dozens who were advised not to miss it. The presentation at the Trent will be exactly the same as those which are attracting capacity business to the Liberty theatre, New York, and the Forrest theatre, Philadelphia, including a symphony orchestra of thirty and upwards of 50 mechanicsand supernumeraries. The spectacle has been presented more than 500 times at the Liberty theatre and its Philadelphia engagement is so phenomenally successful that it will probably remain at the Forrest theatre the rest of the winter.

The first half of the great picture exhibits the salient events of the Civil war, which came to a close at Appomattox just fifty years ago. Lincoln's call for troops, Sherman's march, the battle of Petersburg, Lee's surrender to Grant and the awful tragedy at Ford's theatre live before the spectator of the Griffith drama.

In the second half the South's "second uprising," this time against the carpetbag regime, is shown in a thrilling story of Reconstruction days. The romance of the "little Confederate colonel," Ben Cameron, with the northerner, Elsie Stoneman, and that of the Unionist, Captain Phil Stoneman, with Margaret Cameron, the South Carolina lassie, maintain two threads of continuous love-interest throughout the story.

The fun and frolic of plantation days, as well as the heart-ache and pathos of the stricken South, are shown. The great out-of-doors is Mr. Griffith's special field. Great battle scenes and the rides of the clan are staged with thousands of participants. There are 5,000 scenes in the spectacle, and (it is estimated) no less than 200,000 interesting historical details. On the musical side Mr. Griffith attempted something previously unheard of in connection with motion pictures. This was the synchronizing of a complete symphonic score with the appearances of the important characters and the enactment of the principal scenes. This instrumental music is played by a large orchestra, and supplemented by part-singing behind the scenes. Somehow the old war-time tunes, thus thematically treated, make the "counterfeit presentments" of long ago seem irresistibly real. Among the leading players in what was probably the largest theatric cast ever assembled may be mentioned Joseph Henabery, as President Lincoln; Donald Crisp and Howard Gaye as Generals Grant and Lee; Mae Marsh as Flora Cameron; Henry Walthall, Lillian Gish, Elmer Clifton, Miriam Cooper as the quartet of lovers; Ralph Lewis as Congressman Stoneman; Spottiswoode Aiken and Josephine Crowell as the elder Camerons, and Walter Seigmann as Lynch.

Abraham Lincoln in Box, Ford's Theatre, Washington, as Shown in "The Birth of a Nation"—Trent

Phil Enquirer Sep 19

FORREST—No one who has seen "The Birth of a Nation," the spectacular moting picture production now on view here, will say aught but that D. W. Griffith has shown himself to be a master stage director. Yet "The Birth of a Nation" is not a photoplay in the accepted sense. It is a master creation, an epic story presented with the realism of actuality by talented players who seem to be living again in the soul-stirring times when a nation was moving onward to a glorious destiny. Each incident is made the more impressive by the musical accompaniment that is played by a symphony orchestra and that is of the most appropriate sort. There is no one who is not thrilled by the clash of great armies in scenes showing important engagements in the Civil War and that the appeal is to all types of men is apparent in the diverse kinds of people to be found at any presentation of the picture. Apart from the wonderful representation of the assassination of Lincoln at Ford's Theatre in Washington, probably the most impressive scene in this historic drama, there is a succession of scenes of compelling interest. Beginning with an exposition of early slavery days, the picture takes the onlooker into the trying days of the Civil War. But each dread happening is placed in contrast with delightful romantic scenes and the horrors of battle are forgotten or relieved by little human touches such as Griffith so well knows how to give. The burning of Atlanta is a remarkable picture, but still more effective is the series of scenes showing the Ku Klux Klan on its errands of safety. In the concluding part of the picture one sees activities in famous institutions of young colored men and women who are fitting themselves for high places in the industrial world. Splendid photography and superb projection of the picture contribute importantly to the irresistible appeal of this master work.

Trenton Ev. Times Sep 18

"The Charge," One of the Battle Scenes in "The Birth of a Nation" at the Trent Theatre Next Week

Trent. Ev. Times Sep 18

"BIRTH OF NATION" IS HERE NEXT WEEK

With a symphony orchestra of thirty, upwards of fifty mechanics and all the elaborate equipment used in presenting the spectacle at the Liberty Theatre, New York, and the Forrest Theatre, Philadelphia, "The Birth of a Nation" comes to the Trent Theatre Monday evening to begin a week's engagement. There will be daily matinees after the opening.

During its record—engagements in New York, Philadelphia and Atlantic City it has been seen by thousands from New Jersey and without exception they have praised it enthusiastically. Trenton people's interest in the spectacle has been disclosed in the advance sale of seats which is larger than for any attraction that the Trent Theatre has had for several seasons.

For many years American dramatists wrote able plays of particular states, cities or localities, ranging from "Alabama" to "The Henrietta" and from "Way Down East" to "The Great Divide." But no one man semed to grasp the whole spirit and genius of America until David Wark Griffith picked a suggestion for his theme out of Dixon's "The Leopard's Spots" and "The Clansman" and started to develop it.

A remarkable thing about Mr. Griffith's plan is that words (except for leaders and titles) did not enter into it. He replaced speech by music, and the old-fashioned stage action and scenery by the pictorialized action of thousands of players in the great Out-of-Doors. In brief, he staged the great battles, struggles and critical events of 1861-'70 under natural conditions as nearly as possible similar to the original.

The result of Mr. Griffith's efforts is a new and stupendous art for which no adequate name has yet been found. "The Birth of a Nation" combines spectacle, romance, domestic drama, comedy, tragedy, music, and mechanical effects into a harmonious ensemble that captivates equally the eye and the ear. In a presentation lasting two hours and 45 minutes it epitomizes the life of a nation. Griffith carries the magnificent story from the introduction of African slavery right down through Civil War and Reconstruction days to the final real union of South and North in the bonds of love and peace.

Among the distinguished actors in the cast are Henry B. Walthall, Lillian Gish, Mae Marsh, Miriam Cooper, Mary Alden, Josephine Crowell, Ralph Lewis, Joseph Henabery, Raoul Walsh, Donald Crisp, Howard Gaye, George Seigman, Walter Long, Elmer Clifton and Robert Harron. Eighteen thousand people, 3,000 horses and no less than 5,000 scenes went to the making of the big spectacle.

Public Ledger Sep 15-1915

GIRARD'S TOPICS OF THE TOWN

WHEN a photo-play endeavors to make heroes out of men branded by Congress as "murderers and outlaws," it is profitable to recall what the Ku-Klux Klan was.

A party of young men at the close of the war met at Pulaski, Tennessee, and formed a social organization. They adopted a name, a ritual and a uniform. The last consisted of a white pall worn by the horse and a white covering for the rider, who was topped with a tall white hat made of cardboard.

By accident it was discovered that the weird name and the weird robes of the Ku-Klux Klan struck terror to the marrow bones of the ignorant and recently freed negroes.

Then all over the South other and similar societies sprang up which finally became merged with or known by the general name of Ku-Klux Klan. General John B. Gordon, of the Confederate Army, said the societies were for mutual protection.

History proves that this was not the case in hundreds, even thousands of cases, which came into the courts. General Forrest, whose name throughout the North has ever been linked with the Fort Pillow massacre of negroes, was chosen head of the Ku-Klux Klan

IN 1868 a revised Constitution was adopted by the Ku-Klux Klan. It formed the entire South into the Invisible Empire. General Forrest was styled Grand Wizard. Each State was a realm under a Grand Dragon. Each county was a dominion under a Grand Giant, and the smallest local unit was a den, under a Grand Cyclops.

At one time there were 555,000 members of the various Ku-Klux orders. A great many of the members were ex-Confederate soldiers. The thing grew into a mighty political issue. Impartial historians now agree that the Republicans in Congress exaggerated very greatly what was going on throughout the South in order to justify the Carpetbag reconstruction policy.

Carl Schurz refused to follow his party, although as an Independent he admitted that innumerable offenses had occurred.

BY 1870 the outrages in some Southern counties had become so bad that Congress took action. President Grant asked for special powers to suppress what he termed was a "new insurrection" in the South. Congress speedily passed such an act. There were then in the United States Senate as many able men as ever sat together in that body. Edmunds, Conkling, Morton, Thurman, Bayard, Trumbull and Sherman were all legislative giants.

Thurman and Trumbull fought against the act in Congress aimed at squelching the Ku-Klux on the ground that the United States could not interfere in local government. Eleven years afterward the Supreme Court sustained these Democrats and upset the law put through by a Republican majority.

CONGRESS in the meanwhile ordered a probe of the Ku-Klux outrages. The majority of the committee brought in a terrific arraignment. Senator John Scott, of Pennsylvania, was chairman of the committee which had collected evidence for a year.

The Democratic minority report admitted that in 40 counties of the South there had been violence.

"We do not intend to deny," said the Democratic minority, "that bodies of disguised men have in several States of the South been guilty of the most flagrant crimes, crimes which we neither seek to palliate nor excuse."

From 1870 to 1875 some thousands of cases were handled by the Attorney General's department, and convictions were numerous. There were many cases of murder. The period of chief violence ranged from 1867 to 1873. Grant's re-election seemed to put a complete damper on the thing.

THE Ku-Klux Klan was formed several years before the negro was endowed with the franchise, so that it is not true that the night raiders aimed simply to keep the ex-slaves from voting. That later became a prime object.

White men from the North were victims of the Ku-Klux. Preachers who conducted religious services for the negroes and school teachers who helped educate them were also attacked, and in some cases murdered, as shown by the records.

As it finally developed when Congress and the President of the United States took official action, the Ku-Klux Klan's main object as it concerned the country generally was to terrorize the negro back into a state of complete civic suppression, and to frighten all who endeavored to bring the black race out of that dismal condition.

Any one who thinks this band of outlaws was a heroic body should consult the dozen large volumes of testimony taken by the Committee of Congress under the lead of our country's ablest lawyers, who couldn't be hoodwinked by shams, lying or hypocrisy.

As a sample of how a Ku-Klux Klan member would operate, I cite two cases out of many scores. One of the white-sheeted horsemen stopped at a negro cabin at midnight and asked for a bucket of water. The negro gave it to him.

"He swallowed it at a gulp," related the black man, "saying it was the first drink he had had since being killed at Shiloh."

Another negro was visited by a similar apparition. The weird horseman put out his hand, and when the negro took it found it only a skeleton.

Such instances occurred by hundreds, so that the colored folks were completely terrorized.

The country at large got its most dramatic presentation of what the Carpetbaggers and negroes were up against during Reconstruction in Judge Tourgee's book, "A Fool's Errand."

Some of his friends long afterward maintained that the reason the author's name was kept a secret for years was fear of bodily violence.

GIRARD.

Philadelphia, (Pa.) Public Ledger

Date ..... SEP 18 1915 .....

MAKING LINCOLN LIVE AGAIN

When word first came that Lincoln was to figure in a photoplay there were plenty of people who thought it something close to sacrilege. Even the figures of lesser men, like Grant and Lee, they expected to find repellent in a motion picture entertainment. These men were too big. They lived in the memory; bringing them back in the flesh seemed a tawdry, cheapening business.

Yet it is just these people who have found one of the greatest charms of "The Birth of a Nation" in its reconstruction of the country's great men. Though Lincoln, Grant, Lee and Sumner are only incidental figures to the story of the Stonemans and the Camerons, they are handled with such admirable fidelity and restraint that the effect is only dignified and fitting.

Lincoln is the best example of Mr. Griffith's tact in this matter. The President's signing of the call for volunteers carries a moment of sorrow that humanizes the great man, but does not descend to the banal. The intercession of Mrs. Cameron for the life of her son is just as skilfully handled. It makes Lincoln a part of the story only as a great figure that is drawn in for a moment to play an objective part. As for the assassination at Ford's, it is simple history. It speaks as the event itself.

Public Ledger 9-19

Walthall a True Southerner

Henry Walthall, who plays the part of Colonel Ben Cameron, in "The Birth of a Nation," at the Forrest, has come into such prominence as a motion picture player that he is known in all parts of the world. He was born and spent 22 years on a plantation in Alabama, and then he went on the stage. Purely by accident he chanced to visit the Biograph Studio one day. D. W. Griffith was directing a picture. Noticing Mr. Walthall, whom he had seen on the stage, Mr. Griffith asked the young actor how he would like to be "screened." Having nothing else to do, Walthall said he didn't mind trying. So he went to work, his first picture being "The Convict's Sacrifice."

"I saw the possibilities from the start," he said recently. "I went back to the stage for a time, but it had lost its charm. So again in response to an invitation, I sought out Mr. Griffith and now I am in motion pictures to stay."

Walthall is a cousin of the late United States Senator Walthall, of Alabama, the Senator having played a prominent part in the reconstruction events which his young relative portrays. Walthall's father fought for the South and the actor naturally enjoys playing in the war scenes. The role of Colonel Cameron is the longest one in "The Birth of a Nation" and also the longest so far seen in a motion picture, being fairly comparable to the champion "long distance" part of Hamlet in the legitimate drama.

Record Sep 19

SOMETHING ABOUT GRIFFITH

Famous Motion Picture Director Had First Job at $5 a Week.

David W. Griffith, creator of "The Birth of a Nation," now at the Forrest Theatre, has given in that masterpiece the only theatrical representation of the surrender of General Lee to General Grant. The picture shows Grant and Lee in the Wilmer-McLean house at Appomattox. Grant is seen in fatigue dress, travel-stained, and Lee is in full dress, ready, as it were, for the historical painter.

"General Lee," runs the story, "signed the papers by means of quill and inkstand he had borrowed from a young officer's kit, for, as it happened, there were no writing materials in the Wilmer-McLean home." This historical fact is for the first time brought out by Griffith in his play. Lee then handed the document to an aide, who placed it in Grant's hand. The two generals thereupon arose, met in the centre of the room and shook hands. There have been several paintings of the historic scene, but never, it is believed, had a stage representation of the living figures and action been made before Griffith's putting it into the present play.

Griffith, by the way, is the son of Brigadier General Jacob Wark Griffith, who fought on Lee's side. It was in Louisville that the foremost motion picture director of the country was born, 15 years after Lee's surrender. The son took up acting as a profession and made his debut in a Louisville stock company conducted by Oscar Eagle, who is also prominent today in the motion picture world. Afterwards Griffith went to New York and found engagements as "juvenile." One of these was under the management of George H. Brennan, who was a newspaper writer in Boston 20 years ago, and who managed the company that appeared in the Dixon play, "The Clansman." It was this play in part that was used as the basis of "The Birth of a Nation."

But Griffith, it seems, was all the time straining to do big things. He wrote a play called "A Fool and the Girl," which James K. Hackett produced in Washington. But as success didn't come, the restless Kentuckian turned to the newspaper field and wrote several short stories for the Sunday supplement of one of the New York dailies. The editor suggested to Griffith that some of his offerings would make good scenarios for the "movies." Griffith was impressed at the suggestion, "rattled off" a few photo-plays and waited for results. By the time two of them were accepted he was nearly on his uppers, and so the Biograph people, who were to produce the plays, gave the author a job at $5 a week, acting before the camera. This $5 a week job was the making of Griffith, for by and by one of the Biograph directors fell sick, and Griffith took the sick man's place. Forthwith Griffith began to submit new ideas. He introduced the "close up," or enlarged portrait of the principal character in each scene—and you will see much of this in "The Birth of a Nation." He brought out the "cut back," or "insert," which visualizes the thoughts of the character. He specialized in the reproduction of classic stories. The company met the novelties with some misgivings, but Griffith's work spelled success, nevertheless, and before long he was the Biograph's chief director.

D. W. GRIFFITH.

A year and a half ago he went over to the Mutual Film Company as director-in-chief, with a carte blanche contract. Today he is one of the most famous men in the motion-picture world and he is one of the three great producers who form the Triangle Film Corporation.

In Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation" there were over 120,000 feet of film when the cameras finished their work in the West and South, but the process of selection, which plays such a telling part in these productions, has reduced this to about 12,000 feet. The spectacle, as it stands now, takes about two and three-quarters hours to present. The first presentation was given in Los Angeles. The pictures now are to be seen in a number of the leading cities of the United States, and at every theatre in which the spectacle may be seen there are crowds at each presentation.

Philadelphia, (Pa.) Public Ledger

Date P1 8 1915

PHILADELPHIA TAKES A LOOK AT THE HEIGHTS OF THE PHOTOPLAY ART

The Dramatic Season, Abdicating to King Movie, Gives Us "Cabiria" and "The Birth of Nation" to Compare

By the DRAMATIC EDITOR

BETWEEN bad weather, failures and the theatrical manager's new-found caution the movies seem to have a monopoly of the new season. "The Birth of a Nation" and the Triangle plans for the Chestnut Street Opera House make it almost impossible for that dual personality, the dramatic and photoplay editor, to tell when he is which. And with feature films promised at the Metropolitan Opera House next Saturday, he is inclined to let the music editor in for a little of the trouble.

All the same, this plethora of movies has its decided advantages. It makes for comparisons. A wide-awake person can get a sort of notion where the art is going. The war has closed off the foreign producer and given the local man his opportunity; now or never he can prove his metal. By the enterprise of Manager Pacobs, of the Imperial, four large audiences got a chance to compare the art of Europe at its best—"Cabiria"—with the best specimen of American photoplay so far produced—"The Birth of a Nation."

"Cabiria" is old now, particularly if you judge time by the lightning development of the movies. Its film is scratched with "rain." Yet how much it can still show America, how much it has already shown, can be judged by all the departures of "Cabiria," which have now become the commonplace of filmdom. Many a photoplay has borrowed shamelessly and profitably from the Itala film. Even Griffith's apotheoses—"The Avenging Conscience," for example—might be traced back to that far superior close of "Cabiria," the circling maidens.

Comparison of "Cabiria" and the Griffith piece are a little difficult; the period and spirit are so different. "Cabiria" is romantic melodrama; "The Birth of a Nation" comes close to modern reality. The producer of the Italian film could go to bizarre lengths in scenery and costumes; while Griffith had to duplicate an almost familiar reality and to depend on sheer dramatic drive and spectacular battles for his effect.

Old as "Cabiria" is, it excels "The Birth of a Nation" on a number of technical points, notably the lightning. Griffith achieves wonders of gradations and contrasts in out-of-door light; no American excels him in that field. But no American has yet realized how much can be accomplished with a single centre of illumination. They are still following that foolish old habit of the stage—bathing a room in a blaze of light from every direction. They have not realized that, even more effectively than in the theatre, they can use the play of deep shadow and high lights as a dramatic element, as well as a matter of sheer beauty. "Per Gynt," at the Stanley, proved inferior to expectations, but in the scene in the slaver's cabin, it showed what wonderful results a single source of light can give. In "Cabiria" almost every exterior goes to prove the same thing.

This concentration of light is particularly necessary in fire scenes. On the whole, those in "Cabiria" hardly equal Griffith's, for they are spoiled with some manifestly artificial flames flapping in front of the lens. But, barring those "close up" tongues of light, the Italian conflagrations achieve a finer effect by concentrating their light and bringing it out from the spot where the fire is supposed to rage. Thus only natural glares and shadows are thrown upon the surroundings, and when tinted red the film shows in high light just those spots that would shine in reality.

On another technical point—and just as vital a one—"Cabiria" is inferior. It is not a good photoplay from the point of view of action. It has scenes of catastrophe—earthquake, fire, battle—that are quite as good as anything in "The Birth of a Nation." Many of these scenes excel. But they are not built into a dramatic whole of streaming, accumulating interest. Half the story runs consecutively and excitingly. The last half—the most important half—has no climax. The story becomes complicated and hard to follow, instead of inevitable. There is no great moment of spectacular or dramatic action. There is none of that exciting use of "cut backs" which makes the Ku Klux rides so engrossing.

Within the limits of Griffith's story, he achieves much more than the Italian producer in his. But what a far more wonderful field the man has who goes back to picturesque antiquity for his spectacles! The costumes and even the elaborate and curious temples, towers and towns built for "Cabiria," can be far excelled in novelty and beauty by a stage artist of the modern school. Such beautiful visions as Hannibal crossing the Alps, war elephants and camels sludging along, can all be equaled in whatever period chosen. The one necessity is a unifying intelligence like Griffith's, a man to choose scenario-writer, scenic designer and actors, and then to fuse all the elements with the fire of beauty and excitement. Griffith will do it yet. Wait for his "Holy Graft."

Record Sep 19 - 1915 61

Scene in "The Birth of a Nation"-(Motion Pictures) Forrest

Press Sep. 19 - 1915

Three Beauties in "The Birth of a Nation" Pictures

MAE MARSH — LILLIAN GISH — MARY ALDEN

Press Sep 19 -

The Week's Playbills

AT THE FORREST

No one who has seen "The Birth of a Nation," that spectacular motion picture production now at the Forrest, will say aught but that D. W. Griffith has shown himself to be the master stage director. Yet "The Birth of a Nation" is not a photoplay in the accepted sense. It is a mammoth creation, an epic story presented with the realism of actuality by talented players who seem to be living again in the soul-stirring times when the nation was moving onward to its glorious destiny. Each incident is made the more impressive by the musical accompaniment that is played by a symphony orchestra and that is of the most appropriate sort.

There is no one who is not thrilled by the clash of great armies in scenes showing important engagements in the Civil War and that this appeal is to all types of men is apparent in the diverse kinds of people to be found at any presentation of the picture in the Forrest. Indeed, it is significant that amongst those who have given unqualified approval to "The Birth of a Nation" are leading representatives of labor organizations who have passed resolutions in praise of this epoch-making film.

Apart from the wonderful representation of the assassination of Lincoln at Ford's Theater, in Washington, which is probably the most impressive scene in this historic drama, there is a succession of scenes of compelling interest. Beginning with an exposition of early slavery days, the picture takes the onlooker into the trying days of the Civil War. But each dread happening is placed in contrast with delightful romantic scenes and the horrors of battle are forgotten or relieved by little human touches such as Griffith so well knows how to give.

The burning of Atlanta is a remarkable picture, but still more effective is the series of scenes showing the Ku Klux Klan. In the concluding part of the picture one sees activities in famous institutions of young colored men and women who are fitting themselves for high places in the industrial world.

N. Amer. Sep 19

LILLIAN GISH — FORREST

N. Amer. Sep 19

MOTION PICTURES

Forrest—The impressive spectacles and absorbing love tale of D. W. Griffith's motion picture, "The Birth of a Nation," still attract large audiences daily. With tomorrow the piece enters upon its third week, and from present prospects, it is destined to duplicate here its long runs in New York, Chicago and San Francisco. While the fine execution of the film is truly epoch-making, probably the basic reason for its success is to be found in its theme. It is a big historical romance, treating of a period which is not only important in the history of this country, but is still vividly recalled by living men. Doubtless, another factor in its success is the excellent acting of Henry B. Walthall, Mae Marsh and Miriam Cooper.

Press Sep 19 - 1915

SCENE, BIRTH OF A NATION, FORREST

Press Sep 19

THREE SCREEN QUEENS AND EACH A BEAUTY

To find that the "adorable she" is not one girl, but a thousand would be rather a shock to the average young man who goes acourting. That, however, is the experience of the chap who seeks his ideal in pictureland. The scrutinising camera ye reveals the myriad different personalities masked by one identity, and from scene to scene the heroine is ever new, ever different, and out of the motion pictures in every-day life she is different too.

Take Mae Marsh in "The Birth of a Nation," now running at the Forrest. It would be clever to call Miss Marsh a chameleon, if so many others had not called her that before this. The camera never does such startling tricks as when she is before it. A scrubby little slavey, a young girl from boarding school, the sweet college graduate, the young woman of fashion, the romantic heroine, the soubrette "cut up" and finally the everyday, freckle-faced, rather homely and always rough-ish "kid"—those are just a few of the things that Mae Marsh is.

It was her youthful love of adventure that prompted her to visit the Majestic-Reliance Studios in Los Angeles one day and to look around to see what was happening. Director David W. Griffith found her, sensed her temperament and set her to work.

The sweet and sugary sort of darling girl is represented among Griffith's forces by Lillian Gish. Without the plastic quality of Miss Marsh—the mask of a thousand faces—Miss Gish has a style of beauty that lends itself to every representation of daintiness and adorable femininity. Away from Pictureland Miss Gish is the well-groomed, fashionable, slim young woman that one may see any fine morning walking on Chestnut Street.

Then there is Miss Miriam Cooper, playing the Southern belle, "Margaret Cameron," in "The Birth of a Nation," who may fairly be described as "cameraproof." The picture must commit hari-kari itself before it can misrepresent her. The technicians say that this is due to the classic regularity of features and especially to the perfection of the large eyes. Out of the realm of the motion picture Miss Cooper is just as pretty to look upon as she is within the camera limit. She drops the romance, of course, and the old Southern atmosphere of the F. F. V., yet neither Los Angeles nor New York can make her other than beautiful.

The young women of cameraland work long hours. They could not very well belong to a labor union, because much of the work is waiting and watching for one's turn to come around. For every pose one sees, twenty-six poses have been rehearsed, and a dozen poses actually photographed, and most of them thrown away.

Out of the harvest of 140,000 feet of "Birth of a Nation" films, Director Griffith selected 12,000 feet which he called good. His judgment has been abundantly ratified. It would be difficult to find an ugly pose of Mae Marsh, Lillian Gish or Miriam Cooper among all the thousands that one witnesses in the great film.

Public Ledger Sep 19

AT THE PHOTOPLAY

FORREST—The impressive photoplay, "The Birth of a Nation," begins its third week tomorrow. It is an epic presented with intense realism by talented players who seem to be living again in the soul-stirring times when a nation was moving onward to a glorious destiny. Each incident is made the more impressive by the musical accompaniment played by a large orchestra. Apart from the wonderful representation of the assassination of Lincoln at Ford's Theatre in Washington, probably the most impressive scene in this historic drama, there is a succession of events of compelling interest. Beginning with an exposition of early slavery days, the picture takes the onlooker into the trying days of the Civil War, but each dread happening is placed in contrast to delightful romantic scenes and the horrors of battle are forgotten or relieved by little human touches, such as David W. Griffith so well knows how to give.

P. Ledger Sep 19-

HENRY B. WALTHALL-FORREST

Sep 19-
Pa Taking Dispatch

MAKES HIS OWN STARS

D W Griffith Takes Young People and Trains Them Right

Augustus Thomas recently related the story of how he once went to the late Charles Frohman on behalf of a prominent star who was dissatisfied with his management and who wanted to go under the Frohman management. The great manager's reply was characteristic: "Your friend is a finished star. I want my own stars. I want someone I can help." That sounds very much like David W Griffith, whose great spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," is now at the Nixon Theater. Griffith has always believed in young people. He has had wonderful success in training those who have had neither stage or picture experience. There is no other director who employs so many young people. Lillian Gish, who plays the role of Elsie Stoneman, is not quite 19. Mae Marsh and Miriam Cooper are also about the same age. Griffith is the master maker of film stars.

Mae Marsh

He is untiring in the search for a type when one is called for by the scenario. He will spend days coaching people of no experience but he gets nature and not stage acting. Two years ago an awkward, timid, freckled girl appeared at the Biograph studios. Open-eyed with astonishment she saw for the first time the making of a picture. Griffith saw her and at a flash realized her possibilities. The girl was Mae Marsh, often called the Maude Adams of the films. In a few months Griffith molded her into one of the best actresses of the screen. As Flora Cameron in "The Birth of a Nation," she has won a triumph of which any star would well be proud.

No Perversions of History

THE decision of the City Commissioners of Atlantic City to suppress the photoplay, "The Birth of a Nation," looks like common sense. However costly the production may have been, now being multiplied endlessly over the country, it is well known that it was planned by and based on the works of a man whose partisan and passionate descriptions of American life belong to the perversions of history rather than to that fair and candid treatment of a controversial period that all sections should strive for.

To use for partisan purposes the tremendously cumulative agency of the photoplay, which has its educational value heightened to an unparalleled degree by its all pervading character and the peculiar vividness of its visual appeal, is a great wrong. The moving picture has all the world for its field; its recreative ministrations are ever welcome. It is, in its best estate, the greatest invention for the highest form of entertainment ever devised. Those who live by it and profit by it, as well as those who merely enjoy it, and the authorities who have to pass on it, have certain inescapable responsibilities. And these should be met with a spirit of fair play and accommodation on both sides. But this does not mean easy-going lenity as to plays and scenes which sin against public morals or menace public order.

So far as the suppressed play goes, it is admittedly an attempt to reverse certain facts of history, to exalt race hatred into a kind of social religion, to cover up with a picturesque glamour some of the most abhorrent phases of the resumption of white rule in the South, wherein one great wrong did not justify others; and, in general, to teach history from an entirely one-sided sectional and offensive point of view. Those who have the right love of their common country are opposed to all efforts to present an essentially false view of history with all the fervor of a zealot, whose emotions, rather than events, determine his pictures of the united nation we love and cherish.

Record Sep 19

Forrest—"The Birth of a Nation."

No one who has seen "The Birth of a Nation," that spectacular motion picture production now at the Forrest Theatre, will say aught but that D. W. Griffith has shown himself to be the master stage director of the world. Yet "The Birth of a Nation" is not a photo-play in the accepted sense. It is a master creation, an epic story presented with the realism of actuality by talented players who seem to be living again in the soul-stirring times when a nation was moving onward to a glorious destiny. Each incident is made the more impressive by the musical accompaniment that is played by a symphony orchestra and that is of the most appropriate sort. There is no one who is not thrilled by the clash of great armies in scenes showing important engagements in the civil war and that appeal is to all types of men is apparent in the diverse kinds of people to be found at any presentation of the picture in the Forrest Theatre. Indeed, it is significant that among those who have given unqualified approval to "The Birth of a Nation" are leading representatives of labor organizations, who have passed resolutions in praise of this epoch-making film.

Apart from the wonderful representation of the assassination of Lincoln at Ford's Theatre in Washington, probably the most impressive scene in this historic drama, there is a succession of scenes of compelling interest. Beginning with an exposition of early slavery days, the picture takes the onlooker into the trying days of the civil war. But each dread happening is placed in contrast with delightful romantic scenes and the horrors of battle are forgotten or relieved by little human touches such as Griffith so well knows how to give. The burning of Atlanta is a remarkable picture, but still more effective is the series of scenes showing the Ku-Klux-Klan on its errands of safety. In the concluding part of the picture one sees activities in famous institutions of young colored men and women who are fitting themselves for high places in the industrial world.

Henry B. Walthall, who is a native of Alabama, is seen in the role of the Clansman, and his splendid work at once places him among the leaders in motion picture acting. Lilian Gish, Mae Marsh, Miriam Cooper, Ralph Lewis, Joseph Henabery, Howard Gaye, Donald Crisp, George Seigmann, Walter Long, Raoul Walsh, Mary Alden, Spottiswoode Aiken and others are in the notable cast. Splendid photography and superb projection of the picture contribute importantly to the irresistible appeal of this master work.

Pittsburgh Gazette Sep 19-1915

NIXON'S SHERMAN'S MARCH IN "THE BIRTH OF A NATION"

Pittsburg Gazette Times Sep 19-1915

63

"MAKING FACES" IN THE MOVING PICTURE

1—Margaret Cameron. 2—Lillian Gish. 3—Mae Marsh.

These three young women represent the highest development in facial acting under the direction of D. W. Griffith. They are all members of the cast of "The Birth of a Nation."

Take Mae Marsh for instance. It would be clever to call Miss Marsh a chameleon, if so many others had not called her that before this. The camera never does such startling tricks as when she is before it. A scrubby little slavey, a young miss home from boarding school, a biddy at the washtub, the sweet college graduate, the ginger, the young woman of fashion, the romantic heroine, the soubrette cut-up and finally the everyday, freckle-faced, rather homely and always roguish kid—those are just a few of the things that Mae Marsh is. A roguish kid, by the way, is Mae Marsh herself off the stage. It was her youthful love of adventure that prompted her to visit the Majestic-Reliance studio in Los Angeles one day and look around to see what was happening. Director Griffith found her, sensed her temperament and set her to work.

The sugary sort of girl is represented among Griffith's forces by Lillian Gish. Without the plastic quality of Mae Marsh—the mask of a thousand faces—Miss Gish has a style of beauty that lends itself to every representation of daintiness. The blondes must watch out, however. The camera has wicked tricks now and then of catching them napping. Once in a while the little angel looks like a little devil. Or the wicked monster of the photographic machine, catching a bad light or a mean pose, may give the adorable blonde the sad prophesy of "10 years later." Away from Pictureland Miss Gish is a well-groomed, fashionable slim young woman.

There is Miss Mirian Cooper, playing the Southern belle, Margaret Cameron, who may fairly be described as "camera-proof." The picture must commit hari-kari itself before it can misrepresent her. The technicians say that this is due to the classic regularity of feature, and especially to the perfection of the large eyes.

The young women of cameraland work long hours. They could not very well belong to a labor union because much of the work is waiting and watching for one's turn to come around. At 9 o'clock every player must be ready at the studio or the location, already costumed for the role. The work before the camera is a grind, not the easy swan-like posing the average person imagines it to be. For every pose one sees, 25 poses have been rehearsed, and a dozen poses actually photographed and most of them thrown away. Out of the harvest of 140,000 feet of "Birth of a Nation" films, Director Griffith selected 12,000 feet which he called good. His judgment has been abundantly ratified by the public. It would be difficult to find an ugly pose of Mae Marsh, Lillian Gish or Mirian Cooper among all the thousands that one witnesses in the film.

Pittsburg Dispatch Sep 19-

"The Birth of a Nation"

DAVID W GRIFFITH'S epoch-making spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," is duplicating at the Nixon its record-breaking runs in New York, Chicago, Boston, San Francisco and Los Angeles. Partly from the nature of the new art and partly from the opposition aroused, this work has excited keener curiosity than any other offering of recent years, and the extraordinary demand for seats indicates the size of the eager throngs which are coming to the Nixon.

"The Birth of a Nation" tells by film and music the story of a Nation re-born through the storm and stress of internecine strife. Instead of the four to six scenes of the conventional play, its technique permits of filming literally thousands of scenes covering a wide range of history and characters. Slavery, the prime cause of the Civil War; Lincoln's call for troops; the ball on the eve of Bull Run, and the first triumph of Confederate arms; the devastation wrought by Sherman's march to the sea, and the awful ordeal of the siege of Petersburg; Lee's surrender to Grant at Appomattox; the assassination of the Federal President; the harsh radical policy to the South; the uprising of the Ku Klux Klan and the overthrow of the carpet-bagger—negro regime—these great factors and events pass in review before the thrilled spectator.

The love interest of the play is based on the friendship between the Camerons of South Carolina and the Stonemans of Pennsylvania, two families involved in the struggle. Ben Cameron, the gallant clansman of the Dixon stories, appears again in the role of romantic hero; the piquant Northern girl, Elsie Stoneman, as the heroine. Mr Griffith took most of the scenes in the great out of doors, where Nature painted the backgrounds. The notable indoor scenes, like that of Ford's Theater on the night of the Lincoln tragedy, the scene at Appomattox, and the meeting of the South Carolina Legislature of 1870 are exact facsimiles of the originals. It is the first time in art-production that American history has been presented in living pictures on so stupendous a scale. To do this many times the amount of time, energy and expense usually devoted to amusement enterprises had to be used. Eighteen thousand people and 3,000 horses appear in the picture, which cost approximately $500,000 to produce.

You Never Can Tell About Griffith.

Over at the Colonial there are more ladders and paint brushes than man ever dreamed of, in strenuous renovatory preparation for the advent there next Sunday of "The Birth of a Nation." John Barry, D. W. Grifith's right hand man, has dropped in from New York to oversee the general overhauling.

"I don't know whether Mr. Griffith will be here for the opening or not," he explained. "It probably depends on the weather. If it rains out there he will come, and if it doesn't he will take pictures. He is working now on his next big feature, 'The Mother and the Law.' How long will it be? I don't know; he doesn't know. He just works from day to day and does the things that follow logically in the development. It is a modern story and very appealing. It is comedy-drama stuff, with dashes from pathos to comedy and back again. Mae Marsh and Bobby Harrop are in it, and Miriam Cooper."

Pittsburg Leader Sep 19

Battle Scene in "The Birth of a Nation"

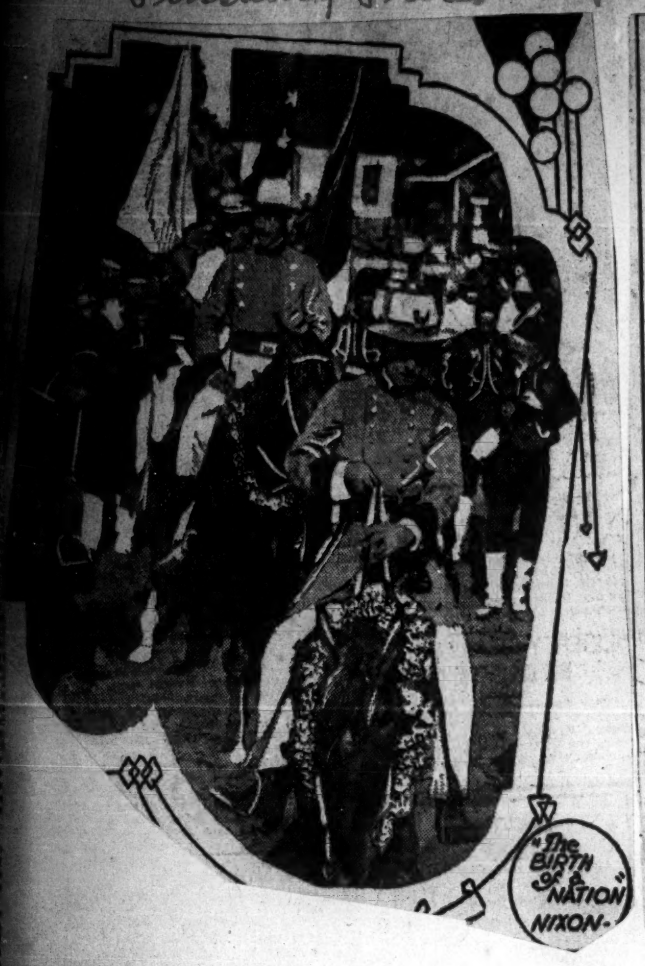
The telephone was a most important factor in staging the great battle scenes in "The Birth of a Nation," D. W. Griffith's supreme spectacle, now in the midst of a successful run at the Nixon.

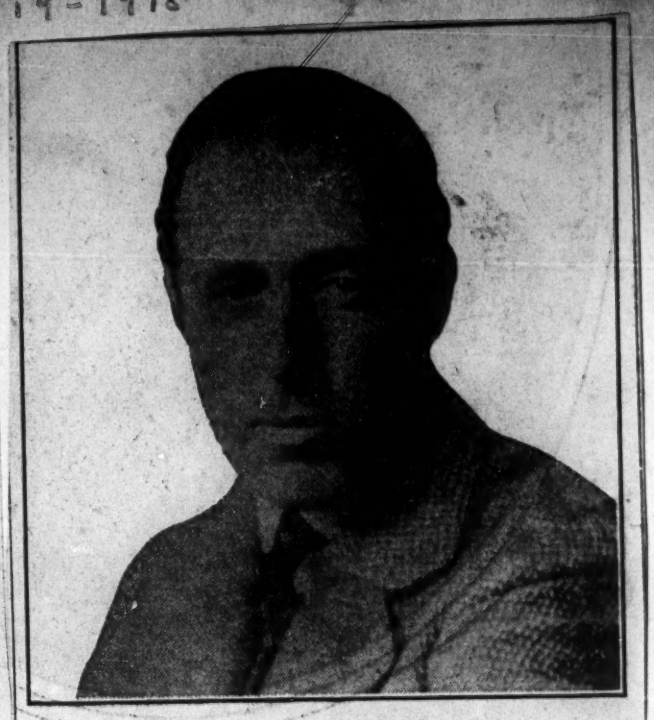
"Camera two!" was the sharp command from "Gen." Griffith, standing on the platform of a tower 60 feet high. The telephone operator of the small exchange at his side slipped a plug in the switchboard. Two miles away one of Griffith's assistants received the message. In a minute more a column of troops deployed, the roar of cannon was heard and the attack on the enemy's trenches began.

"Camera four!" A battery of field artillery wheeled about and thundered down the field. Quickly the orders were given to 16 division assistants and the battle of Petersburg was in full swing. Eighteen thousand men were battling over 12 square miles of ground. If the battle had been real there could not have been more celerity of movement. Everything went like clockwork, without a hitch. The old-fashioned method of using the megaphone would have been futile. It was the telephone that made possible the most wonderful war scenes ever shown on any stage. The wires had to be laid underground for the telephone did not come into use until 10 years after the Civil war, and telephone poles would have been an anachronism.

Mr. Griffith got the idea of this method of handling his battle scenes from the use made of the telephone in the great war. The result of this applying of the most modern methods enabled him to achieve results with the camera far ahead of anything that had ever been done before. That is the secret of the success of Griffith. He is always the pioneer, the creator. The result is that "The Birth of a Nation" is the most stupendous creation ever staged.

Pittsburg Press Sep 19-1915





D. W. GRIFFITH,
Producer of "The Birth of a Nation," at the Nixon.

DAVID W. GRIFFITH IS SON OF "DIXIE."

David Wark Griffith, the man who made "The Birth of a Nation," is the son of Jacob Wark Griffith, who was a brevet brigadier general in the Confederate army and one of the closest friends of "Litte Joe" Wheeler. His grandmother was a Shirley Carter, of Virginia, and his mother an Oglesby, of Georgia.

Like most sons of the Confederacy, young Griffith was very poor. When he started out to make his fortune he began as an actor. Then he wrote several plays. About this time motion picture plays began attracting serious attention and he turned his hand to writing scenarios. Then he went with the Biograph Co., at first in a very minor capacity, but he soon was a full-fledged director.

Daily State Gazette Sunday Trenton N.J. Sep 20-1915

ONE OF THE WAR SCENES
(Showing the horrors of war in "The Birth of a Nation," at the Trent theatre tonight and all this week.

"BIRTH OF NATION" AT TRENT TONIGHT

With a symphony orchestra of thirty, upwards of fifty mechanics and supernumeraries, and all the elaborate equipment used in presenting the spectacle at the Liberty theatre, New York, and the Forrest theatre, Philadelphia, "The Birth of a Nation" comes to the Trent theatre tonight to begin a week's engagement. There will be daily matinees after the opening, beginning at 2:30 p. m.

During its record engagements in New York, Philadelphia and Atlantic City, it has been seen by thousands from New Jersey, and without exception they have praised it enthusiastically. Trenton people's interest in the spectacle has been disclosed in the advance sale of seats, which is larger than for any attraction that the Trent theatre has had for several seasons.

For many years American dramatists wrote able plays of particular states, cities or localities, ranging from "Alabama," to "The Henrietta," and from "Way Down East" to "The Great Divide," but no one man seemed to grasp the whole spirit and genius of America until David Wark Griffith picked a suggestion for his theme out of Dixon's "The Leopard's Spots," and "The Clansman," and started to develop it.

Among the distinguished actors in the cast are Henry B. Walthall, Lillian Gish, Mae Marsh, Miriam Cooper, Mary Alden, Josephine Crowell, Ralph Lewis, Joseph Henabery, Raoul Walsh, Donald Crisp, Howard Gaye, George Seigman, Walter Long, Elmer Clifton and Robert Harron. Eighteen thousand people, 3,000 horses and no less than 5,000 scenes went to the making of the big spectacle.

FACTS ABOUT "THE BIRTH OF A NATION"

Five thousand scenes, 18,000 characters, 3,000 horses. Approximate cost of production, $500,000.

Cities built up and then destroyed by fire.

The biggest battle of the Civil war re-enacted.

Ford's theatre, Washington, reproduced to the smallest detail for the Lincoln tragedy.

A series of wild "Ku Klux" rides that commandeered a county for a day and cost $10,000.

Women's dresses used 25,000 yards and "Ku Klux" costumes 12,000 yards of cloth.

Night photography of battle scenes invented and perfected at a cost of $5,000.

Wonderful artillery duels in which real shells—costing $80 apiece—were used. Miles of trenches, thousands of fighters—"war as it actually is."

A musical score of thirty pieces, synchronized to the several thousand distinct and individual scenes.

Twelve thousand feet of film in the public picture represent 140,000 feet of actual photography.

St. Louis Daily Globe Democrat Sep 19

Fourth Week of Birth of a Nation.

FROM the excited comments of friends who have just seen The Birth of a Nation, which enters upon its fourth week at the Olympic Theater today, the average person is apt to imagine that Griffith's stupendous spectacle of civil war and reconstruction days is a series of big detached scenes. The excitement runs high over the battle of Petersburg, the blood-stirring rides of the Ku Klux clansmen, the assassination of Lincoln, the session of the South Carolina Legislature and Sherman's march to the sea. The Birth of a Nation, as everybody who has seen it knows, tells a well-connected story of romance and chivalry, which is seldom lost sight of an instant, amid the roar of battle or the clattering of horses' hoofs. At Petersburg the greatest thrill comes when Col. Ben Cameron of the Confederate army, charges the command of his old college friend, Capt. Phil Stoneman of the Federals. These are the heroes of the double love story that runs through the drama, each afterward marrying the other's sister. The Stonemans are conspicuous in the Ford Theater audience at the assassination of Lincoln. One of the youthful Camerons falls a victim to War in Sherman's storming of Atlanta. The South Carolina Legislature passes a law for the intermarriage of blacks and whites, making possible two tragic climaxes in the story. The rides of the clansmen are all the more exciting from the fact that their ultimate object is the rescue of persons in whom the audience is intensely interested.

Nowhere has Griffith lost sight of his story, and his spectacle is all the more dramatic in consequence.

LINCOLN IN PRAYER AFTER SIGNING THE CALL FOR 75,000 VOLUNTEERS BIRTH of NATION
OLYMPIC

Washington Chronicle Telegraph 1915

...-"The Birth of a Nation."
...W. Griffith's "The Birth of a Na-
...n" is in the full swing of a success-
...run at the Nixon Theater. This ...ture, is an epitome of scenes, in-
...nts, characters, passions and emo-
...ns of the whole great period from
...t to 1871—the period of the Civil War
...d Reconstruction. The musical ac-
...mpaniment adds to the thrill of the ...r scenes and intensifies the romance
...the love episodes. The orchestra
...ys southern and old-time airs for
...e softer scenes, while the big battle
...nes are given to the clash and blare
...martial music.

LILLIAN GISH IN "THE BIRTH OF A NATION" ◆ NIXON ◆

Trenton Ev. Times Dec 20 - 1915

(Scene from "The Birth of a Nation," Photoplay Opening a Week's Engagement at the Trent Theatre Tonight.)

"BIRTH OF NATION" FOR TRENT TODAY

The theatrical offering that hundreds of residents of this section of New Jersey have been waiting for, "The Birth of a Nation," comes to the Trent Theatre for a week's engagement beginning tonight. Except today, when the afternoon will be required for arranging the massive production, there will be daily matinees.

Many who saw this photodrama during its engagement either in New York or Philadelphia have enthusiastically praised it, and have advised friends not to miss it. The presentation at the Trent, it is stated, will be exactly the same as that drawing capacity houses to the Liberty Theatre, New York, and the Forrest Theatre, Philadelphia, including a symphony orchestra of 30, and upwards of 50 mechanics and supernumeraries. The spectacle has been presented more than 500 times at the Liberty Theatre, and its Philadelphia engagement is so phenomenally successful that it will likely remain at the Forrest Theatre the rest of the Winter.

Although the leaders of the opposing forces in the Civil War appear but for a moment in the scene in which General Grant receives the surrender of the army of the South from General Lee is one of the most striking of the famous photoplay.

As the scene unfolds Grant is discovered seated at a plain table reading the draft of the terms of surrender. Lee is seated at the left of the room. The staffs of the two generals are grouped about. The expression on Lee's face clearly indicates his thought. A forlorn leader of what is no longer even a forlorn hope he sits with bowed head most of the time while Grant is reading the important document.

As Grant, having affixed his signature rises, the contrast between the two men is striking. Grant, about five feet eight inches tall, his square shoulders inclined to stoop is without his sword, and is wearing fatigue uniform. He wears ordinary topboots with trousers inside. Boots and clothing are spattered with mud. Lee presents a different picture. He is carefully and correctly dressed, his six foot form towering over his conqueror. A statue in gray. The contrast in manner is equally marked. Grant, with hand in pocket, approaches Lee with an easy swing, cigar in mouth, and offers his hand in a way that means much to the defeated Southerner. It is not preliminary to a formal meaningless handshake. It is the act of one who would be a friend and is accepted as such by the man in grey who grasps the extended hand and the great generals of the great war for a moment face each other. Then with military salute they part and the incident of Appomattox Court House is closed.

VIRGINIAN-PILOT AND THE NORFOLK LANDMARK, 4/6 19

HENRY WALTHALL as "The Little Colonel" in "The Birth of a Nation," coming to the Colonial, week of September 27.

"BIRTH OF A NATION COMING TO COLONIAL

Still at the height of its triumph in New York, Philadelphia, Chicago, St. Louis and other metropolitan centers, David W. Griffith's stupendous spectacle of the reconstruction, "The Birth of a Nation," comes to the Colonial theatre for a week's engagement beginning Monday night, September 27. Daily matinees will be given after the opening.

The coming of the spectacle will be notable event aside from its own importance as a theatrical offering. It will give Norfolk the distinction of being the first city of the South to witness a mighty dramatic narrative which, although distinctly Southern in atmosphere and theme, has been shown only in the larger cities of the North. There has been a nation-wide demand for the spectacle from the smaller cities, but only a few will be fortunate enough to witness it within the next three years. Norfolk will mark the opening of a Southern tour, embracing only the larger cities below the Mason and Dixon line.

The company coming to the Colonial consists of a symphony orchestra of thirty and a corps of electricians and mechanics. With the dozen supernumeraries on the stage which the audience does not see, there are upwards of fifty people employed in the presentation. Extensive changes will be made in the auditorium and stage of the Colonial to receive the two carloads of electrical and other equipment carried by the company. The very scope of the production precludes its being presented in any but the larger theatres.

For eight months the Liberty theatre has been packed twice daily by "The Birth of a Nation," and it will probably remain in the metropolis the rest of the winter. It is also scheduled as an all-winter attraction at the Forrest theatre, where it is now in its second month, with seats selling ten weeks ahead.

The first half of the spectacle, which was suggested by Thomas Dixon's "The Clansman," exhibits the salient events of the war between the States. The formation of the Confederacy, Lincoln's call for troops, Sherman's march to the sea, the battle of Petersburg, Lee's surrender to Grant and the awful tragedy of Lincoln's assassination at Ford's theatre April 14, 1865, live before the spectator of the Griffith drama. In the second half the South's "second uprising"—this time against the carpetbagger regime—is shown in a thrilling story of Reconstruction days. The romance of the "little Confederate colonel," Ben Cameron, with the Northerner, Elsie Stoneman, and that of the Unionist captain, Phil Stoneman, with Margaret Cameron, the South Carolina lassie, maintain two threads of continuous love-interest throughout the story.

But the great out-of-doors is Mr. Griffith's special field. Tremendous battle scenes and the wild rides of the Ku Klux Klan are staged with thousands of participants. Eighteen thousand human actors and 3,000 horses were employed in the making of the picture, which cost half a million dollars and took eight months to produce. Some idea of its immensity is gained from the fact that there are no less than 5,000 distinct and individual scenes.

Trent. Ev. Times Dec 20

HEAVY SALES FOR "BIRTH OF NATION"

Cash Reservations Have Already Reached $1,500 for Motion-Picture Play

When long lines of patrons waited at the box office of the Trent Theatre this morning to purchase tickets for "The Birth of the Nation," new standards were established for a motion picture production in this city. No other photodrama has ever asked prices as high as those established for this engagement, and none has ever had such a number of reservations made.

At the box office it was said that the advance sale had reached $1,500 in cash and Montgomery Moses, the manager of the house, asserted that there was every indication that capacity houses would prevail every night of the engagement.

The picture, which has become noted throughout the country, is on the most extensive scale. A corps of 24 workmen is carried to insure its perfect presentation. Twelve are engaged on the stage to make sounds in keeping with the theme on the screen and add realism to it. Sixteen musicians are also in the company in addition to those who will be engaged in Trenton and an electrician, machine operators, and other helpers are employed.

ST. LOUIS (Mo.) REPUBLIC
AUG. 30, 1915

"The Birth of a Nation" Is Wonderful Photoplay And Worth Prices Asked

Real American Story Told With Perfection in Camera Art—Popular Vote at Olympic Approves the Production.

BY WILLIAM V. BRUMBY.

WITH the largest opening crowd it has had in five seasons and probably the most unique offering in its history, the Olympic Theater began its 1915-16 career last night.

A motion-picture show at $2 maximum admission certainly is unique, and, strange as it may seem to those who associate the picture shows with the jitneys and dimes, "The Birth of a Nation" is worth the prices charged.

Another unique feature of the opening was the official presence of Chief of Police Young and the morality squad of the city Detective Department.

This doesn't happen often at the Olympic, but the censorship did not worry Manager Walter Sanford, who feels sure that the temporary injunction restraining the police and Prosecuting Attorney Sidener from interfering with the production of "The Birth of a Nation" will be made permanent in the Circuit Court to-day, and that Griffith's marvelous photo-drama will be permitted to continue its engagement of five weeks. Mr. Sanford probably is correct.

Protest by Negroes.

Cards were passed through the audience of approximately 2,000 persons, and of the more than 800 cards turned in as the crowd filed out, not one failed to indorse the production.

Negro citizens last Saturday protested against the production on the grounds that it might create a race prejudice and lead to rioting.

There is just about as much reason in this as there would be to imagine a picture laid in the times of Troy causing trouble with the modern Greeks. The negro outrages pictured in the play wouldn't be possible to-day.

The first part of "The Birth of a Nation" is a vivid portrayal of the Civil War period. The second part deals with the fearful reconstruction times in the South and is based upon Rev. Thomas Dixon's novel, "The Clansman."

It is held together by a pretty love story. The first part is so graphic, so faithful and true that it makes one proud to be an American—pride with a thrill in it.

The second part, dealing with the Ku Klux, gives the Northerner an intensely dramatic, though not overdrawn, conception of what the South endured under the regime of carpetbaggers and scalawags, who used many ignorant negroes as their tools, while other former slaves remained faithful to the white people.

Incidental Music Appropriate.

We have seen "Cabiria" and numerous fine examples of the photo-drama in its highest development, but never have we seen a spectacle that approaches "The Birth of a Nation," not only in thrills, but in perfection of the camera's art.

It does not leave the impression of a mere photoplay. The spectator gets the impression of a living, breathing drama of nation-wide appeal enacted before him. A splendid orchestra heightens the effect.

The audience last night expressed its appreciation in almost constant applause, and then gave a more subtle evidence of tense interest: One could feel the vibrant response.

Surely Mr. Griffith is the master photo-dramatist up to date.

Post
Date 8-24-15

Nixon—"Birth of a Nation" Photo Spectacle.

David Wark Griffith's production of the photo spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," will mark the opening of the fall season at the Nixon Theater on Wednesday night, September 1.

Griffith supplied the absence of words by a symphonic musical score to fit the action. Result, a new kind of motion picture plus music, plus mechanical effects.

The director put on "The Birth of a Nation" as no other filmed play—not even "Cabiria" or "Quo Vadis"—had been put on. He used half a great state for his locale; 150 years of American history as his subject; 15,000 people as his actors; 3,000 riders and steeds as his cavalry, 5,000 scenes instead of a few score or a few hundred.

"The Birth of a Nation" is suggested by Thomas Dixon's "Clansman." New York, Chicago, Boston, San Francisco, Los Angeles crowded for many months the theaters where it was shown.

For the first time in Pittsburgh theatrical history a photo spectacle is presented at the $2 scale of prices. The Griffith drama comes here with a baggage equipment of 2 60-foot cars, a complete staff, including mechanical experts and stage crew, and a large symphonic orchestra regularly carried on tour—a company of 60 people altogether.

The story embraces beautiful romances of the Blue and the Gray; Ben Cameron, the clansman, and his Northern sweetheart, Elsie; Captain Phil Stoneman, U. S. A., and Margaret Cameron, the South Carolina belle. Among the principals of the largest cast ever assembled are Henry B. Walthall, Mae Marsh, Lillian Gish, Miriam Cooper, Josephine Crowell, Spottiswoode Aiken, Ralph Lew, Elmer Clifton, Robert Harron, Wallace Reed, Mary Alden, George Seigmann, Walter Long, Joseph Henabery, Raoul Walsh, Donald Crisp, Howard Gaye, John McGlynn, Ernest Campbell, Joan French, J. A. Beringer.

PROVIDENCE (R. I.) NEWS-DEM.
SEPT. 15, 1915 723

Providence Opera House.

D. W. Griffith's epic in photo drama, "The Birth of a Nation" will play a return engagement at the Providence Opera House starting next Monday afternoon. This photo play enjoyed a three weeks' run at the Opera House, playing to capacity audiences at every performance and the demand for further opportunity to see the sensational photo play led Colonel Wendelschaefer to secure a return engagement of it. The special orchestra of 25 men and the small army of men that is required to make the suitable sounds to go with the pictures will appear here again in this engagement.

Mr. Griffith's theme is the development of the nation and its relationship to the part the slavery problem played in bringing about Daniel Webster's prophecy, one and indivisible. The action begins with the introduction of slavery into the colonies. The comes the abolition movement and the stirring times leading up to the succession of the Southern States. The audience is carried through the four years of strife to the death of President Lincoln in Ford's theatre. The eight years of reconstruction form the final episodes in a drama of history, romance and emotion. Its termination is an allegorical picture of the coming permanent peace and the settlement of all local differences. To get these varied incidents into his drama the producer used 18,000 people and 3000 horses.

SEPT. 14, 1915
MILWAUKEE (Wis.) NEWS

PABST

"BIRTH OF A NATION"—

Many people who are in Milwaukee for the fair judging from their conversation before and after the show, jumped at the opportunity to see "The Birth of a Nation" at the Pabst when it opened a return engagement here for the week Monday night. The theater was comfortably filled, even thus early in the week, which should portend a record attendance later in the week when the Badgers who have been wanting to see this greatest of all film dramas, arrive in Milwaukee for the double purpose of seeing this play and attending the fair.

The play needs no description here. Suffice it to say the great historic drama not only makes a deep impression the first time one sees it, but holds more and more significance for one the oftener one sees the film. For many, the scenes depicted are realistic in the extreme. The departure of brothers and fathers for the front in the early days of the rebellion; the breaking up of happy homes by the demand that the Union be preserved, and the trying days of waiting are remembered only too vividly by scores of men and women. Veterans vouch for the realistic battle scenes and tell of the realistic manner in which the character of Abraham Lincoln is portrayed. Historic facts are followed so closely that the days of turmoil through which our nation went in determining the stability of a great principle, are brought most vividly to the minds and understanding of younger America; events during the civil war period are insensibly impressed upon the minds of those who did not personally experience these trying times, and more intense patriotism is instilled into every life by the great Griffith production, both on the screen and in the music score.

The Davidson management has done well to bring this historical drama back to Milwaukee at this time, as it will prove an object lesson in American history scarcely of less educational value than [illegible] the state fair has to offer.

---

der the left arm. The assailant immediately ran away. The police are investigating.

THE ST. LOUIS REPUBLIC
SUNDAY, AUGUST 29, 1915

GATHERINGS OF THE KU KLUX KLAN AND MIRIAM COOPER - "BIRTH OF A NATION" - OLYMPIC

DAVID W. GRIFFITH'S most extraordinary achievement with his new photo-spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," coming to the Olympic Theater for a five weeks' engagement commencing Sunday evening, is that of making history live. He has touched the high peaks of American history—the introduction of slavery, the War of Secession, the surrender at Appomattox, the death of Lincoln, the miseries of Reconstruction, and the Restoration of the South to its own.

Within 12,000 feet of celluloid film he has successfully combined a thrilling, plausible and dignified presentment of national upgrowth with a real and human love story based on Thomas Dixon's book-romance, "The Clansman." As it appears to the newspaper and magazine critics, Mr. Griffith has not only surprised the art of the "indoor" theater, but he has also developed a new art-form far superior to the old style history or historical novel. The best characterization of it so far is that of an eminent public man who has called it "history by lightning."

Mr. Griffith employed 18,000 people in the taking of these historical pictures. The battle scenes were actual duplicates of several of the Civil War conflicts, and so were the facsimilies of important events. The spectator sees Lincoln among his counsellors issuing the call for volunteers, Grant and Lee shaking hands at Appomattox, the shot that John Wilkes Booth fired, the Freedman's Bureau, the carpet-baggers' excesses, and the famous rides of the Ku Klux. The realism is almost uncanny.

"Cabiria" and "Quo Vadis" marked great steps forward in the screen drama. "The Birth of a Nation" points a still more wonderful development the old dramatic form having been thrown away and the epic or historical form substituted. The old reproach against the 10-cent movie is forever removed.

The labor involved in this newest sort of picture-making is enormous. There are 5,000 separate and individually posed scenes involving about 200,000 interesting details. The musical score is as complex and elaborate as that of any grand opera. Although not a word is spoken on the stage, the musical and mechanical effects employ a hundred flesh-and-blood helpers nightly. In brief, the magnitude of the stupendous film dwarfs the average stage play into insignificance.

Theatrical producers and observers are wondering what will be the next evolution of the art. Will the cinema replace the text-book in the public schools? Will the Walter Scotts and the W. M. Thackerays of the future do pictures instead of novels? Will the historian be replaced by the camera man, and the still life-painter by one who, like Griffith, can turn out hundreds of Rembrandt, Corot and Turner-like scenes in an evening's entertainment?

EPORT (Conn.) POST
SEPT. 14, 1915 98

ay. The insert shows Captain [illegible]

POLI'S TO PRESENT THE "BIRTH OF A NATION"

Wonderful Motion Picture Now in Its Tenth Month in New York City.

"The Birth of a Nation"—the famous photoplay visualizing epochal events in American history—is to be seen in Bridgeport soon. The same big production that is now in its tenth month in New York and which has created a profound sensation, will be brought to Poli's theater for a week by the American Feature Film company.

Announcement that the great dramatic and historical spectacle is coming here was received today with general acclaim among all classes of theatergoers. Arrangements for its presentation were completed at a series of conferences between Louis B. Mayer, general manager of the American Feature Film company, and S. Z. Poli, the theatrical magnate whose circuit of vaudeville houses includes two in Bridgeport.

"The Birth of a Nation" is the famous production by D. W. Griffith that marked a new era in the film world. It requires three hours for its presentation, and this fact necessarily will cause the temporary abandonment, for one week, of the present popular policy of vaudeville and photoplays at Poli's theater.

Mr. Mayer, during his conferences with Mr. Poli, insisted that the Poli theater would be the only house in Bridgeport in which he wanted to show the picture. Its enormous seating capacity and its appointments for the perfect presentation of the spectacle led him to make this decision. While Mr. Poli was loath to interrupt the present policy of the house, he was won over to Mr. Mayer's way of thinking principally because he wanted Bridgeporters to have an opportunity of seeing "The Birth of a Nation."

Mr. Poli gave his decision yesterday afternoon to Mr. Mayer. The latter immediately left for New York to complete arrangements for the production here. The dates will be announced soon, he said.

Commenting on the announcement, Mr. Poli said today: "I sincerely believe that Bridgeport patrons of my house will appreciate the temporary abandonment, for one week, of the present policy at Poli's, in order that 'The Birth of a Nation' may be shown in Bridgeport. It is really a wonderful production, and I feel certain that it will be an epochal event in Bridgeport theatricals. Immedi-

---

DETROIT (Mich.) NEWS
SEPT. 15, 1915

[illegible] thrilling. In fact, the telephone [illegible] big emotional climax.

"Birth of a Nation."

The long run of "The Birth of a Nation" has came to an end at the Tremont theater, Boston, but not without establishing a record in that city for a consecutive number of performances. In the 21 weeks of the engagement "The Birth of a Nation" aggregated 263 performances, which is said by statisticians to win the championship.

Once "The County Fair" remained in Boston for a longer period, piling up a record of 30 weeks, but the number of performances given during the engagement was not equal to the total of the Grimth photo spectacle.

TORONTO (Ont.) NEWS
SEPT. 13, 1915

[illegible] Red Cross and Allied funds, demonstrated [illegible] her sc[illegible] crowded [illegible] The seat sale for [illegible] Pavilion concert opens at Massey H[illegible] on Monday morning, September 20.

THE BIRTH OF A NATION.

The new theatric art invented by David W. Griffith, in producing "The Birth of a Nation," which will be at the Alexandra Theatre next week, has enabled him to surpass by far any previous stage spectacle. "Ben Hur" and "The Blue Bird" were supposed to be the highwater mark in such productions. They sink into insignificance beside this wonderful drama with its 5,000 scenes, 15,000 characters, 3,000 cavalry, 200,000 feet of film, the result of eight months of tireless labor, and the expenditure of half a million dollars. The spectacle will soon be presented in Toronto.

...A (N. H.) TELEGRAPH 601
SEPT. 14, 1915

BIRTH OF NATION AT COLONIAL

Play of Strong Climaxes and Dramatic Interest

"The Birth of a Nation," D. W. Griffith's wonderful moving picture drama, which has created so much interest, wherever it has been shown, opened at the Colonial theater Monday for a three days' run. Without doubt this is one of the greatest moving pictures ever produced. It is a thrilling, rapidly moving drama of the period of the Civil War, commencing just before the war and continuing through the reconstruction period, which followed.

Ever since the picture was released, "The Birth of a Nation" has caused widespread interest. It is having an unusually long run in Boston. There are five releases of this picture showing in New England, the local picture being under the management of David Dow. The performances are 2 and 8 o'clock daily and as a suggestion, the audience should be in its seats by those hours, for the better convenience of every one concerned.

The picture is staged on a scale in keeping with the subject itself. A large orchestra with Walter Cotton, first violin, plays the accompanying music, and at the door two misses in costumes of the 60's give out programs. The music itself is one of the features of the performance. Here and there patriotic songs and Southern melodies are played to accompany the scenes in the picture.

It has been said that the picture cost the producers a half million dollars and it is no strain on the imagination to realize this fact. Hundreds of people were employed in making the picture and in several scenes they are shown at the same time.

It is not often that a moving picture gives a thrill to the average person, but he spectator who does not feel his pulse beat faster at times or does not feel sympathy at other times is indeed a rather lifeless sort of mortal. There are a number of stirring climaxes that for dash and action have probably never been equalled before. There is a battle scene that is a masterpiece of realism. The gathering of the Ku-Klux Klan and its charge upon a negro town is the crowning climax and one that never fails to bring out applause.

Nashua audiences are not especially noted for enthusiasm, but at times warm applause was given. For the first part of the picture, the Monday evening audience sat quietly and watched the development of events. As the story progressed and became more intense, the audience became imbued with enthusiasm and gave evidence of its approval and when the strongest scenes were shown the applause was general.

The story of the picture is taken from Dixon's "The Clansman." It begins at a period just before the war, continues through the struggle between the North and the South and thence into the period of reconstruction in the South. Many figures, who made history during that period, are shown in the picture and are especially well presented. Abraham Lincoln, Gen. U. S. Grant, Gen. Robert A. Lee, Wilkes Booth, who assassinated Lincoln, and the leader of the house of representatives at that time, whose name is given as Stoneman, but who, in fact, must have been Thaddeus Stevens. Lincoln is shown signing the call for 75,000 volunteers, the organization of a Southern regiment and its marching away; later in the war, the battle of Fredericksburg. This battle is one of the finest scenes of the picture and probably the most realistic battle ever screened. An artillery deul is shown and the two armies face to face and finally at handgrips.

After the war comes the reconstruction and the elevation of the negroes, according to Stoneman's policy. Then comes the assassination of Lincoln in Ford's theater. The crisis is reached in the South, the situation having reached a stage that is unbearable to the Southern white people. The Ku-Klux Klan is organized for protection. Then comes the gathering of the clan to wreak vengeance on the negroes for their misdeeds. Probably 200 horsemen in their flowing robes are shown mustering and then comes their sweeping dash upon the town. A pitched battle takes place between the blacks and whites, ending in the rout of the former.

CLIPPING FROM Evening Bulletin
Providence (R.I.)
Date 9-15-15

...citing two-reel military drama, will be given at ... 1:30 p. m.

Providence Opera House LF

D. W. Griffith's epic in photo drama, "The Birth of a Nation," will play a return engagement at the Providence Opera House starting next Monday afternoon. This photoplay enjoyed a three weeks' run at the Opera House, playing to capacity audiences, and the demand for a further opportunity to see it led Col. Wendelschaefer to secure a return engagement. The special orchestra of 25 men and the small army of men required to make the suitable sounds to go with the pictures will appear here again in this engagement.

Mr. Griffith's theme is the development of the nation and its relationship to the part the slavery problem played in bringing about Daniel Webster's prophecy, one and indivisible. The action begins with the introduction of slavery into the colonies. Then comes the abolition movement and the stirring times leading up to the secession of the Southern States. The audience is carried through the four years of strife to the death of President Lincoln in Ford's Theatre. The eight years of reconstruction form the final episodes in the drama of history, romance and emotion. Its termination is an allegorical picture of the coming permanent peace and the settlement of all local differences. To get these varied incidents into his drama the producer used 18,000 people and 2000 horses.

SEPT. 16, 1915
PITTSBURG (Pa.) LEADER

"BIRTH OF A NATION" IS SLASHING RECORDS

"The Birth of a Nation" is now in its third record-smashing week at the Nixon. The theater is the coolest indoor spot in Pittsburg, and it is always comfortable, even on the hottest days.

David W. Griffith's masterpiece has become much more than merely a popular attraction. It is now a firmly established entertainment that is seen over and over again by the most critical playgoers. In fact its 5,000 swiftly-changing scenes more than one view is required to grasp all of its interesting phases. At each seeing new beauties are revealed. In its infinite variety "The Birth of a Nation" far surpasses anything that has ever been shown on a stage. In mere pictorial beauty it excels the masterpieces in the art galleries of Paris, Rome and Munich, for it is the beauty of nature itself.

Years ago great battles were shown in cycloramas but that was most unsatisfactory, for there was no life, no action. It was merely a painting on a grand scale. Now one can sit in a comfortable seat in the theater and see the battle of Petersburg visualized in so life-like a manner that it is as if one were looking at the real battle from an observation tower. Homer and Virgil have kept alive for centuries "The glory that was of Greece and the grandeur that was of Rome." With his new and wonderful art Griffith has perpetuated for all time the most stirring story of American history.

There are two performances daily except Sunday at the Nixon, and there are prices to suit every purse. There is not a seat in the house which does not afford a splendid view of the picture.

Lillian Gish in "Birth of Nation"

Of special interest to the Nashua audience was the appearance in the event of Walter Long, a Nashua boy, who took the part of Gus, a renegade negro, responsible for the death of the younger of the Cameron girls, who jumps over a cliff to save her honor. Mr. Long's work as an actor is unusually good.

Henry Walthall, who is already well known in motion pictures, plays the leading role of a Southern colonel. Mirian Cooper and Mae Marsh appear as his sisters, and Lillian Gish, as the daughter of 'Stoneman.' The other characters of the play are well portrayed, making the cast of principals a very strong one.

PITTSBURG (Pa.) GAZETTE-TIMES
SEPT. 16, 1915

...three ... and ... and players still sing and play their haunting melodies.

"The Birth of a Nation" is now in its third record-smashing week at the Nixon. The theater is always comfortable even in the hottest days. David W. Griffith's masterpiece has become much more than merely a popular attraction. It is now a firmly established entertainment that is seen over and over again by the most critical playgoers. In fact its 5,000 swiftly changing scenes more than one view is required to grasp all of its interesting phases. At each seeing new beauties are revealed. There are two performances daily except Sunday at the Nixon and there are prices to suit every purse. There is not a seat in the house which does not afford a splendid view of the picture.

PITTSBURG (Pa.) CHRONICLE
SEPT. 16, 1915

"BIRTH OF A NATION" CONTINUES TO ATTRACT

"The Birth of a Nation" is now in its third week at the Nixon. David W. Griffith's masterpiece has become much more than merely a popular attraction. It is now a firmly established entertainment that is seen over and over again by the most critical playgoers. In fact with its 5,000 swiftly changing scenes more than one view is required to grasp all of its interesting phases. At each seeing new beauties are revealed. One can sit in a seat in the theater and see the Battle of Gettysburg visualized in so life-like a maneer that it is as ... were looking at the ... battle from an ... tower.

St. Louis ... Republican
9-13-15

"The Birth of a Nation," D... fith's wonderful photoplay ... upon its third week's enga... the Olympic Theater yesterday ... theater drew a large audien... continued to maintain the high at... tendance of previous nights. This stupendous film production is pronounced the greatest play thrown on the screen.

...RRISB (Pa.) PRESS
SEPT. 16, 1915

STORY OF KU KLUX KLAN IS IV. THRILLING PART OF FILM

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION,"
At the Nixon.

Probably the most thrilling scenes in David W. Griffith's spectacular production "The Birth of a Nation" now at the Nixon are those in which the ghostly garbed ghouls of the Ku Klux Klan ride madly to the rescue of the women and children of the south.

The Ku Klux Klan was organized as "an institution of chivalry humanity and patriotism." In its original form it was merely a social club and the name was taken from the Greek word "kuklos" meaning circle. This society was formed in Pulaski, Tenn., in May, 1866. The president of the circle was known as the Grand Cyclops, his assistant was the Grand Magi, the marshal was the Grand Turk, the treasurer and scribe were termed Lictors.

As the sorrows of the south under the hated reconstruction laws began to be unbearable the organization changed its character and the name became popularized as Ku Klux Klan, the Klan having been added because most of the original members were descendants of Scotch clansmen. The fiery cross of the Scotch Highlanders was again used as a call to arms.

The empire, as the klan was known, was ruled by the grand wizard, Gen. Nathan Bedford Forrest, the gallant and dashing Confederate cavalry leader. Each state was known as a realm and the ruler was the grand dragon. He was assisted by eight hydras. A group of counties was called a dominion, ruled by a grand titan and six furies. Each county was a province under a grand giant and four goblins. The unit of the organization was the den and the members were known as ghouls. The membership at one time numbered over 500,000. Their mysteries and ritual were never written until atfer the grand wizard dissolved the order in March, 1869.

At first the Ku Klux Klan devoted their efforts to putting down disorder. Later they went after the carpetbaggers and scalawags.

BRIDGEPORT (Ct.) FARMER
SEPT. 18, 1915

"BIRTH OF NATION" PRODUCTION COMES WEEK OF OCTOBER 4.

Louis B. Mayer, general manager of the American Feature Film Co., who recently arranged for the presentation of "The Birth of a Nation" at Poli's theatre, today announced that the big photo-spectacle will be here for the week commencing October 4. There will be matinees daily.

Mr. Mayer, who was in the city for a short time today was enthusiastic over securing the use of the Poli theatre, because of its big seating capacity and general adaptability for the presentation of the pictures.

According to Mr. Mayer, "The Birth of a Nation" has just completed a three weeks' engagement in Providence, and will play a return stand of three weeks more in the near future. Thirty thousand people saw the films in Portland, Me., last week.

Mr. Mayer will return here next week to complete arrangements for the big production at Poli's.

Philadelphia, (Pa.) Public Ledger
SEP 19 1915

...ence was ...
...gan to arrive.

Walthall a True Southerner

Henry Walthall, who plays the part of Colonel Ben Cameron, in "The Birth of a Nation," at the Forrest, has come into such prominence as a motion picture player that he is known in all parts of the world. He was born and spent 22 years on a plantation in Alabama, and then he went on the stage. Purely by accident he chanced to visit the Biograph Studio one day. D. W. Griffith was directing a picture. Noticing Mr. Walthall, whom he had seen on the stage, Mr. Griffith asked the young actor how he would like to be "screened." Having nothing else to do, Walthall said he didn't mind trying. So he went to work, his first picture being "The Convict's Sacrifice."

"I saw the possibilities from the start," he said recently. "I went back to the stage for a time, but it had lost its charm. So again in response to an invitation, I sought out Mr. Griffith and now I am in motion pictures to stay."

Walthall is a cousin of the late United States Senator Walthall, of Alabama, the Senator having played a prominent part in the reconstruction events which his young relative portrays. Walthall's father fought for the South and the actor naturally enjoys playing in the war scenes. The role of Colonel Cameron is the longest one in "The Birth of a Nation" and also the longest so far seen in a motion picture, being fairly comparable to the champion "long ..." part of Hamlet in the ... drama.

TRENTON (N. J.) GAZETTE
SEPT. 18, 1915

"BIRTH OF NATION" AT TRENT MONDAY

The one theatrical offering that hundreds of residents of this section of New Jersey have been waiting for, "The Birth of a Nation," comes to the Trent theatre for a week's engagement, beginning Monday evening. Except on Monday, when the afternoon will be required for installing the massive production, there will be daily matinees.

While the engagement of the big Griffith spectacle is noteworthy in itself, unusual interest attaches to its coming to Trenton. Many local residents fortunate enough to witness it during its engagements either in New York or Philadelphia, have come home enthusiastically praising it and in the rush for seats since the sale opened Thursday morning there have been dozens who were advised not to miss it. The presentation at the Trent will be exactly the same as those which are attracting capacity business to the Liberty theatre, New York, and the Forrest theatre, Philadelphia, including a symphony orchestra of thirty and upwards of 50 mechanics and supernumeraries. The spectacle has been presented more than 500 times at the Liberty theatre and its Philadelphia engagement is so phenomenally successful that it will probably remain at the Forrest theatre the rest of the winter.

The first half of the great picture exhibits the salient events of the Civil war, which came to a close at Appomattox just fifty years ago. Lincoln's call for troops, Sherman's march, the battle of Petersburg, Lee's surrender to Grant and the awful tragedy at Ford's theatre live before the spectator of the Griffith drama.

In the second half the South's "second uprising," this time against the carpetbag ing regime, is shown in a thrilling story of Reconstruction days. The romance of the "little Confederate colonel," Ben Cameron, with the northerner, Elsie Stoneman, and that of the Unionist, Captain Phil Stoneman, with Margaret Cameron, the South Carolina lassie, maintain two threads of continuous love-interest throughout the story.

The fun and frolic of plantation days, as well as the heart-ache and pathos of the stricken South, are shown. The great out-of-doors is Mr. Griffith's special field. Great battle scenes and the rides of the clan are staged with thousands of participants. There are 5,000 scenes in the spectacle, and (it is estimated) no less than 200,000 interesting historical details. On the musical side Mr. Griffith attempted something previously unheard of in connection with motion pictures. This was the synchronizing of a complete symphonic score with the appearances of the important characters and the enactment of the principal scenes. This instrumental music is played by a large orchestra, and supplemented by part-singing behind the scenes. Somehow the old war-time tunes, thus thematically treated, make the "counterfeit presentments" of long ago seem irresistibly real. Among the leading players in what was probably the largest theatric cast ever assembled may be mentioned Joseph Henabery, as President Lincoln; Donald Crisp and Howard Gaye as Generals Grant and Lee; Mae Marsh as Flora Cameron; Henry Walthall, Lillian Gish, Elmer Clifton, Miriam Cooper as the quartet of lovers; Ralph Lewis as Congressman Stoneman; Spottiswoode Aiken and Josephine Crowell as the elder Camerons, and Walter Seigmann as Lynch.

CONCORD (N. H.) MONITOR
SEPT. 17, 1915

A BIG THING

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION," CERTAINLY THAT.

Stupendous Motion Picture Spectacle Shown at Conn's Theater—Marvel of Photography and a Triumph for the Director—Film Production in a Class by Itself.

Beyond question, "The Birth of a Nation" is a marvel of photography and a stage director's triumph. Concord has seen moving pictures de luxe before and expects to see them many times again but up to Thursday there had been nothing like this stupendous spectacle. It is big, big, big. Its cost must have been tremendous and the labor involved in perfecting it pretty nearly staggers the imagination.

For the opposition which its presentation has in some places aroused, we ourselves see no justification. Free speech and a free press are fundamentals of the American constitution and there is no reason why the moving picture should not be equally free to present any view of history or politics that it is desired to emphasize. As history, of course, "The Birth of a Nation," may be promptly dismissed. It is a melodrama of the good old blood-stirring type with an historical background and historical incidents to give it verity.

Thrilling as is its story and exciting as are its incidents, it as as a spectacle that "The Birth of a Nation" merits our serious consideration. It establishes the fact at once that D. W. Griffith is a great director, probably one of the greatest. Not only is he a genius in his own field, but he must be a man of tireless industry and limitless patience. In no other way can his feat in filming "The Birth of a Nation" be explained.

The battle scenes are almost grewsome in their realism and there is a distinct educational value in the faithful reproduction of such scenes as the surrender of Lee and the assassination of Lincoln.

The photography of "The Birth of a Nation" is the highest possible example of the art. The pictures are so clear that the tax upon the eyes that might be expected from watching 12 reels of rapidly moving film is almost wholly avoided, while showing the pictures on a lavender colored screen still further relieves the strain.

The music and the incidental effects far eclipse anything of the sort Concord has known in connection with film productions and all in all "The Birth of a Nation" is something not to be missed. There are people even in this camera-mad age who do not care for the generality of moving pictures, but "The Birth of a Nation," is different. Up to this time, it is in a class by itself and is more than worth while aside from any interest that may be aroused by the story it tells.

Not even the almost unbearable heat of Thursday and Thursday evening could prevent big audiences at both presentations at Conn's Theater on that day and the spectacle has been a very general topic of conversation about town all day. There will be further exhibitions this afternoon and evening and tomorrow afternoon and night.

Philadelphia, (Pa.) Public Ledger
SEP 19 1915

AT THE PHOTOPLAYS

FORREST—The impressive photoplay, "The Birth of a Nation," begins its third week tomorrow. It is an epic presented with intense realism by talented players who seem to be living again in the soul-stirring times when a nation was moving onward to a glorious destiny. Each incident is made the more impressive by the musical accompaniment played by a large orchestra. Apart from the wonderful representation of the assassination of Lincoln at Ford's Theatre in Washington, probably the most impressive scene in this historic drama, there is a succession of events of compelling interest. Beginning with an exposition of early slavery days, the picture takes the onlooker into the trying days of the Civil War, but each dread happening is placed in contrast to delightful romantic scenes and the horrors of battle are forgotten or relieved by little human touches, such as David W. Griffith so well knows how to give.

TRENTON (N. J.) GAZETTE
SEPT. 18, 1915

MANY CHANGES TO BE MADE AT TRENT FOR "BIRTH OF A NATION"

Optical experts responsible for the perfect results of "The Birth of a Nation" projection at the Liberty theatre, New York, are expected to arrive in Trenton today and start work at the Trent theatre, where the famous spectacle will be the attraction next week. The same scientific methods will be used in "The Birth of a Nation" spectacle here.

In the rear of the orchestra circle, workmen will erect a hard, solid foundation above which a steel framework will be built for the picture booth, thus assuring the picture machines' perfect rigidity and steadiness. The experts in New York measured to fractions of an inch the exact distance required for perfect focussing, and selected by means of eye-tests those locations in the house which will afford an optometrically perfect view of the film.

Thirty orchestra circle chairs are to be removed from the lower floor, so as to give ample space to the picture machine booth. "The Birth of a Nation" will supply two expert operators, and bring here two of the company's best projecting machines, the same as those used at the Liberty, New York, and at the Forrest, Philadelphia, where the picture is now being shown.

The film's complete success in New York shows the marvelous progress of picturized drama from the status of a toy to the eminence of an art.

TRENTON (N. J.) GAZETTE
SEPT. 18, 1915

Abraham Lincoln in Box, Ford's Theatre, Washington as Shown in "The Birth of a Nation"—Trent

SEPT. 13, 1915
TORONTO (Ont.) GLOBE

69

Music and The Drama

Conducted by E. R. PARKHURST.

"A FULL HOUSE."

TO-NIGHT the great laughing play, "A Full House," with the favorite comedian, Walter Jones, at the head of its corps of expert fun-makers, will be seen at the Alexandra Theatre. The play was devised solely for those who wish to be entertained and amused, and that it fully succeeds in its mission is evidenced by its long run in New York. Toronto is the first city to be visited by "A Full House," and indications point to a prosperous week. It can safely be promised that there will be no more diverting play to be seen here this season. A number of Toronto favorites are [illegible] including George Stuart Christie, who was [illegible] the Percy Haswell Players. Both the Wednesday and Saturday matinees will be given at popular prices, the best seats being one dollar.

"BIRTH OF A NATION."

THE new theatric art invented by David W. Griffith in producing "The Birth of a Nation," which will be seen at the Alexandra Theatre next week, has enabled him to surpass by far any previous stage spectacle. "Ben Hur" and "The Blue Bird" were supposed to be the high-water mark of such productions. They sink into insignificance beside this wonderful drama, with its 5,000 scenes, 18,000 characters, 2,000 cavalry, 200,000 details, and the result of eight months of tireless labor and the expenditure of half a million dollars. The great director is being repaid for his monumental effort in motion picture spectacle by "capacity" business at first-class prices in the principal theatres of the country.

SEPT. 13, 1915
TORONTO (Ont.) STAR

THEATRES

"A Full House."

Now is the appointed time to laugh, for the funniest of all farces, "A Full House," begins its engagement at the Alexandra Theatre to-night. It has been decided by the critical and popular verdict of New York that this new play by Fred Jackson is quite the most laughable entertainment that has been devised for many a year. A funny idea has been elaborated with many a novel twist, comedy characters have been created, and humorous lines have been written to give additional point to amusing situations, and the total result is "A Full House" crowded with laughter, bursting with fun, and jammed to the utmost capacity with good, clean, wholesome entertainment. Walter Jones heads the fine cast of farceurs. Both the Wednesday and Saturday matinees will be given, with one dollar as the charge for the best seats.

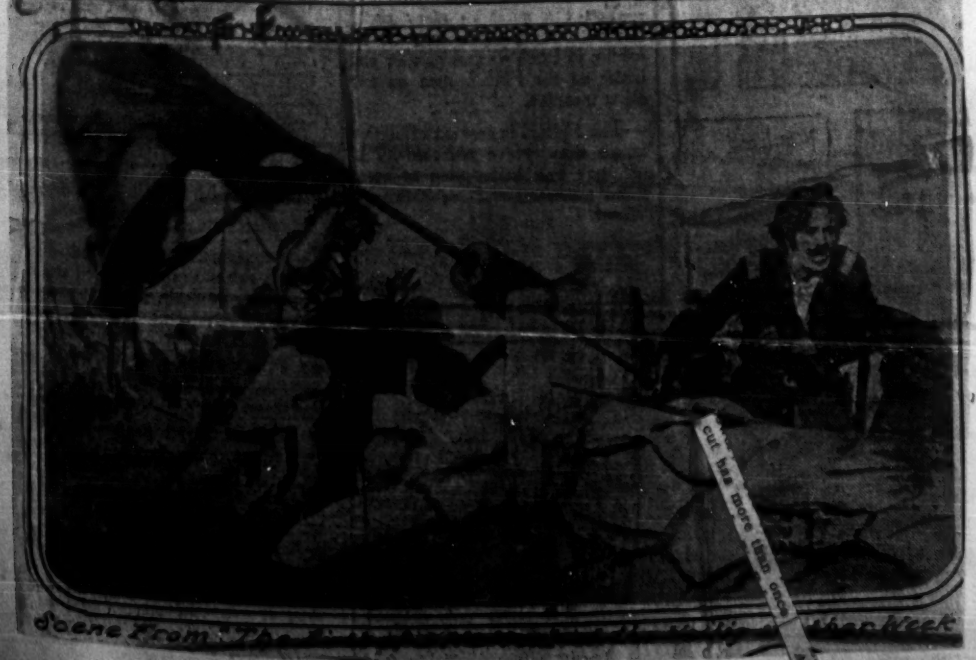
"The Birth of a Nation."

The new theatric art invented by David W. Griffith in producing "The Birth of a Nation," which will be seen at the Alexandra Theatre next week, has enabled him to surpass by far any previous stage spectacle. "Ben Hur" and "The Blue Bird" were supposed to be the high-water mark of such productions. They sink into insignificance beside this wonderful drama, with its 5,000 scenes, 18,000 characters, 2,000 cavalry, 200,000 details, the result of eight months of tireless labor, and the expenditure of half a million dollars.

PND (Ore.) OREGONIAN
SEPT. 12, 1915 711

PLAN OF CENSORSHIP BY SCHOOL BOARDS REFUTED IN TOWN OF ORIGIN

Tempest Preacher Meets With Little Encouragement for Scheme in Connection With Municipal Theater Project—Proposal Has Advantage of Forcing Standards Higher Than Natural Course of Development.



Scene From "The [illegible] Man West"

This cut has more than once. And it

LOS ANGELES (Cal.) EXPRESS
SEPT. 13, 1915

LAST WEEK IN CITY FOR LETTY AND CLANSMAN

Quo Vadis to Follow Birth of Nation at Clune's Auditorium

Concluding two of the most extraordinary runs ever known in California theaters, this week will see the end of The Clansman at Clune's Auditorium and So Long Letty at the Morosco.

The Clansman, or The Birth of a Nation, as it is called in the East, begins today its twenty-second week of business, with interest still keen in the spectacular film. It is estimated that nearly 400,000 persons have seen it since its advent in this city, which was the first step in a prosperity that has been national. The Clansman will be succeeded next Monday by an elaborate production of Quo Vadis.

So Long Letty, the Harrison-Morosco comedy with music, will give way next Sunday to the musical piece, Nobody Home, with Blanche Ring in the leading role. The Pacific coast rights of this English comedy, which has been one of the greatest New York successes in recent years, have been purchased by Oliver Morosco. So Long Letty will round out 102 performances on Saturday night and then be gotten ready for a San Francisco run, to be followed by its New York premiere.

Amusing Film at Majestic

Those who stood at the Majestic theater exits yesterday and saw the people coming out with their faces wreathed in smiles, could not resist the temptation to step in and see Irene Fenwick and Charles Judel "pull" some of the most ludicrous comedy ever seen in a photoplay. The Commuters is, probably, the most successful effort at putting genuine comedy into motion pictures.

In addition to the comedy, Pathe news, educational films and travelogues complete a picture program of unusual merit. The Majestic orchestra is also very entertaining, completing a strong showing and one that will be appreciated in the midst of the more serious stories the screen is showing nowadays.

The Song of Hate at Miller's

The Song of Hate, a six-reel adaptation of Sardou's deathless drama, La Tosca, is this week's new feature at Miller's theater. It is a splendidly told story that leads up to one of the most terrific climaxes ever filmed and is superbly played by Betty Nansen, Dorothy Bernard, Claire Whitney, Arthur Hope and the big supporting cast.

The added feature at this popular theater from now on will be the latest Pathe Weekly. Miller's is the only picture theater in the city showing this popular [illegible]

SAN FRANCISCO (Cal.) CALL & POST
SEPT. 13, 1915

"The Clansman" Still Great Drawing Card

"The Birth of a Nation," or "The Clansman," is still the magnet for large audiences at the Savoy Theater. The wonderful Griffith film story is now in its twentieth week in San Francisco and it is apparently as great a drawing card as ever.

One of the factors contributing to the entertaining powers of the performance is the special music which fits into the action of the screened story by an augmented orchestra under the baton of Conductor de Nufero. The plantation songs, sung by a chorus, are also a feature.

The extraordinary run of "The Birth of a Nation" in San Francisco is but a repetition of its success elsewhere. The picture is in the midst of length engagements in New York, Chicago and Boston.

Dog Performers Please at Pantages

The little folks will enjoy the antics of Karl Emmy and his frolicsome canine pets at the Pantages. The dogs perform all of their tricks on a table, and never make a miss.

Lalla Selbini makes a picturesque figure while doing stunts on the bicycle. Carney and Ashely have a clever musical act, while the war sketch of Laura Winston and company is a big hit. Innes and Ryan look classy in their patter offering, "Breaking the Bank," a hodgepodge of nonsense and a laughing hit, and Harry Cleveland and several stunning chorus maidens close a strong bill with a tabloid, "The Land of Tomorrow."

Bendix Plans Strong Program

A program with a strong appeal to lovers of the best in music has been prepared for the next weekly symphony concert of the Exposition orchestra, to take place at Festival Hall on Sunday afternoon. Conductor Max Bendix has chosen two wonderful works for his eighty musicians, the symphony in C major, No. 7, by Schubert, known as "the great symphony," and Rimsky-Korsakoff's symphonic suite, "Scherezade." Miss Olga Steeb, the eminent pianist, will be the soloist of the afternoon and she will play, with the orchestra, Liszt's Concerto in E flat, No. 1.

ST. LOUIS (Mo.) GLOBE-DEMOCRAT
SEPT. 14, 1915

AMUSEMENTS

The Birth of a Nation

Starting its third consecutive week at the Olympic Sunday afternoon, D. W. Griffith's stupendous spectacle of the tragedy and romance of war, The Birth of a Nation, drew a larger house, matinee and night, than on either of the previous Sundays, and this in face of the hottest day on the photo-drama's local season. Last night the tumult and the shouting when the Ku Klux Klan makes its wild rides was not confined to the gallery, whence those demonstrations generally proceed. The balcony and the orchestra chairs took a hand, so to speak, and the resultant uproar was not the least impressive part of the entertainment. Again the truly adequate orchestra aided in imparting the flavor of genuineness to the performance, for it has come to pass that anything big in the amusement line demands the big tonal concomitant. Wouldn't it be strange were the merely mechanical motion picture to raise the theater orchestra to its pristine importance?

According to present plans, The Birth of a Nation remains at the Broadway house to and including Saturday, October 2.

(Can.) PRESS
SEPT. 14, 1915

AUDIENCE SITS ENTHRALLED AT BIG PHOTO PLAY

Ottawa residents and visitors to the fair who have been reading for the last few months of that "last word" in motion pictures "The Birth of a Nation" have now an opportunity, thanks to the directors of the Central Canada Exhibition, of seeing and judging a picture which is the talk of a continent. Those who attend the night show at the grandstand, and none should fail to do so, will see a production, whose equal whether considered from a point of size, historical accuracy, delineation of character, or interest of plot has never been seen here.

Even allowing for the advertiser's optimism there is no other title which so well describes the picture shown before the grandstand at the exhibition last night than "The Eight Wonder of the World." In spite of the threatening weather a fairly large crowd gathered to see D. W. Griffith's wonderful production. They found the picture fully up to their utmost sanguine expectations and fully worthy of the laudatory press notices it has been receiving all over the American continent.

Is Uniformly Enthralling.

The picture was so uniformly enthralling that it is difficult to single out for praise any particular scene or character. But the mob scenes in the town of Piedmont S.C. when it is in the hands of the maddened mob of Negroes and the gathering of the Ku-Klux-Klan as well as the several battle scenes have never been equalled and one has to see them to realize the stupendous nature of the spectacle.

The cast of characters is without a single weak member. There is no attempt to "star" any particular one but all the actors seem to have been made for their parts and the result is a play as near perfection as could be desired. The delineament of the historical characters and scenes gave evidence of the most laborious research and painstaking attention to detail. Abraham Lincoln, U. S. Grant, Robert E. Lee and John Wilkes Booth re-enacted their parts in the great drama of the Republic upon the screen. The assassination of Lincoln in Ford's theatre is reproduced even to the minutest detail and is perhaps the most impressive scene in this or any other picture.

Is a Wonderful Spectacle.

The picture itself is truly a wonderful spectacle. Costing over a half a million dollars it is undoubtedly the last word in motion photography. Every scene and views is clear and perfect and the story of the play is fascinating and thrilling.

The story of the great play is simple and easy to understand. When the first ship brought a cargo of Slaves from South Africa to North America, the troubles of a nation first began. The people of the Southern States who practiced slavery declined to give away to the North in the latter's request that the practice be abolished. However, when Abraham Lincoln was elected President he issued a call for 75,000 volunteers to force the demand of the Northern people.

Two brothers named Stoneman were visiting school chums in Piedmont, S.C. There Phil Stoneman met his chums' sister, Margaret Cameron, To Ben Cameron, Phil told him of his own beautiful sister at home which he loved and adored. The Cameron girl and the Stoneman boy were spending many happy days together when suddenly the Civil War broke out and the Stoneman brothers were called north to fight for the Stars and Stripes. The Cameron brothers joined the ranks of the Southerners.

The years roll on and suddenly the little town of Piedmont is one of the centres of the conflict. The town is pillaged with white and black soldiers and the wealth and resources are burned or commandeered by General Sherman in his march to the sea. The next scene shows a great battle in which two or the Cameron boys are killed.

General Grant is pressing the Confederacy in the famous campaign around Petersburg. Their supplies are running low and Ben Cameron, now called the "little Colonel" is asked by General Lee to divert the enemy and thus save the train which is bringing in supplies. In the great fight that followed Cameron's entire force is wiped out.

The second act shows the reign of the "carpet baggers" in the South aided by Austin Stoneham, who after the death of Lincoln, is a supreme power in Congress. He has many radical ideas as to the equality of the blackr and whites. The whites are subjected to every sort of insult and abuse at the hand of their former servants and renegade whites. The climax is reached when Flora Cameron, Ben's favorite sister leaps to her death to escape the pursuit of a brutal negro. This is the last straw.

The Little Colonel organizes the Ku-Klux-Klan. The fiery cross is sent about the land and the white South gathers to protect its honor and birthright. Phil Cameron joins the Southerners to rescue Ben's father. Austin Stoneham's radical ideas undergo a sudden change when he learns that Silas Lynch, whom he has elevated to power, desires to marry his daughter. But he is in Lynch's power and the two are only saved by the wild ride of the Ku-Klux-Klan.

SAN FRANCISCO (Cal.) CALL & POST
SEPT. 14, 1915

in Sir Gilbert Parker's "Jordan is a Hard Road."

NEW GRIFFITH PRODUCTION

David Wark Griffith, the premier producer of "The Birth of a Nation," is engaged in the production of his next feature drama to follow his sensational success "The Birth of a Nation." It is said that a number of scenes, employing [illegible] supers will be introduced in this picture.

Sent. for. Sunday Dec 13

RE-ARRANGE STAGE FOR BIG SHOW

With the engagement of "The Birth of a Nation" at the Trent Theatre a week distant, preparations are already under way for extensive changes to the stage and auditorium of the theatre necessitated by the vastness and altogether unusual character of the offering. Space must be provided for the symphony orchestra of 30, which plays without pause throughout the three hours required for the presentation, and for the large booth and other ponderous electrical equipment carried by the company. Then, too, the stage must be fitted to receive the great quantity of contrivances utilized by 50 mechanics and supernumeraries in attaining the effects which have made the battle and other big scenes of "The Birth of a Nation" so amazingly realistic.

Taken as a whole, the big Griffith spectacle will be the one overshadowing event of the theatrical season in Trenton, and the fact that it is being shown at the Trent while other companies are presenting it to enormous business at the Liberty Thatre, New York; the Forret Theatre, Philadelphia, as well as in Chicago, St. Louis and Pittsburgh, lends increased importance to the local engagement.

D. W. Grifith, in staging "The Birth of a Nation," used nature for his background, 150 years of American history as his subject, 18,000 people as his actors, and no less than 3,000 mounts of cavalry.

Summer
Los Angeles Cal
9 14 15

Clune's Auditorium

In "The Clansman," D. W. Griffith's twelve-reel masterpiece, at Clune's Auditorium Theater, fidelity to detail is characteristic. A story is related of the scene showing the assassination of Lincoln that illustrates the point. The Booth of the motion picture jumped a distance of 338 feet from the Lincoln box to the stage in rehearsing the assassination scene. Not that the distance from the box to the stage was 338 feet—it was only thirteen. But the actor had to rehearse his act twenty-six times.

The interior of the historical Ford's Theater of Washington is a perfect replica.

Undoubtedly this fidelity to detail is one of the factors of the immense popularity of "The Clansman." Next week "Quo Vadis" will be shown at popular

VISALIA (Cal.) DELTA
SEPT. 14, 1915

1307

THEATRE VISALIA OPEN ON SATURDAY, OCT. 2ND

L BE FOLLOWED BY GREAT ASTERPIECE IN 12 REELS, "THE CLANSMAN"

he theatrical season at Theatre alia opens on Saturday October 2, which time Potash and Perlmutter rn to this city with the same ex- ent production seen last year. The ning date will be on a day which mises to mean a crowded house to rt the season with.

n the following Monday, October 4 continuing all through that week greatest film production of the age l be shown to the people of Tulare nty in "The Clansman" or "The th of a Nation." This production in reels comes here together with a t of eight singers and an eight ce orchestra making an entire eve- g's entertainment of a class in it- f.

n "The Clansman" Visalia will have production which has now been run- g in Los Angeles for thirteen weeks d which ran in San Francisco 15 eks and in Oakland ten weeks. It conceded to be the greatest motion ture ever produced requiring eight mpanies together to make it and ven thousand supes for some of the nes.

To secure it for Visalia at all it s necessary to book the story for week and this has been done con- nt in the belief that the people of lare county will never regret having n it.

The rest of the bookings for Theatre alia have not been made public as although it is known that they l include "Saddy Longlegs," "For Robertson" and "Peg 'O My Heart" well as all of the higher class pro- ions coming to the coast.

MILWAUKEE (Wis.) WISCONSIN
SEPT. 15, 1915

every afternoon and night to capacit houses. "A [illegible]" "The Garter Girls at House" are t titles of two genuine burlesques.

"The Birth of a Nation," the [illegible]er ful film drama now playing a return en gagement at the Pabst, shows no diminution of the popularity which made it the most remarkable entertainment of fering in Milwaukee's theatrical history The state fair crowds which are attend ing the afternoon and evening perform nces every day are gripped and held y the wonderful representations of bat- les, historic events and all the other ncidents which go to make up the lit- est and most amazing moving picture roduction ever staged. The music of he big orchestra is one of the most at- ractive features of the offering, which will remain at the Pabst for the week, closing Saturday night.

HAMILTON (Ont.) SPECTATOR
SEPT. 15, 1915

[illegible] work to be undertaken in collaboration with the Canadan [illegible]

FILM INSULTS COLORED PEOPLE

Toronto, Sept. 15.—A deputation of colored men representing the colored residents of the city appeared yesterday before the board of moving picture censors to protest against some of the pictures in a movie play to be shown here called The Birth of a Nation. It is stated that some of the films dealing with conditions in the African south are derogatory to colored people, and the deputation presented clippings from various newspapers in the States criticizing these objectionable features. In inspecting the film and before any protest was lodged the censors excised certain scenes to which objection might be raised.

Fresno Eve. Times Sept 14/15

LILLIAN GISH

(Actress Whose Winsomeness Relieves Tenseness in "The Birth of a Nation," Motion-Picture Production at the Trent Theatre Next Week.)

LILLIAN GISH IN "BIRTH OF NATION"

One of the most effective minor scenes in "The Birth of a Nation," coming to the Trent Theatre for a week, beginning next Monday, shows Miss Elsie Stoneman, daughter of the "Great Commoner," who led Congress in Lincoln's time, playing a guitar to solace a wounded rebel officer in the Patents' Office Hospital.

"I haven't known you long," says the little Confederate colonel, Ben Cameron, "but I have carried you about with me for years and years." He displays a half-faded daguerreotype of the girl, a picture she had given her brother and which had fallen into Ben's hands.

Soothed by her kindness, Ben makes a rapid recovery. In the second half of the story, the scene of which shifts to South Carolina, they are sweethearts in the dread time of the second Southern uprising. To portray the fine flower of Northern womanhood throughout the whole trublous era is the task of Miss Lillian Gish, as Elsie Stoneman in this play. It took eight months to stage the Civil War and Reconstruction epic in "The Birth of a Nation." As she figures in hundreds of scenes from the early war-time to the end of Reconstruction and her marriage to Ben, Lillian Gish had hardly an idle moment.

FRESNO (Cal.) REPUBLICAN
SEPT. 15, 1915

"THE CLANSMAN" IS MOST WONDERFUL PHOTOPLAY

Marian Cooper As Margaret Cameron In "The Clansman"—Coming to White Theater

It takes but a few hours to view "The Clansman," which will be presented at the White theater next week, commencing Monday night, what it took that master, D. W. Griffith, almost a year to accomplish. That the result is worth it, is acknowledged by everyone, but who knows of the trials; the great obstacles to be overcome; the heavy responsibilities; that attended the making of "The Clansman," the pioneer of what might be called the "greatest motion picture?"

It took months to pick out suitable types to represent the characters of that period, and one has but to see the splendid manner in which each part is portrayed, to know that success attended his efforts.

Nothing is left undone to make "The Clansman" the most real picture ever produced.

Rep.
Fresno Cal
9-13-15

"THE CLANSMAN," IN 12 REELS AT WHITE

Mae Marsh in "The Clansman," coming to the White next Monday, Sept. 20

D. W. Griffith's greatest achievement, "The Clansman," in twelve reels, is the attraction opening the regular fall and winter combination season at the new White theater next Monday night, September 20th. Manager Barton announces that this wonderful film will be presented in Fresno exactly as it has been given in all the leading cities in the country and in New York, where it is now being presented. A special orchestra of fourteen pieces, including organ, will accompany the picture and no detail will be left unturned to make its presentation as complete as possible.

The film is based on the famous novel by Thomas Dixon Jr., but it deals more broadly on its historical side with the life of the American nation than does the play or the book. "The Clansman" is the greatest and most spectacular motion picture ever produced. It is said to have cost half a million dollars and required seven months to make. Historically and technically, "The Clansman" is perfect.

Included in the all-star cast presenting "The Clansman" are the following principals: Henry Walthal, Mae Marsh, Miriam Cooper, Josephine Crowell, Spottiswood Aitken, Ralph Lewis, Lillian Gish, Elmer Clifton, Robert Harron, George Seigmann, Walter Long, Mary Alden, Joseph Henneberry, Samuel de Grasse, Howard Gaye, Donald Crisp, William de Vaull and Jennie Lee.

The box office is open daily from 11 to 12 a. m., and after Thursday will be open all day from 10 a. m.

(Mo.) TIMES
SEPT. 15, 1915

806

PARK.

The season before last one of the successful of the productions given in New York was "The Misleading Lady," a clever comedy from the pens of Charles Goddard and Paul Dickey, which ran a full year at the Fulton Theater. The management of the Park-Shenandoah combination has seized the opportunity of presenting it here for the first time. Miss Bertha Mann, the new leading woman of The Players, is to be introduced in this bill. Miss Mann, who is rated one of the best in the business, succeeds Miss Varden, who has been appearing in leads pending the time when Miss Mann could close her Eastern engagements.

This week "The Red Mill," always a favorite, is doing good business for the Park Opera Company.

"BIRTH OF A NATION."

St. Louis, like all other cities where it has shown, has fully endorsed the $2 "Birth of a Nation," as manifested by the remarkable attendance at the Olympic Theater, where, in spite of sultry weather, all box-office records, summer or winter, for several seasons, are being broken. The Griffith spectacle not only tells an interesting story, but it pictures it a thousand times more vividly than a novel and throws in thousands of descriptive bits that would make the lightest novel dull, if told in words.

GRAND.

Starting next Monday at 11 a. m., the new bill that goes into effect at the Grand Opera House, and continuing throughout the week, has many feature acts as well as distinct novelties in the long list of attractions. Headline honors are given to May Ellen, the Elephant Comedienne. The second feature of the bill will be the Shiavano Troupe of Sensational Acrobats. The American Comedy Four represents the highest standard of all quartets; Fred Thomas & Co. will present their sketch, "Mrs. Suppi's Nightmare." Others will be Bill Pruitt, Cook & Rothert, Blanch Colvin, Reed-St. John Trio and Miss Inez Nourse; Weber & Delhi and the Animated Weekly.

The feature attraction of the current week's bill is the Five Satsudas Troupe of Acrobats.

SHENANDOAH.

The Park Company returns to the Shenandoah on Monday, Sept. 20, appearing in the revival of "The Red Mill," the best-known and most popular of the Herbert-Blossom musical plays. This offering has had a fine week's business at the Park and will doubtless duplicate it at the Shenandoah.

This week, The Players, in "Within the Law."

STANDARD.

Next week at the Standard Theater will be presented one of the season's great shows of modernized burlesque when I. M. Weingarten's "September Morning Glories" will be seen in all their prismatic glitter and gay color, gowned beauties, vaudeville stars, singing and dancing comedians and soubrettes, in a carnival program of action, song and gaiety, that will undoubtedly prove to be the banner production of the current season.

The "Topsy Turvy Honeymoon" is the title of the big, breezy two-act musical comedy farce. Wrestling every Friday night.

week, commencing with the matinee next Sunday afternoon. Mr. Hastings, the owner, has in the past always held the reputation of giving the public just what it wants. The principal parts in the new two-act burlesque will be in the hands of Dan Coleman, America's foremost Irish comedian, and Miss Jean Leonard. Everyone is especially chosen to play the parts cast for and nothing short of a Broadway production at popular prices is what the "Hastings' Big Show" offers.

The current attraction is "Bob Manchester's Big Burlesque Company."

OGDEN CITY (Utah) STANDARD
SEPT. 15, 1915

F F

COLORED PEOPLE AR OPPOSED TO A COMING PLAY

A petition from a large number o the colored population of the city asking that the play, "Birth of a Nation," be not permitted in the city was presented to the city board o commissioners this morning and referred to the superintendent of public safety.

The petitioners relate that the character of the play is such that the negro race is highly insulted by its production and can have no other effect than to engender race hatred. The commissioners were advised that the play is scheduled for production in Ogden in the near future.

The petition of property owners for an arc light on Twenty-fourth street and D avenue, in the West Ogden district, was referred to the superintendent of streets. The superintendent of streets was also given the petition of Manager P. D. Kline of the Ogden-Logan & Idaho Railway company, asking the privilege of laying its roadbed in concrete at the intersection of Madison avenue and Twenty-seventh street, where asphalt paving is being laid.

The claims of Rose Blair for $5000 and Samuel A. Blair for $2000, as damages for alleged personal injuries, were referred to the city attorney for a legal opinion. The claimants say that while driving along the canyon roadway near the power dam, June 30, 1915, the road was so filled with rock and earth thrown from the city pipe line trench, along the road which was being dug by the Green Construction company, that the buggy shaft was broken and the rig turned over in the trench. They say that they were badly bruised about their heads and bodies and suffered painful injuries.

Twenty-nine applications for liquor licenses were considered, the bonds approved, and the applications certified to the district judges.

TORONTO (Ont.) GLOBE
SEPT. 16, 1915

"BIRTH OF A NATION."

NEXT week at the Alexandra Theatre D. W. Griffith's mighty spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," will be presented for the first time in this city. This spectacular film is the great production which is still making a record run of over 600 performances in New York city, where it created the sensation of the season. It is estimated that over two million people have seen the production since it was originally brought out in the east. It has other sensational runs in Boston, Chicago and San Francisco to its credit. The story is one of romance and adventure. It records its facts with the rapidity of lightning, and yet never departs from the fundamental of true drama. Love and conflict are its basic theme, but a myriad of details illumine the narrative and lift it so far beyond anything our stage has ever known that the usual avenues of comparison do not offer a guide to follow in this instance. Linked with the drama is an operatic score which carries recurrent themes with every vital scene and character in the epic. This wonderful score, which is synchronized to the drama, is in itself work of art. An orchestra of thirty travels with the attraction to handle the musical features of the presentation. During the engagement in Toronto of this famous film popular price matinees will be given every day.

DETROIT (Mich.) NEWS
SEPT. 16, 1915

quite thrilling. In fact, the telephone figures in a big emotional climax.

"Birth of a Nation."

The long run of "The Birth of a Nation" has came to an end at the Tremont theater, Boston, but not without establishing a record in that city for a consecutive number of performances. In the 21 weeks of the engagement "The Birth of a Nation" aggregated 252 performances, which is said by statisticians to win the championship.

Once "The County Fair" remained in Boston for a longer period, piling up a record of 30 weeks, but the number of performances given during the engagement was not equal to the total of the Griffith photo spectacle.

Telegram
Mail & M-H
9-16-15

Colonial Theater. F F

Following the tremendous success of "The Birth of a Nation," Manager George D. Mackey at the Colonial has booked a very strong program including a Fox feature picture Betty Nansen in the modern theatrical sensation, "Should a Mother Tell." In this story of domestic simplicity ,the actress has a part that runs the entire scale of human emotions. In the tragic moments Miss Nansen is superb. In the quiet scenes she is wonderfully self possessed and her acting is so natural that one fails to distinctly grasp the fact that she is really acting.

"The Path of the Rainbow" is feature number two and the Billy Reeves comedy keeps the audience in splendid humor.

PORTLAND (Ore.) TELEGRAM
SEPT. 15, 1915

LEADING FIGURE IN "BIRTH OF A NATION," AT THE HEILIG

Marion Cooper As Flora Cameron

TORONTO (Ont.) STAR
SEPT. 16, 1915

THEATRES

"The Birth of a Nation."

Next week at the Alexandra Theatre D. W. Griffith's mighty spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," will be presented for the first time in this city. This spectacular film is the great production which is still making a record run of over 300 performances in New York City, where is created the premiere of the season. It is estimated that over two million people have seen the production since it was originally brought out in the East. It has other sensational runs in Boston, Chicago and San Francisco to its credit. The story is one of romance and adventure. It records in facie with the nudity of lighting, and yet never departs from the fundamentals of fine drama. During the engagement in Toronto of this famous film popular price matinees will be given every day.

SEPT. 16, 1915
MILWAUKEE (Wis.) NEWS

Film Play Amazes by Its Magnitude

Lincoln Freeing the Slaves

"The Birth of a Nation" continues to amaze the big crowds of state fair visitors and Milwaukee residents at the Pabst theater, where it is the attraction for this week, closing its engagement Sunday night. The thrilling scenes showing the assembling of the thousands of clansmen and their wild rides through the night on errands of rescue are sufficient alone to bring the audiences to their feet and in addition the battle scenes, the historic events faithfully depicted, and the other features of the big production are justifying its claim to being the greatest film spectacle ever staged.

MAE MARSH
(Who Plays Flora Cameron in "The Birth of a Nation" at the Trent Next Week.)

MAE MARSH TO ACT "BIRTH OF NATION"

Miss Mae Marsh, who will be seen as the captivating little Flora in D. W. Griffith's spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," at the Trent Theatre for a whole week, beginning next Monday, is a prodigy of Filmdom.

The young girl, who lives near Los Angeles, met so many rebuffs at first that she almost gave up hope of a stage career. A small job at spear-holding with the "merry, merry," was at last promised her. While awaiting this, she decided one day to sneak behind "big sister" to the motion picture studio where the latter was employed. The director, Mr. Griffith, saw the young stranger and asked her whether she wanted to act. Everybody laughed, for Mae Marsh was awkward, freckle-faced and unprepossessing.

Griffith was in earnest, however. He saw under the freckles a visage born to comedy and tragedy, the high lights and deep shadows of feeling. He sensed also a temperament of electrical quality. Under his tutoring she lost some of the awkwardness and kept the rest for "slavey" parts. Fine frocks made a wonderful difference. The other actors found that Mae Marsh, with equal facility, could

LITCHFIELD (Ill.) NEWS-HERALD
SEPT. 16, 1915

THE BIRTH OF A NATION.

By special arrangements just completed in New York, "The Birth of a Nation" will be the attraction at the Olympic Theater, St. Louis during the week of October 3rd. It is this week of all weeks in the year that is made memorable by the Veiled Prophet parade and accompanying festivities and the big abricultural fair.

"The Birth of a Nation" promises to loom big among the biggest of the events of the week. This mighty spectacle, from the workshop of D. W. Griffith, eclipses in grandeur as a theatrical spectacle both "Ben Hur" and "The Blue Bird" combined. It opened its run at the Olympic Theater August 29 and has been breaking all records for attendance at St. Louis theaters ever since. It was to have terminated its engagement the night of October 2, but the various committees having in charge the amusement feature of the week, made a strong appeal to the theatrical magnates to hold the show over, and after much negotiation, the appeal was successful.

"The Birth of a Nation" is a tremendous spectacle of the south during the Civil War and Reconstruction days. A few of the 5000 features displayed are the battle of Petersburg, fought on a stage five miles in extent; Sherman's march to the sea, with the storming of Atlanta, the assassination of President Lincoln in Ford's theatre, exactly reproduced; the thrilling rides of the Ku Klux Klans on their deeds of vengeance and mercy, and the struggles of the south against the rule of the carpetbag regime. Thruout it all runs a stirring love story, based on Thomas Dixon's "The Clansman."

The management of the Olympic Theater announces that mail orders for the week will be received and filled now.

LITCHFIELD (Ill.) NEWS-HERALD
SEPT. 16, 1915

THE BIRTH OF A NATION.

By special arrangements just completed in New York, "The Birth of a Nation" will be the attraction at the Olympic Theater, St. Louis during the week of October 3rd. It is this week of all weeks in the year that is made memorable by the Veiled Prophet parade and accompanying festivities and the big abricultural fair.

"The Birth of a Nation" promises to loom big among the biggest of the events of the week. This mighty spectacle, from the workshop of D. W. Griffith, eclipses in grandeur as a theatrical spectacle both "Ben Hur" and "The Blue Bird" combined. It opened its run at the Olympic Theater August 29 and has been breaking all records for attendance at St. Louis theaters over since. It was to have terminated its engagement the night of October 2, but the various committees having in charge the amusement feature of the week, made a strong appeal to the theatrical magnates to hold the show over, and after much negotiation, the appeal was successful.

"The Birth of a Nation" is a tremendous spectacle of the south during the Civil War and Reconstruction days. A few of the 5000 features displayed are the battle of Petersburg, fought on a stage five miles in extent; Sherman's march to the sea, with the storming of Atlanta, the assassination of President Lincoln in Ford's theatre, exactly reproduced; the thrilling rides of the Ku Klux Klans on their deeds of vengeance and mercy, and the struggles of the south against the rule of the carpetbag regime. Thruout it all runs a stirring love story, based on Thomas Dixon's "The Clansman."

The management of the Olympic Theater announces that mail orders for the week will be received and filled now.

SEPT. 16, 1915
PITTSBURG (Pa.) POST

"Birth of a Nation" The Big Cool Show

"The Birth of a Nation," in its third week at the Nixon, is the big, cool show. There is no footlight blaze heating the theater.

David W. Griffith's photo spectacle has become so popular that it is seen over and over again. With its 5,000 swiftly changing scenes more than one view is required to grasp all of its interesting phases. In its infinite variety "The Birth of a Nation" surpasses anything that has ever been shown on the screen.

Years ago battles were shown in cycloramas, but there was no life, no action. It was merely a painting on a grand scale. Now one can sit in a comfortable seat in the theater and see the battle of Petersburg visualized in lifelike manner.

There are two showings daily at the Nixon and prices to suit every purse. There is not a seat in the house which does not afford a splendid view of the picture.

OS ANGELES (Cal.) TIMES
SEPT. 16, 1915

...Francisco. ...Theater, ...

FF

Clune's Auditorium.

Last chance! The last performance of "The Clansman's" twenty-two weeks' run will be given Satrday evening at Clune's Auditorium. Next week "Quo Vadis," also spectacular, will be shown, and at popular prices. "The Clansman" is a motion picture classic. The biggest picture yet filmed, it has had the longest runs here, in other Pacific Coast cities, on the Atlantic Coast and in the Middle West.

CHICAGO (Ill.) HERALD
SEPT. 16, 1915

SEEN on the S...

WHILE George Bowles and his assistants boast of the stationary line which daily graces the sidewalk in front of the Colonial Theater, the man in the box office presents another claim for fame, for the booming cannon and clarion trumpet calls of "The Birth of a Nation."

The man in the box, aided and abetted by the ushers, says "The Birth of a Nation" holds the world's record for receiving and answering questions. If you don't believe it, stand in the lobby just before and just after the Griffith spectacle is unreeled.

Seeing is believing, and after some time spent with the ticket man and with the dainty girls in ante-bellum frocks within the door, it must be admitted that "The Birth of a Nation's" newest claim is founded on facts. To compete with this question bureau, the next competitor will have to go some.

Some of the questions asked, and, needless to say, answered, are:

"Who was Stoneman in real life?"

"Are the horses really killed?"

"I will be 21 next month. Will the show be here?"

"Is that the real pistol that Lincoln was killed with?"

"Did Stoneman know Lincoln was to be shot?"

"Is that Mr. Griffith standing over there?"

"Is Mr. Griffith married?"

"How far can you get seats ahead?"

"We have come a long way. Can't you make an exception and get seats for us?"

"Why don't you admit children? Isn't the play supposed to be instructive and historical?"

"Is it all right for me to bring a lady?"

"Are all the seats reserved?"

"Were any people injured in the battle scenes?"

"Is Gus a negro?"

"Where are the riots?"

"Was there really a negro lieutenant governor?"

"Why can't I take my wife, even if she is only 20? We are married and have a child."

"Where were the pictures taken? How much did they cost?"

"If the negroes object, why did so many take part in the picture?"

"What is the name of the song sung in the hospital scene? It seems so familiar."

"Are any of the stars in the picture married to each other? Is Lillian Gish's sister in the cast?"

"Does the show let out in time to catch the train for Rockford?"

"Is a dummy used tto leap from the cliff?"

"What is the name of the bodyguard who left Lincoln alone?"

"Can't I get seats without standing in line? I am a friend of Mayor Thompson's."

These are only a small part of the questions. Whether the atmosphere at the Colonial, the good-looking ushers or the picture itself is responsible for all these questioning ones, no one can say. It has been suggested that these sample questions be answered, put in a frame and hung in a conspicuous place. If this does not cure the members of the society established for asking questions, it might be a wise idea

LILLIAN GISH.

...o appoint a man to stand in the lobby and do nothing but answer questions.

SAN FRANCISCO (Cal.) CALL & POST
SEPT. 16, 1915

FF

...There ... starring around the ... throttles the efforts of the ... the daughter ... the financier who ... trying to put ... over a shady deal.

"Birth of a Nation" in Twentieth Week

There appears to be no limit to the drawing powers of "The Birth of a Nation," or "The Clansman," now at the Savoy Theater. Sunday marks the start of the twenty-first week of the sensational Griffith film story in San Francisco.

This record is the most remarkable known for this city. One of the reasons is that the picture retains its unique appeal.

"The Birth of a Nation" is superior to any motion picture ever given to the screen, gauged from every critical angle. Authorities have acqnowledged this all over the country. In New York, Chicago and Boston the same success has been recorded for Griffith's masterpiece as here.

The work of the three beautiful and clever actresses, Lillian Gish, Mae Marsh and Miriam Cooper, stands out. It was obviously a master stroke on the part of the producer to cast such a trinity of loveliness in one picture, for all of the success of "The Birth of a Nation" is not attributable to its master scenes. The spectacular element is, of course, conspicuous, but many romantic touches dot the action.

...ITTSBURG (Pa.) PRESS
SEPT. 16, 1915

Luana, who through no fault of hers, drags down the ... fall... love with her and marries, and who then comes to the realization that marriage between the brown and white race should never be.

NIXON.

"The Birth of a Nation" is now in its third record-breaking week at the Nixon. The theater is the coolest indoor spot in Pittsburg and it is always comfortable even on the hottest days.

David W. Griffith's masterpiece has become much more than merely a popular attraction. It is now a firmly established entertainment that is seen over and over again by the most critical playgoers. In fact with its five thousand swiftly changing scenes more than one view is required to grasp all of its interesting phases. At each seeing new beauties are revealed. In its infinite variety "The Birth of a Nation" far surpasses anything that has ever been shown on a stage.

GRAND.

A notably important announcement was made by Mr. Harry Davis last night when he told of the forthcoming presentation in the Grand Opera House, next week of the first photo-dramatic production of "Trilby." The screen has perpetuated no success more positive or more brilliant than the adventurous story of the little artistic Bohemian group to which the brain of George DuMaurier gave birth. In "Trilby" all the elements of the drama are found —romance, love and tragedy commingled in a narrative as deeply absorbing and as humanly sympathetic as anything the modern stage has witnessed.

MILES.

The film version of "The Melting Pot," with Walker Whiteside in his original role of David Quixano, is proving a strong attraction in the Miles theater, in spite of the intense heat of the past few days. The Miles is cooled by iced air, and is anywhere from 10 to 20 degrees lower than the street. "The Melting Pot" is a very powerful picture, and as spectacular as anything that has been seen in Pittsburg for a long time. Its scenes are laid in Kishineff, Russia, in Siberia, in Petrograd, and in the United States. The story tells of the persecution of the Jews and outlines some of the reasons why so many of them seek refuge in America. The production of the film in the Miles is elaborate to a remarkable degree, especially when it comes to the musical accompaniment to the picture which is furnished by organ, symphony orchestra of 30 pieces, and a mixed chorus of sixty voices.

MANCHESTER (N. H.) UNION
SEPT. 21, 1915

MASTER FILM COMING HERE

"Birth of a Nation" Is Booked for One Week at Auditorium

A development no one would have believed possible a few years ago is seen in the establishment of D. W. Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation" as a first class theatrical attraction which has been crowding the houses all over the country at "two dollar top" prices.

"The Birth of a Nation," which will be shown at the Auditorium for one

JOSEPH HENABERY.
In Role of Abraham Lincoln.

week beginning Monday, Sept. 27, is more than a film, for nearly 100 people are employed in the music and mechanical effects during the unreeling of the 12,000 feet of celluloid, yet never a word is spoken from the stage during the two and three-quarters hours performance. Mr. Griffith's photo-entertainment combines a pictorial survey of Civil War history and of reconstruction days, with a love romance of the North and South. The battle scenes, engaging thousands of combatants drilled with the well known Griffith elan and realism, are particularly effective.

After seeing the marvelous production many students of the subject predict that the historical novels of the future will be told in pictures rather than words. Certainly the "indecent drama" cannot henceforth hope to compete with the photoplay insofar as spectacular features are concerned. A few years ago we were want to hear of films or photoplays as being "in their infancy." "The Birth of a Nation" may be said to be the full grown adult of that infant for it is hard to conceive of a greater achievement in moving picture projection.

The marvelous scenes simply astound the spectator they thrill him again and again with their magnitude dash and realistic detail. Scenes are projected upon the screen that would seem the most impossible to produce yet they are shown and because Mr. Griffith's master mind has made these wonders possible he has been placed in the list of very few who are claimed to be ... derpaid at $100,000 ...

SEPT. 16, 1915
TRENTON (N. J.) GAZETTE

Stage THEATRES Screen

Conducted by D. F. STEVENSON, Dramatic Editor

LILLIAN GISH,
(In [illegible] at the Trent theatre next week.)

SELL SEATS FOR "BIRTH OF NATION"

The general character of "The Birth of a Nation," which comes to the Trent theatre next week, is of necessity sober and sombre. It represents a critical period in the history of the states. It pictures a time that "tried men's souls" and is not to be approached in levity or with the view that there is "a laugh in every line." It is not a farce; it is not a comedy. It is simply a truthful picture of the times it portrays, and there was little of a comic nature about those times and events. Yet there is comedy in D. W. Griffith's filmed spectacle. Comedy of the most delicate sort, but comedy nevertheless.

There is the typical southern home, where all is good cheer. War's alarms have not yet disturbed its serenity. A northerner is visiting his old college chum. Youth will be served, and in their playful wrestling and chasing each other about the old mansion and grounds, we have pure comedy and the best of good feeling. No matter if within a few months they are to die on the field of battle, enemies, but clasped in each other's arms.

Then there is the young daughter of the southern home, almost a hoyden, playful as a kitten, up to all sorts of tricks with her brothers, sister and their guests. Alas, later we see her tragic end, when, to save herself from a fate worse than death, she jumps from the high cliff. Comedy that ends in tragedy, but comedy just the same.

Again, there is the scene in the "quarters," where the negroes are "showing off" for the benefit of northern visitors. There is the shuffle, buck and wing, "Mississippi Sawyer," "Turkey in the Straw," and other steps in which the darkeys delighted. Later in the play, they have their serious roles.

And so through it all there are bits of the lighter shade of life to be overcast by the sombre shade later on. And that is what makes "The Birth of a Nation" such a truthful picture of the times whose life it portrays, for tragedy follows comedy ever. Such is life.

There will be a matinee every day, excepting Monday. The sale of seats will open at the box office this morning.

LUDLOW (Vt.) TRIBUNE
SEPT. 16, 1915

[illegible] department, to be present and do the [illegible] history has [illegible] qualifications in judging work on the state of Massachusetts, and I am sure you will find him eminently fitted to do this judging."

"Birth of a Nation."

We congratulate Manager Davis on his good fortune in having secured for Vermont so great an attraction as "The Birth of a Nation." It positively speaks well for him as to his ability in this line, where in time of rigid competition a live wire is the one who takes the cream. That this production takes the cream from the entire continent, no person can deny, standing at the very head and alone. That we may be privileged to witness this great work before the amusement seekers of New York state (outside of greater New York) or before those of the larger cities of Connecticut or Massachusetts, we are indebted to Mr. Davis. See announcement on eighth page.

Miscellaneous Headings
9-16 1

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION."

"The Birth of a Nation" [illegible] Pabst is proving as strong a magnet for state fair week as it did during its long summer run in the Davidson. Few persons can witness this amazing film production without being thrilled by the representation of historic scenes, battles and the wild rides of the southern clansmen. The heart interest pictures which carry the theme of the story are wonderfully acted by players of extraordinary ability. The engagement will close [illegible] night.

TORONTO (Ont.) MAIL & EMPIRE
SEPT. 16, 1915

FINE ATTRACTION AT THE ALEXANDRA

"The Birth of a Nation" Said to be a Thrilling Spectacle.

OFFERINGS NEXT WEEK

Mme. Melba to Appear Here in Aid of the Red Cross.

Next week at the Alexandra Theatre D. W. Griffith's mighty spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," will be presented for the first time in this city. This spectacular film is the great production which is still making a record run of over 600 performances in New York City, where it created the sensation of the season. It is estimated that over two million people have seen the production since it was originally brought out in the East. It has other sensational runs in Boston, Chicago, and San Francisco to its credit. The story is one of romance and adventure. It records its facts with the rapidity of lightning, and yet never departs from the conflict are its basic theme, but a myriad conflict are its basic theme, but a myriad of details illumine the narrative. Linked with the drama is an operatic score which carries recurrent themes with every vital scene and character in the epic. An orchestra of thirty travels with the attraction to handle the musical features of the presentation.

Bill at Shea's.

From the Land of the Heather and the Highlands of Scotland come Jack Wyatt and his Scotch lads and lassies, clever entertainers, as the headline attraction of a bright bill at Shea's next week. Bertha Shalek, leading prima donna of the Aborn Century Opera Company, will sing the leading roles from "Carmen," "Aida," "La Boheme" and "Madame Butterfly." Bertha Creighton, Al Raynor and his dogs, Lew Fitzgibbons, the Six Dancing Demons, Madison, La France and Bruce, and feature films and photo-plays complete the bill.

The Hippodrome.

The spectacular singing offering, "The Girl in the Moon," will headline an excellent bill at the Hippodrome next week. It is one of the prettiest acts in vaudeville, a fairy creature suddenly appearing from out of the air and with a magic wand producing myriads of beautiful red roses. The first instalment of the thrilling photo-play, "Neal of the Navy," will make its appearance at the Hippodrome next week. Gray and Graham, offering "The Musical Bellboy"; Dave Wellington, Cook and Hennessey, Norwood and Anderson, Fred Hyde, the Two Carltons, and feature film attractions complete a splendid variety bill.

Loew's Yonge Street Theatre.

The clever comedy dramatic star, Robert E. O'Connor, and a capable company, in "The Stick Up Man," a story of the underworld, will be the feature attraction at Loew's Yonge Street Theatre the coming week. The greatest laugh quartet in vaudeville, the American Comedy Four, will be an added attraction. Nevins and Gordon, with their funny bellboy dummy, will offer a unique little playlet entitled, "The Typewriter and the Type." Others will include the Holdsworths, banjoists; the celebrated funmakers, whistlers and singers, Pealson and Goldie; the Four La Della Comiques, European pantomimic acrobats, and the first-run Photo-plays.

Melba's Red Cross Concert.

Next Monday morning seats will be on sale at the Massey Hall box office for Mme. Nellie Melba's grand Red Cross concert under the patronage of their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Connaught, on Monday, October 4th. Of all the artists now before the public there is none who has so strong a hold on the admiration and affection of music lovers as Mme. Melba. On her last appearance in Toronto she was greeted by a capacity audience. This time she intends to give the entire proceeds of the concert, which are likely to be more than $10,000, to the Canadian Red Cross authorities.

At the Gayety.

"Dinkles' Honeymoon," a successful two-act musical burlesque, will be presented by Rose Sydell's London Belles next week at the Gayety Theatre. This musical comedy is without doubt the most legitimate and laughter-creating offering submitted by any burlesque organization touring the country. Rose Sydell, the queen of burlesque, has a few surprises in store for her many admirers.

PORTLAND (Ore.) TELEGRAM
SEPT. 16, 1915

GRIFFITH STARS IN NEW FEATURE

Mae Marsh, who scored as "Florence Cameron" in "The Birth of a Nation," and Robert Harron as the younger "Stoneman," have been selected to play the star parts in a forthcoming Fine Arts Films production. Miss Marsh, who is acknowledged to be one of filmdom's best known actresses, as the result of her performances in Griffith features, and Robert Harron, also of Griffith fame, have proven that commercially they are big drawing cards. The story in which they will co-star is of a comedy-drama nature, and affords them numerous opportunities to display their acting powers. It was written for them by Granville Warwick, author of "The Lamb."

PORTLAND (Ore.) TELEGRAM
SEPT. 16, 1915

SCENE FROM "THE BIRTH OF A NATION" AT THE HEILIG

Trenton Ev Times Sep 16

MIRIAM COOPER

Who plays the Role of Margaret Cameron in the Griffith Spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," at the Trent Theatre Next Week.

ST. LOUIS (Mo.) STAR
SEPT. 16, 1915

at a special matinee on Thursday, "Searchlights" will be presented.

All matinees during Mrs. Campbell's engagement will be given at special prices, ranging from 25 cents [illegible]

FF

Great Film-Drama, Olympic.

When a producer of theatrical entertainment finds that his work makes a strong appeal to women, he instantly draws a long, free breath, for he knows he has a financial success. Strange as it may seem to those who have only heard about "The Birth of a Nation" without seeing it, David W. Griffith's remarkable spectacle of the Civil War and reconstruction days makes just the appeal that spells millions. The superficial delver into the psychology of women reasons that scenes of war and such conflicts as the Ku Klux Klans engage in do not interest the feminine mind. This psychologist, of course, spent his college days in his garret poring over books, and never went near a football field.

But the natural appeal of virility is not all there is to "The Birth of a Nation" to entice women away from their fancy work. Griffith has woven into his story of war and a conflict still sterner than war, a gripping romance. This accounts for the very noticeable fact that the matinees at the Olympic are as well attended as the night performances, and that fully 90 per cent of the patrons of these matinees are women.

CLIPPING FROM Genuine
Milwaukee Wis
9-16-1

[illegible] of beauty, grace and ability to sing and dance.

* * *

FF

"The Birth of a Nation" at the Pabst is proving as strong a magnet for state fair week as it did during its long summer run at the Davidson. Few witness

Mae Marsh.

In "The Birth of a Nation."

this production without being thrilled by the representation of historic scenes, battles and the wild rides of the southern clansmen. The heart interest pictures which carry the theme of the story are acted by players of extraordinary ability. The engagement will close Sunday night.

RE-MADE HIGHWAYS FOR TRUE EFFECT

When David W. Griffith started the outdoor staging of the Civil War and Reconstruction scenes in "The Birth of a Nation," which will be shown at the Trent Theatre next week, with daily matinees, he was confronted with seemingly insuperable difficulties. An area of private war was required about as large as the corner of Belgium occupied by the Anglo-French forces. Thousands of cavalrymen had to be shown, in an historic raid of the North Carolina clans. Their run was to be over many, many miles of typical Southern sandy roads. Though an acknowledged wizard of the films, Mr. Griffith is not a "war lord," with power to commandeer.

An era of 10 square miles was marked off for use of the horsemen. Along all the roads within this area, traffic was forbidden on "the day of days." But the roads themselves did not look southern. David Griffith handled this difficulty—with the authorities' permission—by remaking such of the highways as would come within the camera's eye. Landscape engineering changed the look of the landscape to the rounded hills, piney woods and deep gullies of old North State. The race of the northern clansmen to rescue their South Carolina brethren took place on the appointed day, without an accident or a flaw. After it was over, Mr. Griffith's men scraped the sand off the macadam roads, took down the signs, and life in the sleepy countryside resumed its normal course. It cost about $25,000 to do the trick.

"NATION" SEAT SALE

The sale of seats for the big spectacle, "The Birth of a N[illegible] was opened at the Trent Theat[illegible] morning. It is announced th[illegible] ders and reservations may be [illegible] at the box office now for the [illegible] week's engagement, which is [illegible] Monday. There will be a [illegible] every day excepting Monday.

MILWAUKEE (Wis.) NEWS
SEPT. 17, 1915

LAST "BIRTH OF NATION" PERF[illegible]

Sherman's March to the

"The Birth of a Nation" en[illegible] turn engagement at the Pab[illegible] next Sunday, the usual after[illegible] evening performances being g[illegible] day for the remainder of the [illegible] wonderful drama has proven [illegible] attractive state fair week offe[illegible] many out-of-town visitors w[illegible] not able to come to Milwauke[illegible] its summer run have availe[illegible] selves of the present opport[illegible] see it. The wonderful musical [illegible] rendered by an orchestra of f[illegible] proven a feature of more than [illegible] interest.

CHESTER (N. H.) MIRROR
SEPT. 17, 1915
521 showing in Boston.

Majestic Theatre.

Tomorrow afternoon marks the 289th performance of D. W. Griffith's mighty spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation" in Boston, by far the greatest number of consecutive performances for any theatrical attraction in the history of the Boston stage. After twenty weeks of capacity business at the Tremont theatre the announcement that the engagement would end a week ago occasioned such an overwhelming demand from theatregoers all over New England that the engagement be extended, that arrangements were made to transfer the picture to the Majestic theatre and during the past two weeks crowded houses attested to the public's appreciation of this continuation.

There is little to be said of the picture itself that has not already been said many times. In rapid sequence, one scene follows another, scenes in the North and South before the civil war, during it and immediately following it. The scene of Lincoln's assassination and the dark days of the reconstruction period in the South during the regime of the carpet-baggers and the various thrilling battle scenes presented on a most stupendous scale are miracles of photography and necessitated the use of large areas in the South and the employment of 18,000 persons and 3,000 horses. The scenes of Sherman's march to the sea, the wild ride of the Ku-Klux Klan, and the destruction of whole towns occasion hearty outbursts of enthusiasm at every performance. A wonderful picture in every respect is the unanimous opinion of all those who have seen it.

LONG BRANCH (N. J.) RECORD
SEPT. 17, 1915

AT SAVOY.

Tomorrow's presentation of "The Birth of a Nation" at the Savoy theatre, will positively be the last opportunity residents of Asbury Park, Long Branch and other Jersey coast resorts will have to witness the production without journeying to New York or Philadelphia. It will not be exhibited this winter except in the larger cities. The spectacle has broken so many records that it is hard to keep track of them. For the length of its run and the total attendance it holds the season's record in New York, Boston, Chicago, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Atlantic City, Brighton Beach and Seattle, Wash. These records are being added to in numerous other cities where the big spectacle is now piling up unprecedented to substantiate its marvelous popularity

HARTFORD (Conn.) TIMES
SEPT. 17, 1915
391

CITY EDITION.

Colored Clergyman Doesn't Want "Birth of a Nation" Movie Shown in Hartford.

Rev. Walter Gay Tells Mayor Lawler Its Production Would Tend to Incite Race Hatred—His Honor Reserves Decision in Matter.

The Rev. Walter Gay of No. 55½ Garden street called upon Mayor Lawler at City Hall to-day and protested against the portrayal of the moving picture spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," announced to be shown at a local theater at an early date. Mr. Gay said he was an officer of an organization of colored people opposed to the presentation of the pictures in this city because of incidents illustrated which were likely to promote the degradation of colored people and tend to incite race hatred.

Mayor Lawler told Mr. Gay he knew little or nothing of the character of the production other than comment he had seen in the newspapers. He said he had talked informally with the theater owner about the forthcoming production and probably would talk further with him.

There has been opposition to the showing of the films in other cities, but it has been intimated that the filing of protests against forthcoming appearances in certain cities merely redounded to the prosperity of the box office. The scenes depicted in the films are from the Rev. Thomas Dixon's play, "The Clansman."

The presentation of the pictures in Philadelphia, a few days ago, precipitated a riot, and police were called to protect the film and the men producing it.

When "The Clansman" was billed for production as a play in a local theater, about seven years ago, colored people of Hartford registered vigorous protest with Judge William F. Henney, who was then mayor. Mayor Henney went to New York to see the play prior to the date set for its presentation here, and upon his return issued the desired li-

TORONTO (Ont.) NEWS
SEPT. 17, 1915

77

FEDERAL SOLDIERS ON MARCH IN THE AMERICAN CIVIL WAR

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION."
Scene from a remarkable moving picture entertainment coming next week to the Royal Alexandra Theatre.

Leader
SEPT. 17, 1915

THE BIRTH OF A NATION DRAWS GREAT CROWDS

Over 2,000 Offers for Playing Rights of Photoplay Refused

Never in the history of the theater has there been so widespread a demand for a play as there is for D. W. Griffith's magnificent spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," which is now playing a limited engagement at the Nixon theater in Pittsburgh. Over two thousand offers have been received for the playing rights of this photo drama, but all of them have been refused. As a result the only opportunity to see "The Birth of a Nation" within a radius of 100 miles of Pittsburgh will be during its present engagement at the Nixon theater. Over 2,000,000 people have seen this eighth wonder of the world. There have been over 500 performances at the Liberty theater, New York; 300 at the Tremont theater, Boston, and over 350 performances at the Illinois theater, Chicago, and it is still showing in those cities. Produced at a cost of $500,000 in a period of eight months; 18,000 people and 3,000 horses were used. There is a symphony orchestra of thirty. Few people realize that nearly 100 people are required to properly present to the public this gigantic spectacle. Musicians, expert operators and electricians, men to handle mechanical effects and men in other departments make up this roster which is as large as that of a large musical comedy company. It is the massiveness in both the subject and the manner of presentation of "The Birth of a Nation" that has made the public not only willing but eager to pay as high as $2 to witness the production. Not even Nero ever gazed upon so magnificent spectacle. The prices for this engagement for evenings and Saturday matinees are $1 and $2 for the lower floor; $1 and $1.50 for the balcony; 25 and 50 cents for the second balcony. There are matinees every day except Sunday for which the prices are lower floor and balcony 50 cents and $1; second balcony, 25 and 50 cents. Mail orders containing remittances will receive prompt attention. Those who wish to see "The Birth of a Nation" in Pittsburgh can avail themselves of the extremely low excursion rates which all the railroads are now offering on account of the Pittsburgh Exposition.

PORTLAND (Ore.) JOURNAL
SEPT. 17, 1915

Local Lad Seen in "Birth of a Nation"

William Holt, Aged 11, Takes Part in Picturing Street Scene at Hollywood, California.

Few people who have seen the famous film, "Birth of a Nation," know that among the crowds in some of the street scenes is a Portland boy. The youngster is William Holt, the 11-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Holt, of the Cumberland apartments.

William Holt was on a visit with his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. William Bezzenberg, at Hollywood, Cal., at the time the films were made. The Bezzenbergs live but a few squares from the big film making establishment of D. W. Griffith and the latter soon began to regard the boy as a mascot. This is how he happens to appear in the "Birth of a Nation."

"William used to play around the place and Mr. Griffith took a fancy to him," explained Mr. Holt this morning, "and so he was engaged to take part in the production. And he earned a little money, too, for Griffith paid him $1 for each appearance."

J. W. Bretelson, business manager of the attraction, says that young Holt could have continued as a movie star for Griffith offered him $5 a day to swim in shipwreck scenes. The boy is a good swimmer, but he declined, thinking the risk too great.

The little girl who figures as Flora Cameron in the early part of the film is William's playmate. May Marsh takes the part of Flora Cameron later

LACONIA (N. H.) DEMOCRAT
SEPT. 17, 1915
444

F F

COLONIAL THEATRE

"The Birth of a Nation."

If you have not seen "The Birth of a Nation" you have missed the most astonishing achievement in dramatic portraiture introduced to the American stage. Imagine 10,000 people visualizing the story of intense human interest and dramatic purposes and then add 3,000 horses ridden by some of the most reckless and daring riders in the world, dashing in great cavalcades over picturesque roads and through war-strewn valleys and plains, and you can begin to form a vague idea of the scale upon which the narrative is unfolded.

The plot of the drama deals with the relationship of the slavery question to the development of America and its final solution reveals how out of the quarrel of disputing states there arose the mightiest nation in the world.

With history as its background reared a plot of fundamental dramatic appeal and evolved a story of such prodigal details that its bigness alone astounds you. It is the work of a master dramatist who has a story to tell and sets about creating an epoch with its results. He dramatizes the moving force of vast numbers of people and as his means of expression is the camera of the highly developed motion picture art he is not confined by any of the narrow limitations which have heretofore hindered stage spectacles.

Given his story and the people, Griffith has secured startling results. His mammoth canvas often reveals battlefields covering an area of a dozen square miles, and by following historical details he reproduces the stern battle effects as they actually took place half a century ago.

In all the expanse of scene and action he never loses sight of his basic story and the smallest detail becomes as astonishing a part of the narrative as the largest incident in it. The completeness and the wonder of the work make it unusual.

The premier production of "The Birth of a Nation" at the Colonial theatre will take place on next Monday evening, Sept. 20th, and will continue three days. You should see it even at the expense of other pleasures. This is positively the same production that has played the Tremont theatre, Boston, 26 weeks.

PLYMOUTH (Mass.) NEWS
SEPT. 17, 1915

FF

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION."

At first sight it seems incredible that the production, "The Birth of a Nation" now being presented at the Old Colony Theatre, should have taken such a wonderful hold on the public. No play of any description has visited Plymouth in years, if ever before, that has drawn from the outset such vast concourses of people, nor has there ever been such widespread comment. The latter fact is one reason for the immense patronage, for there is scarcely a human being old enough to know anything, but has heard of "The Birth of a Nation," and has been curious to witness it. But after viewing the performance, quite a few reasons are apparent for its popularity. In the first place it is the acme of screen spectacle up to the present time. The groupings of the various scenes, the training of the participants and the realism of the episodes, are marvelous examples of stage management, while the clearness and lack of flickering, almost makes the spectator forget that he is not living, throbbing life that is being viewed.

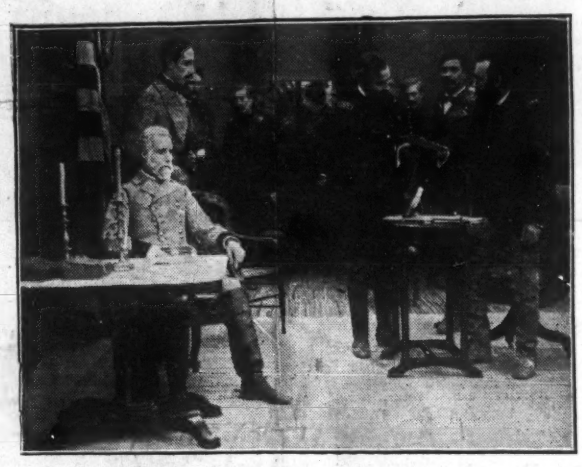
The scenes portraying the assassination of Lincoln are, in many respects, the most wonderful, for all the actors in their facial expressions and movements play a congruous part. In New York the spectacle created a sensation just as it has in Boston, not only from the interesting nature of the subject, but the manner in which it is presented.

Various novelties are introduced in the stage in conjunction with the production, and a Symphony Orchestra of twenty men offer a musical backing for the masterpiece that makes it truly effective.

A small army of effect-workers are employed on the stage, under the direction of one man who by a system of red and green lights signals the different men when to start and just when to stop any given effect. That is why the patrons will marvel at the wonderful synchronism of effects as the varying scenes are flashed before them. No big stage production that has ever appeared at any local theatre in times past has ben given the minute attention to every little detail that will be exercised in this marvelous screen triumph.

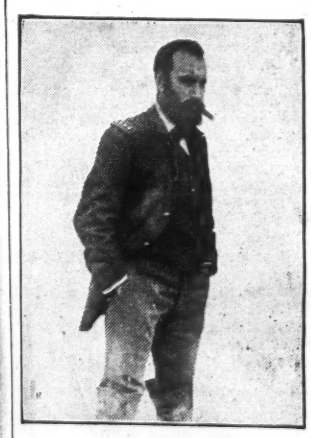
The Birth of a Nation is the greatest sensational success in stage annals of the world. For the first time in film spectacles on sees in a ingle materpiece 5000 scenes of gigantic magnitude; 18,000 characters; 3000 horses all in a production which cost a little over $500,000 to produce.

Cities were built up and then destroyed by fire. The biggest battle of the Civil War is re-enacted. Ford's Theatre, Washington, is reproduced to the smallest detail of the Lincoln tragedy. A series of wild Ku Klux rides are shown that commandeered a county for a day and cast $10,000. Womens dresses used 12,000 yards and Ku Klux costumes 25,000 yards of cloth. Wonderful artillery duels in which real shel's, costing $80 apiece, were used; miles of trenches; thousands of fighters show "War as it realy is." Night photography of battle scenes, invented and perfected at a cost of $5000 is shown. A musical score for an enlarged orchestra; perfectly synchronized to the thousands of distinct and individual scenes, perfect to the instant adds still more to the production, making altogether the most stupendous dramaic and spectacular enterprise ever conceived by the brain of man. When "The Birth of a Nation" comes to the Old Colony Theatre for its engagement of three days, every man, woman and child should be permitted to view this phenomoneal triumph which may never be duplicated, and certainly will not for a number of



GEN. LEE SURRENDER TO GEN. GRANT AT APPOMATTOX IN "THE BIRTH OF A NATION"

HOWARD GAYE
AS GEN. ROBT. E. LEE, IN
"THE BIRTH OF A NATION"



DONALD CRISP
AS GEN. U. S. GRANT IN
"THE BIRTH OF A NATION"

HENRY WALTHALL
As Ben Cameron, "The Little Colonel," in the Motion Picture Production "The Birth of a Nation," at the Trent Theatre Next Week.

FORD'S THEATRE IS TRULY REPRODUCED

A kind of artistic achievement easy for the film, but impossible for the "indoor drama" is illustrated by the Ford's Theatre scene in "The Birth of a Nation," at the Trent Theatre next week. The old-fashioned drama has long attempted to represent a stage within a stage, and some such representations have been rather realistic. But in the film scene showing the assassination of President Lincoln, one sees not only the complete stage of Ford's Theatre in April, 1865, but also the auditorium of the theatre, the audience and the historical figures in the boxes.

Laura Keene is playing "Our American Cousin," assisted by E. A. Sothern in the role of Lord Dundreary. They are startled out of their mimic parts by the shot that Wilkes Booth fired. The audience has risen to its feet as the shot is heard and cranes forward in a semi-panic to gaze at the great statesman whose head has fallen back in the stage box and at the assassin, Booth, who is leaping from the box to the stage and whose spur catches in the box draperies as he jumps, causing him to break his leg. This sort of historical realism has never been achieved before. It is part of what is meant by the so-called "new art" for which D. W. Griffith is responsible.

Spectators gaze at the scene with fascinated horror. It is too terrible, too awesome for applause, yet not a spectator but feels that in this impressive rendition Mr. Griffith has surpassed the greatest previous art achievements of the film drama.

CHICAGO (Ill.) POST
SEPT. 18, 1915

FF

MAE MARSH.
"Birth of a Nation" star who ... many new followers by her clever ... in the Griffith masterpiece now ... screen at the Colonial.

NEW YORK DRAMATIC NEWS
SEP 8 1915

Sang

THINGS BEGIN TO MOVE IN ST. LOUIS.

FF

(Special to The Dramatic News.)

St. Louis.—The Birth of a Nation continues at the Olympic until the regular bookings command the time, while the Shubert reopened on Sunday (Sept. 12) with Joseph Santley in All Over Town. Melville Stoltz manages the house and says we are to have all the high-class Shubert shows.

The Shenandoah is open for the winter season and the plan to alternate its productions with those at the Park Theatre will be carried out. Tom Conkey, remembered with Christie MacDonald, Mabel Wilber and Louise Allen head the organization.

CHICAGO (Ill.) JOURNAL
SEPT. 18, 1915

... and John Milcrn leading ... most formidable of musical comedy casts.

"The Birth of a Nation"

FF

"The Birth of a Nation," greatest of the film spectacles, goes into its sixteenth Chicago week at the Colonial. The first part shows Sherman's march to the sea, the battle of Petersburg, Lee's surrender, the assassination of Lincoln and other wartime scenes on an amazing scale of vastness and vividness. Then follows a pictorial narrative of the reconstruction period with its carpet-baggers and Ku-Klux-Klan. Through it all runs the romance of a soldier of the south and a woman of the north. Music points and heightens all the scenes.

RIDE OF THE KLANSMEN in "The Birth of a Nation" at the Colonial Theatre all next week.

TRENTON (N. J.) TIMES
SEPT. 18, 1915

PROTEST AGAINST PICTURE NOT FILED

Representatives of the negro race who proposed filing a protest against the production of "The Birth of a Nation," in this city, reached the City Hall yesterday after the Commission had adjourned.

The committee took the subject up with Mayor Donnelly, who referred the representatives to Director of Public Safety LaBarre. Mr. LaBarre is ill and was not at the Municipal Building either yesterday or today.

It is understood, however, that the question will be taken up with the Commissioners Monday, the date of the first presentation of the picture here.

A THRILLING SCENE IN "BIRTH OF A NATION"

Spectacular Production Will Come To Colonial Next Week

When David W. Griffith started the outdoor staging of the Civil war and reconstruction scenes in "The Birth of a Nation," which will be shown at the Colonial theatre all next week, he was confronted with seemingly insuperable difficulties. An area of private war was required about as large as the corner of Belgium occupied by the Anglo-French forces. Thousands of cavalrymen had to be shown, in an historic raid of the North Carolina clans. Their run was to be over many, many miles of typical Southern sandy roads. Though an acknowledged wizard of the films, Mr. Griffith is not a "war lord," with power to commandeer.

In this emergency, the county authorities of "The Birth of a Nation," producing locale were applied to. They finally consented to mark off an area of ten square miles for the use of the horsemen. Along all the roads within this area, the county commissioners posted notices forbidding all traffic on "the day of days." Pedestrains were also warned off. But the roads themselves did not look southern. David Griffith handled this difficulty—with the authorities' permission—by remaking such of the highways as would come within the camera's eye. Many tons of sand and gravel were spread by gangs of his workmen. Landscape engineering changed the look of the landscape to the rounded hills, piney woods and deep gullies of Old North State. The race of the northern clansmen to rescue their South Carolina brethren took place on the appointed day, without an accident or a flaw. After it was over, Mr. Griffith's men scraped the sand off the macadam roads, took down the signs and life in the sleepy countryside resumed its normal course. It cost about $25,000 to do the trick—the producer thinks it was worth all it cost, particularly after hearing the enthusiastic comments of "The Birth of a Nation" patrons on his work.

OTTAWA (Can.) CITIZEN
SEPT. 18, 1915

BIRTH OF A NATION

While the Central Canada exhibition directors are entitled to and will receive the appreciation and gratitude of the people of Ottawa for their splendid and successful efforts in connection with this year's fair, they cannot be congratulated on their selection of a chief spectacular attraction in the film reproduction of The Birth of a Nation.

The moving picture feature of the fair was a scenario from Thomas Dixon's work, The Clansman, and not only is this inaccurate from an historical standpoint, as witness its absurd delineation of the purpose and accomplishments of the notorious Ku Klux Klan, suppressed by the American government for its infamies, but the whole work is a deliberate and sustained effort to inflame race prejudice against the unfortunate negro in the United States. The original play aroused the opposition of the right thinking element everywhere and in many cities the production was prohibited by the authorities. Unfortunately, however, it succeeded in its object to a more or less degree and the result has been unhappily demonstrated in several recent manifestations of hatred against an ordinarily peaceable and decent element in many communities.

The Central Canada directors seem to have displayed poor judgment in engaging the film production of this play. While it deals with conditions happily unknown in Canada, its tendency even in this country is to excite prejudice against, if not hatred of the negro race. The production of The Birth of a Nation under private auspices for profit would be difficult to defend; but, in the opinion of many right thinking people, its production under civic auspices is quite [illegible]

GRIFFITH GETTING READY MORE BIG PICTURES

"Birth of Nation" Established, He Turns Attention to New Projects.

D. W. Griffith's immediate plans for the season center largely about "The Birth of a Nation." This wonderful spectacle is now established for an indefinite run at the Liberty Theatre, where it has been for twenty-nine weeks. This is the record of the house since it was built. The old record was held by Christie MacDonald in "The Spring Maid," which ran for twenty-eight weeks at the Liberty. The latter production averaged eight performances weekly by "The Birth of a Nation." In numerical performance this great spectacle has outstripped by hundreds anything ever seen in a Forty-second street playhouse and is now on even terms with all the great runs.

In actual box office figures it is apparent that even this early in its career "The Birth of a Nation" has played to more people in New York City than any theatrical attraction which ever held the local boards since the theatre became an institution in the city. This remarkable record becomes all the more astonishing when you understano that "The Birth of a Nation" is a new form of dramatic expression and was the pioneer attraction to be offered at $2 prices for a performance that heretofore had been classed as motion picture entertainment. This success heralds the coming of a new force into the theatre world.

While "The Birth of a Nation" has been turning the history of New York's stage topsy turvey it has not been idle in other centers. In Boston it ran from April until September to a grand total of 284 performances at the Tremont Theatre, which is the longest single run in one Boston theatre in the history of that town. The average business was about $11,000 a week, which in these days is counted mighty big receipts for an attraction at the heighth of the season.

About the same time another production was installed in Chicago, where the picture has turned toward its three hundredth performance and is still running. There are other notable runs underway in Philadelphia, Pittsburg, St. Louis, Los Angeles and San Francisco, which have demonstrated the marvelous drawing powers of this production.

With these companies established Mr. Griffith, through his New York representatives, is laying out an extensive campaign for the country. By the first of October there will be not less than eight big companies playing "The Birth of a Nation" all over the country east of the Mississippi river.

It is no easy task to equip a tour for "The Birth of a Nation." The organization carried two baggage cars and thirty-four people, including mechanical experts who practically make over the theatres in which the big spectacle is presented. In addition the full orchestra is carried and the very latest expert devices for the proper presentation of Griffith's story are installed in the theatres.

For the past several months Mr. Griffith has supervised the presentation of several of the big pictures which are to be part of the varied productions of the Triangle Film Corp.

In addition to this work Griffith has underway two great pictures which he will have in readiness to follow "The Birth of a Nation" when the tours of this attraction are under way and progressing happily.

Griffith is always secretive about his work until it is completed, but those who have seen a few snatches of the initial runs of his next big picture say it will be as striking a departure and as prolific a subject as that covered in his present success.

PHILADELPHIA, (Pa.) TELEGRAPH
Date .....
OCT 18 1915

Bright eyes and twinkling toes still look best from the front row this on the screen, and no way has yet been found to match the magic of the spoken word.

IN a symbolic sense, the most prominent figure in Part I, of "The Birth of a Nation," now crowding the Forrest, is that of Abraham Lincoln, the martyred President, overshadowing Austin Stoneman, Abolitionist and plotter. And it is a surprisingly faithful portrait of the "rail-splitter" that one sees on the screen. The homely, but kindly, features are there and the tall, stooping form so familiar to readers of fifty years ago and since.

History has been drawn upon for incident, and in the photoplay Lincoln is seen in characteristic poses and engaged in kindly deeds. Here he is signing a pardon for a young Southern soldier condemned as a guerilla spy, and making glad the heart of an aged mother who has not pleaded in vain for the life of her boy; and again he is defending his policy as to the conquered South, a policy too humane for the revengeful Stoneman. Last of all he is seen stricken to death at the moment of his great triumph, his noble head laid low by the bullet of the assassin.

Not a little of the successful portrayal of the part of the President by Joseph Henabery is due to the apparent reverence with which the actor approached his work. Lincoln was a kindly man, far from morose, but that part of his career with which the photoplay deals was saddened by the war and its awful sacrifices.

Fine as is the actor's makeup, more wonderful is the facial expression that indicates so surely what is going on in the mind of the great liberator.

PITTSBURG (Pa.) CHRONICLE
SEPT. 18, 1915

Nixon—"The Birth of a Nation."

D. W. Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation" is in the full swing of a successful run at the Nixon Theater. This spectacle is an epitome of scenes, incidents, characters, passions and emotions of the whole great period from 1861 to 1871—the period of the Civil War and Reconstruction. The musical accompaniment adds to the thrill of the war scenes and intensifies the romance of the love episodes. The orchestra plays southern and old-time airs for the softer scenes, while the big battle views are given to the clash and blare of martial music.

MILWAUKEE (Wis.) LEADER
SEPT. 18, 1915

BUTTERFLY.

"The Rajah's Sacrifice," a wild animal feature with Capt. Jack Donavita and animals, is the novel headline Sunday attraction in the Butterfly. Other features include Vivian Rich in "The Little Lady Next Door." A detective drama, "The Doll House Mystery" and a humorous comic comedy, featuring Fay Tincher, complete the bill.

Monday and Tuesday, Lottie Pickford and Irving Cummings headline in the latest chapter of "The Diamond From the Sky," entitled "The Lion's Bride." Bert Delaney and Grace DeCarl will appear in "The Dead Man's Keys." A new comedy cartoon, "Keeping up with the Jones's" and "Every Heart" with Nora Durbar and Webster Campbell and a comedy featuring Harry Keenan and Leona Hut[illegible] ton, "Never [illegible] the [illegible]

Wednesday and Thursday Harold Lockwood and May Allison headline in a mutual masterpiece, "House of a Thousand Scandals."

PABST.

"The Birth of a Nation," the film spectacle of the civil war, which has delighted State Fair audiences this week in the Pabst, will end its engagement with Sunday afternoon and night performances.

This motion picture is rich in its representation of famous historical events. The battles of the civil war are presented on the screen almost as they were fought. The assassination of President Lincoln and many other Civil war events, as well as things that happened in the dark days of the reconstruction, are shown with remarkable fidelity.

"The Birth of a Nation" is a motion picture which no one can afford to miss. It is the most stupendous theatrical production ever made.

PITTSBURG (Pa.) CHRONICLE
SEPT. 18, 1915

LILLIAN GISH IN "THE BIRTH OF A NATIO... ◇ NIXON ◇

TORONTO (Ont.) MAIL & EMPIRE
SEPT. 18, 1915

...ATRES.

...d W. Griffith's epoch-making spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," will be seen at the Alexandra Theatre next week, with a matinee every day. This work, partly from the nature of the new art, partly from the opposition aroused, has excited keen curiosity, and the extraordinary advance sale indicates that the Alexandra will not prove nearly large enough to accommodate the throngs. "The Birth of a Nation" tells by film and music a story of war, romance and adventure. It records its facts with the rapidity of lightning and yet never departs from the fundamentals of true drama. The love interest of the play is based on the friendships between the Camerons of South Carolina and the Stonemans of Pennsylvania, two families involved in the

MIRIAM COOPER,
as Margaret Cameron, in "The Birth of a Nation" at the Alexandra Theatre next week.

struggle. Ben Cameron, the gallant clansman of the Dixon stories, appears again in the role of the romantic hero; the piquant Northern girl, Elsie Stoneman, as the heroine. In a presentation lasting 2 hours and 45 minutes, the production epitomizes the life of a nation, and carries the story from the introduction of African slavery right down through the Civil War and Reconstruction days to the final real union of the North and South. Among the leading players in what was probably the largest theatrical cast ever assembled may be mentioned Joseph Henabery as President Lincoln; Donald Crisp and Howard Gay as Generals Grant and Lee; Mae Marsh as Flora Cameron; Henry Walthall, Lillian Gish, Elmer Clifton, Miriam Cooper as the quartette of lovers; Ralph Lewis as Congressman Stoneman; Spottiswoode Aiken and Josephine Crowell as the elder Camerons, and Walter Seigmann as Lynch.

OTTAWA (Can.) CITIZEN
SEPT. 18, 1915

BIRTH OF A NATION

While the Central Canada... exhibitio... directors are entitled to and will receive th... appreciation and gratitude of the people ... Ottawa for their splendid and successf... efforts in connection with this year's fair, th... cannot be congratulated on their selection o... chief spectacular attraction in the film ... production of The Birth of a Nation.

The moving picture feature of the ... was a scenario from Thomas Dixon's w... The Clansman, and not only is this inaccu... from an historical standpoint, as witnes... absurd delineation of the purpose and ... complishments of the notorious Ku ... Klan, suppressed by the American go... ment for its infamies, but the whole wo... a deliberate and sustained effort to in... race prejudice against the unfortunate ... in the United States. The original play ... ed the opposition of the right thinkin... ment everywhere and in many cities th... duction was prohibited by the autho... Unfortunately, however, it succeeded ... object to a more or less degree and ... sult has been unhappily demonstrated ... eral recent manifestations of hatred ... an ordinarily peaceable and decent ... in many communities.

The Central Canada directors ... have displayed poor judgment in ... the film production of this play. ... deals with conditions happily unk... Canada, its tendency even in this co... to excite prejudice against, if not h... the negro race. The production of T... of a Nation under private auspices ... would be difficult to defend; but, ... opinion of many right thinking p... production under civic auspices is ... defensible.

CLIPPING FROM Ottawa Can.
Date Sept 18 1915

COLONIAL. FF

With a bigger advance sale than has been reported at any time since the Griffith spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," opened in Chicago, the show opens its sixteenth week here. The line in front of the Colonial wilted a little early last week, but with the return of show weather the sold-out sign is out again and often.

CONNELLSVILLE (Pa.) COURIER
SEPT. 18, 1915

'THE BIRTH OF A NATION' DRAWS GREAT CROWDS

Over 2,000 Offers for Playing Rights of Photoplay Refused

Never in the history of the theater has there been so widespread a demand for a play as there is for D. W. Griffith's magnificent spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," which is now playing a limited engagement at the Nixon theater in Pittsburgh. Over two thousand offers have been received for the playing rights of this photo drama, but all of them have been refused. As a result the only opportunity to see "The Birth of a Nation" within a radius of 100 miles of Pittsburgh will be during its present engagement at the Nixon theater. Over 2,000,000 people have seen this eighth wonder of the world. There have been over 500 performances at the Liberty theater, New York; 300 at the Tremont theater, Boston, and over 350 performances at the Illinois theater, Chicago, and it is still showing in those cities. Produced at a cost of $500,000 in a period of eight months; 18,000 people and 3,000 horses were used. There is a symphony orchestra of thirty. Few people realize that nearly 100 people are required to properly present to the public this gigantic spectacle. Musicians, expert operators and electricians, men to handle mechanical effects and men in other departments make up this roster which is as large as that of a large musical comedy company. It is the massiveness in both the subject and the manner of presentation of "The Birth of a Nation" that has made the public not only willing but eager to pay as high as $2 to witness the production. Not even Nero ever gazed upon so magnificent spectacle. The prices for this engagement for evenings and Saturday matinees are $1 and $2 for the lower floor; $1 and $1.50 for the balcony; 25 and 50 cents for the second balcony. There are matinees every day except Sunday for which the prices are lower floor and balcony 50 cents and $1; second balcony, 25 and 50 cents. Mail orders containing remittances will receive prompt attention. Those who wish to see "The Birth of a Nation" in Pittsburgh can avail themselves of the extremely low excursion rates which all the railroads are now offering on account of the Pittsburgh Exposition.

CLIPPING FROM San Francisco Call
Date 9-18-15

TORONTO (Ont.) MAIL & EMPIRE
SEPT. 18, 1915

Are Still Fighting

The colored citizens of Toronto have not given up their fight to stop the showing in a Toronto theatre of "The Birth of a Nation," the film play that has been charged with blackening the reputation of the negro race. Yesterday a deputation of colored men called upon Inspector Gus Newman at the Parliament Buildings and asked his co-operation in having the film barred. They told him of a number of incidents in the play that they claimed were immoral and calculated to picture colored people as degenerates. Inspector Newman was unable to give them much encouragement, however, informing them that if the film bore the proper certificate of the board of censors he would be unable to interfere.

Hon. T. W. McGarry, the court of last appeal, has been away from town all week, and is not expected back until early next week. If he returns in time it is likely the matter will be laid before him.

Griffith Production Continues to Draw Large Audience at Savoy; Theda Bara at the Tivoli

FF

THERE appears to be no limit to the capacity of "The Birth of a Nation" to attract the public to this stupendous picture spectacle adaptation by D. W. Griffith of "The Clansman," by Thomas Dixon Jr. It remains at the Savoy, steadily retaining its popularity and giving no indication that it will ever relax its grip on the public, thousands of which return to witness its gigantic scenes over and over again.

Tomorrow marks the beginning of the twenty-first week of the film story in San Francisco—a record which no other production either of legitimate drama or motion picture play has even distantly approached in the history of the theater in the West.

The work of the three beautiful actresses engaged in the pictured presentation is surprising. Lillian Gish, Mae Marsh, and Miriam Cooper stand out as photo-dramatic stars of the very first magnitude, and the romance which runs through the thrilling and the gigantic spectacles of battles and midnight marches, infuses that note of human interest essential to the permanent success of any work for the theater.

Added to the attraction of the picture are the orchestral selections and the plantation singing, which lend reality to the production.

TORONTO (Ont.) WORLD
SEPT. 18, 1915

THEATRES

BIRTH OF A NATION.

David W. Griffith's epoch-mak... spectacle, "The Birth of a Nati... following its record-breaking runs ... New York, Chicago, Boston, San Fr... cisco and Los Angeles, will be see... one of its original productions at ... Alexandra next week, with a mat... every day. This work, partly f... the nature of the new art, partly fr... the opposition aroused, has exci... keener curiosity than any other of... ing of the current season, and the ... traordinary advance sale indic... that the Alexandra will not pr... nearly large enough to accom... the larger throngs.

ST. LOUIS (Mo.) TIMES
SEPT. 18, 1915
806

"Birth of a Nation" Starts on Its Fourth Big Week

Lillian Gish, Star of the Griffith Masterpiece.

The rapid strides of the motion picture industry in comparison with the stage where the spoken drama flourishes is astonishing when figures are studied. Take the case of "The Birth of a Nation," which enters upon its fourth week at the Olympic Theater tomorrow. The gross receipts of the half-score companies now presenting the spectacle in the various large amusement centers of America are in the neighborhood of a million dollars every 15 weeks. It is estimated, on the showing of the past nine months, that "The Birth of a Nation" will net for its producers a round $10,000,000 before it is laid aside. In 300 years the most popular play ever written in the English language, "The Merchant of Venice," has drawn into the box office but $15,000,000, from which the clear profits can scarcely exceed $15,000,000.

Then, too, the stage of the spoken drama has flourished in America about 100 years without producing a single director who draws a salary of $100,000 annually. The motion picture industry in only about 10 years has produced one such prodigy, D. W. Griffith, who staged "The Birth of a Nation." Mr. Griffith is one of the very few men in any line of business in America who pays an income tax on such an enormous salary.

CLIPPING FROM News
Date Providence R.I.
9-18-15

Prov. Opera House

FF

"The Birth of a Nation," D. W. Griffith's sensational photo play will be shown at the Opera House all of this week, Colonel Wendelschafer having made arrangements for another week's engagement here. This photo play was shown here last month and drew capacity audiences at every performance. The demand for seats at the third week's engagement was so large that Colonel Wendelschaefer set out to secure another engagement and succeeded. All the features of the last engagement will be seen with the photo play this week. The special orchestra of 25 pieces, and courtesy girls and the hundred men behind the scenes necessary to make the suitable noises as the pictures are thrown on the screen will be here again. Two performances will be given daily, opening Monday afternoon.

"The Birth of a Nation," a Civil War drama is founded on "The Clansman" by Thomas Dixon. In is said to employ more attendants and workers before and behind the curtain than 75 per cent of the legitimate attractions. It requires 25 men behind the scenes to produce the roars of battle, the pounding of horse's hoofs and other appropriate noises as the pictures are flashed on the screen. Ten more men are kept busy as clearers. The orchestra, which plays specially written music for the pictures, is larger than that carried by some of the big musical shows. Fifteen musicians were brought here from Boston because they were familiar with the music, and 10 local men were added to these.

Mr. Griffith's theme is the development of the nation and its relationship to the part the slavery problem played in bringing about Daniel Webster's prophecy, 'one and indivisible.' The action begins with the introduction of slavery into the colonies. Then comes the Abolition movement, and the stirring times leading up to the secession of the Southern states. The audience is carried through the four years of strife to the death of President Lincoln in Ford's theatre. The eight years of reconstruction form the final episodes in a drama of history, romance and emotion. Its termination is an allegorical picture of the coming permanent peace and the settlement of all local differences.

To get these varied incidents into his drama the producer used 18,000 people and 2000 horses.

NEG PROTEST S FILM PLAY

City Director of c Safety Suppresses Birth of Nation"

EATS OF VIOLENCE LEAD HIM TO ACT

Detectives Report That Racial Trouble Was Likely to Result

From Public Ledger Bureau

ATLANTIC CITY, Aug. 13.—Fearing race violence on the Boardwalk, William H. Bartlett, Director of Public Safety, late today issued an order forbidding the presentation of the "Birth of a Nation," a film drama, in Atlantic City.

The production, which has been shown for several weeks at the New Nixon, a Boardwalk playhouse owned and conducted by Philadelphians, deals with reconstruction times in the South and the Ku Klux Klan.

Acting under instructions from the City Commission, which yesterday heard burning protests from more than 100 negro churchmen, who declared the play incited race hatred, Director Bartlett sent to the Nixon Theatre management tonight notice of his intention to suppress the film drama after Sunday night next by police measures if necessary.

Director Bartlett's summary action, regardless of an informal opinion from City Solicitor Schimpf that he is without power to act, followed a conference with Chief of Police Woodruff. Woodruff early today sent plain-clothes men through the black belt of the city, where nearly 18,000 negroes have their homes, to sound sentiment and ascertain whether it is so bitter as colored pastors and laymen represented to the City Commission yesterday.

Detectives Hear Threats

Woodruff's men reported that they found sections of the back town in a ferment, with men, women and children congregating in the streets to talk about the film and the attack upon their race they claim it carries. Threats of violence were made freely in the saloons patronized by colored men. The detectives heard proposals to attack the Boardwalk playhouse.

Woodruff's reports reached Director Bartlett at 6 o'clock this evening and his order of suppression was drawn and signed 20 minutes later.

Earlier in the day Bartlett intimated the belief that agitators were seeking to make political capital out of the matter, and endeavoring to align the colored vote against him unless he took action without precedent in the city.

Reports of Woodruff's men changed the whole phase of the situation for him. "This matter is evidently serious," the Director said. "Whether police action is justified under a strict interpretation of law or not, we are going to do our utmost to suppress this cause of contention. We cannot afford to have violence in Atlantic City if it is possible to avert it, and that is the attitude we shall pursue."

There is much division of opinion among visitors here as to the film. Many believe that it teaches a lesson and should be shown as widely as possible. Others believe just as strongly that there is no reason for recalling the Rebellion in the Southland and arousing race prejudice.

Support Director's Action

One of the strongest scenes in the film drama shows a negro vagabond pursuing a small white girl through the woods. She finally leaps from a cliff and is killed. Then the Ku Klux Klan gathers by night and carries its death and destruction among the negroes.

Hotel men here indorsed Bartlett's action tonight. Nothing could be worse, many of them said, than to have any serious racial disturbance in Atlantic City with the midsummer season near its height. There are probably 20,000 Southern people in the city. Most of them have seen the Ku Klux pictures and declare them an educational achievement.

The fact that conditions in the negro sections should be sufficiently serious to call for the suppression order caused no little uneasiness. It was declared tonight that threats to start a stampede in the Boardwalk theatre were made in front of City Hall yesterday while the Protest Committee was demanding that the City Committee take action to avert possible violence.

RONTO (Ont.) NEWS
SEPT. 18, 191

AMUSEMENTS

David W. Griffith's spectacle "The Birth of a Nation," following its r in New York, Chicago, Boston, S Francisco, and Los Angeles, will seen at the Alexandra Theatre, n week, with a matinee every d This work, partly from the nature the new art, partly from the oppo tion aroused, has excited keen cu osity. "The Birth of a Nation" te by film and music a story of war, mance and adventure. It records facts with the rapidity of lightni and yet never departs from the fu damentals of true drama. The lo interest in the play is based on t friendships between the Camerons, South Carolina, and the Stoneman of Pennsylvania, two families i volved in the struggle. Ben Cam eron, the clansman of the Dixo stories, appears again in the role the romantic hero; the piquan Northern girl, Elsie Stoneman, as th heroine. Mr. Griffith was eigh months making this story, and th result of his efforts is a new an stupendous art, combining spectacl romance, domestic drama, comedy tragedy, music and mechanical ef fects. In a presentation lasting tw hours and forty-five minutes, it epit omizes the life of a nation.

Among the leading players in what was probably the largest theatric cast ever assembled, may be men tioned Joseph Henaberry, as Presi dent Lincoln; Donald Crisp and How ard Gaye, as Generals Grant and Lee; Mae Marsh, as Flora Cameron; Henry Walthall, Lillian Gish, Elmer Clif ton, Miriam Cooper, as the quartet of lovers; Ralph Lewis, as Congressman Stoneman; Spottiswoode Aiken and Josephine Crowell, as the elder Cam erons and Walter Heirmann, as Lynch

CAMBRIDGE (Mass.) SENTINEL
SEPT. 18, 1915
156

Tuesday, September 14th, for all the operas.

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION."

Marvelous Spectacle in Its 25th Consecutive Week in Boston, at Majestic Theatre.

After twenty weeks of capacity business at the Tremont Theatre the announcement that the engagement of "The Birth of a Nation" would end a week ago occasioned such an overwhelming demand from theatregoers all over New England that the engagement be extended that arrangements were made to transfer the picture to the Majestic Theatre, and during the past two weeks crowded houses attested to the public's appreciation of this continuation.

There is little to be said of the picture itself that has not already been said many times. In rapid sequence, one scene follows another, scenes in the North and South before the Civil War, during it and immediately following it.

At the Majestic Theatre patrons will find the same augmented orchestra and comfortable environment which prevailed during the long run at the Tremont Theatre, and judging by the attendances the past week, "The Birth of a Nation" is in for another long run. Performances will be given every afternoon and evening, and seats may be procured for two weeks in advance.

Eve. Tele. Sept 8

"The Birth of a Nation" remains at the Liberty Theatre for an indefinite period, arrangements having been completed to utilize that theatre for D. W. Griffith's mighty spectable for the remainder of the present theatrical season. The big production is approaching its eighth month of its phenomenal run in New York city and is also nearing the record of 600 performances in New York. With its great battle scenes, its mixture of history with drama and romance and the thrilling effects of the reconstruction period in the South there is a timeliness about the work which is additionally potent in these days of suspense and martial intensity.

CLIPPING FROM Providence RI
Date 9 18 15

FF

CONFEDERATE TROOPS LEAVING FOR THE FRONT.
A Scene in "The Birth of a Nation at the Providence Opera House Next Week.

RONTO (Ont.) GLOBE
SEPT. 18, 1915

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION."

DAVID W. GRIFFITH'S epoch-making spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," following its record-breaking runs in New York, Chicago, Boston, San Francisco and Los Angeles, will be seen in one of its original productions at the Alexandra Theatre next week, with a matinee every day. This work, partly from the nature of the new art, partly from the opposition aroused, has excited keener curiosity than any other offering of the current season, and the extraordinary advance sale indicates that the Alexandra Theatre will not prove nearly large enough to accommodate the eager throngs. "The Birth of a Nation" tells by film and music a story of war, romance and adventure. It records its facts with the rapidity of lightning and yet never departs from the fundamentals of true drama. The love interest of the play is based on the friendships between the Camerons of South Carolina and the Stonemans of Pennsylvania, two families involved in the struggle. Ben Cameron, the gallant clansman of the Dixon stories, appears again in the role of the romantic hero; the piquant Northern girl, Elsie Stoneman, as the heroine. Mr. Griffith was eight months making this wonderful story and the result of his efforts is a new and stupendous art for which no adequate name has yet been found. This new art combines spectacle, romance, domestic drama, comedy, tragedy, music and mechanical effects into a harmonious ensemble that captivates equally the eye and the ear. In a presentation lasting two hours and forty-five minutes it epitomizes the life of a nation. The obsolete so-called "stage unities" are thrown to the winds, and Griffith carries the magnificent story from the introduction of African slavery right down through the Civil War and reconstruction days to the final real union of the North and South in the bonds of love and peace. Among the leading players in what was probably the largest theatric cast ever assembled may be mentioned Joseph Henaberry as President Lincoln; Donald Crisp and Howard Gaye as Generals Grant and Lee; Mae Marsh as Flora Cameron; Henry Walthall, Lillian Gish, Elmer Clifton and Miriam Cooper as the quartette of lovers; Ralph Lewis as Congressman Stoneman; Spottiswoode Aiken and Josephine Crowell as the elder Camerons, and Walter Seigmann as Lynch.

T. LOUIS (Mo.) GLOBE-DEMOCRAT
SEPT. 18, 1915

Chelsea Mass
Date 9-18-15

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION"

Marvelous Spectacle in its 25th Consecutive Week in Boston, at Majestic Theatre

FF

Tomorrow afternoon marks the 289th performance of D. W. Griffith's mighty spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," in this city, by far the greatest number of consecutive performances for any theatrical attraction in the history of the Boston stage. After twenty weeks of capacity business at the Tremont theatre the announcement that the engagement would end a week ago occasioned such an overwhelming demand from theatre-goers all over New England, that the engagement be extended that arrangements were made to transfer the picture to the Majestic theatre and during the past two weeks crowded houses attested to the public's appreciation of this continuation.

There is little to be said of the picture itself that has not already been said many times. In rapid sequence, one scene follows another scenes in the North and South before the Civil war, during it and immediately before the Civil war. The scene of Lincoln's assassination and the dark days of the reconstruction period in the South during the regime of the carpet-baggers and the various thrilling battle scenes presented on a most stupendous scale are miracles of photography and necessitated the use of large areas in the South and the employment of 18,000 persons and 3,000 horses. The scenes of Sherman's march to the sea, the wild ride of the Ku Klux Klan, and the destruction of whole towns occasion hearty outbursts of enthusiasm at every performance. A wonderful picture in every respect is the unanimous opinion of all those who have seen it.

At the Majestic theatre patrons will find the same agumented orchestra and comfortable environment which prevailed during the long run at the Tremont theatre and judging by the attendances the past week, "The Birth of a Nation" is in for another long run. Performances will be given every afternoon and evening and seats may be procured for two weeks in advance.

secretary

BIRTH OF NATION MANAGER AGAIN HALED INTO COURT

A police court summons was issued yesterday by Assistant City Counselor Harry Siedel against Walter Sanford, manager of the Olympic Theater, and John Brethany, manager of the Birth of a Nation Company, on a charge of exhibiting an improper picture. The summons was the result of a complaint of negroes living in the Seventeenth Ward.

They charge that the picture places the negro race in an improper light. The courts recently issued an injunction against the Police Department, restraining it from interfering with the exhibition.

Siedel, as assistant city counselor in charge of one of the police courts, has authority to issue police court summ[illegible]

TORONTO (Ont.) TELEGRAM
SEPT. 18, 1915

The THEATRE

THE BIRTH OF A NATION.

David W. [illegible] epoch-making spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," following its record-breaking runs in New York, Chicago, Boston, San Francisco, and Los Angeles, will be seen in one of its original productions at the Alexandra Theatre next week with a matinee every day. "The Birth of a Nation" tells by film and music a story of war, romance and adventure. It records its facts with the rapidity of lightning and yet never departs from the fundamentals of true drama. The love interest in the play is based on the friendships between the Camerons of South Carolina and the Stonemans of Pennsylvania, two families involved in the struggle. The obsolete so-called "stage unities" are thrown to the winds, and Griffith carries the magnificent story from the introduction of African slavery right down through the Civil War and Reconstruction days to the final real union of the North and South in the bonds of love and peace.

Among the leading players in what was probably the largest theatrical cast ever assembled, may be mentioned Joseph Henaberry, as President Lincoln, Donald Crisp and Howard Gaye as Generals Grant and Lee: Mae Marsh as Flora Cameron, and Henry Walthall, Lillian Gish, Elmer Clifton, Mirian Cooper as the quartette of lovers.

SEPT. 18, 1915
MILWAUKEE (Wis.) NEWS

SHUBERT—

"Tess of the Storm Country."

Starting Sunday afternoon the Shubert Theater Stock company will give the initial performances here of "Tess of the Storm Country." The film version of the piece was shown here to packed houses with Mary Pickford in the title role.

The story of the piece is familiar to nearly all as it has not only been told on the screen but in book form as well. Tessibel Skinner, daughter of a "squatter," who is convicted on circumstantial evidence of murdering a game warden. Tess is befriended by Teola Graves and her brother Frederick, the latter a theological student, who tells her of God. Through his teachings a wonderful faith is aroused in the little ragmuffin's heart and she daily prays for the release of her father. Prof. Palmer, a prominent lawyer, secures a new trial for her father and Tess gives Frederick the credit and soon learns to love the theological student.

Teola is betrothed to a certain Dan Jordan, who perishes in a fire, leaving Teola worse than a widow. As Teola dare not tell her haughty father of her plight Tess takes her into her hut and there the wretched girl's child comes into the world. Tess takes the child and cares for it. Frederick finds the child, accuses Tess of being unworthy, and Elder Graves denounces her in a public square. Unable to listen longer to the upbraiding of innocent Tess, Teola claims the child as hers and later both she and the sickly child die. Sue MacManamy will be seen in the Pickford role, in whic she is said to have scored in the East.

—)o(—

PABST—

"Birth of a Nation"

With Sunday afternoon and evening performances, "The Birth of a Nation" closes its return engagement at the Pabst theater, which has attracted large crowds throughout state fair week. The wonderful battle scenes, the thrilling rides of the southern clansmen, the depiction of historic events and the gripping heart interest story that is worked out amid the storm and stress of the country's greatest crisis are presented in this masterpiece with an accuracy of detail and fidelity to reality which have earned it the reputation of the greatest film drama ever staged. The men and women who play the chief parts are all film players of international reputation. The armies of men and women required for the battle pictures and other scenes in which multitudes appear were rehearsed for months before the actual work of photography was undertaken. The scenes of battle cover miles of territory and were only achieved by the use of telescopic lenses, telephones and other devices. The entire spectacle represents an expenditure of half a million dollars and is presented with the aid of a forty-piece symphony orchestra which accompanies the production with appropriate music.

NEW YORK (N. Y.) HERALD
SEP 19 1915

for two more weeks the resi[illegible]
Brooklyn will have an opportunity to
D. W. Griffith's wonderful picture tacle, "The Birth of a Nation," at Brighton Beach Music Hall. William Kemble, the managing director, has tended the performances chiefly on request of vacationists who have away all summer and for the prin and public school teachers, who wa take classes to see the picture pres tion of the historical incidents of the war period.

"The Birth of a Nation" has enjo phenomenal run at the Brighton
Music Hall all summer. Even in ment weather the house has been cr
Often hundreds of persons had turned away because of a lack of
The great success the picture enjoy as contributing factor in inducin
Kemble to continue the performan
Theatre parties will be features
Birth of a Nation" for the next tw
Last week twelve were held, ch patriotic and educational societ one of the performances Mr. Kem as his guests five hundred orphans, a total of 4,000 boys and girls w seen the picture this summer thr generosity.

BROOKLYN, (N. Y.) EAGLE
SEP 19 1915
Date .....

MANY PARTIES TO SEE "[illegible]

Theater parties will be fea
"The Birth of a Nation," a Brighton Beach Music Hall, f
next two weeks. Last week were held, chiefly by patriotic educational societies. At one performances Manager Kemb as his guests 500 orphans, ma total of 4,000 boys and girls w seen the picture this summer t his generosity.

"The Birth of a Nation' h onstated that Brooklynites w to a picture show that is pres an elaborate scale," said Mr.
in discussing the remarkable picture has had at the
"The Birth of a Nation' is itest picture of its time.
money was well expended, for ture is an educational force noted educators and the cle lauded."

CLIPPING FROM Atlanta Ga.
Pub. Sunday Date 9-Ct-15

FF

SEPT. 18, 1915
PITTSBURG (Pa.) SUN

ing pictures.

THE NIXON.

D. W. Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation" is decidedly the most remarkable historical spectacle ever presented in America. It is now in the full swing of a successful run at the Nixon Theater, where it is playing to the most phenomenal business of the season. Petersburg and Atlanta, Appomattox and Ford's Theater, the foothills of South Carolina and the wild rides of the Ku Klux Klan live again in Mr. Griffith's 12,000 feet of superb motion pictures, which took eight months to produce, cost $500,000, employed 15,000 people and 2,000 horses. This great spectacle is an epitome of scenes, incidents, characters, passions and emotions of the whole great period from 1861 to 1871—the period of the Civil war and Reconstruction. Suggested by Thomas Dixon's "The Clansman" and "The Leopard's Spots," "The Birth of a Nation" has a grandly epical quality of its own which stamps it as a masterpiece of genius. It is a choric symphony of light. The battle scenes are shown on a scale and with an imaginative quality that vividly resembles actual warfare.

BRIDGEPORT (Conn.) STANDARD
SEPT. 18, 1915

...ver, and towards the village of Benjamin Spar Spark on the Save ...

'BIRTH OF NATION' COMES TO POLI'S THEATER OCT. 4

Announcement was made today that "The Birth of a Nation"—the famous film spectacle of American history—will be seen in this city during the week of October 4.

Louis B. Mayer, general manager of the American Film company, who recently contracted with S. Z. Poli for the presentation of the films at Poli's theater, was here for a short time this morning and made definite announcement of the dates of the engagement. There will be daily matinees, he said, and he is looking forward to a record week.

"The Birth of a Nation" is now in its tenth month in New York, where it has played to capacity business. In Providence, the films were shown for three weeks recently, and will play a return engagement of three weeks more shortly. Thirty thousand persons saw the production in Portland, Me., last week.

Mr. Mayer will return to Bridgeport next week and complete arrangements for the production here.

Philadelphia, (Pa.) Public Ledger
Date SEP 18 1915

FF

GIRARD'S TOPICS OF THE TOWN

WHEN a [redacted] makes heroes out of men branded by Congress as "murderers and outlaws," it is profitable to recall what the Ku-Klux Klan was.

A party of young men at the close of the war met at Pulaski, Tennessee, and formed a social organization. They adopted a name, a ritual and a uniform. The last consisted of a white pall worn by the horse and a white covering for the rider, who was topped with a tall white hat made of cardboard.

By accident it was discovered that the weird name and the weird robes of the Ku-Klux Klan struck terror to the marrow bones of the ignorant and recently freed negroes.

Then all over the South other and similar societies sprang up which finally became merged with or known by the general name of Ku-Klux Klan. General John B. Gordon, of the Confederate Army, said the societies were for mutual protection.

History proves that this was not the case in hundreds, even thousands of cases, which came into the courts. General Forrest, whose name throughout the North has ever been linked with the Fort Pillow massacre of negroes, was chosen head of the Ku-Klux Klan.

IN 1868 a revised Constitution was adopted by the Ku-Klux Klan. It formed the entire South into the Inviaible Empire. General Forrest was styled Grand Wizard. Each State was a realm under a Grand Dragon. Each county was a dominion under a Grand Giant, and the smallest local unit was a den, under a Grand Cyclops.

At one time there were 555,000 members of the various Ku-Klux orders. A great many of the members were ex-Confederate soldiers. The thing grew into a mighty political issue. Impartial historians now agree that the Republicans in Congress exaggerated very greatly what was going on throughout the South in order to justify the Carpetbag reconstruction policy.

Carl Schurz refused to follow his party, although as an Independent he admitted that innumerable offenses had occurred.

BY 1870 the outrages in some Southern counties had become so bad that Congress took action. President Grant asked for special powers to suppress what he termed was a "new insurrection" in the South. Congress speedily passed such an act. There were then in the United States Senate as many able men as ever sat together in that body. Edmunds, Conkling, Morton, Thurman, Bayard, Trumbull and Sherman were all legislative giants.

Thurman and Trumbull fought against the act in Congress aimed at squelching the Ku-Klux on the ground that the United States could not interfere in local government. Eleven years afterward the Supreme Court sustained these Democrats and upset the law put through by a Republican majority.

CONGRESS in the meanwhile ordered a probe of the Ku-Klux outrages. The majority of the committee brought in a terrific arraignment. Senator John Scott, of Pennsylvania, was chairman of the committee which had collected evidence for a year.

The Democratic minority report admitted that in 40 counties of the South there had been violence.

"We do not intend to deny," said the Democratic minority, "that bodies of disguised men have in several States of the South been guilty of the most flagrant crimes, crimes which we neither seek to palliate nor excuse."

From 1870 to 1875 some thousands of cases were handled by the Attorney General's department, and convictions were numerous. There were many cases of murder. The period of chief violence ranged from 1867 to 1873. Grant's re-election seemed to put a complete damper on the thing.

THE Ku-Klux Klan was formed several years before the negro was endowed with the franchise, so that it is not true that the night raiders aimed simply to keep the ex-slaves from voting. That later became a prime object.

White men from the North were victims of the Ku-Klux. Preachers who conducted religious services for the negroes and school teachers who helped educate them were also attacked, and in some cases murdered, as shown by the records.

As it finally developed when Congress and the President of the United States took official action, the Ku-Klux Klan's main object as it concerned the country generally was to terrorize the negro back into a state of complete civic suppression, and to frighten all who endeavored to bring the black race out of that dismal condition.

Any one who thinks this band of outlaws was a heroic body should consult the dozen large volumes of testimony taken by the Committee of Congress under the lead of our country's ablest lawyers, who couldn't be hoodwinked by shams, lying or hypocrisy.

LOUISVILLE (KY.) POST
SEPT. 18, 1915

After having been shown in Boston more than 250 times, "The Birth of a Nation" closed its engagement in that city. This spectacular Griffith film is filling houses at $2 a seat wherever it is being shown.

AS A sample of how a Ku-Klux Klan member would operate, I cite two cases out of many scores. One of the white-sheeted horsemen stopped at a negro cabin at midnight and asked for a bucket of water. The negro gave it to him.

"He swallowed it at a gulp," related the black man, "saying it was the first drink he had had since being killed at Shiloh."

Another negro was visited by a similar apparition. The weird horseman put out his hand, and when the negro took it found it only a skeleton.

Such instances occurred by hundreds, so that the colored folks were completely terrorized.

The country at large got its most dramatic presentation of what the Carpetbaggers and negroes were up against during Reconstruction in Judge Tourgee's book, "A Fool's Errand."

Some of his friends long afterward maintained that the reason the author's name was kept a secret for years was fear of bodily violence.

GIRARD.

PAWTUCKET (R. I.) TIMES
SEPT. 18, 1915

INDOOR AND OUTDOOR R

Providence Opera

LILLIAN GISH
In "Birth of a Nation" at Providence Opera House Next Week.

"The Birth of a Nation," D. W. Griffith's sensational photo play will be shown at the Opera House all of next week, Col. Wendelschaefer having made arrangemenets for another week's engagement here. This photoplay was shown here for three weeks last month and drew capacity audiences at every performance. The demand for seats at the third week's engagement was so large that Col. Wendelschaefer set out to secure another engagement and succeeded. All the features of the last engagement will be seen with the photoplay this week. The special orchestra of 25 pieces, and courtesy girls and the hundred men behind the scenes necessary to make the suitable noises as the pictures are thrown on the screen will be here again. The performances will be given dail, openin Monday afternoon.

"The Birth of a Nation," a Civil Wa drama, is founded on "The Clansman by Thomas Dixon. It is said to emplo more attendants and workers before an behind the curtain than 75 per cent. o the legitimate attractions. It requires men behind the scenes to produce th roars of battle, the pounding of horse hoofs and other appropriate noises a the pictures are flashed on the screen. Te more men are kept busy as clearers. Th orchestra, which plays specially writte music for the pictures, is larger than tha carried by some of the big musical show Fifteen musicians were brought her from Boston because they were familia with the music, and 10 local men wer added to these.

Mr. Griffith's theme is the developmer of the nation and its relationship to th part the slavery problem played in bring ing about Daniel Webster's prophec "One and indivisible." The action be gins with the introduction of slavery int the colonies. Then comes the Abolitio movement, then the stirring times leadi up to the secession of the Southern stat The audience is carried through the fou years of strife to the death of Resident Lincoln in Ford's Theatre. The eight years of reconstruction form the final episodes in a drama of history, romance and emotion. Its termination is an allegorical picture of the coming permanent peace and the settlement of all local differences.

To get these varied incidents into his drama the producer used 18,000 people and 3000 horses.

CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK (N. Y.) AMERICAN
SEP 1 9

...Valentine and Bell ... among the others on the bill.

"BIRTH OF A NATION" AS POPULAR AS EVER

"The Birth of a Nation" remains at the Liberty Theatre for an indefinite period, arrangements having been completed to utilize that theatre for D. W. Griffith's mighty spectacle for the remainder of the present theatrical season. The big production is approaching the eighth month of its phenomenal run in New York City and is also nearing the record of 600 performances in New York.

With its great battle scenes, its mixture of history with drama and romance and the thrilling effects of the reconstruction period in the South there is a timeliness about the work which is additionally potent in these days of suspense and martial in...

BROOKLYN, (N. Y.) TIMES

"The Birth of a Nation."

For two more weeks the peop... Brooklyn will have an opportuni... see D. W. Griffith's picture spec... "The Birth of a Nation," at the B... ton Beach Music Hall. William Kemble, the managing director, extended the performances over L... Day chiefly on the request of ... tionists who have been away all ... mer and for the principals and p... school teachers who want to ... classes to the performance to see presentation of the historical infec... of the Civil War period.

"'The Birth of a Nation' has dem... strated that Brooklynites will ... to a picture show that is presente... an elaborate scale," said Mr. Ken... in discussing the remarkable run ... picture has had at the seashore. "... Birth of a Nation' cost $500,000 to ... duce. It is the costliest picture o... time. But the money was well ... pended for the picture is not on... wonderful presentation of histo... facts but an educational force w... noted educators and the clergy h... lauded."

NEW YORK TELEGRAM
Date SEP 19

"The Birth of a Nation" remains at the Liberty Theatre for an indefinite period, arrangements having been completed to utilize that theatre for D. W. Griffith's mighty spectable for the remainder of the present theatrical season. The big production is approaching its eighth month of its phenomenal run in New York city and is also nearing the record of 600 performances in New York. With its great battle scenes, its mixture of history with drama and romance and the thrilling effects of the reconstruction period in the South there is a timeliness about the work which is additionally potent in these days of suspense and martial intensity.

SEPT. 19, 1905
PITTSBURG (Pa.) PRESS

NIXON.

David W. Grimth's epoch-making spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation" at the Nixon tells by film and music the story of a nation re-born through the storm and stress of internecine strife. Instead of the four to six scenes of the conventional play, its technique permits of filming literally thousands of scenes covering a wide range of history and characters. Slavery, the prime cause of the Civil war; Lincoln's call for troops; the ball on the eve of Bull Run and the first triumph of Confederate arms; the devastation wrought by Sherman's march to the sea and the awful ordeal of the siege of Petersburg; Lee's surrender to Grant at Appomattox; the assassination of the President; the harsh radical policy to the South; the uprising of the Ku Klux Klan and the overthrow of the carpetbagger—negro regime—these greatfactors and events pass in review before the thrilled spectators. The love interest in the play is based on the friendship between the Camerons of South Caroline and the Stonemans of Pennsylvania, two families involved in the struggle. Ben Cameron, the gallant clansman of the Dixon stories, appears again in the role of romantic hero; the piquant Northern girl, Elsie Stoneman, as the heroine.

PHILADELPHIA, (Pa.) TELEGRAPH
Date ... 1915

...dancing skit, with songs and ... Horace Wright ... Dietrich in a ... combination of operatic and ... ...; the Cecile Trio, in songs, dances and patter; and ... ...ette, ... cent... gymnasts, are also ... ...g ... of-ferings to be shown.

It is significant of the wide appeal of "The Birth of a Nation," the D. W. Griffith motion picture spectacle now attracting crowds to the Forrest, that the organized trade bodies have in resolutions given approval to the historic story and its presentation. Especially illuminating is the musical accompaniment to the picture played by a symphony orchestra. There is also a dramatic story and the romantic touches are unfailing in appeal. Perhaps the most effective portion of the picture is that showing Ford's Theatre, in Washington, on that fateful night when Abraham Lincoln fell. At the head of the cast is Henry B. Walthall, a native of Alabama, who is seen in the role of the Clansman. Lillian Gish, Mae Marsh, Miriam Cooper, Ralph Lewis, Joseph Hana... ...bery, Howard Caye, Donald Crisp, Geo... Seigmann, Walter Long, Raoul Walsh, Mary Alden, Spottiswoode Aiken and others are in the cast. The splendid projection of the picture and the wonderful photography are likewise noteworthy.

...FROM
NEW YORK PRESS
Date ...

...be able to show the bursting of shrapnel shells and the explosion of the thirty-centimeter shells. The films will be exhibited nine times daily.

Liberty.

"The Birth of a Nation" remains in the Liberty Theatre for an indefinite period, arrangements having been completed to utilize that theatre for this spectacle for the present theatrical season. The production is approaching the eighth month of its run in New York city, and is also nearing the record of 600 presentations.

NEW YORK TELEGRAM
...

NEW YORK (N. Y.) HERALD

"The Birth of a Nation" is to remain in the Liberty Theatre an indefinite period, arrangements having been completed to retain that playhouse for D. W. Griffith's spectacle for the remainder of the current season. The elaborate film is approaching the eighth month of its run in New York. With its now famous battle scenes, its mixture of history with drama and romance and the thrilling incidents of the reconstruction period in the South there is a timeliness about the photoplay which seems additionally potent in these days of martial intensity.

PHILADELPHIA, (PA.) PRESS
...

THE TERRIFIC heat spell has hit the regular theaters hard, on Broadway as well as in Philadelphia, in Chicago as well as in Boston. There are always exceptions, and "The Birth of a Nation" rides on the topmost crest of the wave of prosperity regardless of the weather man and his thermometer, barometer and other paraphernalia. At the regular moving picture houses the heat does not seem seriously to have affected the attend...

SEPT. 19, 1905
PITTSBURGH (Pa.) DISPATCH

"BIRTH OF NATION" IS HERE NEXT WEEK

With a symphony orchestra of thirty, upwards of fifty mechanics and all the elaborate equipment used in presenting the spectacle at the Liberty Theatre, New York, and the Forrest Theatre, Philadelphia, "The Birth of a Nation" comes to the Trent Theatre Monday evening to begin a week's engagement. There will be daily matinees after the opening.

During its record engagements in New York, Philadelphia and Atlantic City it has been seen by thousands from New Jersey and without exception they have praised it enthusiastically. Trenton people's interest in the spectacle has been disclosed in the advance sale of seats, which is larger than for any attraction that the Trent Theatre has had for several seasons.

For many years American dramatists wrote able plays of particular states, cities or localities, ranging from "Alabama" to "The Henrietta" and from "Way Down East" to "The Great Divide." But no one man semed to grasp the whole spirit and genius of America until David Wark Griffith picked a suggestion for his theme out of Dixon's "The Leopard's Spots" and "The Clansman" and started to develop it.

A remarkable thing about Mr. Griffith's plan is that words (except for leaders and titles) did not enter into it. He replaced speech by music, and the old-fashioned stage action and scenery by the pictorialized action of thousands of players in the great Out-of-Doors. In brief, he staged the great battles, struggles and critical events of 1861-70 under natural conditions as nearly as possible similar to the original.

The result of Mr. Griffith's efforts is a new and stupendous art for which no adequate name has yet been found. "The Birth of a Nation" combines spectacle, romance, domestic drama, comedy, tragedy, music, and mechanical effects into a harmonious ensemble that captivates equally the eye and the ear. In a presentation lasting two hours and 45 minutes it epitomizes the life of a nation. Griffith carries the magnificent story from the introduction of African slavery right down through Civil War and Reconstruction days to the final real union of South and North in the bonds of love and peace.

Among the distinguished actors in the cast are Henry B. Walthall, Lillian Gish, Mae Marsh, Miriam Cooper, Mary Alden, Josephine Crowell, Ralph Lewis, Joseph Henabery, Raoul Walsh, Donald Crisp, Howard Gaye, George Seigman, Walter Long, Elmer Clifton and Robert Harron. Eighteen thousand people, 3,000 horses and no less than 5,000 scenes went to the making of the big spectacle.

"The Charge," One of the Battle Scenes in "The Birth of a Nation" at the Trent Theatre Next Week

LADELPHIA, (PA.) RECORD.

be staged under the direction of George W. Barbier, and a majority of the settings will be new and original.

Forrest—"The Birth of a Nation."

No one who has seen "The Birth of a Nation," that spectacular motion picture production now at the Forrest Theatre, will say aught but that D. W. Griffith has shown himself to be the master stage director of the world. Yet "The Birth of a Nation" is not a photo-play in the accepted sense. It is a master creation, an epic story presented with the realism of actuality by talented players who seem to be living again in the soul-stirring times when a nation was moving onward to a glorious destiny. Each incident is made the more impressive by the musical accompaniment that is played by a symphony orchestra and that is of the most appropriate sort. There is no one who is not thrilled by the clash of great armies in scenes showing important engagements in the civil war and its appeal is to all types of men is apparent in the diverse kinds of people to be found at any presentation of the picture in the Forrest Theatre. Indeed it is significant that among those who have given unqualified approval to "The Birth of a Nation" are leading representatives of labor organizations who have passed resolutions in praise of this epoch-making film.

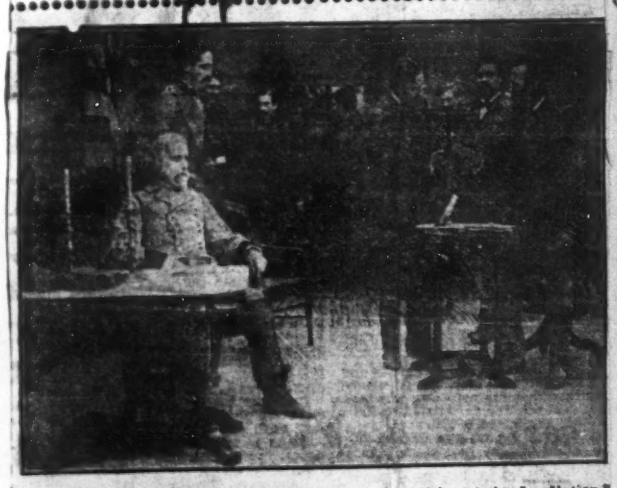
Apart from the wonderful representation of the assassination of Lincoln at Ford's Theatre in Washington probably the most impressive scene in this historic drama, there is a succession of scenes of compelling interest. Beginning with an exposition of early slavery days, the picture takes the onlooker into the trying days of the civil war. But each dread happening is placed in contrast with delightful romantic scenes and the horrors of battle are forgotten or relieved by little human touches such as Griffith so well knows how to give. The burning of Atlanta is a remarkable picture, but still more effective is the series of scenes showing the Ku-Klux-Klan on its errands of safety. In the concluding part of the picture one sees activities in famous institutions of young colored men and women who are fitting themselves for high places in the industrial world.

Henry B. Walthall, who is a native of Alabama, is seen in the role of the Clansman, and his splendid work at once places him among the leaders in motion picture acting. Lillian Gish, Mae Marsh, Miriam Cooper, Ralph Lewis, Joseph Henabery, Howard Gaye, Donald Crisp, George Seigmann, Walter Long, Raoul Walsh, Mary Alden, Spottiswoode Aiken and others are in the notable cast. Splendid photography and superb projection of the picture contribute importantly to the irresistible appeal of this master work.

PORTLAND (Me.) PRESS
SEPT. 19, 1915

708

Music and Drama



General Lee Surrendering to General Grant in "The Birth of a Nation."

NEW YORK (N. Y.) TELEGRAPH

That marvelous silent drama, "The Birth of a Nation," at the Colonial, shows no waning of its appeal. At the Fine Arts, George Beban in "An Alien" enters upon his fifth week Monday. The double bill at the Regfield next week presents Cyril Maude in "Peer Gynt" and Julia Dean in "Judge Not." At Orchestra Hall the past week Blanche Sweet readered a story of dual personality, "The Case of Becky," with

NEW YORK COMMERCIAL

Date SEP 18 1915

[illegible] Lawrence, Jeffreys Lewis, [illegible] Selwyn, Sam Sidman, Ernest Cossart, Alice Belmores and others. The first presentation will be given out of town on Oct. 4.

"The Birth of a Nation" remains at the Liberty for an indefinite period, arrangements having been completed to utilise that theatre for D. W. Griffith's American war film for the remainder of the season. The production is approaching the eighth month of its run in New York.

Griffith Spectacle Remains.

"The Birth of a Nation" remains at the Liberty Theatre for an indefinite period, arrangements having been completed to utilise that theatre for D. W. Griffith's mighty spectacle for the remainder of the present theatrical season. The big production is approaching the eighth month of its phenomenal run, and a record of six hundred performances in New York.

NEW YORK (N. Y.) SUN

REPUBLIC—"Common Clay," with John Mason and Jane Cowl in the central roles [illegible] out of the year.

LIBERTY—"The Birth of a Nation" remains at this theatre for an indefinite period, arrangements having been completed to utilise that theatre for D. W. Griffith's mighty spectacle for the remainder of the present theatrical season. The big production is approaching the eighth month of its phenomenal run in New York city and is also nearing the [illegible] performances in New York.

NEW YORK MAIL

SEP 18 1915

Griffith Spectacle Remains.

"The Birth of a Nation" remains at the Liberty Theatre for an indefinite period, arrangements having been completed to utilise that theatre for D. W. Griffith's mighty spectacle for the remainder of the present theatrical season. The big production is approaching the eighth month of its phenomenal run, and a record of six hundred performances in New York.

It is significant of the wide appeal of "The Birth of a Nation," the D. W. Griffith motion picture spectacle now attracting crowds to the Forrest, that the organized trade bodies have in resolutions given approval to the historic story and its presentation. Especially illuminating is the musical accompaniment to the picture played by a symphony orchestra. There is also a dramatic story and the romantic touches are unfailing in appeal. Perhaps the most effective portion of the picture is that showing Ford's Theatre, in Washington, on that fateful night when Abraham Lincoln fell. At the head of the cast is Henry B. Walthall, a native of Alabama, who is seen in the role of the Clansman. Lillian Gish, Mae Marsh, Miriam Cooper, Ralph Lewis, Joseph Hanabery, Howard Gaye, Donald Crisp, George Seigmann, Walter Long, Raoul Walsh, Mary Alden, Spottiswoode Aiken and others are in the cast. The splendid projection of the picture and the wonderful photography are likewise noteworthy.

Examiner
Chicago Ill
9-19-15

TURN OF THE REEL

Judge Things Not by Their Faults but by the Good They Contain.

FF

BY JAMES WARREN CURRIE.

CHICAGO experiences the quiet of the between seasons along the photoplay rialto. Theaters that through the Summer have shown ordinary features have been leased by the giant companies which will use them for the housing of their spectacles during the season of 1915-16.

The Colonial Theater is at present housing David W. Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation," and the Studebaker is in process of renovation to receive the first program of the Triangle Film Company about the 26th of the month. Two houses in the loop, devoting themselves to the showing of feature photoplays, have complete changes in this week's bills. There is one addition to a program in another house. The others are running with the same bills.

THE COLONIAL.

Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation" closed its fifteenth record-breaking week in Chicago yesterday. Except for sudden and unexpected heat, there has been no evidence of a lessening of interest. Even during the sweltering days of the early part of the week comparison with other theaters showed a far greater number of theater goers at the Colonial than at any of the other playhouses in the city.

Tidings of the tremendous success of the spectacle here have gone out into the suburbs and the country towns of Illinois, Indiana and Michigan and have brought many of the small-town dwellers into the city to prove for themselves the truth of the rumors. George W. Bowles, manager of the photoplay in Chicago, said 5 per cent of the week's audiences were out-of-town people.

Reports from Boston, New York, St. Louis and other cities where "The Birth of a Nation," is playing show that records are being broken in these places also.

SEPT. 19, 1905
PITTSBURGH (Pa.) DISPATCH

...picturesque art of many nations, specially selected comic moving pictures complete the program.

"The Birth of a Nation"

DAVID W GRIFFITH'S epoch-making spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," is duplicating at the Nixon its record-breaking runs in New York, Chicago, Boston, San Francisco and Los Angeles. Partly from the nature of the new art and partly from the opposition aroused, this work has excited keener curiosity than any other offering of recent years, and the extraordinary demand for seats indicates the size of the eager throngs which are coming to the Nixon.

"The Birth of a Nation" tells by film and music the story of a Nation re-born through the storm and stress of internecine strife. Instead of the four to six scenes of the conventional play, its technique permits of filming literally thousands of scenes covering a wide range of history and characters. Slavery, the prime cause of the Civil War; Lincoln's call for troops; the ball on the eve of Bull Run, and the first triumph of Confederate arms; the devastation wrought by Sherman's march to the sea, and the awful ordeal of the siege of Petersburg; Lee's surrender to Grant at Appomattox; the assassination of the Federal President; the harsh radical policy to the South; the uprising of the Ku Klux Klan and the overthrow of the carpet-bagger—negro regime—these great factors and events pass in review before the thrilled spectator.

The love interest of the play is based on the friendship between the Camerons of South Carolina and the Stonemans of Pennsylvania, two families involved in the struggle. Ben Cameron, the gallant clansman of the Dixon stories, appears again in the role of romantic hero; the piquant Northern girl, Elsie Stoneman, as the heroine. Mr Griffith took most of the scenes in the great out of doors, where Nature painted the backgrounds. The notable indoor scenes, like that of Ford's Theater on the night of the Lincoln tragedy, the peace at Appomattox, and the meeting of the South Carolina Legislature of 1870 are exact facsimiles of the originals. It is the first time in art-production that American history has been presented in living pictures on so stupendous a scale. To do this many times the amount of time, energy and expense usually devoted to amusement enterprises had to be used. Eighteen thousand people and 3,000 horses appear in the picture, which cost approxi-

SEP 9 1915 AMERICAN

FF

ANNETTE LAVIGNE & MIRIAM COOPER IN "THE BIRTH OF A NATION" AT THE MODERN

...ELPHIA, (PA.) RECORD.

FF

...impson ...d. Dean- ...Penn.

Scene in "The Birth of a Nation"-(Motion Pictures) Forrest

PHILADELPHIA, (PA.) PRESS

AT THE FORREST

FF

No one who has seen "The Birth of a Nation," that spectacular motion picture production now at the Forrest, will say aught but that D. W. Grifith has shown himself to be the master stage director. Yet "The Birth of a Nation" is not a photoplay in the accepted sense. It is a mammoth creation, an epic story presented with the realism of actuality by talented players who seem to be living again in the soul-stirring times when the nation was moving onward to its glorious destiny. Each incident is made the more impressive by the musical accompaniment that is played by a symphony orchestra and that is of the most appropriate sort.

There is no one who is not thrilled by the clash of great armies in scenes showing important engagements in the Civil War and that this appeal is to all types of men is apparent in the diverse kinds of people to be found at any presentation of the picture in the Forrest. Indeed, it is significant that amongst those who have given unqualified approval to "The Birth of a Nation" are leading representatives of labor organizations who have passed resolutions in praise of this epoch-making film.

Apart from the wonderful representation of the assassination of Lincoln at Ford's Theater, in Washington, which is probably the most impressive scene in this historic drama, there is a succession of scenes of compelling interest. Beginning with an exposition of early slavery days, the picture takes the onlooker into the trying days of the Civil War. But each dread happening is placed in contrast with delightful romantic scenes and the horrors of battle are forgotten or relieved by little human touches such as Grifith so well knows how to give.

The burning of Atlanta is a remarkable picture, but still more effective is the series of scenes showing the Ku Klux Klan. In the concluding part of the picture one sees activities in famous institutions of young colored men and women who are fitting themselves for high places in the industrial world.

SEPT. 19, 1905
PITTSBURG (Pa.) PRESS

MILWAUKEE (Wis.) SENTINEL
SEPT. 15, 1915

...of two years of negotiation, ...for booking is among the most important in vaudeville.

FF

"The Birth of a Nation," the wonderful film drama now playing a return engagement at the Pabst theater, shows no diminution of the popularity which made it the most remarkable entertainment offering in Milwaukee's theatrical history. The state fair crowds which are attending the afternoon and evening performances every day are gripped and held by the wonderful representations of battles, historic events and all the other incidents which go to make up the biggest and most amazing moving picture production ever staged. The music of the big orchestra is one of the most attractive features of the offering which will remain at the Pabst for the week, closing Sunday night.

Eloquent lip

IN a symbolic sense, the most ... figure in Part I, of "The B... Nation," now crowding the F... that of Abraham Lincoln, the ... President, overshadowing Aust... man, Abolitionist and plotter. ... a surprisingly faithful portrait ... "rail-splitter" that one sees on t... The homely, but kindly, features ... and the tall, stooping form so f... readers of fifty years ago and s...

History has been drawn upo... cident, and in the photoplay L... seen in characteristic poses and ... in kindly deeds. Here he is sign... don for a young Southern sol... demned as a guerilla spy, and ... gind the heart of an aged mi... has not pleaded in vain for the ... boy; and again he is defending ... as to the conquered South, a ... humane for the revengeful ... Last of all he is seen stricken ... at the moment of his great tr... noble head laid low by the bu... assassin.

Not a little of the successful ... of the part of the President ... Henabery is due to the apparent ... with which the actor appro... work. Lincoln was a kindly ... from morose, but that part of ... with which the photoplay deal... dened by the war and its awful

87

MILWAUKEE (Wis.) SENTINEL
SEPT. 19, 1915

"If that is the case," said Judge Sullivan, "let the hero go down into your pockets and pay you. The court allows you $5."

"BIRTH OF A NATION" CONTINUES AT PABST

With [illegible] afternoon and evening performances, "The Birth of a Nation" closed its two weeks' engagement at the Pabst Theater. The wonderful battle scenes, the thrilling rides of the southern clansmen, the depiction of historic events and the gripping heart interest story that is worked out amid the storm and stress of the country's greatest crisis are presented in this masterpiece with an accuracy of detail which have earned it the reputation of the greatest film drama ever staged. The men and women who play the chief parts are all film players of international reputation. The armies of men and women required for the battle pictures and other scenes in which multitudes appear were rehearsed for months before the actual work of photography was undertaken. The scenes of battle cover miles of territory and were only achieved by the use of telescopic lenses, telephones and other devices.

Scene from "The Birth of a Nation."

TORONTO (ONT.) WORLD
SEPT. 19, 1905

FF

At the Theatres

Alexandra
"The Birth of a Nation"

D. W. GRIFFITH'S mighty spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," begins its engagement at the Alexandra Theatre Monday, with two performances daily at 2.30 and 8.30 p.m. Nothing like this wonderful attraction has ever been seen upon the local boards. It is given here exactly as it is being presented in New York City, where the big drama has broken every record in the stage history in the biggest city on the continent. In addition, the piece has piled up record engagements in Chicago, Boston, San Francisco and Los Angeles. It covers a wide range of American history, and touches only the highest points of interest in the great events that led up to and terminated the Civil War. The force that slavery played in producing this crisis is traced from its inception to its abolition. While the basic theme is historical in its foundation, its intent is the fundamental one of true drama. The forces which make for those results have been marshalled upon a larger scale than was ever dreamed of before. Where directors of vast spectacle have dealt with hundreds in the past Griffith employs thousands. Eighteen thousand people fill his stage, which has a vast territory for its background. Three thousand horses pass before your view in wild dashes over miles of country roadway. The decisive battles of the Civil War are reproduced in faithful detail, and you see these conflicts fought again just as they were waged 50 years ago. Cities were built up only to be destroyed to lend force and verity to the dramatic narrative. One enormous battlefield is shown stretching over an area of 10 square miles, and upon these planes and trenches 10,000 soldiers clash in a mimic warfare that is as real as if you were an eyewitness of the actual occurrence. Holding the great effects in tether is a story as tender and true as love and romance can be pictured. There are tears and smiles, noble sacrifices and heroic deeds of personal valor. Youthful dreams of love's fruition are rent asunder by the demons of war; home ties snap before the call to arms, and suffering such as cannot be imagined is depicted in the crude manner that history is made when men surrender reason to passion, and engage in a deadlock of armed resistance.

You see the war start after being shown the causes which precipitated it. You see the great generals of the contending sections playing their desperate games of human pawns moved into the field of slaughter. Then comes the agreement of peace, and Lincoln sets about his superhuman task of healing the wounds by the application of that great love which made him the towering figure of his age. A fanatic's bullet stills the heart which beat so evenly for all humanity. The South is thrown back into a worse fate than war. Their lands are overrun by a hungry horde of vengeful politicians and grafters. The poor negro is caioled into a false understanding of liberty, and in his ignorance is led into excesses by these scalawags of fortune. Out of it comes the ghostly garbed crusaders of a terrible era to once more set things aright and return the lands and liberties of peace to their rightful owners, and over the land's miserere sounds the chorus of brotherly love in a allegorical dream which visions the re-union of the divided sections, and the welding of that national spirit which has made this nation, after its baptism in its own blood.

A wonderful score of operatic reaches accompanies the narrative. It is all done upon a most stupendous scale. No detail has been overlooked. The drama is outlined and told in the most graphic form that has yet been devised by the brain of man for such a purpose. No wonder this work is epoch-making. It has set up new standards, which it will be difficult to equal for many a year to come.

St. Louis Mo.
9-19-15

ST. LOUIS (Mo.) REPUBLIC
SEPT. 19, 1915

8

Olympic Theater.

The operatic score of "The Birth of a Nation," which enters upon its fourth week at the Olympic Theater this afternoon, makes D. W. Griffith's magnificent spectacle of Civil War and reconstruction days almost as important an event musically as it is dramatically. Joseph Carl Breil, the composer, has been thoroughly American in the choice and treatment of his themes, taking his motifs from tunes that were popular North and South at the time of the conflict between the two sections. Where he has introduced a foreign theme, he has chosen such as are universal belonging to the entire human race. "Coming Through the Rye" and "Auld Lang Syne" are almost the sole instances.

Mr. Breil worked in conjunction with Mr. Griffith, just as do Griffith's actors, artists and photographers. In his youth Griffith had ambitions to become a grand opera star and studied in Louisville with such a career in view. Mr. Breil caught innumerable suggestions from tunes

ST. LOUIS (Mo.) REPUBLIC
SEPT. 19, 1915

808

Brooklyn, (N. Y.) Standard Union

SEP 19 1915

BRIGHTON BEACH MUSIC HALL.

"The Birth of a Nation" remains at the Brighton Beach Music Hall, where there is no diminution in the size of the large audiences that witness this remarkable spectacle. Dealing as it does with the events leading up to the Civil War, depicting the battle scenes that marked the titanic struggle between the North and South, and showing the important incidents of reconstruction days, this series of moving pictures is both educational and interesting. The production of this spectacle employed 18,000 persons and 3,000 horses, and consists of 5,000 scenes. It cost $100,000.

HOUSTON (TEX.) CHRONICLE
SEPT. 19, 1915

"The Birth of a Nation" Coming Soon to Prince Theatre.

FF

D. W. Griffith's mighty spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," will be seen at the Prince, week of October 18, exactly as it is being given in New York and several other cities where it has made record breaking runs.

This new force in the art of stage entertainment is perhaps the most widely discussed production ever made in America. It is above all else the greatest thing that has been achieved by one producer. Imagine condensing the living details of the most strenuous periods of American history into an evening's entertainment of less than three hours. You are not told about it, nor is your imagination tested by rhetorical descriptions of what took place. Instead you see it enacted and shown in its making. Some of the greatest names that are written large upon the scroll of our country's fame appear upon the program. The players who enact the roles have studied the minute descriptions of these men, both from photographs and intimate life studies, and with this framework they make these wonderful characters live again. They pass before your vision in a panorama of achievement. The accomplishment is startling. The entire action ranges over three centuries. It begins with the importation of the first African slave and it ends with the settlement of that question in the freedom of the enslaved. But before this end is reached the mightiest nation in the world passed through the throes of internecine strife and the highlights of those struggles are vividly brought out. Great battles are fought before your eye. Cities are destroyed by fire. Thousands of horsemen dash in wild rides across bloodstained plains. The human note weaves in and through the entire thread and lends itself to the mightiest story ever unfolded.

NEW YORK (N. Y.) TELEGRAPH

SEP 19 1915

FF

"The Birth of a Nation" remains at the Liberty Theatre for an indefinite period, arrangements having been completed to utilize that theatre for D. W. Griffith's mighty spectacle for the remainder of the present theatrical season. The big production is approaching the eighth month of its phenomenal run in New York City, and is also nearing the record of six hundred performances in New York.

[illegible] afternoon.

Fourth Week of Birth of a Nation.

FROM the excited comments of friends who have just seen The Birth of a Nation, which enters upon its fourth week at the Olympic Theater today, the average person is apt to imagine that Griffith's stupendous spectacle of civil war and reconstruction days is a series of big detached scenes. The excitement runs high over the battle of Petersburg, the blood-stirring rides of the Ku Klux clansmen, the assassination of Lincoln, the session of the South Carolina Legislature and Sherman's march to the sea.

The Birth of a Nation, as everybody who has seen it knows, tells a well-connected story of romance and chivalry, which is seldom lost sight of an instant, amid the roar of battle or the clattering of horses' hoofs. At Petersburg the greatest thrill comes when Col. Ben Cameron of the Confederate army, charges the command of his old college friend, Capt. Phil Stoneman of the Federals. These are the heroes of the double love story that runs through the drama, each afterward marrying the other's sister. The Stonemans are conspicuous in the Ford Theater audience at the assassination of Lincoln. One of the youthful Camerons falls a victim to war in Sherman's storming of Atlanta. The South Carolina Legislature passes a law for the intermarriage of blacks and whites, making possible two tragic climaxes in the story. The rides of the clansmen are all the more exciting from the fact that their ultimate object is the rescue of persons in whom the audience is intensely interested.

Nowhere has Griffith lost sight of his story, and his spectacle is all the more dramatic [illegible] consequence.

CLIPPING FROM Galveston Tribune
Date 9-19-15

Elaborate and Massive Production Is on Season's Bill at Grand Opera House

KU KLUX KLAN IN "THE BIRTH OF A NATION."

FRESNO (Cal.) REPUBLICAN
SEPT. 19, 1905

WHITE

D. W. Griffith's latest achievement, "The Clansmen," in twelve reels, will be the attraction at the White theater, starting Monday night. The film is based on the famous novel by Thomas Dixon, Jr., but it deals more broadly on its historical side with the life of the American nation than does the play or the book. "The Clansman" is the greatest and most spectacular motion picture ever produced. It is said to have cost half a million dollars and required seven months to make. Historically and tchnically "The Clansman" is perfect. A well known professor of history in one of the California colleges worked three months in securing historical data for this film production. The interior of the famous Ford's Opera House in Washington, D. C., where the assassination of President Lincoln took place, is the most gorgeous theater scene ever put on by any producer. It is an exact replaca of the old Ford, including stage, orchestra pit, furnishings, and all other equipment of that famous and historical playhouse. This scene was built from the most authentic paintings that could be secured, and is identical with the original theater in size. On the stage are seen the same characters that were there the night the assassination took place. The same play that was staged that night is also depicted in the film production.

This motion picture classic, "The Clansman," carries the spectator through the Civil War and the Reconstruction Period that followed. It shows the causes responsible for the war and treats impartially the problems that confronted both the North and South prior to and after the conflict.

The night battle scenes represent the greatest feat ever accomplished in the history of motion photography. The burning of the entire city of Atlanta at night is graphically shown in the picture. Sherman's march to the sea; the siege before Gettysburg, and Lee's surrender to Grant, are all faithfully portrayed before the camera. The famous raids of the Ku Klux Klan, with thousands of these white-hooded riders in action are shown, and this magnificent spectacle has opened a new world of possibilities in the motion picture art. "The Clansman" is a powerful plea for universal peace, and finishes with an allegorical climax that is one of the strongest sermons against the horrors of war that could possibly be arranged.

Included in the all-star cast presenting "The Clansman" are the following: Henry Wilthall, Mae Marsh, Miriam Cooper, Josephine Crowell, Spottiswoode Aitken, Ralph Lewis, Lillian Gish, Elmer Clifton, Robert Harron, George Seigmann, Walter Long, Mary Alden, Joseph Henneberry, Samuel de Grasse, Howard Gaye, Donald Crisp, William de Vaull, and Jennie Lee.

CLIPPING FROM Portland Journal
Date 9-19-15

* * *

"The Birth of a Nation," which was to have closed yesterday at the Heilig, met with such splendid houses during the last days of the week that the management decided to extend the engagement for another week, and for the first time since its production a reduction in the price of admission will be in effect next week, although it will never be shown now nor at any future time for less than 25 cents, Mr. Griffith says.

There is no doubt as to the drawing qualities of this production. It is by far the most human story ever presented in this form. It does not strike one as a story, but as a reality. The reason for this might lie in the fact that all the incidents really happened.

When the news is brought to the southern home in Piedmont of the death of the second son of the house the horror that comes into the eyes of the little sister, played by Mae Marsh, is a revelation of the sad side of war.

One comes away from viewing "The Birth of a Nation" with the feeling of having looked upon the actual events. That is the highest praise that can be given to any dramatic production.

Portland Ore.
Date 9-19-15

"BIRTH OF NATION" IS KEPT

Run at Heilig Will Continue for Fourth and Last Week

The crowds are greater than ever at the Heilig to see "The Birth of a Nation," the half-million dollar Griffith masterpiece founded on Thomas Dixon's "The Clansman." Already having established a record for length of engagement and attendance for an attraction in Portland, "The Birth of a Nation," from the insistent demands of the public who have been unable to view this wonderful production, coupled with the fact that it was possible to extend the engagement, will enter on its fourth and positively last week with the prospect of breaking all previous records, as well as playing to its biggest week's business.

Due to its educational value the management has been prevailed upon by numerous interested persons to reduce the price of admission the coming week—unprecedented in the history of the production, for Mr. Griffith has issued his edict that the production will never be shown for less than 25 cents, now nor at any time.

Portland is the first city in the United States to be favored thus by the management, but to give all those who have not had the opportunity to view this spectacular drama a chance to do so, a reduction in the price of admission will be in effect all next week. The inquiries have been enormous, showing that many hundreds have held off until the last moment. It is also noticeable that there are many repeaters, some having witnessed this great production two and three times.

This remarkable achievement in photo-drama has an unprecedented hold on the imagination. It is so vital in its treatment of the creative events in the development of the new world, so terrific in its explanation of those events, that it compels the intelligence while it stirs deeply the emotions. The influence of this picture on the mind is such that those who see it cannot cease talking of it when they go away.

It is not pleasing in its aspect toward life. On the contrary, it is a terrible indictment of many of the passions and ambitions of humanity. It is a visualized protest against the horrors of war. It shows the noble mind in close contrast to the vile and degenerate mortal, both among the cultured and the ignorant. It is pitiless in its criticism of selfish or perverted passions. On the other hand, it has innumerable scenes of single drama, heroic, pathetic, sublime in simplicity. Had Director Griffith never made another production, "The Birth of a Nation" would have given him permanent place among the first imaginative dramatists. It is a story for the ages.

PORTLAND (Me.) TELEGRAM
SEPT. 19, 1915

709

Margaret Cameron, center; Wade [illegible] left; Luke Cameron, right; being entertained by the darkies on the plantation scene in The Birth of a Nation, at B. F. Keith's, week of September 27th.

PROVIDENCE (R. I.) EVE. TRIBUNE 728
SEPT. 19, 1915

Celebrated [illegible] bill of

Providence Opera House

"The Birth of a Nation," D. W. Griffith's sensational photoplay, will be shown at the Opera House all of the week, Col. Wendelschaefer having made arrangements for another week's engagement here. This photoplay was shown here for three weeks last month and drew capacity audiences at every performance. The demand for seats at the third week's engagement was so large that Colonel Wendelschaefer set out to secure another engagement and succeeded. All the features of the last engagement will be seen with the photoplay this week. The special orchestra of 25 pieces, and courtesy girls and the hundred men behind the scenes necessary to make the suitable noises as the pictures are thrown on the screen will be here again. Two performances will be given daily, opening Monday afternoon.

"The Birth of a Nation," a Civil War drama, is founded on "The Clansman," by Thomas Dixon. It is said to employ more attendants and workers before and behind the curtain than 75 per cent. of the legitimate attractions. It requires 25 men behind the scenes to produce the roars of battle, the pounding of horses' hoofs and other appropriate noises as the pictures are flashed on the screen. Ten more men are kept busy as clearers. The orchestra, which plays specially written music for the pictures, is larger than that carried by some of the big musical shows. Fifteen musicians were brought here from Boston because they were familiar with the music, and 10 local men were added to these.

Mr. Griffith's theme is the development of the nation and its relationship to the part the slavery problem played in bringing about Daniel Webster's prophecy, 'One and indivisible.' The action begins with the introduction of slavery into the colonies. Then comes the Abolition movement, and the stirring times leading up to the secession of the Southern States. The audience is carried through the four years of strife to the death of President Lincoln in Ford's Theatre. The eight years of reconstruction form the final episodes in a drama of history, romance and emotion. Its termination is an allegorical picture of the coming permanent peace and the settlement of all local differences.

To get these varied incidents into his drama the producer used 18,000 people and 3000 horses.

PORTLAND (Me.) PRESS
SEPT. 19, 1915
709

ueus Gray and William Jeffrey are French scholars and the remaining principals familiar with that language are rapidly acquiring a knowledge of the same.

It is just barely possible that before the season ends a performance in the French language may be attempted.

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION" RETURNS TO KEITH'S WEEK OF SEPT. 27.

"The Birth of a Nation" the sensational and spectacular Griffith photo-drama production of the Civil war period, in twelve parts based on the book, "The Clansman," breathes the spirit of that well-known work. The two great outstanding features of it are its controversial spirit and splendor and magnificence of its production. Taken as a whole it is the most tremendous offering ever projected through a motion picture lens.

The greatness of the film is in its spectacular points and the historical reproductions, yet so clearly defined is the drama and so very carefully presented that it grips the audience hard. The appeal is far reaching and there probably never has been a picture offered to the American public that can approach the "swing" of its powerful "pull" or sometimes almost uncanny reproductions of historical scenes.

Charlotte Walker in "Out of Darkness," which is to be one of this week's attractions at the Strand.

From a technical viewpoint it may be placed on a pedestal by itself.

Nothing approaching "The Birth of a Nation" as a picture production has ever been seen in Portland. It is a magnificent spectacle, wonderful in its scope, dramatic to a degree in its construction, faithful in detail and convincing in its argument. Those who may feel inclined to take offense at alleged offenses of half a century ago, and find it difficult to square such offenses with latter day conditions, should bear in mind that the traitor-Arnold, of the Revolution, was the same Arnold who, as one daring "rider of the Black Horse" was the hero of the siege of Quebec.

Beginning with the troublous times just preceding the Civil war "The Birth of a Nation" takes us through that awful struggle, culminating in the assassination of Lincoln, into and through the reconstruction period, which has been classed by many as the darkest period of United States history.

ND (Me.) TELEGRAM
SEPT. 19, 191[illegible]
709

[illegible] Albert Andruss, Thaddeus Gray.—Advertisement.

THE BIRTH OF A NATION.

The Birth of a Nation, a Civil War drama production which has attracted wide spread attention everywhere has been shown in a historical drama in two parts founded on The Clansman by Thomas Dixon. It shows the North and South at War and the reconstruction period which was the aftermath of the war. The story of the production is along the following lines: A Northern and Southern home are shown before the war. The call to arms comes and the sons of both houses leave for the front. Battles and battlefields are rolled out in marvelous perspective, the most striking scenes being the four years' war, showing all of the principal events, including Sherman's March to the Sea. Then comes the assassination of President Lincoln, the getting into power of the men who exploited the negroes and the rise of the Ku-Klux-Klan and their invasions of the blacks domain. The weird and mystical garb of these defenders of Aryan race diplomacy gave the director splendid opportunities, which he utilized to the fullest extent.

When these Crusaders of the South are seen mounted on superb horses, dashing furiously through fields, forests and rivers, the audience did not fail to respond with as liberal applause as during the wonderful battle scene.

In the production Mr. Griffith took over 200,000 feet of film to obtain 120,000 feet of finished product. As a consequence much cutting and assembling was necessary. In this a producer may make or break any production, but with the great amount of such work necessary to put this picture on the market, the keen observer could not detect the spoliation of even the shortest flash cut back or scene.

An orchestra of 20 pieces plays especially composed music and a crew of 15 men work the mechanical effect back stage. In the forth coming production, which has been booked for a return date at B. F. Keith's by popular demand, for the entire week of September 27 with daily matinees. This is the same production, orchestra and stage effects that created the tremendous, record smashing business at Keith's Theater three weeks ago. The seat sale opens at the box-office on Tuesday, Sept. 21 where seats may be had for the entire engagement.—Advertisement.

LOWELL (Mass.) TELEGRAM
SEPT. 19, 1915

to secure a higher education. [illegible] and more than half of that sum has already been realized. The committee appointed to secure this fund consists of Mrs. John P. Horser, chairman; Carl D. Durit and Miss Emma L. Bradley.

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION"

Tomorrow afternoon marks the 350th performance of D. W. Griffith's mighty spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation" in Boston, by far the greatest number of consecutive performances for any theatrical attraction in the history of the Boston stage. After 39 weeks of capacity business at the Tremont theatre the announcement that the engagement would end a week ago occasioned such an overwhelming demand from theatre-goers all over New England, that the engagement be extended that arrangements were made to transfer the picture to the Majestic theatre and during the past two weeks crowded houses attested to the public's appreciation of this continuation.

HARTFORD (Conn.) COURANT
SEPT. 19, 1915
386

[illegible] overdose of morphine. He was lodged in a padded cell.

"BIRTH OF A NATION" WILL BE SHOWN

Picture Will Not Be Withdrawn Unless Mayor Acts.

Unless some action is taken by Mayor Joseph H. Lawler, the moving picture spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," will be shown at either Poli's Theater or the Palace Theater, despite the protests of negro citizens, who are apprehensive that the presentation will incite race hatred.

[illegible]es. Thatcher, general manager of the Poli's circuit, said yesterday that S. Z. Poli, the owner of the two theaters mentioned, had already bought the right to show the films here, but was undecided as to which theater he would have them shown in. Mr. Thatcher said that he saw the picture in New York, but perceived nothing in it that should be objectionable to colored people.

Mayor Lawler, with whom Rev. Walter Gay of No. 358 Garden street has filed a protest, is out of town for the week-end and has taken no action in the premises as yet.

CLIPPING FROM
Providence [illegible]
9-19-15

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION."

Second Engagement of D. W. Griffith's Photoplay.

"The Birth of a Nation," D. W. Griffith's photoplay, will be shown at the Opera House all of this week, Col. Wendelschaefer having made arrangements for a return engagement here. This photoplay ran for three weeks last month and drew capacity audiences. The demand for seats the third week was so large that Col. Wendelschaefer set out to secure another booking. The special orchestra of 25 pieces, the courtesy girls and the 25 men behind the scenes who make the suitable noises as the pictures are thrown on the screen will be here again. Two performances will be given daily, opening Monday afternoon.

The drama is founded on "The Clansman" by Thomas Dixon. Its theme is the development of the nation and its relationship to the part the slavery problem played. The action begins with the introduction of slavery into the colonies. Then come the abolition movement and the stirring times leading up to the secession of the Southern States. The audience is carried through the four years of strife to the death of President Lincoln in Ford's Theatre. The eight years of reconstruction form the final episodes. Its termination is an allegorical picture of permanent peace and the settlement of local differences.

To get these varied incidents into his drama the producer used 18,000 people and 3000 horses.

Fullerton
Broadway Th.
Date
9-19-15.

[illegible] week's engagement.

For once the press agent has been undone. For years it has been the duty to employ such exaggeration in the verbal presentation of his subject as to infuse in the mind of the reader a desire to see or hear that which he tells about. But now comes "The Birth of a Nation," the gorgeous spectacle of the twentieth century and the press agent finds himself at a loss for words to describe the production even in a miner way. D. W. Griffiths has stripped him of his power; exaggeration is out of the question and the writer must now work his brain overtime in order to do even meagre justice to his subject.

"The Birth of a Nation" cannot be exaggerated. It is too tremendous, too gigantic for that. There are countless scenes in it that tongue or pen cannot cope with. Only the eye alone can realise the wonderful progress the motion picture has made in this phenomenal masterpiece.

It seems that everything that the brain of man could conceive has been put into this subject. Eighteen thousand people were used in telling the story, 3000 horses and countless guns, shells, etc., utilized in its massive battle scenes. Two years time was consumed in its making and the approximate cost has been $500,000.

Imagine a picture production of love, romance and history, including tremendous battle scenes the equal of which have never yet been shown upon a screen; imagine such scenes as the burning of Atlanta, Sherman's march to the sea, Grant and Lee at Appomattox, the thrilling rides of the Ku Klux Klan, entire cities built up and destroyed by fire, the assissination of Lincoln at Ford's Theatre, Washington; wonderful artillery duels in which real shells costing $36 apiece were used, miles and miles of trenches with thousands of fighters, cavalry charges, infantry charges, deeds of heroism on the field of battle; imagine hundreds of such mighty scenes as these and there you have "The Birth of a Nation," the pinnacle of filmed spectacles.

Is it any wonder that the press agent bows simply to D. W. Griffiths, the mighty producer of this tremendous screen triumph and admits his inability to faithfully describe this massive visualization.

Tribune
Providence R.I.
9-19-15

SHERMAN'S MARCH TO THE SEA

A Scene in "The Birth of a Nation" at the Opera House This Week.

SEPT. 19, 1905
PITTSBURG (Pa.) POST

"The Birth of a Nation" As Dr. Parkhurst Sees It

SPEAKING OF "THE BIRTH OF A NATION," the photo spectacle at the Nixon, Rev. Dr. Charles H. Parkhurst says:

"Everyone who has seen it is saying something about it. That is the way one feels when coming out of the theater. The thing is vast. It is overwhelming. The tension of the performance is but a single feature of it—but it is that which one feels most poignantly after three straight hours. It begins in an easy way, but commences soon to find its muscle and goes on to the end pounding upon one's senses with blows that come heavier and heavier more and more rapidly.

"The National Board of Censorship has approved it and when assault was made convened again and reaffirmed their approval. The popular indorsement which it has since received by the thousands who are seeing it daily will require more than small prejudices or moral eccentricities to disturb.

"The familiarity which David W. Griffith has shown with the events of the Reconstruction period, along with the detailed study which he has made of the wider territory of events which the play covers renders the production one of surprising educational value to those who were either young or unborn in the stirring years of '60 to '70.

"This drama is a telling illustration of the possibilities of motion pictures as an instrument of instruction in history.

"The criticism that it exhibits the negro in an unfortunate light and that it is calculated to engender racial animosity is fully met by the consideration that it represents the negro, not as he is now at all, but as he was in the days when he had just had the chains broken from him, and when he was rioting in a libertry, so new and untried, that he had not yet learned to understand it and was as ignorant as a baby of the way to use it.

"The battle scenes which Mr. Griffith has depicted are of surpassing power and realism. It is one thing to read about the trenches. It is quite another thing to have them bodily pressed before the eye, with all the demoniac fury that marks conflict at close range. There is no magnificence, no glory, but horror, brutality and stark butchery. It sickens with the sense of man's inhumanity to man. It makes war despicable and devilish.

"There are also scenes of surpassing dignity and beauty done by a master artist's hand—the signing by the President of the proclamation for volunteers which marked the end of the old regime; the surrender of Lee to Grant, and the assassination of the president in Ford's Theater.

"The tender affection in which Mr. Lincoln is held was manifested in the way the spectators received the scene of a heart-broken Southern mother pleading with him for her son sentenced to death as a guerrilla. Every one [illegible] tears in the strangling hush that fell on the theater. 'The Birth of a Nation' has my unqualified approval."

The telephone was a factor in staging the great battle scenes in "The Birth of a Nation."

"Camera two!" was the sharp command from "General" Griffith, standing on the platform of a tower 60 feet high. The telephone operator of the small exchange at his side slipped a peg in the switchboard. Two miles away one of Griffith's assistants received the message. In a minute more a column of troops deployed, the roar of cannon was heard and the attack on the enemy's trenches began.

"Camera four!" A battery of field artillery wheeled about and thundered down the field. Quickly the orders were given to 16 division assistants, and the battle of Petersburg was in full swing. Eighteen thousand men were battling over 12 square miles of ground. If the battle had been real there could not have been more celerity of movement. Everything went like clockwork, without a hitch. The old-fashioned method of using the megaphone would have been futile. It was the telephone that made possible the most wonderful war scenes ever shown on any stage. The wires had to be laid underground, for the telephone did not come into use until 10 years after the Civil war and telephone poles would have been an anachronism.

Mr. Griffith got the idea of this method of handling his battle scenes from the use made of the telephone in Europe's war.

Week Sept 19

"The Birth of a Nation" remains at the Liberty Theatre for an indefinite period. It is announced that it will probably stay there throughout the present season. As the Civil War photoplay has already seen seven months of New York, its engagement will undoubtedly set a mark in respect to attendance.

PPING FROM
Journal
Providence R.I.
9-19-15

Ku-Klux Riders in "Birth of a Nation"

Return Engagement at Opera House.

SEPT. 19, 1905
ITTSBURG (Pa.) LEADER

Battle Scene in "The Birth of a Nation"

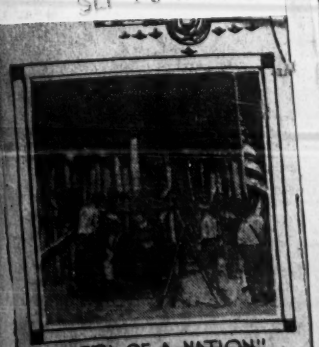
The telephone was a most improtant factor in staging the great battle scenes in "The Birth of a Nation." D. W. Griffith's supreme spectacle, now in the midst of a successful run at the Nixon.

"Camera two!" was the sharp command from "Gen." Griffith, standing on the platform of a tower 60 feet high. The telephone operator of the small exchange at his side slipped a plug in the switchboard. Two miles away one of Griffith's assistants received the message. In a minute more a column of troops deployed, the roar of cannon was heard and the attack on the enemy's trenches began.

"Camera four!" A battery of field artillery wheeled about and thundered down the field. Quickly the orders were given to 16 division assistants and the battle of Petersburg was in full swing. Eighteen thousand men were battling over 12 square miles of ground. If the battle had been real there could not have been more celerity of movement. Everything went like clockwork, without a hitch. The old-fashioned method of using the megaphone would have been futile. It was the telephone that made possible the most wonderful war scenes ever shown on any stage. The wires had to be laid underground for the telephone did not come into use until 10 years after the Civil war, and telephone poles would have been an anachronism.

Mr. Griffith got the idea of this method of handling his battle scenes from the use made of the telephone in the great war. The result of this applying of the most modern methods enabled him to achieve results with the camera far ahead of anything that had ever been done before. That is the secret of the success of Griffith. He is always the pioneer, the creator. The result is that "The Birth of a Nation" is the most stupendous creation ever staged.

NEW YORK (N.Y.) WORLD
SEP 19 1915



"BIRTH OF A NATION"
Brighton Beach Music Hall

NEW YORK (N.Y.) WORLD
SEP 19 1915

MacCurdy, all of whom will have strong parts.

BRIGHTON BEACH MUSIC HALL—For two more weeks D. W. Griffith's wonderful picture spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," may be seen at the Brighton Beach Music Hall. William H. Kemble, the managing director, has extended the time for the performance chiefly on the request of vacationists who have been away all summer and for principals and public school teachers who want to take classes to the Music Hall to see the picture presentation of the historical incidents of the Civil War period. Theatre parties will be features at "The Birth of a Nation" the next two weeks. Last week twelve were held, chiefly by patriotic and educational societies. At one of the performances Mr. Kemble had as his guests 500 orphans, making a total of 4,000 boys and girls who have seen the picture this summer through his generosity.

PITTSBURG (Pa.) GAZETTE-TIMES
SEPT. 19, 1905

"MAKING FACES" IN THE MOVING PICTURE

1 2 3

1—Margaret Cameron. 2—Lillian Gish. 3—Mae Marsh.

These three young women represent the highest development in facial action under the direction of D. W. Griffith. They are all members of the cast of "The Birth of a Nation."

Take Mae Marsh for instance. It would be clever to call Miss Marsh a chameleon, if so many others had not called her that before this. The camera never does such startling tricks as when she is before it. A scrubby little slavey, a young miss home from boarding school, a biddy at the washtub, the sweet college graduate, the grisette, the young woman of fashion, the romantic heroine, the soubrette cut-up and finally the everyday, freckle-faced, rather homely and always roguish kid—those are just a few of the things that Mae Marsh is. A roguish kid, by the way, is Mae Marsh herself off the stage. It was her youthful love of adventure that prompted her to visit the Majestic-Reliance studio in Los Angeles one day and look around to see what was happening. Director Griffith found her, sensed her temperament and set her to work.

The sugary sort of girl is represented among Griffith's forces by Lillian Gish. Without the plastic quality of Mae Marsh—the mask of a thousand faces—Miss Gish has a style of beauty that lends itself to every representation of daintiness. The blondes must watch out, however. The camera has wicked tricks now and then of catching them napping. Once in a while the little angel looks like a little devil. Or the wicked monster of the photographic machine, catching a bad light or a mean pose, may give the adorable blonde the sad prophesy of "50 years later." Away from Pictureland Miss Gish is a well-groomed, fashionable slim young woman.

There is Miss Mirian Cooper, playing the Southern belle, Margaret Cameron, who may fairly be described as "camera-proof." The picture must commit hari-kari itself before it can misrepresent her. The technicians say that this is due to the classic regularity of feature, and especially to the perfection of the large eyes.

The young women of cameraland work long hours. They could not very well belong to a labor union because much of the work is waiting and watching for one's turn to come around. At 9 o'clock every player must be ready at the studio or the location, already costumed for the role. The work before the camera is a grind, not the easy swan-like posing the average person imagines it to be. For every pose one sees, 25 poses have been rehearsed, and a dozen poses actually photographed and most of them thrown away. Out of the harvest of 140,000 feet of "Birth of a Nation" films, Director Griffith selected 12,000 feet which he called good. His judgment has been abundantly ratified by the public. It would be difficult to find an ugly pose of Mae Marsh, Lillian Gish or Mirian Cooper among all the thousands that one witnesses in the film.

PITTSBURG (Pa.) GAZETTE-TIMES
SEPT. 19, 1905

NIXON'S SHERMAN'S MARCH IN "THE BIRTH OF A NATION"

SEPT. 19, 1905
PITTSBURG (Pa.) LEADER

NIXON.—David W. Griffith's epoch-making spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," is duplicating at the Nixon its record-breaking runs in New York, Chicago, Boston, San Francisco and Los Angeles. Partly from the nature of the new art and partly from the opposition aroused, this work has excited keener curiosity than any other offering of recent years, and the extraordinary demand for seats indicates the size of the eager throngs which are coming to the Nixon.

"The Birth of a Nation" tells by film and music the story of a nation reborn through the storm and stress of intercine strife. Instead of the four to six scenes of the conventional play, its technique permits of filming literally thousands of scenes covering a wide range of history and characters. Slavery, the prime cause of the Civil war; Lincoln's call for troops, the ball on the eve of Bull Run and the first triumph of Confederate arms, the devastation wrought by Sherman's march to the sea and the awful ordeal of the siege of Petersburg, Lee's surrender to Grant at Appomattox, the assassination of the Federal President, the harsh radical policy of the south, the uprising of the Ku Klux Klan and the overthrow of the carpetbagger—negro regime—these great factors and events pass in review before the thrilled spectator.

The love interest of the play is based on the friendship between the Camerons, of South Carolina, and the Stonemans, of Pennsylvania, two families involved in the struggle. Ben Cameron, the gallant clansman of the Dixon stories, appears again in the role of romantic hero; the piquant northern girl, Elsie Stoneman, as the heroine. Mr. Griffith took most of the scenes in the great out-of-doors, where nature painted the backgrounds. The notable indoor scenes, like that of Ford's theater on the night of the Lincoln tragedy, the peace at Appomattox and the meeting of the South Carolina legislature of 1870 are exact facsimiles of the originals. It is the first time in art-production that American history has been presented in living pictures on so stupendous a scale. To do this many times the amount of time and energy and expense usually devoted to amusement enterprises had to be used.

Eighteen thousand people and 2,000 horses appear in the picture, which cost approximately $500,000 to produce. Of equal importance is the music that interprets them. It consists of an elaborate symphonic score arranged after Griffith's suggestions of the musical motifs for the leading characters. Now grave, now gay, now sounding the loud diapason of war, again sweetly harmonizing love's sighs and rhapsodies; anon bringing back the old plantation melodies, or the crash of riot and rapine, or the welcome Ku Klux Klan call that fell so gratefully on the ear of southern whites sorely oppressed by the erstwhile "servants in the master's hall."

PITTSBURG (Pa.) GAZETTE-TIMES
SEPT. 19, 1905

Nixon—"Birth of a Nation."

David W. Griffith's spectacle, "Th Birth of a Nation," is duplicating a the Nixon its record-breaking runs i New York, Chicago, Boston, San Fran cisco and Los Angeles. Partly fro the nature of the new art and parti from the opposition aroused this wor has excited keener curiosity than an other offering of recent years, and th extraordinary demand for seats ind cates the size of the throngs which ar coming to the Nixon.

"The Birth of a Nation" tells b film and music the story of a nation born through the storm and stress internecine strife. Instead of the f to six scenes of the conventional p its technique permits of filming li ally thousands of scenes coverin wide range of history and charact Slavery, the prime cause of the C War; Lincoln's call for troops; the on the eve of Bull Run and the triumph of Confederate arms; devastation wrought by Sherm march to the sea and the awful or of the siege of Petersburg; Lee's render to Grant at Appomattox; assassination of the federal Presid the harsh radical policy to the So the uprising of the Ku Klux Klan the overthrow of the carpet-bag negro regime—these great factors events pass in review before thrilled spectator.

The love interest of the play is b on the friendship between the Ca ons of South Carolina and the St m.. is of Pennsylvania, two familie volved in the struggle.

Among the principals are Henr Walthall, the popular Alabama a whose family is historically conn with the story, as the Clansman; lian Gish as Elsie Stoneman; March and Miriam Cooper as Flora Margaret; Ralph Lewis as Stone Joseph Henabery, Howard Gaye Donald Crisp, as Lincoln, Lee Grant respectively; George Seigm the mulatto lieutenant-governo South Carolina; Walter Long a renegade negro Gus; Raoul Wals John Wilkes Booth; Mary Alden a octoroon housekeeper, Lydia; W De Vaull and William Freeman a good negroes, Nelse and Jake; Clifton and Robert Harron as young soldiers; Spottiswoods Aike Josephine Crowell as Dr. and Cameron, and many others.

line," an product—

TRENTON (N. J.) ADVERTISER
SEPT. 19, 1905

D. W. GRIFFITH,
Whose Genius and Grasp of Big Ideas Made "The Birth of a Nation" Possible.

BIG PHOTOPLAY OPENS AT TRENT

"The Birth of a Nation," Griffith's Famous Spectacle, Will Run for Entire Week

Visions of a return to the days of the theatre, when the "Standing Room Only" Sign never bore an accumulation of dust, have been awakened by scenes around the Trent Theatre during the advance sale for "The Birth of a Nation," which begins a week's engagement tomorrow night. Daily matinees are given by the company, but there will be none Monday afternoon owing to the time required to install the massive production.

Coming in the midst of its phenomenal success in New York and Philadelphia, "The Birth of a Nation" is doubly welcome. In the Trent Theatre presentation an orchestra of thirty will be used and it will be identical in detail to those in New York and Philadelphia.

"The Birth of a Nation" tells by film and music the story of a nation reborn through the storm and stress of internecine strife. Instead of the four to six scenes of the conventional play, its technique permits of filming literally thousands of scenes and covering a wide range of history and characters. Slavery, the prime cause of the war; Lincoln's call for troops to subdue the Southern States; the ball on the eve of Bull Run, and the first triumph of Confederate arms; the devastation wrought by Sherman's march and the awful ordeal of the Siege of Petersburg; Lee's surrender to Grant at Appomattox; the assassination of the Federal President; the harsh radical policy to the stricken South; the uprising of the Ku Klux Klan, and the overthrow of the carpetbagger regime—these great factors and events pass in review before the thrilled spectator.

The love interest of the play is based on the friendships between the Camerons, of South Carolina, and the Stonemans, of Pennsylvania, two families involved in the struggle. Ben Cameron, the gallant clansman of the Dixon stories, appears again in the role of romantic hero; the piquant Northern girl, Elsie Stoneman, as the heroine. Mr. Griffith took most of the scenes in the great out-of-doors, where Nature painted the backgrounds, and army men directed the battle campaigns. The notable indoor scenes, like Ford's Theatre on the night of the Lincoln tragedy, the peace at Appomattox, and the South Carolina Legislature of 1870, are exact replicas of the originals. Altogether, it is the first time in art-production that history in the large has been presented in living pictures. To do this, many times the amount of the time, energy and expense usually devoted to amusement enterprises had to be used. Eighteen thousand people and 3,000 horses appear in the picture, which cost approximately $500,000 to produce.

The production to be seen here is identical with those of New York and Chicago. Two baggage cars of equipment and a company of fifty people are carried en tour. The latter includes a large symphony orchestra of expert musicians. Others in the party are a stage manager, complete crew, two picture-machine operators, together with optical experts to readjust the theatre projection and sittings to the latest scientific focal requirements.

SEPT. 19, 1905
PITTSBURG (PA.) POST

Nixon—"Birth of a Nation"

David W. Griffith's epoch-making spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," is duplicating at the Nixon its record-breaking runs in New York, Chicago, Boston, San Francisco and Los Angeles. Partly from the nature of the new art and partly from the opposition aroused, this film production has excited keener curiosity than any other offering of recent years, and the extraordinary demand for seats indicates the size of the eager throngs which are coming to the Nixon.

"The Birth of a Nation" tells by film and music the story of a nation re-born through the storm and stress of internecine strife. Instead of the four to six scenes of the conventional play its technique permits of filming thousands of scenes covering a wide range of history and characters. Slavery, the prime cause of the Civil war; Lincoln's call for troops; the ball on the eve of Bull Run and the first triumph of Confederate arms; the devastation wrought by Sherman's march to the sea, and the awful ordeal of the siege of Petersburg; Lee's surrender to Grant at Appomattox; the assassination of the Federal President; the uprising of the Ku-Klux Klan, and the overthrow of the carpetbagger; these factors pass in review before the thrilled spectator.

The love interest of the play is based on the friendship between the Camerons of South Carolina and the Stonemans of Pennsylvania, two families involved in the struggle. Ben Cameron, the gallant clansman of the Dixon stories, appears again in the role of romantic hero; the piquant Northern girl, Elsie Stoneman, as the heroine. Mr. Griffith took most of the scenes out-of-doors, where Nature painted the background. The notable indoor scenes, like that of Ford's Theater on the night of the Lincoln tragedy, the peace at Appomattox and the meeting of the South Carolina Legislature of 1870, are facsimiles of the originals.

It is the first time that American history has been presented in living pictures on so stupendous a scale. Eighteen thousand people and 3,000 horses appear in the picture, which cost approximately $500,000 to produce. Of equal importance is the music that interprets them. It consists of an elaborate symphonic score arranged after Griffith's suggestions of the musical motifs for the leading characters. Now grave, now gay; now sounding the lofty diapason of war, again sweetly harmonizing love's sighs and rhapsodies; anon bringing back the old plantation melodies, or the crash of riot and rapine, or the wholesome Ku-Klux Klan call that fell so gratefully on the ear of Southern whites sorely oppressed by the era, while "servants in the master's hall"—it fits the changing scenes of the story like a flowing, beautiful garment.

TRENTON (N. J.) ADVERTISER
SEPT. 19, 1905

AMAZING FACTS ABOUT "BIRTH OF A NATION"

Five thousands scenes, 18,000 characters, 3,000 horses. Approximate cost of productino, $500,000.

Cities built and then destroyed by fire.

The biggest battle of the Civil War re-enacted.

Ford's Theatre, Washington, reproduced to the smallest detail for the Lincoln tragedy.

A series of wild "Ku Klux" rides that commandeered a county for a day and cost $10,000.

Women's dresses used 25,000 yards and Ku Klux costumes 12,000 yards of cloth.

Night photography of battle scenes, invented and perfected at a cost of $5,000.

Wonderful artillery duels in which real shells, costing $80 apiece, were used. Miles of trenches, thousands of fighters. "War as it actually is."

A musical score of 40 pieces, synchronized to the several thousand distinct and individual scenes.

Twelve thousand feet of film in the public picture represent 140,000 feet of actual photography.

George Fawcett is to have the leading role in a new play by George Broadhurst, called "What Money Can't Buy." The piece is a romantic comedy.

PHILADELPHIA (Pa.) INQUIRER
SEPT. 19, 1915

In the Pict

FORREST—No one who has seen "The Birth of a Nation," the spectacular motion picture production now on view here, will say aught but that D. W. Griffith has shown himself to be a master stage director. Yet "The Birth of a Nation" is not a photoplay in the accepted sense. It is a master creation, an epic story presented with the realism of actuality by talented players who seem to be living again in the soul-stirring times when a nation was moving onward to a glorious destiny. Each incident is made the more impressive by the musical accompaniment that is played by a symphony orchestra and that is of the most appropriate sort. There is no one who is not thrilled by the clash of great armies in scenes showing important engagements in the Civil War and that the appeal is to all types of men is apparent in the diverse kinds of people to be found at any presentation of the picture. Apart from the wonderful representation of the assassination of Lincoln at Ford's Theatre in Washington, probably the most impressive scene in this historic drama, there is a succession of scenes of compelling interest. Beginning with an exposition of early slavery days, the picture takes the onlooker into the trying days of the Civil War. But each dread happening is placed in contrast with delightful romantic scenes and the horrors of battle are forgotten or relieved by little human touches such as Griffith so well knows how to give. The burning of Atlanta is a remarkable picture, but still more effective is the series of scenes showing the Ku Klux Klan on its errands of safety. In the concluding part of the picture one sees activities in famous institutions of young colored men and women who are fitting themselves for high places in the industrial world. Splendid photography and superb projection of the picture contribute importantly to the irresistible appeal of this master work.

BOSTON TRANSCRIPT
SEPT. 20, 1915

mood of war-time. The war has brought us down to the elemental things, and the theatre, like every other institution, must respond to the change. [The Daily Mail

Where the Movies Fail

If there lurks at the bottom of your foolish heart a fear that the photo-play will ever drive the spoken drama from the stage, by all means go to see "Peer Gynt" on the screen. It happens to be an interesting example of the limitations of the cinematograph. "The Birth of a Nation" is probably the best illustration of what can be done in the movies. "Peer Gynt" is a striking illustration of what cannot be done in the movies. And it is a fair enough test, for the workmanship is for the most part admirable and the picture has enlisted the services of one of the most graphic actors of the English-speaking stage.

It was natural, perhaps, that Ibsen's majestic dramatic poem should tempt the motion-picture man. Here was incidental music already at hand. Here was a picturesque story, full of life and color. Here was a phantasmagoria big enough to dismay the worker within the ordinary proscenium arch, but an open invitation to the maker of movies, with its range from Norwegian tarns to the waters of Hudson Bay, from the Gates of Heaven to the hot sands of Morocco. The nimble camera could make all the necessary leaps and such a player as Cyril Maude could reveal poor Peer's progress, from the laughing youth who puts old Ase atop the millhouse to the broken old man who falters to the threshold of Solveig's cottage.

The thread of the story, plus some of the exuberance of the invention—these are used, but that is all. The poetry is as almost completely missing as if it had never been conceived. All the implications in this song of a self-wasted soul are gone. Of course, the camera could not touch the finer subtleties and the social satire, and most of the conspicuous beauties of the poem also escaped it. The point is that this was necessarily so. "Peer Gynt" is a great adventure always, but "Peer Gynt" on the screen is as subtle and significant as the story of "Sinbad the Sailor." The photo-play is entertaining to watch, but to call it "Peer Gynt" is in the nature of an impertinence. [The New York Times

BROOKLYN, (N. Y.) TIMES
Date .....
SEP 20 1915

Notes of Other Theatres.

After all, one of the big, legitimate theatres in Brooklyn may be turned into a film house. This report comes close upon the news that William Kemble will show "The Birth of a Nation" at the Montauk, before long, but his plans go further. He is anxious to secure the local franchise for the big Triangle features, turned out by the Griffith-Sennett-Ince combination, which has chosen the Knickerbocker for its Manhattan home. Whether this greatest of all moving picture enterprises will make Kemble its Brooklyn representative is just as uncertain as whether he will be able to get one of the big houses here, should he obtain the franchise. But he is working hard, he has excellent financial backing and, if he succeeds, the Triangle shows will, indeed, be a worth-while addition to local amusements.

ST. LOUIS (Mo.) STAR
SEPT. 20, 1915

"BIRTH OF A NATION" IN FOURTH WEEK AT OLYMPIC

The fourth week of the great film spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," started at the Olympic Theater yesterday. The film will remain in St. Louis but one week after the present week.

The film is drawing great crowds every matinee and night at the Olympic. The rare beauty of the scenes produced and the fidelity to history throughout make the picture worth seeing twice or more, and many persons have visited it more than once.

Thus far the audiences at the matinees have been largely made up of women and children. The value of the reproduction of such scenes as the several battles in the Civil War, Sherman's march to the sea, the burning of Atlanta, Lincoln's assassination in the Ford Theater, fits it for children from an educational viewpoint, as well as for their entertainment.

TORONTO (Ont.) NEWS
SEPT. 20, 1915

AMUSEMENTS

Miss Mae Marsh, who plays the role of Flora Cameron in "The Birth of a Nation" at the Alexandra Theatre this week, is known all over the continent as the girl with a thousand faces. Little Miss Marsh has only been in pictures two years, but she has already reached the top of the ladder. A few seasons ago she came to the Griffith studio to watch her older sister work. She was raw and undeveloped, but Griffith's keen eye saw great possibilities beneath the surface of her anxious eye and mobile countenance. He wanted a half-grown girl for a work he was finishing and he selected her. Now she has the most likable role in all the thousands of characters that crowd Griffith's masterpiece. She is the joyous note of youth in the most remarkable of film dramas.

Experienced actors always have a word of praise, sincere and emphatic, for the little lass who plays the younger sister in this appealing story. This California girl can express almost any emotion the feminine mind can grasp. She has played tomboys and heroines, consumptive girls and athletic girls. No part frightens her when Griffith is directing.

NORFOLK [Va.] VIRGINIAN-PILOT
SEPT. 19, 1905

HENRY WALTHALL as "The Little C[olonel]" in "The Birth of a Nation," coming to the Colonial, week of September 27.

"BIRTH OF A NATION COMING TO COLONIAL

Still at the height of its triumph in New York, Philadelphia, Chicago, St. Louis and other metropolitan centers, David W. Griffith's stupendous spectacle of the reconstruction, "The Birth of a Nation," comes to the Colonial theatre for a week's engagement beginning Monday night, September 27. Daily matinees will be given after the opening.

The coming of the spectacle will be notable event aside from its own importance as a theatrical offering. It will give Norfolk the distinction of being the first city of the South to witness a mighty dramatic narrative which, although distinctly Southern in atmosphere and theme, has been shown only in the larger cities of the North. There has been a nation-wide demand for the spectacle from the smaller cities, but only a few will be fortunate enough to witness it within the next three years. Norfolk will mark the opening of a Southern tour, embracing only the larger cities below the Mason and Dixon line.

The company coming to the Colonial consists of a symphony orchestra of thirty and a corps of electricians and mechanics. With the dozen supernumeraries on the stage which the audience does not see, there are upwards of fifty people employed in the presentation. Extensive changes will be made in the auditorium and stage of the Colonial to receive the two carloads of electrical and other equipment carried by the company. The very scope of the production precludes its being presented in any but the larger theatres.

For eight months the Liberty theatre has been packed twice daily by "The Birth of a Nation," and it will probably remain in the metropolis the rest of the winter. It is also scheduled as an all-winter attraction at the Forrest theatre, where it is now in its second month, with seats selling ten weeks ahead.

The first half of the spectacle, which was suggested by Thomas Dixen's "The Clansman," exhibits the salient events of the war between the States. The formation of the Confederacy, Lincoln's call for troops, Sherman's march to the sea, the battle of Petersburg, Lee's surrender to Grant and the awful tragedy of Lincoln's assassination at Ford's theatre April 14, 1865, live before the spectator of the Griffith drama. In the second half the South's "second uprising"—this time against the carpetbagger regime—is shown in a thrilling story of Reconstruction days. The romance of the "little Confederate colonel," Ben Cameron, with the Northerner, Elsie Stoneman, and that of the Unionist captain, Phil Stoneman, with Margaret Cameron, the South Carolina lassie, maintain two threads of continuous love-interest throughout the story.

But the great out-of-doors is Mr. Griffith's special field. Tremendous battle scenes and the wild rides of the Ku Klux Klan are staged with thousands of participants. Eighteen thousand human actors and 3,000 horses were employed in the making of the picture, which cost half a million dollars and took eight months to produce. Some idea of its immensity is gained from the fact that there are no less than 5,000 distinct and individual scenes.

PHILADELPHIA, (PA.) PRESS

93

SCENE, BIRTH OF A NATION. FORREST

HARTFORD (Conn.) TIMES
SEPT. 20, 1915

ANOTHER PICTURE PROTEST

Colored Club Writes the Mayor Objecting to Local Showing of "The Birth of a Nation."

Mayor Lawler said to-day, he was not ready to pass upon the question whether or not he would sanction the showing at a local theater of the films, "The Birth of a Nation," against which a protest was made by a representative of the colored race in Hartford. The mayor said he expected to confer with the owner of the theater in which it was planned to show the picture.

The protest to the mayor was supported to-day by the receipt of a joint note from a number of colored residents as follows:

Hartford, Conn., Sept. 17, 1915.
His Honor, Mayor Lawler.

Dear Sir: Having read in last night's Times of Rev. Walter Gay's protest against the photo picture, "The Birth of a Nation," which is to be shown in this city at an early date, we, the undersigned, having organized a club for the social uplift and benefit of our race, heartily endorse Rev. Gay's protest and wish to add ours, stating, as we think, the sentiment of the intelligent people of our race.

Respectfully,

E. P. ROBINSON, Vice-Pres.
C. W. BAYNES, Secretary.
W. A. HENDERSON.
E. HENRY.
C. E. PHILLIPS.
G. F. CLINTON.
W. R. JOHNSON.

JUDGE RESTRAINS INTERFERENCE WITH "BIRTH OF NATION"

Hennings Says He Is Unable to Discover Any Proof in Support of Charge That Picture Play Is Offensive Morally.

Judge Hennings, in a written opinion, Monday, ordered a temporary injunction restraining the Board of Police Commissioners from interfering with production of "The Birth of a Nation" at the Olympic Theater.

"The best evidence against the contention of the Board of Police Commissioners and the Morality Squad that the picture is immoral," the Court says, "and will create hatred, race prejudice and ill-will, is the fact that, although the production has been running daily for three weeks, there has not been, so far as the evidence shows, the slightest indication of any such untoward condition in our city."

AFFIDAVITS SUPPORT JUDGE.

Referring to the scene in which Silas Lynch seeks to marry a white woman, Judge Hennings says: "A number of States of the Union, including the State on our east (Illinois) permit such marriages. While opinions differ, and the law of Missouri prohibits such marriages, evidently the residents of States in which mixed marriages, and white people elsewhere, do not consider such intermarriages immoral.

"Affidavits filed by three ministers of the Gospel, the morality squad of the Police Department, educators, dramatic writers, professional and business men, and 866 cards signed by spectators to the effect that they found nothing immoral in the production, sustain the position that no race prejudice is engendered."

Among those who filed affidavits in support of the play were: John A. Brehany of New York, manager of the Epoch Producing Company; William B. Brumby, dramatic critic for the St. Louis Republic; Rev. John S. Bunting, rector of the Episcopal Church of the Ascension; F. M. Curlee, Manton Davis, Edmund Duckworth, rector of the Episcopal Church of the Redeemer; W. C. Dyer, Walker Hill, president of the Mechanics-American National Bank; Rev. J. Layton Mause, pastor of the Central Presbyterian Church; Miss Katherine Richardson, dramatic critic for the St. Louis Star; Richard Spamer, dramatic critic for the Globe-Democrat; Brother Lawrence Sixtus of Christian Brothers' College, and Raymond A. Walsh, dramatic critic for The St. Louis Times.

Affidavits opposing the production of the play were filed by George L. Vaughn, a negro lawyer; Ira A. Dorsey, a negro clerk in the office of Circuit Clerk Charles R. Graves; William H. Huffman, a negro school teacher; Albert Burgess, Homer C. Phillips and C. K. Robinson, negro lawyers; Clifford H. Evans and Katherine M. Johnson.

TRENTON (N. J.) TIMES
SEPT. 20, 1915

HEAVY SALES FOR "BIRTH OF NATION"

Cash Reservations Have Already Reached $1,500 for Motion-Picture Play

When long lines of patrons waited at the box office of the Trent Theatre this morning to purchase tickets for "The Birth of a Nation," new standards were established for a motion picture production in this city. No other photodrama has ever asked prices as high as those established for this engagement, and none has ever had such a number of reservations made.

At the box office it was said that the advance sale had reached $1,500 in cash and Montgomery Moses, the manager of the house, asserted that there was every indication that capacity houses would prevail every night of the engagement.

The picture, which has become noted throughout the country, is on the most extensive scale. A corps of 24 workmen is carried to insure its perfect presentation. Twelve are engaged on the stage to make sounds in keeping with the theme on the screen and add realism to it. Sixteen musicians are also in the company in addition to those who will be engaged in Trenton and an electrician, machine operators, and other helpers are employed.

ST. LOUIS (Mo.) GLOBE-DEMOCRAT
SEPT. 20, 1915

[illegible] the house by good [illegible]ting. The scene in Chicago's Cafe Sinister (or is it a cafe in sinister Chicago?) has unmistakably realistic touches.

Coming to the American next week Al H. ("Metz") Wilson, the musician, with sweet singer, in a new song-play, entitled, As Years Roll On, rich in [illegible]lits.

The Birth of a Nation.

At the [illegible] only the fourth week of The Birth of a Nation starts in stronger than any of its predecessors. The matinee came near the turning-a-way point of prosperity and the crowd at night, at double the matinee price of admission, was not much smaller. All of which spells prosperity with capital letters of a large font. The immense film is being unreeled without alteration or curtailment of any kind, so as not to interfere with the lavish orchestral accompaniment by some thirty high-priced instrumentalists, whose presentations must carefully coincide with the thrilling action of the most stupendous photo-spectacle ever designed.

BUFFALO (N. Y.) TIMES
SEPT. 20, 1915

[illegible]
Would you be [illegible] enough to [illegible] wish, if possible, whether the picture play or the films of "The Birth of a Nation" are to be shown in Buffalo, N. Y. A. if so, when?

There are over 100, possibly over 200 moving picture houses in Buffalo. Just what films the managers of these have under consideration for presentation I do not know, and I have no way of finding out. Doubtless the manager of a house that contemplates putting this film on will announce it in the advertising columns of the newspapers. Watch them.

PORTLAND (Ore.) OREGONIAN 711
SEPT. 19, 1915

MOTION-PICTURE INDUSTRY TO BE REVOLUTIONIZED IN NORWAY

Government-Managed Movies to Succeed Those Privately Owned—Government Also May Turn to Production of Photo-Plays.

Lincoln on the Fatal Night, From "The Birth of a Nation" Beginning Fourth Week at the Heilig

SAN FRANCISCO (Cal.) CALL & POST
SEPT. 20, 1915

FF

...concert ...scription sale of seats for ... season of four concerts will conclude at 343 Powell street this afternoon and seats for single concerts will be ready at the same place Thursday morning at 9 o'clock.

Griffith Spectacle Still Drawing Card

Twenty-one weeks of presentation in San Francisco have been registered by D. W. Griffith's film masterpiece, "The Birth of a Nation; or, The Clansman," which remains popular as ever at the Savoy Theater.

"The Birth of a Nation" is an altogether noble and splendid picture, comprising the greatest and largest spectacles ever produced. As a representation of history nothing like it has ever been presented, for in the space of three hours the audience sees, hears and feels a period of fifteen years.

Thousands of people took part in the making of this picture. The scenes where real battles were fought are its background. In it you see the counterfeit presentment of the great men of the Civil War as they were when they lived and moved and had their being—Lincoln, Grant, Lee, Charles Sumner and Seward are depicted.

"The Birth of a Nation" interests all kinds and conditions of Americans.

Creen Leg 2

"The Birth of a Nation," most wonderful and stupendous of all photo-spectacles, entered on its third week at the Forrest, where it has been attracting crowded audiences twice daily. The Civil War scenes are most impressive and realistic, employing 18,000 people, and 3000 horses in the representation of the thrilling battle scenes. Nothing so gigantic as this great spectacle of the Civil War and Reconstruction has ever been presented to the public, and it is an unquestionable triumph for the producer, David W. Griffith. The burning of Atlanta, the assassination of Lincoln and the Ku Klux Klan scenes are outstanding episodes.

Record Leg 2

"Birth of a Nation"—Forrest.

There is no diminution in interest in "The Birth of a Nation," the D. W. Griffith motion-picture spectacle now at the Forrest. Indeed, so great is demand for seats now that the theatre is thronged at every presentation. The pictures have historic value as well as tense dramatic quality, and the augmentation of the effect each presentation makes is a tribute to the fine orchestra, playing music specially selected, and in illustration of each incident as it is re-enacted through the intermediary of the projection machine and of the screen. "The Birth of a Nation" has set a standard in motion picture achievement difficult to attain.

PORTLAND (Me.) PRESS
SEPT. 20, 1915

...edge of the same.

It is just barely possible that before the season ends a performance in the French language may be attempted.

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION" RETURNS TO KEITH'S WEEK OF SEPT., 27.

"The Birth of a Nation" the sensational and spectacular Griffith photo-drama production of the Civil war period, in twelve parts based on the book, "The Clansman," breathes the spirit of that well-known work. The two great outstanding features of it are its controversial spirit and splendor and magnificence of its production. Taken as a whole it is the most tremendous offering ever projected through a motion picture lens.

The greatness of the film is in its spectacular points and the historical reproductions, yet so clearly defined is the drama and so very carefully presented that it grips the audience hard. The appeal is far reaching and there probably never has been a picture offered to the American public that can approach the "swing" of its powerful "pull" or sometimes almost uncanny reproductions of historical scenes.

From a technical viewpoint it may be placed on a pedestal by itself.

Nothing approaching "The Birth of a Nation" as a picture production has ever been seen in Portland. It is a magnificent spectacle, wonderful in its scope, dramatic to a degree in its construction, faithful in detail and convincing in its argument. Those who may feel inclined to take offense at alleged offenses of half a century ago, and find it difficult to square such offenses with latter day conditions, should bear in mind that the traitor Arnold, of the Revolution, was the same Arnold who, as the daring "rider of the Black Horse" was the hero of the siege of Quebec.

Beginning with the troublous times just preceding the Civil war "The Birth of a Nation" takes us through that awful struggle, culminating in the assassination of Lincoln, into and through the reconstruction period, which has been classed by many as the darkest period of United States history.

Engineer Leg 2

"The Birth of a Nation" began the third week of its limited engagement at the Forrest yesterday. This masterpiece of motion picture perfection gains in interest with each successive showing and audiences of large proportions applaud and enjoy the remarkable changes as they are flashed upon the screen. Added to the attractiveness of the films there is a musical background of marked charm and appropriateness.

ST. LOUIS (Mo.) TIMES
SEPT. 20, 1915

JUDGE RESTRAINS INTERFERENCE WITH "BIRTH OF NATION"

Hennings Says He Is Unable to Discover Any Proof in Support of Charge That Picture Play Is Offensive Morally.

Judge Hennings, in a written opinion, Monday, ordered a temporary injunction restraining the Board of Police Commissioners from interfering with production of "The Birth of a Nation" at the Olympic Theater.

"The best evidence against the contention of the Board of Police Commissioners and the Morality Squad that the picture is immoral," the Court says, "and will create hatred, race prejudice and ill-will, is the fact that, although the production has been running daily for three weeks, there has not been, so far as the evidence shows, the slightest indication of any such untoward condition in our city."

AFFIDAVITS SUPPORT JUDGE.

Referring to the scene in which Silas Lynch seeks to marry a white woman, Judge Hennings says: "A number of States of the Union, including the State on our east (Illinois) permit such marriages. While opinions differ, and the law of Missouri prohibits such marriages, evidently the residents of States in which mixed marriages, and white people elsewhere, do not consider such intermarriages immoral.

"Affidavits filed by three ministers of the Gospel, the morality squad of the Police Department, educators, dramatic writers, professional and business men, and 866 cards signed by spectators to the effect that they found nothing immoral in the production, sustain the position that no race prejudice is engendered."

Among those who filed affidavits in support of the play were: John A. Brehany of New York, manager of the Epoch Producing Company; William V. Brumby, dramatic critic for the St. Louis Republic; Rev. John S. Bunting, rector of the Episcopal Church of the Ascension; F. M. Curlee, Manton Davis, Edmund Duckworth, rector of the Episcopal Church of the Redeemer; W. C. Dyer, Walker Hill, president of the Mechanics-American National Bank; Rev. J. Layton Mauze, pastor of the Central Presbyterian Church; Miss Katherine Richardson, dramatic critic for the St. Louis Star; Richard Spamer, dramatic critic for the Globe-Democrat; Brother Lawrence Sixtus of Christian Brothers' College, and Raymond A. Walsh, dramatic critic for The St. Louis Times.

Affidavits opposing the production of the play were filed by George L. ...aughn, a negro lawyer; Ira A. Dorcy, a negro clerk in the office of Circuit Clerk Charles R. Graves; William ... Huffman, a negro school teacher; ...lbert Burgess, Homer C. Phillips and ... K. Robinson, negro lawyers; Clifford ... Evans and Katherine M. Johnson.

HARTFORD (Conn.) POST
SEPT. 20, 1915

Just as an individual is obliged to, a ... when business properties are repeatedly ... for twice their assessed values the assessors should take cognizance.

"The Birth of a Nation"

The reception which greets the announcement of the forthcoming showing of the moving picture, "The Birth of a Nation" Hartford, is not materially different from that which has greeted the same announcement in practically every other city. ... might be supposed that the owners of the picture would be disturbed by the serious opposition to their masterpiece, but, whisper it gently, there is nothing to indicate that they consider it in the light of a misfortune.

We believe, in spite of all the agitation, that "The Birth of a Nation" will be shown here. There is nothing in the way of a theatrical censoring precedent here which leads this paper to believe that Mayor Lawler will consider himself justified in closing the theaters of the city to the picture. There may of course be parts which tend to foment racial antagonisms and such parts should be eliminated and doubtless will be. With such portions, if there be any, eliminated, there can be no reason for forbidding the showing of the picture.

Photodrama Art Reaches Zenith In Colossal "Birth Of A Nation"

Norfolk Will See Most Pretentious Production Ever Attempted in Filmland, Employing 18,000 People and Wealth of Scenery.

Here Full Week At Colonial Theatre

David W. Griffith's gigantic spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," will come to the Colonial for a week's engagement beginning next Monday night. There will be daily matinees after the opening.

It is a striking commentary on the enterprise of the Wells interests that the big spectacle will be shown in Norfolk before Baltimore, Washington and other large cities of the South have seen it. The engagement at the Colonial will open the southern tour of the company, which consists of an orchestra of thirty and a corps of electricians and mechanics. A number of supernumeraries are also utilized in attaining the marvelous stage effects, bringing the total number employed in the presentation up to fifty.

Norfolk will have the further distinction of being the smallest city to witness the spectacle to date. It is now attracting tremendous audiences in New York, Philadelphia, St. Louis, Pittsburgh, Chicago and San Francisco. Although in its eighth month at the Liberty Theatre, New York, and its second month at the Forrest Theatre, Philadelphia, it will probably remain in both theatres all winter.

To make room for the two carloads of equipment carried by the company extensive changes will be made in the auditorium and stage of the Colonial. Several rows of seats will be removed from the rear of the orchestra floor, where the large booth and projecting devices are to be erected, and the stage will be stripped of all its superfluous furnishings to provide space for the great mass of electrical properties and other equipment carried by the company.

"The Birth of a Nation" is founded upon the Rev. Thomas Dixon's successful novel and play, "The Clansman," but having been staged in the great outdoors many departures from the text of the original story were possible. It is the story of the reconstruction, enacted before the camera just as the wives and daughters of '65 saw in it grim reality.

SPECTACLE OF MAGNITUDE.

It covers a wide range of American history and touches only the highest points of interest in the great events that led up to and terminated the Civil War. The force that slavery played in producing this crisis is traced from its inception to its abolition. While the basic theme is historical in its foundation its intent is the fundamental one of true drama. The forces which make for these results have been marshalled upon a larger scale than was ever dreamed of before. Where directors of vast spectacles have dealt with hundreds in the past Griffith employs thousands. Eighteen thousand people fill his stage, which has a vast territory for its background. Three thousand horses pass before the view in wild dashes over miles of country roadway.

The decisive battles of the Civil War are reproduced in faithful detail and one sees these conflicts fought again just as they were waged fifty years ago. Cities were built up only to be destroyed to lend force and verity to the dramatic narrative. One enormous battlefield is shown stretching over an area of 10 square miles and upon these planes and trenches 10,000 soldiers clash in a mimic warfare that is as real as if you were an eyewitness of the actual occurrence. Holding the great effects in tether is a story as tender and true as love and romance can be pictured.

There are tears and smiles, noble sacrifices and heroic deeds of personal valor. Youthful dreams of love's fruition are rent asunder by the demons of war; home ties snap before the call to arms and suffering such as the call to arms and suffering such as the cannot be imagined is depicted in the crude manner that history is made when men surrender reason to passion and engage in a deadlock of armed resistance.

The spectator sees the war start after being shown the causes which precipitated it, the great generals of the contending sections playing their desperate games of human pawns moved into the field slaughter, then comes the agreement for peace and Lincoln sets about his superhuman task of healing the wounds by the application of that great love which made him the towering figure of his age.

Ball Following Christening Of First Confederate Flag, As Shown In "The Birth Of A Nation," Coming To Colonial Next Week.

PORTLAND (Me.) ARGUS
SEPT. 20, 1915

706

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION" RETURNS TO KEITH'S WEEK OF SEPT. 27.

The closing of the Royster & Dudley Opera Company at B. F. Keith's has made it possible to book the wonderful motion picture "The Birth of a Nation" for a return engagement in Portland. Everyone knows the phenominal business which this epic of photography played to here three weeks ago, establishing the highest figure of any theatrical enterprise that ever played Portland for a week's run. The picture could have stayed for a second week to capacity attendance but existing contracts with the Royster & Dudley company prevented. Hundreds were turned away at every performance and the requests for a return engagement have been received by the management from every hand, both from those who have seen the picture and would like to see it again and from those who were unable to see it before. The coming engagement will enable everyone who did not avail themselves of the previous opportunity to see the greatest moving picture ever staged. Others may advertise as being as great as "The Birth of a Nation" seeking by this great picture's reputation to draw patronage to itself but the fact that they take "The Birth of a Nation" as a standard of superlativeness and a criterion of excellence is proof that there is but one picture that is the last word in stupendous, sensational and spectacular photo-drama and that picture is "The Birth of a Nation." It is acknowledged to be the greatest offering ever projected through a motion picture lens.

The greatness of the film is in its spectacular points and the historical reproductions, yet so clearly defined is the drama and so very carefully presented that it grips the audience and holds the spectator in suspense until the final episode. Its appeal is far reaching and there never has been a picture offered to the American public that can approach the swing of its powerful "pull" and its almost uncanny reproduction of historical scenes.

This great photo-drama will return to the B. F. Keith Theatre for the week of Sept. 27, with two performances daily. Seats go on sale for the entire engagement on Tuesday, Sept. 21st. This picture did such a remarkable business before that nearly every performance was sold out several hours before the opening overture. It is safe to predict that the attendance will be as great as before and the wise theatregoers will secure their seats early. It has smashed all records for attendance in Boston, New York and Chicago where it has been playing for months and every return engagement this fall in New England has witnessed capacity houses.

PORTLAND (Me.) EXPRESS & ADV.
SEPT. 20, 1915

THEATERS

THE BIRTH OF A NATION

The Birth of a Nation will return to B. F. Keith's for a week's engagement commencing Monday matinee, Sept. 27 and the thousands of motion picture fans who were unable to see it during its engagement at Keith's three weeks ago will have an opportunity again which they are sure to avail themselves of. As everyone knows this famous picture drama tested the capacity of Keith's at every performance and that every day hundreds were turned away unable to secure seats. The engagement could have been continued for another week to packed business but the then existing contracts with the Royster and Dudley Opera Company prevented a continuation. Now the closing of the opera company has made it possible to rebook this tremendously vital photo play and the innumerable requests received by the management to bring The Birth of a Nation back will be gratified.

So much has been written about The Birth of a Nation that it is difficult to find adjectives that have been applied to this wonderful picture which have not been used before. It is the last word in motion picture photography and production. There is no picture that aproaches it in excellence. Other rival manufacturers may advertise "as great as The Birth of a Nation" but the mere fact that they take this picture as a standard and a criterion shows the weakness and falsity of their claims. There is only one Birth of a Nation and that will be seen at B. F. Keith's all next week. Tickets for the entire engagement go on sale tomorrow. If you haven't seen this great picture you owe it to yourself to see it. It is an education in itself of American history.—Advertisement.

CLIPPING FROM Tribune
Providence R.I.
9-20-15

Providence Opera House.

"The Birth of a Nation," the sensational and spectacular Griffith production of the Civil War period, in 12 parts, based on the book "The Clansman," opens a run at the Opera House today. The two great outstanding features are its controversial spirit and the splendor and magnificance of its production. The greatness of the production is in its spectacular points and the historical reproductions, yet so clearly defined is the drama and so very carefully presented that it grips the audience hard. The appeal is far reaching and there probably never has been a production offered to the American public that can approach the "swing" of its powerful "pull" or sometimes almost uncanny reproductions of historical scenes.

From a technical viewpoint it may be placed upon a pedestal by itself. Nothing approaching "The Birth of a Nation" as a spectacle has ever been seen in Providence. It is a magnificent production, wonderful in its scope, dramatic to a degree in its construction, faithful in detail and convincing in its argument.

Beginning with the troublesome times just preceding the Civil War, "The Birth of a Nation" takes us through that awful struggle, culminating in the assassination of Lincoln and into and through the reconstruction period, which has been classed by many as the darkest period of United States history.

PROVIDENCE (R. I.) NEWS-DEM.
SEPT. 20, 1915

7

Prov. Opera House

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION"

"The Birth of a Nation" the sensational and spectacular Griffith production of the Civil War period, in twelve parts based on the book "The Clansman" breathes the spirit of that well-known work. The two great outstanding features of it are its controversial spirit and splendid, and the magnificence of its production. Taken as a whole it is the most tremendous offering ever projected.

The greatness of the production is in its spectacular points and the historical reproductions yet so clearly defined is the drama and so very carefully presented that it grips the audience hard. The appel is far reaching and there probably never has been a production offered to the American public that can approach the "swing" of its powerful "pull" or sometimes almost uncanny reproductions of historical scenes.

From a tecnical viewpoint it may be placed upon a pedestal by itself. Nothing approaching "The Birth of a Nation" as a spectacle has ever been seen in Providence. It is a magnificent production, wonderful in its scope, dramatic to a degree in its construction, faitful in detail and convincing in its argument. Those who may feel inclined to take offense at alleged incidents of half a century ago, and fine it difficult to square such offenses with later day coditions, should car in mind that the traitor, Arnold, of the Revolution, was the same Arnold who, as the daring "rider of the black horse" was the hero of the siege of Quebec.

Beginning with the troublous times just preceding the Civil War "The Birth of a Nation" takes us through that awful struggle, culminating in the assassination of Lincoln, into and through the reconstruction period which has been classed by many as the darkest period of United States history. It will be shown twice daily at the Opera House.

D. W. GRIFFITH.
Whose Genius and Grasp of Big Ideas Made "The Birth of a Nation" Possible.

HARTFORD (Conn.) COURANT
SEPT. 20, 1915

AS TO LICENSING PLAYS.

There is no reason to expect that Mayor Lawler will refuse permission for the presentation in Hartford of the picture-play, "The Birth of a Nation." It may be that its story is characterized by a narrow and prejudiced view of the negro and, therefore, does him an injustice, but this is not the first instance where the stage has given offense to some portion of our people. But patience and tolerance are better under such circumstances than attempts to place arbitrary limitations upon what the stage may present.

The best sort of censorship is that which does the least censoring. Occasionally—very occasionally—it may be wise to suppress stage productions and public utterances, whether by the spoken or written word, that are highly immoral or incendiary, but for the most part it is wiser and safer to permit the moral sense and good judgment of the people to decide their fate. In times past there have been indignant protests against stage presentments of certain exaggerated national types, but all these burlesque figures remain to amuse us, because the public estimates them at their true worth. They are not accepted as really typical, and the protests against them have been regarded as ill-advised and as based upon undue sensitiveness.

The comic Irishman, the "silly ass" Englishman, the swaggering, whisky-drinking Southerner, the outlandish Scotchman, the absurd New England farmer are all stage characters with which we are familiar, but nobody makes them the basis for his estimate of the various sorts of people thus represented, or misrepresented. The Irishman, the Englishman, the Southerner, the Scotchman and the Yankee farmer are held in just as high esteem. So it will be with the colored people. Their status in the community and the regard in which they are held will depend upon other considerations than the manner in which they are shown in a play or a picture-play. It will not be a matter of any consequence to them whether the think is put on in Hartford or not.

BIG PHOTOPLAY OPENS AT TRENT

"The Birth of a Nation," Griffith's Famous Spectacle, Will Run for Entire Week

Visions of a return to the days of the theatre, when the "Standing Room Only" Sign never bore an accumulation of dust, have been awakened by scenes around the Trent Theatre during the advance sale for "The Birth of a Nation," which begins a week's engagement tomorrow night. Daily matinees are given by the company, but there will be none Monday afternoon owing to the time required to install the massive production.

Coming in the midst of its phenomenal success in New York and Philadelphia, "The Birth of a Nation" is doubly welcome. In the Trent Theatre presentation an orchestra of thirty will be used and it will be identical in detail to those in New York and Philadelphia.

"The Birth of a Nation" tells by film and music the story of a nation reborn through the storm and stress of internecine strife. Instead of the four to six scenes of the conventional play, its technique permits of filming literally thousands of scenes and covering a wide range of history and characters. Slavery, the prime cause of the war; Lincoln's call for troops to subdue the Southern States; the ball on the eve of Bull Run, and the first triumph of Confederate arms; the devastation wrought by Sherman's march and the awful ordeal of the Siege of Petersburg; Lee's surrender to Grant at Appomattox; the assassination of the Federal President; the harsh radical policy to the stricken South; the uprising of the Ku Klux Klan, and the overthrow of the carpetbagger regime—these great factors and events pass in review before the thrilled spectator.

The love interest of the play is based on the friendships between the Camerons, of South Carolina, and the Stonemans, of Pennsylvania, two families involved in the struggle. Ben Cameron, the gallant clansman of the Dixon stories, appears again in the role of romantic hero; the piquant Northern girl, Elsie Stoneman, as the heroine. Mr. Griffith took most of the scenes in the great out-of-doors, where Nature painted the backgrounds, and army men directed the battle campaigns. The notable indoor scenes, like Ford's Theatre on the night of the Lincoln tragedy, the peace at Appomattox, and the South Carolina Legislature of 1870, are exact replicas of the originals. Altogether, it is the first time in art-production that history in the large has been presented in living pictures. To do this, many times the amount of the time, energy and expense usually devoted to amusement enterprises had to be used. Eighteen thousand people and 3,000 horses appear in the picture, which cost approximately $500,000 to produce.

The production to be seen here is identical with those of New York and Chicago. Two baggage cars of equipment and a company of fifty people are carried en tour. The latter includes a large symphony orchestra of expert musicians. Others in the party are a stage manager, complete crew, two picture-machine operators, together with optical experts to readjust the theatre projection [illegible] sittings to the latest scientific focal requirements.

SAN FRANCISCO (Cal.) BULLETIN
SEPT. 18, 1915

CLIPPING FROM Exam.
San Francisco Cal.
Date 9-19-15.

SAVOY FF

THE Birth of a Nation," or "The Clansman," begins its twenty-first week in San Francisco with today's performance at the Savoy Theater, and there exists as yet not the slightest evidence of any relaxing of public interest in this most wonderful of all photo-dramatic spectacles.

The screen spectacle is the inspiration of the novel by Thomas Dixon Jr., "The Clansman," which has proved to be one of the greatest sellers ever written by an American on an American theme. It suggested to the imaginative brain of Griffith a scheme for a motion picture scenario which challenges the admiration of the world as being the most stupendous conception that has yet entered the brain of man since the beginning of motion picture art. History, fiction, romance, grim truth, the most tragic circumstance of American history—Lincoln's assassination—the most important event of anti-war and post belligerent days as well as battle scenes from the struggle of the North and the South are all woven into the fabric of this wonderful vision by the genius of Griffith.

The moods inspired by the picture are enhanced mightily by the appropriate music which is offered by an augmented orchestra under the direction of Conductor de Nufero. The singing of plantation songs is another feature.

BOSTON MORNING GLOBE
SEPT. 21, 1915

[illegible] supported by an excellent company.

"Birth of a Nation" at the Majestic.

"The Birth of a Nation" started on its 35th week in Boston at the Majestic Theatre yesterday afternoon.

With next week's performances "The Birth of a Nation" will have been seen for just a half year in Boston, but figuring on the number of performances based on the regular average of eight weekly, it is well along in its second half year. With two performances each day it has now reached a record of 299 performances.

Trent. Ex Times Report

HEAVY SALES FOR "BIRTH OF NATION"

Cash Reservations Have Already Reached $1,500 for Motion-Picture Play

When long lines of patrons waited at the box office of the Trent Theatre this morning to purchase tickets for "The Birth of the Nation," new standards were established for a motion picture production in this city. No other photodrama has ever asked prices as high as those established for this engagement, and none has ever had such a number of reservations made.

At the box office it was said that the advance sale had reached $1,500 in cash and Montgomery Moses, the manager of the house, asserted that there was every indication that capacity houses would prevail every night of the engagement.

The picture, which has become noted throughout the country, is on the most extensive scale. A corps of 24 workmen is carried to insure its perfect presentation. Twelve are engaged on the stage to make sounds in keeping with the theme on the screen and add realism to it. Sixteen musicians are also in the company in addition to those who will be engaged in Trenton and an electrician, machine operators, and other helpers are employed.

TRENTON (N. J.) GAZETTE
SEPT. 23, 1915

Stage THEATRES Screen

Conducted by D. I. STEVENSON, Dramatic Editor

ONE OF THE WAR SCENES

(Showing the horrors of war in "The Birth of a Nation," at the Trent theatre tonight and all this week.

"BIRTH OF NATION" AT TRENT TONIGHT

With a symphony orchestra of thirty, upwards of fifty mechanics and supernumeraries, and all the elaborate equipment used in presenting the spectacle at the Liberty theatre, New York, and the Forrest theatre, Philadelphia, "The Birth of a Nation" comes to the Trent theatre tonight to begin a week's engagement. There will be daily matinees after the opening, beginning at 2:30 p. m.

During its record engagements in New York, Philadelphia and Atlantic City, it has been seen by thousands from New Jersey, and without exception they have praised it enthusiastically. Trenton people's interest in the spectacle has been disclosed in the advance sale of seats, which is larger than for any attraction that the Trent theatre has had for several seasons.

For many years American dramatists wrote able plays of particular states, cities or localities, ranging from "Alabama," to "The Henrietta," and from "Way Down East" to "The Great Divide," but no one man seemed to grasp the whole spirit and genius of America until David Wark Griffith picked a suggestion for his theme out of Dixon's "The Leopard's Spots," and "The Clansman," and started to develop it.

Among the distinguished actors in the cast are Henry B. Walthall, Lillian Gish, Mae Marsh, Miriam Cooper, Mary Alden, Josephine Crowell, Ralph Lewis, Joseph Henabery, Raoul Walsh, Donald Crisp, Howard Gaye, George Seigman, Walter Long, Elmer Clifton and Robert Harron. Eighteen thousand people, 3,000 horses and no less than 5,000 scenes went to the making of the big spectacle.

FACTS ABOUT "THE BIRTH OF A NATION"

Five thousand scenes, 18,000 characters, 3,000 horses. Approximate cost of production, $500,000.

Cities built up and then destroyed by fire.

The biggest battle of the Civil war re-enacted.

Ford's theatre, Washington, reproduced to the smallest detail for the Lincoln tragedy.

A series of wild "Ku Klux" rides that commandeered a county for a day and cost $10,000.

Women's dresses used 25,000 yards and "Ku Klux" costumes 12,000 yards of cloth.

Night photography of battle scenes invented and perfected at a cost of $25,000.

Wonderful artillery duels in which real shells—costing $80 apiece—were used. Miles of trenches, thousands of fighters—"war as it actually is."

A musical score of thirty pieces, synchronized to the several thousand distinct and individual scenes.

Twelve thousand feet of film in the public picture represent 140,000 feet of actual photography.

Pittsburg Sun Leader

THE NIXON.

Large audiences marked the opening of the fourth week of D. W. Griffith's photo spectacle production, "The Birth of a Nation," in the Nixon Theater yesterday, matinee and evening. The pictures are thrilling from the beginning to the end of the historical drama, and the musical program adds greatly to the interpretation of the dramatic story. The photo spectacle is presented in stupendous manner. The reels attract added attention as the picture play progresses. There were 18,000 persons and 3,000 horses used in posing the films, and it is announced by the management that the work required eight months and an expenditure of a half million dollars.

The battle scenes are realistic and the assassination of President Lincoln in Ford's theater is pronounced to be historically correct. The night ride of the Ku-Klux Klansmen as depicted on the canvas bring to the beholders a comprehension of some of the thrilling incidents that occurred in the South during the days following the Civil war. General Robert Lee signing the articles of surrender at Appomattox is a historical scene that adds to the interest of the wonderful spectacle.

Norfolk Ledger Dispatch Sept 23

"The Birth Of A Nation"

It is wise, we believe, that an advance production of "The Birth of a Nation" be given for the scrutiny of the proper city officials prior to the regular opening of the week's performance at the Colonial Theatre.

This production is based upon Dixon's book, "The Clansman," but the producing company has wisely eliminated much that was expressed in the original text of the book, and something of the intensity of the production is lost in the films, as compared with the stage presentation of "The Clansman."

There may still be features whose elimination would temper the production and give the public the benefit of the great spectacular show, relieved of any inspiration of racial bitterness. A presentation of the films ought to determine the real character of the performance.

Pitts. Dispatch Sept 21

Nixon—"The Birth of a Nation."

The greatest film ever conceived and carried out is the D. W. Griffiths mammoth spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," which is in its fourth week at the Nixon Theater. The immensity of the production amazes one. The stirring scenes of the war are so graphically produced that the spectator has the impression of being transported to a spot of vantage and looking on while history is in the making. It is a remarkable story splendidly told, and the elaboration of detail gives the spectator every thrill and stirs every emotion that any drama could. Words are really too weak to tell of this most marvelous creation of the motion picture science—one must see the film to realize its enormity and perfection.

Stirring effects are produced by the orchestra, which plays a composition by Joseph Briel, which follows the action of the story to the end.

CLIPPING FROM Fresno Bee
Fresno, California
Date Sept 21-15

91

THE CLANSMAN PROVES TO BE GREATEST PHOTO SPECTACLE

In the great photo-spectacle "The Clansman," which had its initial presentation in Fresno at the White Theater last evening, Mr. Griffith, the producer, comes pretty near working a miracle. It seems impossible that any combination of human genius, tact and perseverance could have crowded the story of a great nation into the narrow space of a single drama. And yet this is just what Mr. Griffith has done, and done with a completeness and perfection that is astounding. As a picture play, "The Clansman" is by all odds the greatest thing that has ever come to our city, and in this masterpiece of motion picture production we may see something of the possibilites of the art as an educator of the human race through the most royal of the senses, the eye. "Seeing is believing"—and in this wonderful photoplay we actually see the birth, growth and coronation of this King of Nations, this giant of the powers of the earth—a people compared to whom the Romans were but as pygmies. As if by the waving of some magician's wand the great scenes are, one after another, unrolled before us. We see the hot controversy over slavery, the criminations and re-criminations flying back and forth between the North and South like sheet lightning until it culminates in the storm; the great armed struggle between the blue and the gray, which, after four years of blood and struggle, ends with the surrender of Lee to Grant at Appomattox.

Then as all seems to be going well, we see the great President —best, noblest, kindest of men—shot down by the mad-man Booth, and then the deluge. All the horrors of the next ten years now known to history as the "Reconstruction Period" are made to live before us in Mr. Griffith's wonderful dream, and he shows us in a few minutes of thrilling gripping photoplay, such a carnival of misdemeanor and high crime as the world has not seen since the days of the Terror during the French Revolution. And then there comes flashing upon us a vision of the "back stroke" of the down cast Anglo Saxon, disarmed, disfranchised, the slave of slaves, bayonets bristling over him and all open, organized resistance impossible, he organizes in secret his terrible "Ku Klux Klan" goes forth to clear his Southland of those who would wipe out its terrible civilization.

To create this wonderful spectacle, Mr. Griffith employed the services of eighteen thousand people and three thousand horses. Miles of films were used to catch every detail. Cities were built, and scenes of historical interest were reproduced in every particular. See this amazing play at the White Theater some time during the next two weeks. It will make you think and feel as you have never [illegible] and thought before.

Pittsburg Leader Sept 21

"Birth of a Nation" at Nixon

Proving that the Pittsburg theatergoing public will support a high-class entertainment to the fullest extent, big throngs of spectators continue to attend the de luxe presentation of "The Birth of a Nation" at the Nixon. This is the fourth week of this extraordinary motion picture film and the public interest is greater than ever.

The wonderful historical story, as told in "The Birth of a Nation," is depicted in most thrilling fashion in this great picture of the screen. The elaboration of detail in the views gives the spectator all the thrills of the actual scenes involved.

So extensive is the play, as shown on the Nixon screen, that it would be impossible to produce it in the ordinary drama of the stage.

There are 18,000 people and 3,000 horses employed in the posing of this wonder film, and the work of production required eight months, at a cost of $500,000.

A splendid special orchestra supplies appropriate music to the action of the play, which greatly increases the dramatic effect, bringing out all the human interest values of the story.

N. Y. Press Sept 21

"The Birth of a Nation," which is rapidly approaching its 600th presentation, continues in the Liberty Theatre indefinitely.

CLIPPING FROM Telegraph
Date Sept 21 1915

"THE CLANSMAN," HISTORICAL MASTERPIECE, AT THE WHITE

Mae Marsh in "The Clansman," opening at the White Theater tonight.

"The Clansman," which will open a two weeks' engagement at the new White theater tonight, appearing every night at 8 o'clock and every Wednesday, Saturday and Sunday at 2:30, is the greatest motion picture ever produced. Adapted from the novel of Thomas Dixon, Jr., and directed by D. W. Griffith, the world's foremost motion picture producer, it presents the very acme of art and realism in motion pictures. Twelve reels are required to show this wonderful production.

"The Clansman" deals with the Civil War period. It shows the causes that led up to this conflict and carries the spectator through the war. It treats impartially the causes for which each side was struggling, and depicts the political conditions in both the North and South during this struggle.

In "The Clansman" are shown the most spectacular battle scenes ever staged. Field telephones, couriers, flag signals, signals by mirrors, and even a captive balloon were all utilized in staging "The Clansman." No general on the European battlefield has made better use of the modern appurtenances of war than did Mr. D. W. Griffith, the leading figure in the motion picture world, in staging the battle scenes for "The Clansman."

WORCESTER (Mass.) TELEGRAM
SEPT. 21, 1915

AGAINST PHOTOPLAY

Colored Men Call on Mayor Wright to Enter Protest.

Three or four colored men called at Mayor George M. Wright's office yesterday afternoon to arrange for a protest against showing the photoplay, "The birth of a nation," in Worcester. The men were unable to see the mayor because he was detained from the hall by business.

The leader of the protesters said none of them want their names known. He said that he doesn't want anything in the papers about the matter or any publicity.

Mayor Wright plans to view the picture in Providence Friday. After seeing the picture he will decide whether or not the photoplay, which has been shown in many other cities, should be exhibited in Worcester.

TORONTO (Ont.) MAIL & EMPIRE
SEPT. 21, 1915

FILM ON TRIAL.

A deputation of colored citizens, led by W. P. Hubbard, made a final protest yesterday against the showing in Toronto of the "Birth of a Nation" film, which is alleged to contain pictures derogatory to the negro race. The deputation laid the matter before Hon. W. H. Hearst, who promised to investigate. Inspector Newman will visit the production to-night and will report upon it to the Prime Minister. If it is found there are parts of the film that should be eliminated, the Board of Censors may give the subject further consideration.

HOBOKEN, (N. J.) OBSERVER

to ..... SEP 21 1915

77 HACKENSACK PLANKROAD; nice furnished room, with bath; $1.50. 20-6

464 PARK AVE., nice furnished room, all conveni... 21-5

PHILADELPHIA RIOTS OVER A PICTURE PLAY

Philadelphia, Sept. 21.—The District Attorney's office began an investigation to-day to determine, if possible, the identity of the persons who instigated the agitation that last night resulted in a riot between 500 negroes and 100 policemen in front of the Forrest Theatre, where the photoplay, "Birth of a Nation" is being shown.

The agitation among the negroes, it is said, started two weeks ago. Last night a huge demonstration was planned in front of the theatre. The riot started when Arthur Lunn, 19 years old, hurled a brick through a theatre window. His action reacted upon a crowd of 500 other negroes, fifty of whom charged the entrance of the theatre. Fifty policemen repulsed the rush and when reinforcements arrived from other stations the negroes dispersed, leaving behind half a dozen with cracked heads. Fully a score were injured.

MAE MARSH
Who Is Appearing in the Role of Flora Cameron, the Griffith Motion Picture Spectacle at the Trent Theatre All This Week.

LARGE CROWDS SEE "BIRTH OF NATION"

Attracting to the Trent Theatre last night an assemblage as large as that which greets the theatrical stars, "The Birth of a Nation" established a precedent for motion pictures in Trenton.

Long before the doors opened the lobby of the theatre was crowded and lines of patrons extended into the street. The gallery and balcony were quickly filled to capacity and most of the orchestra section was taken. No other photodrama has aroused the interest of this production, which has made new standards for this variety of attractions.

Accompanied by an orchestra of 30 pieces, the supernumeraries behind the screen to make noises appropriate to the scene and a corps of expert operators, the production justified the claims that had been made for it.

Aroused to ardent patriotism by the stirring scenes, the spectators showed by resounding applause the effectiveness of the portrayal.

Following historical data of the struggle between the North and South, the photodrama has the additional value of being very instructive. A story of tense interest has been placed around the Southland's dealing with its negro residents after the Emancipation. With its thousands of performers in the battle scenes, the burning of Atlanta on Sherman's march to the sea, the shooting of Lincoln in Ford's Theatre, the operation of the "Ku Klux Klan" and the hundreds of other views in the three-hour presentation, "The Birth of a Nation" is a remarkable production.

Because of its extreme length a change will be made in the hours of presentation. The matinee shows will begin at 2:15 o'clock and the evening at 8:15. To afford a clear view of the picture from the front seats in the orchestra section, the screen has been placed 20 feet back from the footlights. Special projecting lenses are carried by the company and clear pictures with little glare are showed.

D. W. Griffith presents the offering which he has founded on Dixon's work, "The Clansman." Many months were spent in its preparation and large sums were expended in gathering the large cast. Historical buildings were restored just to obtain the proper effects. The leads are in the hands of competent players. They include: Henry Walthall, Miriam Cooper, Mae Marsh, Josephine Crowell, Spottiswoode Aiken, J. A. Beringer, Maxfield Stanley, Jennie Lee, Ralph Lewis, Lillian Gish, Elmer Clifton, Robert Harron, Wallace Reed, Mary Alden, George Seigmann, Walter Long, Joseph Henabery, Raoul Walsh, Donald Crisp, Howard Gaye, William De Vaull, William Freeman, Thomas Wilson.

"The Birth of a Nation" makes an epoch in Trent Theatre history. It will be given twice daily during the remainder of the week.

TORONTO (Ont.) STAR
SEPT. 21, 1915

UESDAY, SEPTEMBER

THEATRES

Undoubtedly an extraordinary and altogether remarkable spectacle is the film play "The Birth of a Nation," which was shown here for the first time at the Royal Alexandra Theatre yesterday afternoon and evening. As an epic story of American history, minutely, faithfully, wonderfully, reproducing the life and the spirit of half a century ago, when arose the issue between State sovereignty and nationhood to be fought out in the Civil War, this picture play has fascinated attention wherever it has been shown in the United States.

Mr. George E. Armstrong of the Board of Moving-Picture Censors and Mr. Albert Newman of the Ontario Motion-Picture Theatre Inspection Office, who is one of a special board of three to whom appeals against the rulings of the Censor Board may be taken, witnessed the show yesterday afternoon. Mr. Armstrong had not seen the play himself previously, the film being passed upon by his two colleagues. Neither had Mr. Newman seen it before. Both expressed themselves yesterday afternoon as greatly impressed with the production, and failed to find anything that was uncalled for by the story of the play or unjustified by historical fact.

The audience yesterday contained many colored people of both sexes who had come to see for themselves in what light the colored race was to be portrayed. The unpleasant features of the "Reconstruction period" in the South were mitigated after the conclusion of the actual story by pictures of the modern schools and colleges in the States, such as Booker Washington, at Tuskegee, showing the success attained to date in the uplift of the colored race. There was no demonstration at the opening performance other than applause, which was heartiest at the spectacle of 2,000 mounted men of the Ku-Klux clad in white dominoes, passing the camera at a gallop. The realism of the trench battle was also successful in stirring applause. The produc...

"BIRTH OF NATION" FOR TRENT TODAY

The theatrical offering that hundreds of residents of this section of New Jersey have been waiting for, "The Birth of a Nation," comes to the Trent Theatre for a week's engagement beginning tonight. Except today, when the afternoon will be required for arranging the massive production, there will be daily matinees.

Many who saw this photodrama during its engagement either in New York or Philadelphia have enthusiastically praised it, and have advised friends not to miss it. The presentation at the Trent, it is stated, will be exactly the same as that drawing capacity houses to the Liberty Theatre, New York, and the Forrest Theatre, Philadelphia, including a symphony orchestra of 30, and upwards of 50 mechanics and supernumeraries. The spectacle has been presented more than 500 times at the Liberty Theatre, and its Philadelphia engagement is so phenomenally successful that it will likely remain at the Forrest Theatre the rest of the Winter.

Although the leaders of the opposing forces in the Civil War appear but for a moment in the scene in which General Grant receives the surrender of the army of the South from General Lee is one of the most striking of the famous photoplay.

As the scene unfolds Grant is discovered seated at a plain table reading the draft of the terms of surrender. Lee is seated at the left of the room. The staffs of the two generals are grouped about. The expression on Lee's face clearly indicates his thought. A forlorn leader of what is no longer even a forlorn hope he sits with bowed head most of the time while Grant is reading the important document.

As Grant, having affixed his signature rises, the contrast between the two men is striking. Grant, about five feet eight inches tall, his square shoulders inclined to stoop is without his sword, and is wearing fatigue uniform. He wears ordinary top-boots with trousers inside. Boots and clothing are spattered with mud. Lee presents a different picture. He is carefully and correctly dressed, his six foot form towering over his conqueror. A statue in gray. The contrast in manner is equally marked. Grant, with hand in pocket, approaches Lee with an easy swing, cigar in mouth, and offers his hand in a way that means much to the defeated Southerner. It is not preliminary to a formal meaningless handshake. It is the act of one who would be a friend and is accepted as such by the man in grey who grasps the extended hand and the great generals of the great war for a moment face each other. Then with military salute they part and the incident of Appomattox Court House is closed.

(Scene from "The Birth of a Nation," Photoplay Opening a Week's Engagement at the Trent Theatre Tonight.)

PITTSBURG (Pa.) POST
SEPT. 21, 1915

NIXON—"Birth of a Nation" Photo Spectacle.

Praise for David W. Griffith's master work in photo spectacle production, "The Birth of a Nation," continues on all sides as thousands more are attracted to the epic film in the Nixon Theater. The stirring effects produced by the orchestral accompaniment thrilled yesterday's watchers as the many have been thrilled since this massive work came to Pittsburgh a month ago.

Never has such a stupendous triumph of motion picture art been equaled. Its vastness, its tremendous sweep of action, its swift succession of stirring scenes, all stamp their impress indelibly on mind and heart. The fascination of the thing draws people to see it again and again.

The vital power of the big battlefield scenes of the Civil War brings to today's generations the realism of the days of the 60's as no printed page of history has ever done. The spectator has the impression of being transported to the high spots of history and looking on while history was hot in the making.

ELMIRA (N. Y.) HERALD
SEPT. 21, 1915

"BIRTH NATION" FILM CAUSE OF COLORED RIOT

Philadelphia, Sept. 21.—Police reserves from the city hall and several other police stations were called out last night to quell a riotous demonstration by several hundred negroes in protest against "The Birth of a Nation," photo play taken from "The Clansman," which is running at a theater in the center of the city. The crowd of negroes, composed of men and women, marched through the hotel and theater district shouting their disapproval of the play, but no attempt was made to stop them until a halt was made in front of the theater and a stone hurled through one of its big plate glass windows. Then the police charged the crowd with clubs and nightsticks, raining blows on the ringleaders.

One policeman was hit with a stone and several negroes were badly beaten before the crowd was dispersed. Several arrests were made and the prisoners held on charges of breach of the peace, and incitin to riot.

ROLR (Va.) VIRGINIAN-PILOT
SEPT. 21, 1915

DASH OF THE CLANSMEN in "The Birth of a Nation" at the Colonial theatre all next week.

A THRILLING SCENE IN "BIRTH OF A NATION"

Spectacular Production Will Come To Colonial Next Week

When David W. Griffith started the outdoor staging of the Civil war and reconstruction scenes in "The Birth of a Nation," which will be shown at the Colonial theatre all next week, he was confronted with seemingly insuperable difficulties. An area of private war was required about as large as the corner of Belgium occupied by the Anglo-French forces. Thousands of cavalrymen had to be shown, in an historic raid of the North Carolina clans. Their run was to be over many, many miles of typical Southern sandy roads. Though an acknowledged wizard of the films, Mr. Griffith is not a "war lord," with power to commandeer.

In this emergency, the county authorities of "The Birth of a Nation," producing locale were applied to. They finally consented to mark off an area of ten square miles for the use of the horsemen. Along all the roads within this area, the county commissioners posted notices forbidding all traffic on "the day of days." Pedestrains were also warned off. But the roads themselves did not look southern. David Griffith handled this difficulty—with the authorities' permission—by remaking such of the highways as would come within the camera's eye. Many tons of sand and gravel were spread by gangs of his workmen. Landscape engineering changed the look of the landscape to the rounded hills, piney woods and deep gullies of Old North State. The race of the northern clansmen to rescue their South Carolina brethren took place on the appointed day, without an accident or a flaw. After it was over, Mr. Griffith's men scraped the sand off the macadam roads, took down the signs and life in the sleepy countryside resumed its normal course. It cost about $25,000 to do the trick—the producer thinks it was worth all it cost, particularly after hearing the enthusiastic comments of "The Birth of a Nation" patrons on his work.

PITTSBURG (Pa.) TIMES

matic act that involves some new twists ers in the

There are motion pictures to top off the bill.

Nixon—"The Birth of a Nation."

This truly remarkable photo spectacle will continue its prosperous run at the Nixon, not only this week, but for several weeks to come. In this exhibit we find a combination of scenes and music that is rare in entertainments of this kind, where music is generally used as an extraneous accompaniment to the views that are presented on the screen. In the case of "The Birth of a Nation," a composer of trained skill, Joseph Briel, a Pittsburgher by family attachments, by the way, has written a score that interprets the spirit of the various incidents of the story. It is atmospheric and in many ways a musical record of our development, possessing historical interest that is peculiar and memory stirring. Emil O. Wolf's largely augmented orchestra render this music with skill and appropriate color. Of the photo spectacle itself ample descriptions have been printed. There is no other motion picture achievement within our knowledge that may be even truthfully compared to this Griffith exhibit.

PITTSBURG (Pa.) SUN
SEPT. 21, 1915

THE NIXON.

Large audiences marked the opening of the fourth week of D. W. Griffith's photo spectacle production, "The Birth of a Nation," in the Nixon Theater yesterday, matinee and evening. The pictures are thrilling from the beginning to the end of the historical drama, and the musical program adds greatly to the interpretation of the dramatic story. The photo spectacle is presented in stupendous manner. The reels attract added attention as the picture progresses. There were 18,000 persons and 2,000 horses used in posing the films, and it is announced by the management that the work required eight months and an expenditure of a half million dollars.

The battle scenes are realistic and the assassination of President Lincoln in Ford's theater is pronounced to be historically correct. The night ride of the Ku-Klux Klansmen as depicted on the canvas bring to the beholders a comprehension of some of the thrilling incidents that occurred in the South during the days following the Civil war. General Robert Lee signing the articles of surrender at Appomattox is a historical scene that adds to the interest of the wonderful spectacle.

CHICAGO (Ill.) AMERICAN
SEPT. 21, 1915

172 with the lovely re-

Moviegrams

With no signs of [illegible], but, rather, with every evidence of increasing popularity, D. W. Griffith's spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," appears to be set at the Colonial for an all-Winter run. George Bowles, its manager, declares he believes that more than a million persons will have seen the production in Chicago before it gives way to another offering from the Griffith headquarters.

BRIDGEPORT (Conn.) TELEG
SEPT. 21, 1915

[illegible], Sept. 20.—Simpson N. Hansell, who until recently was superintendent of the Meriden Club, died at [illegible] Sunday at his summer home at Farview Beach, Milford. Heart trouble being the cause. Mr. Hansell has been sick since last June, when he left Meriden on that account and went to Farview Beach, where he has been confined to his room a great part of the time since.

Protests Photo Play.

Hartford, Sept. 20.—Rev. Walter Gay, on behalf of the colored people of the city, has made a protest to the mayor against the production of the moving picture spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," presented at a local theatre. The mayor will take the matter up with the proprietor of the theatre in question and make known his decision later. The Rev. Gay said the picture tended to promote the degradation of the colored people and incite race hatred.

CLEVELAND (Ohio) PLAINDEALER 187
SEPT. 21, 1915

TELL TRUTH ABOUT BIRTH OF A NATION

Producers Say Spectacle Cost $125,000, Not $500,000; Employed 3,000.

Battle Cry of Peace is to be Revised Before Being Sent West.

FF

BY E. ARTHUR ROBERTS.
STAFF SPECIAL.

NEW YORK, Sept. 20—"The Birth of a Nation" is so fine a picture there is no necessity for the ridiculous exaggeration concerning its cost and the number of people taking part in the spectacle.

What is there about the show business which makes nearly everyone associated with it think they must "draw the long bow"?

Motion picture men seem to have taken their cue in this respect from the spoken stage. Some of the players must smile when they read what princely salaries they are drawing and press agents must not imagine that the public accepts as gospel all the tall stories with which they would feed them.

How often have you read that "The Birth of a Nation" cost a half million dollars to produce and that more than 8,000 people took part in D. W. Griffith's great spectacle?

According to D. W. Griffith himself the picture cost $125,000 and the number of people employed in it was nearer 3,000 than 8,000.

There isn't the least excuse in the world for keeping up the deception. The owners couldn't make an extra dollar out of the picture if they said it cost five millions and 50,000 people were employed in producing it. The Liberty theater here is packed at every performance, the heat notwithstanding. It will be many a long day before "The Birth of a Nation" has run its course. Already it has brought the producers over $900,000.

At the Vitagraph studios near Brighton beach today I heard that Commodore Stuart Blackton contemplates a revision of "The Battle Cry of Peace" before it starts on its western tour.

A criticism offered by Pauline Frederick the other day is that there are too many subtitles. The same thought has occurred to many others. Of course, it is not an ordinary picture. Its object is to awaken the great American public to the necessity of having a navy and army strong enough to maintain peace with honor. It is a propagandist picture and as such requires a lot of captions to drive home the points of the scenes, but the thing seems to be rather overdone.

The American people will have much clearer vision of the horrors of modern warfare when they have seen these realistic pictures of wanton destruction of property, desolation, rapine, pillage and ruthless slaughter of innocents.

"This is happening in Europe. What is to prevent it happening in your own country?" These are among the startling subtitles and this is the burden of the story. It is a spectacle which makes one think.

In deference to the wishes of Geraldine Farrar, "Carmen," the picture produced by Miss Farrar at the Jesse L. Lasky studios in California, is to have its premiere at Symphony hall, Boston, Mass.

Miss Farrar was born in Boston and has a warm spot in her heart for her native city. She regards her motion picture venture as a serious artistic step in her career and is anxious to have Boston's judgment on her entry into the newer branch of the profession.

Charles Maher, Hermit club member of Cleveland, was in New York recently. He is actively interested in the motion picture business. He said his visit east was connected with an effort to get a locomotive to tumble over a trestle for a motion picture "thriller."

An entirely new version of John Luther Long's "Madame Butterfly" is being written for the film production of the opera, so we hear in New York.

The reason given is that David Belasco, who owns the operatic rights, does not want to see the original theme mutilated for motion picture purposes. Puccini's quaint music is to be used.

The original intention of the Famous Players' Co. was to take Mary Pickford and other members of the company to Japan to film "Madame Butterfly," but it is said that Miss Pickford is not anxious to make the trip and that the picturization may now be made in California.

If this information is correct—and it comes from a good source—it does seem that a wonderful opportunity is being lost. Just think what wonderful pictures could be made in Yokohama harbor. "Madame Butterfly" will be the biggest thing in Mary Pickford's career and the only logical place to produce the photo play is where the proper atmosphere is obtainable. If the opera is worth doing at all it is worth doing properly.

"Where do all the motion picture babies come from?" I have often heard the question asked. We have seen a number of babies being used in different pictures during the last few days, so we indulged our curiosity.

Each producing company has a list of babies being reared within easy access of the different studios.

'SELF DEFENSE IS H[IS]

HENRY D. E[...]

The first regular [...] meeting of the Cleve[land] club w[as] addresse[d] Esta[blishment] [of] "no[n]

PHILADELPHIA, (PA.) RECORD.
Date .....
SEP 22 1915

seen here [...] and the third and fourth acts brought forth storms of applause.

"Birth of a Nation"—Forrest.

There is no diminution in interest in "The Birth of a Nation," the D. W. Griffith motion-picture spectacle now at the Forrest. Indeed, so great is demand for seats now that the theatre is thronged at every presentation. The pictures have historic value as well as tense dramatic quality, and the augmentation of the effect each presentation makes is a tribute to the fine orchestra, playing music specially selected, and in illustration of each incident as it is re-enacted through the intermediary of the projection machine and of the screen. "The Birth of a Nation" has set a standard in motion picture achievement difficult to attain.

SEPT. 21, 1915
PITTSBURGH (Pa.) DISPATCH

"The Birth of a Nation"

The greatest film ever conceived and carried out, "The Birth of a Nation," opened its fourth week at the Nixon yesterday, with business still on the increase. The steady advance of interest is because everyone who sees the spectacle becomes at once a booster for the show. It is a fine story, splendidly told, and the elaboration of detail gives the auditor every thrill and stirs every emotion that any drama could possibly do. The historical interest is always high, the spectacular scenes are intensely exciting, and the quieter views are deeply impressive. There were 18,000 people and 3,000 horses used in posing the film, and the work required eight months, at an expenditure of $500,000. There is nothing else in the motion picture field that can be compared with it, and it is not stretching the truth to say that its very immensity amazes and awes. It is not one of those things one can tell another about. One must see to realize. And to get all the beauty one must see more than once.

MANCHESTER (N. H.) MIRROR
SEPT. 21, 1915

[...] three days.

"BIRTH OF A NATION" A TREMENDOUS FILM

Said To Contain 18,000 People and 3000 Horses—Chorus Behind the Scenes.

Griffith's big picture, "The Birth of a Nation," will come to the Auditorium for one week, beginning Monday, Sept. 27. There will be a big orchestra of ten pieces, and a chorus behind the scenes, while several very beautiful girls will act as ushers, to furnish local color, etc.

The picture is a dramatization of Dixon's "The Clansman." Its chief incidents are historic. The incident of the negro is responsible for the formation of the Ku-Klux Klan which chases the carpet-baggers out of the South and rehabilitated the Southland.

MAE MARSH AS "FLORA."

Few people knew into what a lamentable situation the South fell nearly ten years after Appomattox. The whites were disfranchised because of their part in the war, and southern states were governed by a combination of newly-franchised negroes and carpet-baggers from the North, whose main object was loot. How the whites of the South regained control of the country is one of the most dramatic passages in our history.

"The Birth of a Nation" is said to contain 18,000 people and 3000 horses. Nothing so spectacular has yet been shown upon the screen. For the first time in the history of film art you see the great historical conflict pass before you, the Burning of Atlanta, Sherman's March to the Sea, Victory of the North, Grant and Lee at Appomattox, Reconstruction Troubles, Love and Romance of History, Tremendous Battle Scenes, the Lincoln Tragedy, Dauntless Rides of the Ku-Klux Klan, tender domestic drama and charming comedy and the dawn of the "New Nation."

Owing to the tremendous patronage that will undoubtedly be showered upon this massive screen spectacle during its local engagement, patrons are warned to secure their seat reservations at the earliest possible moment, for the attendances at the Auditorium will positively be greater than this city has ever known before, either for a production of the spoken stage or the silent drama.

PORTLAND (Me.) PRESS
SEPT. 21, 1915
708

FF

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION."

A development no one would have believed possible a few years ago is seen in the establishment of D. W. Griffith's "Birth of a Nation" as a first class theatrical attraction which has been crowding the houses all over the country at "two dollars" prices.

"The Birth of a Nation" which will return to the B. F. Keith theatre Sept. 27 for another week's engagement is indeed more than a film, for nearly one hundred people are employed in the music and mechanical effects during the unreeling of this 12,000 feet of celluloid, yet never a word is spoken from the stage during the two and three-quarters hours' performance. Mr. Griffith's photo entertainment combines a pictorial survey of Civil war history and of reconstruction days with a love romance of the North and South. The battle scenes, engaging thousands of combatants drilled with the well-known Griffith clan and realism, are particularly effective.

A few years ago we were wont to hear of films or photoplays as being "in their infancy." But "The Birth of a Nation" may be said to be the full grown adult of that infant, for it is hard to conceive of a greater achievement in moving picture projection. The marvelous scenes simply astound the spectator, they thrill him again and again with their magnitude, dash and realistic detail. Scenes are projected upon the screen that would seem almost impossible to produce, yet they are shown and because Mr. Griffith's master mind has made these wonders possible he has been placed in the list of a very few who are claimed to be "underpaid at $100,000 a year."

RUTLAND (Vt.) HERALD
SEPT. 21, 1915

FF

First Showing in Vermont, "The Birth of a Nation."

The film spectacle of "The Birth of a Nation" which comes to the Shrine theater on Monday, September 27, for six days is not a feature in the ordinary sense, but a mighty panorama and pictorial exposition of the most vital points of American history which are particularly interesting to Americans now on account of the threatened complications with a foreign power. Super-added to history is a delightful love romance of the North and South, whilst the whole is lighted up and made fascinating by Mr. Griffith's remarkable gift of quiet humor and keen eye for the slightest significant detail. Indeed there are said to no less than 200,000 details in the picture.

"As a work of art it is wonderful and so beautiful and so full of life that it robs one of the power of criticism. It is a great work, first, last and all the time, and it stamps Mr. Griffith as a master artist in whom the power of visual interpretation reaches a height that cannot easily be comprehended at one sitting. You see a whole battlefield covered by thousands of men.

There is no drama on the American speaking stage in our history that has ever swayed an audience as does "The Birth of a Nation."—adv.

CLIPPING FROM Journal
Providence R.I.
Date 9-21-15

the bill.

FF

Providence Opera House.

"The Birth of a Nation," D. W. Griffith's spectacular photoplay, opened a return engagement at the Providence Opera House to capacity audiences yesterday and the same enthusiasm was displayed as at the earlier productions.

This photoplay was shown here for three weeks last month and drew capacity audiences at every performance. The demand for seats at the third week's engagement was so large that Col. Wendelschafer set out to secure another engagement and succeeded. All the features of the last engagement are seen with the photoplay this week. The orchestra of 25 pieces, and the hundred men behind the scenes necessary to make the suitable noises as the pictures are thrown on the screen are here again. Two performances will be given daily, opening Monday afternoon.

Mr. Griffith's theme is the development of the nation and its relationship to the part the slavery problem played in bringing about Daniel Webster's prophecy. "One and indivisible." The action begins with the introduction of slavery into the colonies. Then comes the Abolition movement, and the stirring times leading up to the session of the Southern States. The audience is carried through the four years of strife to the death of President Lincoln in Ford's Theatre. The eight years of reconstruction from the final episodes in a drama of history, romance and emotion. Its termination is an allegorical picture of the coming permanent peace and the settlement of all local differences. To get these varied incidents into his drama the producer used 18,000 people and 3000 horses.

Daily State Gazette Trenton N.J. Sept 21 15

"BIRTH OF NATION" AN AMAZING WORK

GRIFITH SPECTACLE IS GREETED WITH CHEERS AT THE TRENT THEATRE.

EFFECTS ADD TO REALISM

Cheers, whistling and tumultuous applause greeted the first local showing at the Trent theatre last evening of David Wark Griffith's much heralded photo-production, "The Birth of a Nation." Through these vast expressions of enthusiasm, and other signs of a large audience's gratitude—these verbal ones that resounded in the air after the performance—Trenton linked hands with the other cities that have had the good fortune of seeing it and pronounced Mr. Griffith's work an amazing achievement in cinematography.

There was never a more satisfied or grateful audience within the confines of the Trent playhouse. There were rounds of applause for every climax and gripping scene—and even light applause is a rarity in a motion picture theatre—and exultant cheers rang through the air for the more patriotic characters and situations. As the Civil war and the Reconstruction period that followed formed the foundation of the story, the picture was brimful of patriotic deeds and splendor. It was in progress for almost three hours, including a single intermission of eight minutes, but the strict attention of the audience was held throughout. Every one was on the seat's edge. Every one's eye was commended by the rapid-fire action.

"The Birth of a Nation" is certainly a mighty spectacle, embracing as it does the chaotic times of the conflict between the North and the South and the bloody race riots that ran rampant for several years after their union. Scene after scene shows minute detail, even in the portrayal of the cowardly assassination of President Abraham Lincoln while he was attending the performance of "Our American Cousin," at Ford's theatre, Baltimore, April 14, 1865.

Then there was General Sherman's march to the sea, the burning of Atlanta, the call of president Lincoln for troops, the initial victory of the Confederates, the justly famous "Ku Klux Klan," the quelling of the racial troubles by the "Clansmen," and the surrender of Lee to Grant at Appamattox. Every important factor of the Civil war was depicted with a vividness that made one shudder at the great horrors of military clash, of the futility of this sort of settlement of a country's problems. "The Birth of a Nation" is a powerful preachment against war, and ought to make a sincere plea for disarmament.

The story is impressively and remarkably well unfolded. Slavery or colored servitude in the South is shown in all its horribleness. There is a soothing love interest between a sister and a brother of a Southern family, and a brother and a sister of a Northern family that holds attention. This end of the play is very similar to the love theme in Rev. Mr. Dixon's work, "The Clansman," on which Mr. Griffith based his creation.

A distinct feature is the program of effects, electrical and otherwise, carried out during the course of the picturization. These add greatly to the strength of the story, giving a touch of realism. Then, too, there is a symphony orchestra of thirty pieces, including an oboe and a bassoon, that lends distinction to the production.

The projection machines are located on the first floor in a commodious asbestos-bound booth, and are furnished and operated by "The Birth of a Nation" company. The projectio nis a commendable feature, every foot of the almost unlimited string of film being clear and distinct and shown without the glare that some times mars a screen play. The screen has been erected in the rear of the stage so that those in the first rows can get as good a view as those in the more distant rows.

Mr. Griffith placed his play in the hands of a cast of unusual talent. Henry Walthal is conspicuously clever as the Confederate colonel, while the outstanding member of the feminine contingent is captivating Mae Marsh, who plays one of the colonel's sisters. Miriam Cooper, a beautiful actress, is capital as another sister, and George Seigman is effective as Lynch, the mulatto lieutenant-governor. Others in the cast are: Lillian Gish, Joseph Henaberry, Spottiswoode Aiken, Josephine Crowell, Ralph Lewis and Mary Alden. Mr. Henaberry gives a striking impersonation of President Lincoln.

"The Birth of a Nation" is too great a film wonder for any one to miss. All, old and young alike, ought to see one of the performances, which will be given twice daily during the balance of the week. It will surely win an epoch in local theatrical history.

D. F. STEVENSON.

DAVID WARK GRIFFITH.
(Whose production of "The Birth of a Nation" is being presented this week at the Trent theatre.)

RUTLAND (Vt.) HERALD
SEPT. 21, 1915

101

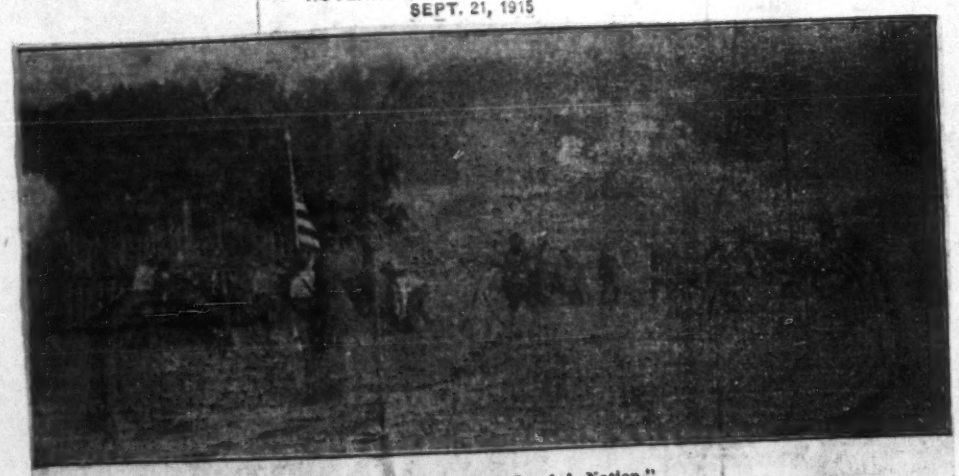
FF

"The Birth of a Nation."

"The Birth of a Nation" is the most remarkable attraction of recent years in American stage annals. It uses 18,000 people to tell its story and 3000 horses add their quota to its bigness. The epic links history and romance in a way never before attempted. Its basic scenes are founded in some of the most stirring events in the nation's development and these are contracted with human appeals and family interests which are after all the essentials of true drama. Great battles of the Civil war are fought before your eyes. Lee surrenders to Grant at Appommatox. Lincoln is assassinated as actually as the scene took place 50 years ago in Ford's theater, Washington. The South before and after the war is pictured in its most interesting phases. Wild rides of the Klansmen lend a dash and spirit to the performances. All remains exactly as it was given originally in New York city and Boston when this marvellous picture astounded all and created more comment than all the plays that have been seen in a decade. It is a picture in a life time; one that will in all probability never be duplicated and for that reason should be viewed by every man, woman and child in this city. Once seen it is never to be forgotten and since the Shrine theater will undoubtedly be crowded daily during its engagement of this remarkable spectacle which commences September 27 for a period of six days, it would be wise for all to engage seats at the earliest possible moment. Sale opens at Playhouse Wednesday, September 22d. There will be two performances daily, the matinees starting promptly at 2:15 o'clock, while the evening sessions will start at 8 o'clock. The patrons are requested to reach the theater in plenty of season to be seated before the opening of the mighty production. Doors open at 7:30.—adv.

RUTLAND (Vt.) NEWS
SEPT. 21, 1915

788



Scene from "A Birth of A Nation,"

NEWBURYPORT (Mass.) NEWS
SEPT. 21, 1915

621

a wise acquisition.

Those who know him predict that he will make a success of his undertaking.

I am told that on Thursday evening last, when the picture show, "The Birth of the Nation," was given its first evening production at the Premier theatre here, announcement was caused to be made by the railroad management that the last car for Amesbury would leave at 10.40. As a result those Amesbury people, who were present and who did not have private conveyance or who were not willing to wait for the theatre train on the B. & M. railroad, were abloged to leave the theatre some minutes before the big picture show was finished. In other words, they were obliged to miss one of the best parts of the show. It does not seem a right attitude on the part of the trolley line, in my opinion, if conditions were as above represented. It doesn't look as though the railroad management was trying very hard to cater to the public in search of business. Years ago, under different management, it was the regular custom to hold cars in front of City hall until a theatrical performance had been concluded, and there was always plenty of business for the electrics. It was also a big accommodation to the public. It would seem, today, that when there are exceptional entertainments that hold the people a few minutes beyond the car schedule that the railroad man would hold the cars in order to accommodate patrons. It might be that it would also be good policy.

RUTLAND (Vt.) HERALD
SEPT. 21, 1915

5

"A NATION"

Rutland Will Be First Vermont City to See Famous Film Drama

Rutland will see the Griffith film spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," before any other city in the state. This is easily the most discussed production of the "silent drama" ever made, and, with a special orchestra, novel and striking appliances for reproducing battle sounds and other effects, it is not so silent as it might be.

The dates are for a full week, beginning Monday, Sept. 27, at the Shrine theater, and, judging from the frequent inquiries, it will be the biggest event in filmdom ever shown in the city. For cumulative interest, historcial accuracy and cleverly worked-up suspense, nothing like it has ever been done for the American motion picture stage.

A representative of The Herald recently witnessed the big film in Boston and reports that such scenes as the signing of the proclamation abolishing slavery, the surrender of Lee, the shooting of Lincoln in Ford's theater and other historical moments of the war are fully as striking as the tremendous battle scenes, covering miles of territory and employing thousands of men and horses.

The gathering of the Ku-Klux Klans, the relief of the city dominated by negroes and carpet-baggers and the extremely pretty love stories interwoven with the heavier scenes make up a wonderful production, in which the beauty of Blanche Sweet and Mae Marsh are no small factor.

GALVESTON (Tex.) NEWS
SEPT. 17, 1915

Save ... Prince ... Wales ... Land."

Al G. Field and Neil O'Brien will be the season's offerings in minstrelsy.

To Show "Birth of a Nation."

A motion picture, "The Birth of a Nation," said to be the most stupendous cinema drama ever filmed, at a cost of more than $100,000, has been engaged and will be shown during the fall. "Damaged Goods," by Brieux, a play that has qualified approval of scientific heads of the country, also will be shown.

De Koven's company of grand opera ... engagement.

Peace Allegory In "The Birth Of A Nation," At The Colonial Theatre All Of Next Week

Dr. Parkhurst Unqualifiedly Approves The "Birth Of A Nation," As Produced

ALTHOUGH "The Birth of a Nation," the big Griffith spectacle, which comes to the Colonial Theatre for a week beginning Monday, Sept. 27, has been presented only in the larger cities during the seven months of its life, its fame has been spread to the four corners of the world by persons who witnessed it in New York, Chicago, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Pittsburgh and Philadelphia.

Among these are many prominent Norfolk residents and it is a safe prediction that all of them will renew acquaintance with the spectacle when it comes to the Colonial. Like other achievements which have blazed the trail for bigger and better things in the realms of art, literature and the drama, "The Birth of a Nation" has been criticised. But the preponderance of public opinion has everywhere given it complete vindication.

"The Birth of a Nation" has been stopped nowhere. It has been passed by censor boards everywhere and upheld, when attacked, by decisions of courts of record. It has been endorsed by a greater number of prominent men in all walks of life, including priests and ministers, than any other entertainment ever offered to the public.

One of the clergymen who saw the spectacle during its run at the Liberty Theatre, New York, where it is now in its eighth month, was the Rev. Charles H. Parkhurst, D. D., celebrated churchman and publicist. In a New York newspaper to which he is a regular contributor, Dr. Parkhurst wrote, in part, as follows:

"It is impossible to witness the film drama, 'The Birth of a Nation,' and not want to say something about it.

"Everyone who has seen it is saying something about it. When one has been crowded upon, pressed down and run over, it is against nature not to make some kind of an outcry.

"That is the way one feels when coming out of the theater. The thing is vast. It is overwhelming. Nothing like it has ever before been put upon the stage.

"The tension of the performance is but a single feature of it—but it is that which one feels most poignantly after three straight hours. It begins in an easy way but commences soon to find its muscle and goes on to the end pounding upon one's senses with blows that come heavier and heavier, more and more rapid.

"It is not apparent what are the grounds of the objections urged against it, nor what is the animus of those who are scheming to have the exhibition prohibited by court proceedings.

"The National Board of Censorship has approved it and when assault was made convened again and reaffirmed their approval. The popular endorsement which the play has since received by the thousands who are seeing it daily will require more than small prejudices or moral eccentricities to disturb. In the meantime efforts to suppress it are thus far successful in nothing so much as in giving it wider and more remunerative publicity.

"The intimate familiarity which Mr. David W. Griffith has shown with the events of the Reconstruction Period along with the detailed scholarly study which he has made of the wider territory of events which the play covers renders the production one of surprising educational value to those who were either young children still or even unborn in the stirring years of '60 to '70. A boy can learn more true history and get more of the atmosphere of the period by sitting down for three hours before the film which Mr. Griffith has produced with such artistic skill, than by weeks and months of study in the class room.

"This drama is a telling illustration of the possibilities of motion pictures as an instrument of instruction in history.

"The criticism that it exhibits the negro in an unfortunate light and that it is calculated to engender racial animosity is fully met by the consideration that it represents the negro, not as he is now at all, but as he was in the days when he had just had the chains broken from him, and when he was rioting in the delicousness of a liberty, so new and untried, that he had not yet learned to understand it and was as ignorant as a baby of the way to use it. It is in this respect exactly true to history and if it reflects upon the negro as he was then it is a compliment to the black man of today. An exhibition of lawlessness might not have been proper thirty or forty years ago. Such proprieties change with the passing of time.

"The battle scenes which Mr. Griffith has depicted are of surpassing power and realism. Every lover of Peace must experience a certain painful gratification that just at this time the ghastly horrors of carnage can be brought so closely home to the eye. It is one thing to read about the trenches, the killing and the corpses. It is quite another thing to have them bodily pressed before the eye, with all the demoniac fury that marks conflict at close range. A well written description of a battlefield allows the place and the occasion to be invested with features of magnificence, with the heroism of the contestants and the glory of the victors. On Griffith's screen we see the real thing. There is no magnificence, no glory, but horror, brutality and stark butchery. It sickens with the sense of man's inhumanity to man. It makes war despicable and devilish. It conveys an indelible lesson to all who have been bewitched by those who have decked out the naked hideousness of war with tinsel drapery.

"There are also scenes of surpassing dignity and beauty done by a master artist's hand.

"The tender affection in which Mr. Lincoln is held was manifested in the way the great audience received the scene of a heartbroken Southern mother pleading with him for her son sentenced to death as a guerilla. Every eye was dim with tears in the strangling hush that fell on the theater. What might not our country have been saved had the problem of Reconstruction been left to the Great Heart—the one man who compassed within himself the resources of the intelligence, experience, breadth and sympathy of Abraham Lincoln!

"'The Birth of a Nation' has my unqualified approval."

CLIPPING FROM Journal
Date Providence R.I. 9 21-15

the Pathe Weekly.

Providence Opera House. FF

"The Birth of a Nation," D. W. Griffith's sensational photoplay, opened a return engagement at the Providence Opera House to capacity audiences yesterday afternoon and evening. This photoplay had a run of three weeks at the Opera House the latter part of August, and the demand for seats at the third week's performances was so great that Col. Wendelschaefer was prevailed upon to secure a return engagement, and, judging from the size of the audiences yesterday, he made a good move.

All of the features which were employed at the first engagement of the photoplay were in use at yesterday's performances and will be all during the week. The same great enthusiasm that has been shown by the audiences during the former engagement was again very much in evidence, applause being frequent, especially in the scenes where the Ku Klux Klan riders appeared.

In the preparation of this production 5000 scenes, 18,000 characters and 3000 horses were called in service, the cost of which was estimated at $500,000. Among the features are the burning of cities, battles re-enacted, Ford's Theatre in Washington and the Lincoln assassination, rides of the Ku Klux Klan and the night photography of battle scenes, with artillery duels in which real shells are used. An orchestra of 25 pieces and a corps of men to add the realistic sound touches to the pictures are aded features in the presentation of the play.

CLIPPING FROM Chron.
Date Pittsburg, Pa. 9 21-15

Nixon—"The Birth of a Nation" FF

The greatest film ever conceived and carried out is the D. W. Griffiths mammoth spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," which is in its fourth week at the Nixon Theater. The immensity of the production amazes one. The stirring scenes of the war are so graphically produced that the spectator has the impression of being transported to a spot of vantage and looking on while history is in the making. It is a remarkable story splendidly told, and the elaboration of detail gives the spectator every thrill and stirs every emotion that any drama could. Words are really too weak to tell of this most marvelous creation of the motion picture science—one must see the film to realize its enormity and perfection.

Stirring effects are produced by the orchestra, which plays a composition by Joseph Briel, which follows the action of the story to the end.

PROVIDENCE (R. I.) BULLETIN
SEPT. 21, 1915

a railroad story; "The Diamond from the Sky;" Charlie Chaplin in a comedy, and the Pathe Weekly.

Providence Opera House. FF

"The Birth of a Nation," D. W. Griffith's sensational photoplay, opened a return engagement at the Providence Opera House to capacity audiences yesterday afternoon and evening. This photoplay had a run of three weeks at the Opera House the latter part of August, and the demand for seats at the third week's performances was so great that Col. Wendelschaefer was prevailed upon to secure a return engagement, and, judging from the size of the audiences yesterday, he made a good move.

All of the features which were employed at the first engagement of the photoplay were in use at yesterday's performances and will be all during the week. The same great enthusiasm that has been shown by the audiences during the former engagement was again very much in evidence, applause being frequent, especially in the scenes where the Ku Klux Klan riders appeared.

In the preparation of this production 5000 scenes, 18,000 characters and 3000 horses were called in service, the cost of which was estimated at $500,000. Among the features are the burning of cities, battles re-enacted, Ford's Theatre in Washington and the Lincoln assassination, rides of the Ku Klux Klan and the night photography of battle scenes, with artillery duels in which real shells are used. An orchestra of 25 pieces and a corps of men to add the realistic sound touches to the pictures are aded features

MANCHESTER (N. H.) LEADER
SEPT. 21, 1915 506

'BIRTH OF A NATION' HERE FOR A WEEK

Master Film Is Booked at the Auditorium Theatre

JOSEPH HENABERY.
In Role of Abraham Lincoln.

A development no one would have believed possible a few years ago is seen in the establishment of D. W. Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation" as a first class theatrical attraction which has been crowding the houses all over the country at "two dollar top" prices.

"The Birth of a Nation," which will be shown at the Auditorium for one week beginning Monday, Sept. 27, is more than a film, for nearly 100 people are employed in the music and mechanical effects during the unreeling of the 12,000 feet of celluloid, yet never a word is spoken from the stage during the two and three-quarters hours performance. Mr. Griffith's photo-entertainment combines a pictorial survey of Civil War history and of reconstruction days, with a love romance of the North and South. The battle scenes, engaging thousands of combatants drilled with the well-known Griffith clan and realism, are particularly effective.

After seeing the marvelous production many students of the subject predict that the historical novels of the future will be told in pictures rather than words. Certainly the "indoor drama" cannot henceforth hope to cope with the photoplay insofar as spectacular features are concerned. A few years ago we were want to hear of films or photoplays as being "in their infancy." "The Birth of a Nation" may be said to be the full grown adult of that infant for it is hard to conceive of a greater achievement in moving picture projection.

The marvelous scenes simply astound the spectator they thrill him again and again with their magnitude dash and realistic detail. Scenes are projected upon the screen that would seem almost impossible to produce yet they are shown and because Mr. Griffith's master mind has made these wonders possible he has been placed in the list of a very few who are claimed to be "undesired at $100,000 a year."

Date 9-21-15

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION"

If you have not seen "The Birth of a Nation" you have missed the most astonishing achievement in dramatic portraiture introduced to the American stage. Imagine 10,000 people visualizing the story of intense human interest and dramatic purposes and then add 3,000 horses ridden by some of the most reckless and daring riders in the world, dashing in great cavalcades over picturesque roads and through war-strewn valleys and plains, and you can begin to form a vague idea of the scale upon which this narrative is unfolded.

The plot of the drama deals with the relationship of the slavery question to the development of America and its final solution reveals how out of the quarrel of disputing States there arose the mightiest nation in the world.

With history as its background reared a plot of fundamental dramatic appeal and evolved a story of such prodical details that its bigness alone astounds you. It is the work of a master dramatist who has a story to tell and sets about creating an epoch with its results. He dramatizes the moving force of vast numbers of people and as his means of expression is the camera of the highly developed motion picture art he is not confined by any of the narrow limitations which have heretofore hindered [illegible] stage spectacles. Given his story and the people, Griffith has secured startling results. His mammoth canvas often reveals battlefields covering an area of a dozen square miles and by following historical details he reproduces the stern battle effects as they actually took place half a century ago. In all the expanse of scene and action he never loses sight of his basic story and the smallest detail becomes as astonishing a part of the narrative as the largest incident in it. The completeness and the wonder of the work make it unusual.

The return engagement of "The Birth of a Nation" at the B. F. Keith Theatre will take place on Sept. 27 and will continue for a week. You should see it even at the expense of other pleasures.

SEATS ON SALE TODAY.

Over twenty-five thousand Portlanders saw "The Birth of a Nation" during its recent engagement at Keith's, nearly half the population of this City, and if the number of inquiries received at the box office yesterday may be taken for a criterion, the other one-half are going to see the picture next week. The box office sale of seats opens today at 9 a. m., and the reservations can be made any time between 9 and 6 p. m. this week. Manager Smith has arranged for a greater number of seats than before at the lower prices of admission. There will be two performances daily and every indication points to a repetition of the phenomenal attendance of the previous engagement.

ST. LOUIS (Mo.) GLOBE-DEMOCRAT
SEPT. 21, 1915

FILM COMPANY SEEKS TO [illegible] PLAY PRODUCTION

Thomas Dixon, Jr., of New York City, and the Epoch Producing Company, which is staging the film play, The Birth of a Nation, at the Olympic Theater, yesterday filed an injunction suit in the Circuit Court asking that the Cherokee Theater be restrained from producing a play entitled The Birth of Our Nation.

This play is based on The Clansman, of which Thomas Dixon, Jr., is the author. The petition claims the title is similar to the film production of the Epoch Company, and that the similarity in titles would cause great loss to the Epoch company. Judge Kinsey granted a temporary order and set the case for hearing at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

The Epoch Producing Company yesterday was granted a temporary injunction by Circuit Judge Bengtzen restraining the Board of Police Commissioners from interfering with the production at the Olympic Theater. The court held in its written opinion that the best evidence against the contention of the Board of Police Commissioners that the picture is likely to create hatred and race prejudice and ill-will is the fact that no such results have manifested themselves, although the film has been running several weeks.

SEPT. 21, 1915
PHILADELPHIA (Pa.) INQUIRER

AT THE OTHER HOUSES

An appreciative audience enjoyed the rendition of "The Princess Pat," the new Herbert-Blossom comic opera, which began the third and final week of its stay at the Lyric last night. Mr. Herbert's music grows on one and is remembered for its jingling qualities.

"The Birth of a Nation," began the third week of its [illegible] engagement at the Forrest yesterday. This masterpiece of motion picture perfection gains in interest with each successive showing and audiences of large proportions applaud and enjoy the remarkable changes as they are flashed upon the screen. Added to the attractiveness of the films there is a musical background of marked charm and appropriateness.

"The Sign of the Cross," with Richard Buhler in the character of Marcus Superbus, and supported by the capable members of the stock company now at the house, began a second week at the Walnut last evening, and attracted a thoroughly appreciative audience. The production is on an elaborate scale and the interpretation is a highly creditable one from the star down to the most insignificant role. The play is one which has hitherto won unstinted favor and should easily prove successful for the second week.

BROOKLYN (N. Y.) EAGLE
SEP 22 1915

[illegible] Academy of Music all next week.

Because D. W. Griffith's $500,000 film, "The Birth of a Nation," is still being presented at the Brighton Beach Music Hall, the Brooklyn Rapid Transit is still maintaining a special train and car service for the accommodation of the patrons.

Brooklynites will have their last opportunity to see the wonderful picture of love, tragedy, war and peace during this week. The last performance is scheduled to be given next Saturday night when William H. Kemble, the managing director, intends to have a gala performance to celebrate the record-breaking run of the film in Brooklyn.

PHILADELPHIA, (Pa.) TELEGRAPH
Date SEP 21 1915

COLORED LEADERS PROTEST TO MAYOR "ATTACK BY POLICE"

Ask His Honor to Stop Photoplay Which Was Followed by Riot.

HE GRANTS HEARING

Sets 11 o'Clock Monday Morning as Hour for Meeting at the City Hall.

Mayor Blankenburg was appealed to by a committee of colored citizens today to stop the production of the film drama, "The Birth of a Nation," now playing at the Forrest Theatre, and also to prevent a repetition of the "police attack on colored persons, such as occurred last night, when nearly a score of heads were battered."

The committee was headed by Dr. W. A. Sinclair, 1221 Pine street, who is secretary of the Douglas Hospital.

Dr. Martin was one of those clubbed by the police in last night's disturbance, and he addressed the Mayor today with his head swathed in bandages. The committee, composed of five colored men, asked that the "objectionable film play" be stopped at once. To this request the Mayor replied that he was not sure he had the authority to stop the performance.

Then the committee asked permission to hold a protest meeting in the Mayor's reception room in the City Hall. This request was granted, and the Mayor set next Friday morning at 11 o'clock as the time for the meeting.

In granting the request, however, the Mayor specified that at the protest meeting both sides of the question be aired. This proviso gives the film managers the right to be represented at the meeting.

Police Superintendent Robinson today received from his lieutenants on duty at the Forrest Theatre last night a detailed report of the riotous demonstration in front of the playhouse by a mob of colored men who were protesting against the production of the film drama "The Birth of a Nation."

During the demonstration a force of approximately 150 patrolmen charged the colored people with their night sticks. Upwards of a dozen of the colored paraders received broken heads and had to be treated at several hospitals. Rev. W. G. Graham, pastor of Holy Trinity African Baptist Church, is in the Douglas Hospital, Sixteenth and Lombard streets, with four scalp wounds. The others were cared for at the Jefferson, Polyclinic and Hahnemann Hospitals. None of them was seriously injured.

The police made four arrests. The prisoners were taken to the Night Court, where Magistrate Beaton discharged three for lack of evidence. Arthur Lunn, 19 years old, 5747 Cherry street, was held for further hearing today.

[illegible]iladelphia, (Pa.) North American

'BIRTH OF A NATION' IN NEW WEEK AT FORREST

Rapidity of Action Forms Large Part of Story in Film

SOME STIRRING SCENES

Add to the sublimity of an epic poem the intensity of the short story, and you have an approximate value of "The Birth of a Nation," which is in its third week at the Forrest.

A large part of the power of the piece comes from the overwhelming rapidity of its action. The spectator is carried hither and thither with bewildering facility. Stirring scenes are piled upon each other with confusing readiness, and scenes of historical importance jostle each other on the screen.

This is the rightful sphere of the motion picture, of course, and D. W. Griffith has utilized it in the highest degree. His able work as producer is seconded by Henry B. Walthall, Mae Marsh and Miriam Cooper in the principal roles.

PAWTUCKET (R. I.) TIMES
SEPT. 21, 1915

AT THE [illegible]

Birth of a Nation Continues to Attract Large Audiences at Opera House.

At first sight it seems incredible that the production, "The Birth of a Nation," now being presented at the Providence Opera House, should have taken such a wonderful hold on the public. No play of any description has visited Providence in years, if ever before, that has drawn from the outset such vast concourses of people, nor has there ever been such widespread comment. The latter fact is one reason for the immense patronage, for there is scarcely a human being old enough to know anything but has heard of "The Birth of a Nation" and has been curious to witness it.

But after viewing the performance, quite a few reasons are apparent for its popularity. In the first place it is the acme of screen spectacles up to the present time. The groupings of the various scenes, the training of the participants and the realism of the episodes, are marvellous examples of stage management, while the clearness and lack of flickering almost make the spectator forget it is not living, throbbing life that is being viewed.

The scenes portraying the assassination of Lincoln are, in many respects, the most wonderful, for all the actors by their facial expressions and movements play a congruous part. In New York the spectacle created a sensation, just as it has in Providence, not only from the interesting nature of the subject, but the manner in which it is presented.

Various novelties are introduced on the stage in conjunction with the production and a symphony orchestra of 20 men offer a musical backing for the masterpiece that makes it triply effective.

A small army of effect workers is employed on the stage, under the direction of one man who by a system of red and green lights signals the different men when to start and just when to stop any given effect. That is why the patrons will marvel at the wonderful synchronism of effects as the varying scenes are flashed before them. No big stage production that has ever appeared at the Providence Opera House in times past has been given the minute attention to every little detail that is being exercised in this marvellous screen triumph.

"The Birth of a Nation" will be presented every afternoon and evening this week, and those who desire an entertainment of very much more than average merit should make a point of attending one performance.

Norfolk Dispatch

"The Birth Of A Nation"

It is wise, we believe, that an advance production of "The Birth of a Nation" be given for the scrutiny of the proper city officials prior to the regular opening of the week's performance at the Colonial Theatre.

This production is based upon Dixon's book, "The Clansman," but the producing company has wisely eliminated much that was expressed in the original text of the book, and something of the intensity of the production is lost in the films, as compared with the stage presentation of "The Clansman."

There may still be features whose elimination would temper the production and give the public the benefit of the great spectacular show, relieved of any inspiration of racial bitterness. A presentation of the films ought to determine the real character of the performance.

CAPACITY HOUSES FOR "NATION" FILM

"The Birth of a Nation," David W. Griffith's mighty spectacle now playing the Trent theatre, is already the talk of the city, and there is such a demand for seats that the theatre is thronged at every presentation. The picture will be shown twice daily during the balance of the week. The engagement will positively conclude Saturday night.

Nothing heretofore accomplished in the realm of motion photography approaches this magnificent spectacle in scope, power or feeling. From the first scenes, mere flashes showing the beginning of the slave trade with America, to the happy culmination of the romance which runs like a thread through the whole portrayal, the audience is carried along in almost breathless fashion through such historic events as Sherman's march to the sea, Grant's campaign before Vicksburg, the surrender at Appomatox and the assassination of Lincoln.

Then are shown the shameful and disgraceful events of the "carpet-bag" regime in the south, when the freed negroes sought, under the spur of northern politicians, to seize the reins of local government, resulting in the terrors of the Ku Klux Klan, when the men of the south sought to resist this invasion and reign of near-anarchy. The battle scenes, especially that before Petersburg, are staged upon a scale approaching actuality, and far surpassing anything ever attempted in the way of spectacular amusement. Not only are the battlefields shown in panorama, but close and intimate details are depicted of the soldiers in the trenches or "earthworks," as they were known in that day.

Then the other side of the picture is shown—the loss of life, the destruction of property, the agony of mind and body, the prostrate grief of survivors, the shattering of homes and loves, the changing of affection to hate and rancor. "The Birth of a Nation" is not alone an entertainment. It is as well a preachment of more than ordinary power on the rending horror of war.

An orchestra of unusual size for a theatre gives a program based upon old war melodies, but orchestrated to symphonic proportions.

WALTHAM (Mass.) NEWS
SEPT. 22, 1915

body, they are not infallible.

MAJESTIC THEATRE

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION"

Supposing that you were given the opportunity at a ridiculously small price—considering the spectacle offered—to occupy a reserved seat in a grand stand which commanded a fine view of such historic scenes as the actual Battle of Gettysburg, Sherman's March to the Sea, the last stand at Petersburg, the Assassination of President Lincoln in Ford's Theatre, Lee's Surrender to Grant, the tragic and wild rides of the Ku Klux Klans, the destruction of entire cities by fire, wonderful artillery duels, miles of trench fighting, in fact war as it actually is—would you not jump at the opportunity?

You undoubtedly would. Well, that is practically just what is offered to the spectator in "The Birth of a Nation" which is in its fifth great month at the Tremont Theatre, Boston and will enter on its twentieth and last week next Monday, August 16th. No other attraction has achieved such a record in a theatre in Boston in several seasons and it is the more remarkable when it is considered that two performances daily have been given throughout the engagement. This means that nearly two million people have seen this famous spectacle which has been just as much of a sensation in New York, Chicago, Atlantic City, Brighton Beach and other important points of the United States.

While the above mentioned spectacular scenes are shown as features of the story of "The Birth of a Nation" as shown in moving pictures they had to be originally reproduced with the greatest fidelity to life and viewing them from a seat in the theatre is quite as realistic as it would be to have been sitting in a grand stand as an actual onlooker.

Every American heart cannot fail to thrill with enthusiasm over this offering which combines pictorial spectacle, music and effects in a thrilling drama of the Civil War crisis, interspersed with lively comedy and heightened with two charming love romances of the Blue and the Gray.

"BIRTH OF NATION" CERTAIN TO BE SHOWN HERE

Movement To Prevent Exhibition of Film At Norfolk Theatre Will Fail of Object

(Norfolk Bureau.)

That the Board of Aldermen will tonight refer to the ordinance committee the ordinance adopted by the Common Council last Monday night, prohibiting the exhibition of motion pictures, photoplays, vaudeville performances or anything on the stage or platform that will tend to incite race hatred, is regarded as probable. Those who are opposed to the measure and a few who favor it contend that it is customary for ordinances introduced in the Councils to be referred to the ordinance committee for its consideration and recommendation, and that the ordinance in this case should not be an exception to the rule. It is believed that there will be enough members of the board present tonight who do not favor the ordinance to send it to the committee.

If such action is taken to night by the Board of Aldermen the ordinance will have to be referred back to the Common Council for concurrence. In either event the sending to the ordinance committee will mean its defeat as far as it concerns the object at which it was aimed. "The Birth of a Nation," the screen production to be shown here at the Colonial next week, and which caused the ordinance in question to be introduced into the Common Council by Councilman J. J. Pitt, will have been presented before the ordinance could be put through the usual course and acted upon by both branches of the Council.

Mayor Mayo, upon the advice of City Attorney Pilcher, decided that he had no authority to prevent the exhibition of "The Birth of a Nation," as there was nothing in the statute or any ordinance that empowered the city's chief executive to stop any performance or motion picture unless the subject was indecent. The mayor also stated that the ordinance would have to come within the purview of the law before he would approve it even if it should be adopted by both branches of the Council, and, it is said, for this reason more than any other the measure will be referred to the ordinance committee, as its legality has been questioned.

Because of a ruling by the city attorney the Board of Aldermen did not hold its expected meeting last night, but, following another call by the president, will meet tonight.

TRENTON (N. J.) GAZETTE
SEPT. 22, 1915

The Birth of a Nation.

The citizen of Trenton interested in the world and its affairs who neglects to see "The Birth of a Nation" as it is presented at the Trent theatre this week, will miss a most impressive inspiration in the direction of peace.

The tragedy of war is depicted so clearly and with such terrific effect that, we believe, every man and woman in the audience comes away from the playhouse with whatever indifference he or she may have had relative to the universal cry of peace, completely wiped out.

The racial and political coloring of the pictures is entirely overshadowed by the horrors of the battle fields, the wanton destruction of property, the useless sacrifice of human life and the awful suffering of women and children.

The political intrigue, the arrogance of race leaders, the lust of mobs and individuals that accompanied the period of reconstruction in the south, may be quickly forgotten, but the carnage of war with its stalking shadow of death, the terrifying roar of cannons and its flame-lit trail, sink deeply into the mind, and we come away praying that this and every other nation may be forever saved from the curse of it.

SALEM (Mass.) NEWS
SEPT. 22, 1915

of its demerits as an impudent, overzealous organ.

"RECONSTRUCTION" HISTORY.

Persons familiar with the history of the government of this country and the Republican leaders during the war and reconstruction periods have wondered why the name "Stoneman" was used for the principal character in the play, "The Birth of a Nation," recently given in Salem, and still running in Boston. Possibly many News readers are aware that that character is a representation of Thaddeus Stevens of Pennsylvania, better known as "the great commoner." He was a Republican leader in the house during the latter part of Lincoln's term and part of Johnson's. He it was who forced the impeachment trial of President Andrew Johnson. He was even then a feeble old man, and at the close, when as one of the house managers of the impeachment, he made the closing argument for the prosecution, he was brought into the senate chamber, where the trial was held, in a chair. Here he made his speech sitting, until some fellow member had to relieve him and read the balance of the great argument. He was a radical of radicals, a powerful man and an able one. Of course his going to the south soon after the close of the rebellion was not history, but substantially all the rest depicted in the life of the character "Stoneman" is true to the life of Stevens.

It is hoped that this remarkable exhibition [illegible] history of our country between 1865 and 1877, the period of the northern Carpet Bagger and the southern Ku Klux, the latter made necessary by the former; to the mismanagement of the governments of the south by these emisaries from the north, who were also responsible for the bad state of affairs between negroes and whites, and, equally so, for most of the crimes of the negroes—many people believe—certainly for their political crimes. If the picture of the blacks is strongly drawn in this play, so, too, is the picture of the whites and native southerners and of the Carpet Baggers. But it may be well to impress these things on the minds of the people, that they may guard against similar acts themselves, or that they may judge with charity those who suffered at the hands of both sides.

WOBURN (Mass.) TIMES
SEPT. 22, 1915

BIRTH OF A NATION" AT THE MAJESTIC

26th Wonderful Week in Boston Begins Next Monday, Sept. 27.

Supposing that you were given the opportunity at a ridiculously small price—considering the spectacle offered—to occupy a reserved seat in a grandstand which commanded a fine view of such historic scenes as the actual Battle of Gettysburg, Sherman's March to the Sea, the last stand at Petersburg, the Assassination of President Lincoln in Ford's Theatre, Lee's Surrender to Grant, the tragic and wild rides of the Klu Klux Klans, the destruction of entire cities by fire, wonderful artillery duels, miles of trench fighting, in fact war as it actually is—would you not jump at the opportunity?

You undoubtedly would. Well, that is practically just what is offered to the spectator in "The Birth of a Nation" at the Majestic Theatre, Boston.

No other attraction has achieved such a record in Boston in several seasons.

While the above mentioned spectacular scenes are shown as features of the story of "The Birth of a Nation" as shown in moving pictures they had to be originally reproduced with the greatest fidelity to life and viewing them from a seat in the theatre is quite as realistic as it would be to have been sitting in a grand stand as an actual onlooker.

Every American heart cannot fail to thrill with enthusiasm over this offering which combines pictorial spectacle, music and effects in a thrilling drama of the Civil War crisis, interspersed with lively comedy and heightened with two charming love romances of the Blue and Gray.

HARTFORD (Conn.) POST
SEPT. 22, 1915

Hartford, Sept. [illegible]

PEOPLE'S COLUMN

THE FILM AGAIN

To the Editor of The Hartford Post:

Dear Sir:—Referring to your editorial of even date about the photoplay "The Birth of a Nation" please permit me to say that I never [illegible] it possible to prevent the pictures being shown here. My experience in other cities convinced me that money is all powerful and morals nowhere. All I hoped to do was to prepare the public mind for the reception of a stupendous fraud, and thus forestall the prejudice that I know the author hopes to engender in the hearts and mind of New England people. I felt it a duty—as no doubt Rev. Gay felt it his duty—to sound a warning. If it is not heeded and evil consequences follow, thinking people will know where to place the blame. If the press of Hartford and Mayor Lawlor are willing that some people shall enrich their coffers by palming off a pack of historical lies for historical truths why there is nothing to do but grin and bear it.

There may not be a precedent in Hartford for censoring a play, but there is ample precedent elsewhere. New York only recently set one in the Leo Frank film case. An injunction was issued and made permanent. "Chimmie Fadden" long since ceased to take on the aspect of an offensive burlesque on the Irish race. That people wouldn't stand for it. They threw bad eggs, decayed vegetables and resented with violence what they believed untrue delineation of Irish character.

No, we don't expect to stop the play, but we expect to remember those responsigle for it. There is always a day of reckoning for every sin. The negro has more friends than is generally known or supposed; they will join in avenging this monstrous wrong. There is one remedy that never fails—the use of that lofty, magical instrument of civilization—that comes down as still, as snowflakes on the sod, and executes a freeman's will, like lightning does the will of God!

(Signed) B. M. McKAY,
36 Hicks Street.

[illegible] 20, 1915.

MANCHESTER (N. H.) LEADER
SEPT. 22, 1915

ORIGINAL CAST IN MASTER FILM

In motion pictures one always gets the original cast, which is one point worth considering when "The Birth of a Nation" comes here for one week beginning with a matinee next Monday, Sept. 27. In producing "The Birth of a Nation," which is at present doing sensational business all over the country, the selection of players must have been a most trying and serious problem for Mr. Griffith as the range of players and characters and the work they had to perform covered a multitude of things that could not have been imposed upon ordinary workers in drama and musical comedy.

"The Birth of a Nation" is the greatest sensational success in stage annals of the world. For the first time in film spectacles one sees in a single masterpiece 5,000 scenes of gigantic magnitude; 18,000 characters, 3,000 horses, all in a production which cost a little over $500,000 to produce.

Cities were built up and then destroyed by fire. The biggest battle of the Civil war is re-enacted. Ford's theater, Washington, is reproduced to the smallest detail of the Lincoln tragedy. A series of wild Klu Klux "rides" are shown that commandeered [illegible] county for a day and cost $10,000. Women's dresses used 12,000 yards and Klu Klux costumes 25,000 yards of cloth. Wonderful artillery duels in which real shells, costing $80 apiece, were used, miles of trenches, thousands of fighters show "war as it really is."

PITTSBURG (Pa.) CHRONICLE
SEPT. 22, 1915

"BIRTH OF A NATION" IN ITS FOURTH WEEK

Mere words can never give a real [illegible] tion of the dramatic scenes and the [illegible] like reproduction of the past as depicted in "The Birth of a Nation," now in the fourth week of its record-breaking run at the Nixon Theater. The battle scenes are said by Richard Harding Davis and other war observers to be the most wonderful and realistic ever presented to the American public. Thousands of soldiers are seen in the trenches, battling at breastworks, charging over fields with cold steel, masked batteries in [illegible] tion, a panorama of marching counter marching troops, shells ex[illegible] ing in the air and in the mid[illegible] struggling masses, the carnage of as it really is.

PORTSMOUTH (N. H.) HERALD
SEPT. 22, 1915

THE PORTSMOUT

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION"

Twenty-Sixth Wonderful Week in Boston Begins Next Monday, September 27

Supposing that you were given the opportunity at a ridiculously small price—considering the spectacle offered—to occupy a reserved seat in a grand stand which commanded a fine view of such historic scenes as the actual battle of Gettysburg, Sherman's March to the Sea, the last stand at Petersburg, the assassination of President Lincoln in Ford's Theatre, Lee's surrender to Grant, the tragic and wild rides of the Ku Klux Klans, the destruction of entire cities by fire, wonderful artillery duels, miles of the trench fighting, in fact war as it actually is—would you not jump at the opportunity?

You undoubtedly would. Well, that is practically just what is offered to the spectator in "The Birth of a Nation" which is in its fifth great month at the Tremont Theatre, Boston, and will enter on its twentieth and last week next Monday. No other attraction has achieved such a record in a theatre in Boston in several seasons, and it is the more remarkable when it is considered that two performances daily have been given throughout the engagment. This means that nearly 1,000,000 people have seen this spectacle which has been just as much of a sensation in New York, Chicago, Atlantic City, Brighton Beach and other important points of the United States.

While the above mentioned spectacular scenes are shown as features of the story of "The Birth of a Nation," as shown in moving pictures they had to be originally produced with the greatest fidelity to life and viewing them from a seat in the theatre is quite as realistic as it would be to have been sitting in a grandstand as an actual onlooker.

Every American heart cannot fail to thrill with enthusiasm over this offering which combines pictorial spectacle, music and effects in a thrilling drama of the Civil war crisis, interspersed with lively comedy and heightened with two charming love romances of the Blue and the Gray.

Portland Press
9-22-15

WEDNESDAY MORN

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION" FF

A month ago when the advance notices were first inserted in the local newspapers heralding the first engagement of "The Birth of a Nation" at the B. F. Keith Theatre the majority of the thatregoers were skeptical of a motion picture drama playing to even average attendance at travelling road production prices. But this wonderful picture drama came and the Portland public saw and were conquered by the stupendous spectacle which was unfolded before them on the screen. They saw the history of our nation unfolded before their eyes as no tale of fiction or school history could depict it and twenty-five thousand Portlanders besieged the box office at Keith's during the week and packed the popular playhouse to the doors, hundreds being turned away at every performance.

JOSEPH HENABERY
As Abraham Lincoln in "The Birth of a Nation."

The attendance was so great that the engagement might have been continued for a second week had not the Royster & Dudley Opera Company contracts been signed and the closing of that company now makes it possible to re-book this tremendous spectacle and the same company that presented it at Keith's three weeks ago will return to the B. F. Keith Theatre next Monday, Sept. 27 for a week's engagement. The same increased orchestra, the same accompanying effects and the same personnel as the previous engagement will be employed in the presentation of this vital and stupendous picture drama.

"The Birth of a Nation" is the greatest sensational success in the stage annals of the world. For the first time in film spectacle one sees in a single masterpiece 5,000 scenes of gigantic magnitude; 18,000 characters, 3,000 horses, all in a production which cost a little over $500,000 to produce. A musical score for an enlarged orchestra, perfectly synchronized to the thousands of distinct and individual scenes, perfect to the instant, adds still more to this great production. Remember it opens next Monday for a week's return engagement and that already the seats have gone on sale and the public all day yesterday were in almost a steady line at the box office of Keith's to get the choice of seats. The return engagement will attract even larger crowds than before and the wise theatregoer will drop in to Keith's early and secure his seats.

A PICTURE FOR SCHOOL CHILDREN.

During the previous engagement of "The Birth of a Nation" the schools were closed and many of the children were away at their summer homes. The return of this celebrated motion drama to B. F. Keith's next week will enable them to see this wonderfully educational spectacle. The grammar school children are studying the reconstruction period and the Civil war and there is no more graphic way of presenting this period of United States history to them as by seeing "The Birth of a Nation." The biggest battles of the Civil war are enacted with a fidelity to detail that is faithful in accuracy and had the help of some of the leaders of that time who participated in the actual battle, so that it would be a true representation in every respect. No parent should fail to take his boy or girl to see this gigantic spectacle and wonderful educational picture.

PORTLAND (Me.) EXPRESS & ADV.
SEPT. 22, 1915

Seats on Sale Thursday.—Advertisement.

BIRTH OF A NATION. FF

Which is one point worth considering when The Birth of a Nation comes here for a return engagement of one week at the B. F. Keith Theater, commencing next Monday, Sept. 27 with two performances daily.

In producing The Birth of a Nation, which is at the present doing sensational business all over the Country, the selection of players must have been a most trying and serious problem for Mr. Griffith, as the range of players and characters and the work they had to perform covered a multitude of things that could not have been imposed upon ordinary workers in drama and musical comedy.

For the first time in film spectacles one sees in a single masterpiece 5000 scenes of gigantic magnitude; 18,000 characters; 3,000 horses all in a production which costs a little over $500,000 to produce. Cities were built up and then destroyed by fire. The biggest battle of the Civil War is re-enacted. Ford's theater, Washington, is reproduced to the smallest detail of the Lincoln tragedy. A series of wild Klu Klux "rides" are shown that commandeered a county for a day and cost $10,000. Women's dresses used 12,000 yards and Klu Klux costumes, 25 000 yards of cloth. Wonderful artillery duels in which real shells, costing $80 apiece were used; miles of torches, thousands of fighters show "War as it really is." Night photography of battle scenes, invented and perfected at a cost of $5000 is shown. A musical score for an enlarged orchestra, perfectly synchronized to the thousands of distinct and individual scenes, perfect to the instant adds still more to the production, making altogether the most stupendous dramatic and spectacular enterprise ever conceived by the brain of man. When The Birth of a Nation comes to the B. F. Keith Theater for its return engagement every man woman and child should be permitted to see this phenominal triumph which will never be duplicated, and certainly not for a number of years.—Advertisement.

PITTSBURG (Pa.) LEADER
SEPT. 22, 1915

[illegible] of the work of David W. Griffith, whose stupendous photodrama "The Birth of a Nation," which is enjoying a successful run of many weeks at the Nixon theater, that he represents, in the motion picture industry, the "newer school" at its best. He is a director of daring and a producer gifted with the artist's imagination. Or, perhaps his "imagination" might better be expressed as "the ability to sense the feelings of the spectator." He handles his scenes so that every bit of action counts towards the achieving of the desired impression, the unnecessary is eliminated entirely. At times, as in the onrushing scenes at the close of "The Birth of a Nation," he is content with merely suggestions, thus keeping the mind of the spectator in action with his idea. His blending of history, romance and emotional power proves irresistible. The titanic events sweep on with the force of a whirlwind forcing one to gaze with breathless wonder at this superb spectacle of the stirring Civil war and reconstruction times. Seats are selling two weeks in advance for all performances.

CLIPPING FROM Press
Date Waltham Mass
9-22-15

'BIRTH OF A NATION'

Great Film Shown at the Majestic FF

Supposing that you were given the opportunity at a ridiculously small price—considering the spectacle offered—to occupy a reserved seat in a grand stand which commanded a fine view of such historic scenes as the actual Battle of Gettysburg, Sherman's March to the Sea, the last stand at Petersburg, the Assassination of President Lincoln in Ford's Theatre, Lee's Surrender to Grant, the tragic and wild rides of the Ku Klux Klan, the destruction of entire cities by fire, wonderful artillery duels, miles of trench fighting, in fact war as it actually is—would you not jump at the opportunity?

While the above mentioned spectacular scenes are shown as features of the story of "The Birth of a Nation" as shown in moving pictures they had to be originally reproduced with the greatest fidelity to life and viewing them from a seat in the theatre is quite as realistic as it would be to have been sitting in a grand stand as an actual onlooker.

This offering which combines pictorial spectacle, music and effects in a thrilling drama of the Civil War crisis, interspersed with lively comedy and heightened with two charming love romances of the Blue and the Gray.

RUTLAND (Vt.) HERALD
SEPT. 22, 1915

Doris Ha[illegible]

Services have been suspended at the Methodist church on account of extensive repairs being made to the interior of the building.

Rutland Favored By Biggest Film Attraction Ever Shown "The Birth of a Nation."

Griffith's big picture, "The Birth of a Nation," will come to the Shrine the whole week of September 27. There will be a big orchestra of 16 pieces, and a company of 20 people behind the scenes, while several very beautiful costumed girls will act as attendants.

The picture is a dramatization of Thomas Dixon's "The Clansman." Its chief incidents are historic. The incident of the negro is responsible for the formation of the Ku-Klux Klan which chases the carpet-baggers out of the South and rehabilitated the Southland.

Few people knew into what a lamentable situation the South fell nearly 10 years after Appomatox. The whites were disfranchised because of their part in the war and Southern states were governed by a combination of newly franchised negroes and carpet baggers from the North whose main object was loot. How the whites of the South regained control of the country is one of the most dramatic passages in our history.

"The Birth of a Nation" used 18,000 people and 3000 horses in depicting the wonderful scenes. Nothing so spectacular has yet been shown. For the first time in the history of film art you see the great historical conflict pass before you; the burning of Atlanta; Sherman's march to the sea; victory of the North; Grant and Lee at Appomattox; reconstruction troubles; love and romance of history; tremendous battle scenes; the Lincoln tragedy; dauntless riders of the Ku-Klux Klan; tender domestic drama and charming comedy and the dawn of the "New Nation."

Owing to the tremendous patronage that will undoubtedly be showered upon this massive screen spectacle during its local engagement, patrons are warned to secure their seat reservations at the earliest possible moment for the attendances at the Shrine theater will positively be greater than this city has ever known before, either for a production of the spoken stage or the silent drama. Seats now selling at the Playhouse. What costs $2 in the big cities today the management submit at 50, 75 and $1.

[illegible] FROM Manchester N.H.
9-22-15

"BIRTH OF A NATION" IS A MASTER FILM FF

If you have not seen "The Birth of a Nation" you have missed the most astonishing achievement in dramatic portraiture introduced to the American stage. Imagine 18,000 people visualizing the story of intense human interest add dramatic purposes and then add 3000 horses ridden by some of the most reckless and daring riders in the world, dashing in great cavalcades over picturesque roads and through war-strewn valleys and plains, and you can begin to form a vague idea of the scale upon which this narrative is unfolded.

The plot of the drama deals with the relationship of the slavery question to the developments of America and its final solution reveals how out of the quarrel of disputing states there arose the mightiest nation in the world.

With history as its background is reared a plot of fundamental dramatic appeal and evolved a story of such prodigal details that its bigness alone astounds you. It is the work of a master dramatist who has a story to tell and sets about creating an epoch with its results. He dramatizes the moving force of vast numbers of people, and as his means of expression is the camera of the highly developed motion picture art he is not confined by any of the narrow limitations which have heretofore hindered stage spectacles.

Given his story and the people, Griffith has secured startling results. His mammoth canvas often reveals battlefields covering an area of a dozen square miles, and by following historical details he reproduces the stern battle effects as they actually took place half a century ago. In all the expanse of scene and action he never loses sight of his basic story and the smallest detail becomes as astonishing a part of the narrative as the largest incident in it. The completeness and the reader of the work make it unusual.

The premier production of "The Birth of a Nation" at the Auditorium theatre will take place next Monday, Sept. 27, and will continue six days, both matinee and evening. You should see it, even at the expense of other amusements.

PITTSBURG (Pa.) GAZETTE-TIMES
SEPT. 22, 1915

Franklin [illegible] Green. "Hands Up" comes to the Alvin Theater [illegible] 21 direct from its big summer run at the Forty-fourth Street Theater, New York, where despite the hot weather, it broke all theatrical precedents by playing during the entire summer.

"The Birth of a Nation" is now in the fourth week of its record-breaking run at the Nixon Theater. Realism is the keynote of the success of this D. W. Griffith film. There are over 5,000 scenes. The size of the spectacle defies description. The battle scenes are said by Richard Harding Davis and other war observers to be the most realistic ever presented to the American public. Thousands of soldiers are seen in the trenches, battling at breastworks, charging over fields with cold steel, masked batteries in action, a panorama of marching and counter-marching troops.

LEWISTON (Maine) SUN
SEPT. 22, 1915

[illegible]STON DAILY [illegible]

EMPIRE OBTAINS PICTURE

BIRTH OF A NATION TO BE SHOWN HERE WEEK OF OCTOBER 4.

For one week, beginning October 4, the Birth of a Nation, the most sensational and most widely advertised of motion pictures, will be shown at the Empire Theatre. The management was notified, yesterday, that their efforts to obtain it were successful.

The picture, when first shown at Boston, evoked the protest of the colored people and so strong was the sentiment that certain parts of the film were eliminated. The entire picture, making practically a three hour performance, will be shown here twice daily.

Special trains are to be run the first three days of the week. They will bring people from Norway, Livermore Falls and Farmington.

The picture requires the work of 23 men for the stage effects and a special orchestra of 20 pieces. The music for the pictures is considered one of the features of the production.

ESTER (N. Y.) DEMOCRAT
SEPT. 22, 1915

106

...up the shutters.

Not Pleased with Censors.

While it has not yet been conclusively shown that censorship of moving-picture films is a failure, the discussion going on in several nearby states indicates that censorship falls far short of accomplishing all that was expected of it. A typical case occurred in Massachusetts recently. The censorship law was amended there on purpose to make sure that the Board of Censors had sufficient power to suppress the "Birth of a Nation" film. When the time came to pass on the film, however, the censors promptly gave it their indorsement, incidentally thereby legalizing its production in Boston. Recent court decisions in Pennsylvania have been to the effect that the municipal authorities cannot interfere with the production of a film after it has been approved by the censors. This gives film censors dangerous powers, and is a serious encroachment on municipal authority. No body of outsiders should have authority to stay the hands of the officials of a particular city if they find that because of peculiar local conditions a certain film play ought not to be produced within the territory under their jurisdiction.

EAU CLAIRE (Wis.) TELEGRAM
SEPT. 22, 1915

Kansas City 4, ... Chicago 3-5, Newark 4-6.

"Birth of a Nation."

Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Hiller have returned from their vacation visit in Milwaukee and Chicago and have resumed their duties as entertainers of the public at the Unique theater. While in Chicago they saw "The Birth of a Nation," which is running there at big prices and drawing the biggest crowds of any theater in the city. Mr. Hiller has seen so many pictures that one would think he would not be affected by even the most soul stirring film but he says that after seeing the studendous production he was like one in a trance, not knowing exactly what he was until after he had collected his wits and gazed about him for some little time. At the Colonial where the picture is running, seats are selling for two dollars and seat reservations have to be made a week in advance.

After looking over the different vaudeville agencies Mr. Hiller has concluded that he was very fortunate in booking acts going over the Pantages circuit for Eau Claire. The acts come to Eau Claire on Saturday on the way to Minneapolis from Chicago. At Minneapolis they play at the New Palace theater on the Monday following their appearance here.

MISS MAE MARSH, who plays Flora Cameron in "The Birth of a Nation," at the Colonial theatre all next week.

"BIRTH OF A NATION" HERE NEXT WEEK

Spectacle Of Historical And Romantic Interest Next At The Colonial

The next attraction at the Colonial theatre will be D. W. Griffith's mighty spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation." The engagement begins on Monday and is for six nights and daily matinees.

This is the great production which is still making a record run of over 600 performances in New York city, where it created the sensation of the season. It is estimated that over two million people have seen the production since it was originally brought out in the east. It has other sensational runs in Boston, Chicago, San Francisco and Los Angeles to its credit.

Mr. Griffith was eight months making this wonderful story. He employed 18,000 people and 3,000 horses and the total cost of the work reached the enormous figure of half a million dollars.

The story is one of romance and adventure, linked to the most vital periods of American history. It records its facts with the rapidity of lightning and yet never departs from the fundamentals of true drama. Love and conflict are its basic theme, but a myriad of details illumine the narrative and lift it so far beyond anything our stage has ever known that the usual avenues of comparison do not offer a road to follow in this instance. Linked with the drama is an operatic score which carries recurrent themes with every vital scene and character in the epic. This wonderful score which is synchronized to the drama is in itself an incomparable work of art. An orchestra of forty travels with the attraction to handle the musical feature of the presentation.

That part of history dealing with the rise and fall of the slavery problem is the vital spark upon which Griffith has built his story. The conflict which this question caused is reproduced in great battles and in all the thrilling things which are a part of war. Seat sale opens on Thursday.

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION"

In a symbolic sense, the most prominent figure in Part I, of "The Birth of a Nation," now crowding the Forrest, is that of Abraham Lincoln, the martyred President, overshadowing Austin Stoneman, Abolitionist and plotter.

And it is a surprisingly faithful portrait of the "rail-splitter" that one sees on the screen.

The homely, but kindly, features are there and the tall, stooping form so familiar to readers of fifty years ago and since.

History has been drawn upon for incident, and in the photoplay Lincoln is seen in characteristic poses and engaged in kindly deeds.

Here he is signing a pardon for a young Southern soldier condemned as a guerrilla spy, and making glad the heart of an aged mother who has not pleaded in vain for the life of her boy; and again he is defending his policy as to the conquered South, a policy too humane for the revengeful Stoneman.

Last of all he is seen stricken to death at the moment of his great triumph, his noble head laid low by the bullet of the assassin.

Not a little of the successful portrayal of the part of the President by Joseph Henabery is due to the apparent reverence with which the actor approached his work. Lincoln was a kindly man, far from morose, but that part of his career with which the photoplay deals was saddened by the war and its awful sacrifices.

Fine as is the actor's makeup, more wonderful is the facial expression that indicates so surely what is going on in the mind of the great liberator.

NEWBURYPORT (Mass.) HERALD
SEPT. 23, 1915

...ible desired.

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION"

Supposing that you were given the opportunity at a ridiculously small price—considering the spectacle offered—to occupy a reserved seat in a grand stand which commanded a fine view of such historic scenes as the actual Battle of Gettysburg, Sherman's March to the Sea, the last stand at Petersburg, the Assassination of President Lincoln in Ford's theatre, Lee's Surrender to Grant, the tragic and wild rides of the Ku Klux Klans, the destruction of entire cities by fire, wonderful artillery duels, miles of trench fighting, in fact war as it actually is—would you not jump at the opportunity?

You undoubtedly would. Well, that is practically just what is offered to the spectator in "The Birth of a Nation" which is in its fifth great month at the Tremont Theatre, Boston, and will enter on its twentieth and last week next Monday, August 16th. No other attraction has achieved such a record in any theatre in Boston in several seasons, and it is the more remarkable when it is considered that two performances daily have been given throughout the engagement. This means that nearly 2,000,000 people have seen this famous spectacle which has been just as much of a sensation in New York, Chicago, Atlantic City, Brighton Beach and other important points of the United States.

While the above mentioned spectacular scenes are shown as features of the story of "The Birth of a Nation" as shown in moving pictures they had to be originally reproduced with the greatest fidelity to life and viewing them from a seat in the theatre is quite as realistic as it would be to have been sitting in a grand stand as an actual onlooker.

Every American heart cannot fail to thrill with enthusiasm over this offering which combines pictorial spectacle, music and effects in a thrilling drama of the Civil War crisis, interspersed with lively comedy and heightened with two charming love romances of the Blue and the Gray.

CHICAGO (Ill.) AMERICAN
SEPT. 23, 1915

DODGES BOMBS IN STREETS OF LONDON

BY ROB REEL.

Thomas Dixon, Jr., author, actor and playwright, upon whose novels the great scenic mo... The Birth of a Nation," is founded, was a brief visitor to Chicago yesterday while en route to California to direct the production of a new film of the National Drama Corporation of which he is director general.

At the Colonial Theater he was more prone to discuss the recent narrow escape from death of his son, Thomas III., in the latest air raid of the Germans on London September 8 than to talk about motion pictures. The son returned to New York a few days ago, which was the first that his father had heard from him since the raid, as all cablegrams the young man forwarded were withheld by the censors.

"My son went to London about two months ago," said Mr. Dixon. "He assisted D. W. Griffiths' brother in the production of the 'Birth of a Nation' there, where it will open at the Scala Theater on September 27. While walking with a friend in Trafalgar Square the night of the raid he saw three Zeppelins overhead. Then many bombs were dropped, one of them striking within 200 feet of where my son was standing. The scattering shrapnel whizzed dangerously near his head. He and his friend fled for shelter. As they crossed the Square a bomb burst full upon a passing motorbus loaded with passengers. Every passenger was killed. The bus was blown completely to atoms. Even the iron axles were unrecognizable as such.

"So strict was the censorship of news concerning the raid that it was impossible to learn in London on the following day how many people were killed or the extent of property destroyed."

Young Dixon will pass through Chicago next Monday on his way to California to assist his father in the production of a play.

Mr. Dixon predicted a successful run of the "Birth of a Nation" in London. It is planned to have the King and Queen witness the initial performance.

MANCHESTER (N. H.) MIRROR
SEPT. 22, 1915

...twins to their rightful parents, make... screen story at once absorbing and thri... ing.

"BIRTH OF A NATION" OPENS HERE SEPT. 2...

Shows may come and shows may ... feature film be widely heralded and a... brief exhibitions returned to the shelv... but "The Birth of a Nation" contin... on its triumphant way and will be sho... at the Auditorium Monday, Sept. 27 ... twice daily for an entire week. Best ... the film spectacle itself "The Birth o... Nation" music has taken a firm hold ...

...he fancy of New England theatre-goe... It revives most of the old tunes of t... civil war and includes also much elab... rate orchestration in modern mode.

For out-of town patrons the matin... performance will be found attractive t... same as night and more convenient ... attend. No Sunday shows will be giv... but with that exception Mr. Griffi... spectacle is being performed twice d... at 2 p. m. and evenings at 8, respectiv...

"The Birth of a Nation" is the b... great production so far made. There w... over 120,000 feet of film when the came... finished their work in the West ... South, but the process of selecti... which plays such a telling part in th... productions, has reduced this to 12... feet, the spectacle as it now stands, t... ing about two and three-quarters ho... to present.

The production cost over $150,000 ... the first presentation was given in ... Angeles, Cal., since which the prod... tion has been shown in New York ... Boston, Chicago, San Francisco, Sea... Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Atlantic ... Brighton Beach and Long Branch ... long runs and playing to capacity ... every performance.

The production will be presented ... the same big manner that has cha... rized its performances in the s... ties, with augmented orchestra ...

PORTLAND (Me.) PRESS
SEPT. 22, 1915

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION."

...ago when the advance no... tices were first inserted in the local newspapers heralding the first engagement of "The Birth of a Nation" at the B. F. Keith theatre the ma... jority of theatregoers were sceptical o... a motion picture drama playing t... even average attendance at traveling road production prices. But this wonderful picture drama came and the Portland public saw and were conquered by the stupendous spectacle which was unfolded before them on the screen. They saw the history of our nation unfolded before their eyes as no tale of fiction or school history could depict it and 25,000 Portlanders besieged the box office at Keith's during the week and packed the popular playhouse to the doors, hundreds being turned away at every performance.

The attendance was so great that the engagement might have been continued for a second week had not the Royster and Dudley opera company contracts been signed, and the closing of that company now makes it possible to re-book this tremendous spectacle and the same company that presented it at Keith's three weeks ago will return to the B. F. Keith theatre next Monday, Sept. 27 for a week's engagement. The same increased orchestra, the same accompanying effects and the same personnel as the previous engagement will be employed in the presentation of this vital and stupendous picture-drama.

"The Birth of a Nation" is the greatest sensational success in the stage annals of the world. For the first time in film spectacle one sees in a single masterpiece 5000 scenes of gigantic magnitude; 18,000 characters, 3000 horses, all in a production which cost a little over $500,000 to produce. A musical score for an enlarged orchestra perfectly cynchronized to the thousands of distinct and individual scenes, per fect to the instant, adds ...ll more to th... CEN...

CHESTER (N. H.) LEADER
SEPT. 23, 1915

BIRTH OF NATION BASED ON FACTS

When one sees D. W. Griffith's wonderful film spectacle "The Birth of a Nation," and learns from it the many facts and sidelights of American history that are not to be found in the school editions of history, the thought comes that the educational departments of the country are neglecting the real education of the growing children. It is a known fact that the histories studied by the children in the schools of the South give an entirely different version of the great struggle of 1861 than that which is given the schools of the North.

Then "The Birth of a Nation" comes and in clear, impressive motion pictures, gives the real story of this great struggle and the spectator, be he a grown-up or a child, realizes that in his studies of the Great Rebellion he has learned but a small part of the actual history.

For instance, it was new knowledge to many to learn that after the states of the Confederacy had signed a peace, there were Northern statesmen who wished and urged the President to treat the rebellious states as conquered provinces and to hang their leaders. This is but one of many things that are brought to light in "The Birth of a Nation for the first time.

CLIPPING FROM Express
Portland Me
Date 9-23-15

Howell will give their a [illegible]
Seats now selling for the balance of the week.—Advertisement.

BIRTH OF A NATION F

Shows may come and shows may go, feature film be widely heralded and after brief exhibitions returned to the shelves, but The Birth of a Nation continues on its triumphant way and will return to the B. F. Keith Theater Sept. 27 for an engagement of one week. Besides the film spectacle itself The Birth of a Nation music has taken a firm hold on the fancy of New England theatergoers. It revives most of the old tunes of the Civil War and includes also much elaborate orchestration in modern mode.

For the out of town patrons the matinee performances will be found attractive, the same as night and more convenient to attend. No Sunday shows will be given but with that exception Mr. Griffith's spectacle is being performed twice daily at 2.15 and evenings at 8.15, respectively.

There were over 120,000 feet of film when the cameras finished their work in the West and South, but the process of selection, which plays such a telling part in these productions has reduced this to 12,000 feet, the spectacle as it now stands taking 2¾ hours to present.

The production cost over $150,000 and the first presentation was given in Los Angeles, Calif., since which the production has been shown in New York City, Boston, Chicago, San Francisco, Seattle, Philadelphia, Pittsburg, Atlantic City, Brighton Beach and Long Branch for long runs and playing to capacity at every performance.

The production will be presented here in the same big manner that has characterized its performances in the above cities, with augmented orchestra and all other details exact.—Ad.

Date Lewiston Me
9-23-15

"The Birth of a Nation" One Week

The film spectacle of "The Birth of a Nation" which comes to the Empire theatre on Oct. 4th for one whole week is not a feature in the ordinary sense, but a mighty panorama and pictorial exposition of the most vital points of American history which are particularly interesting to Americans now on account of the threatened complications with a foreign power. Super-added to history is a delightful love romance of the North and South which is made fascinating by Mr. Griffith's remarkable gift of quiet humor and keen eye for the slightest significant detail. Indeed there are said to be no less than 200,000 details in the picture.

"As a work of art it is wonderful and so beautiful and so [illegible] that it robs one of the power of criticism. It is a great work, first, last and all the time, and it stamps Mr. Griffith as a master artist in whom the power of visual interpretation reaches a height that cannot easily be comprehended at one sitting. You see a whole battlefield covered by thousands of men.

There is no drama on the American speaking stage in our history that has ever swayed an audience as does "The Birth of a Nation."—adv.

RICHMOND (Va.) LEADER
SEPT. 23, 1915

positions. There was a rush to headquarters today, where they were told it was a false alarm.

Disputed Picture Will Be Shown In Norfolk

"Birth of a Nation" to Appear Before Council Can Act on Prohibitory Measure.

"The Birth of a Nation," a motion picture production, which has caused rioting and met with other forms of opposition in a number of Eastern cities, and which is now beginning a tour of the South, being booked in RICHMOND next month, will probably be shown in Norfolk NEXT week, notwithstanding vigorous efforts that have been made to prevent its presentation.

Reports today from Norfolk were to the effect that the board of aldermen in that city, by a vote of 6 to 5, had referred to the ordinance committee an ordinance which the lower branch of the city council passed for the purpose of suppressing the film. As the measure will not come before the lower branch for concurrence until after the date set for the exhibition of the film, its opponents are reported to regard the action of the aldermen as a defeat.

The argument was advanced in Norfolk by those who advocated the suppression of the film that it would arouse "race hatred and possibly race riots" if allowed to be shown. Those who believed there should be no interference with the production contended it was desirable from an educational, dramatic and artistic standpoint. Having been defeated in their fight before the council, opponents of the film may attempt to prevent its appearance by applying for an injunction before one of the Norfolk courts, it was reported.

Two of Thomas Dixon's books, "The Leopard's Spots" and "The Clansman," were utilized by D. W. Griffith in writing the scenario of "The Birth of a Nation." A negro society, it is said, has been particularly active in stirring up opposition to the film. Mayor Ainslie has stated that any theatrical performance calculated to cause a breach of the peace can be prohibited in this city by invoking the customary police powers.

TRENTON (N. J.) GAZETTE
SEPT. 23, 1915

Stage TH

MORNING 'MAT.' FOR "BIRTH OF NATION"

Owing to the unprecedented demand for seats for D. W. Griffith's remarkable spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," Manager Moses has decided to provide a morning matinee at the Trent theatre Saturday morning, beginning at 10 o'clock. The demand for admission since the opening of the film engagement last Monday has been extraordinary, and the majority of the seats for the remaining performances have sold very rapidly.

There will be three shows of "The Birth of a Nation" on Saturday, at 10 a. m., at 2:15 p. m. and at 8:15 p. m. The usual matinee prices will prevail at the Saturday morning presentation.

It is a well known fact that lovers of photo-plays have their favorites among the actors in the cast and rave over their cleverness and personal charm as if they were before them on the legitimate stage in actual flesh and blood.

Mae Marsh, who plays Flora Cameron, the younger daughter in the southern household in "The Birth of a Nation," by her successful appearance in many photo-plays during her three years' career, has attracted by her elf-like charm and naive personality, many admirers who greet with pleasure her appearance on the screen.

Miss Marsh has many bits of fine acting in the picture. Among the most delightful are the welcoming of the brother back from the Civil war; the making of "southern ermine" with raw cotton and chimney black; the scene in the cellar with Miriam Cooper; the garden making that follows the return from the war; the southern banquet; and the pretty scene where she rains kisses on her brother Ben's mouth to console him for temporary loss of his sweetheart, Elsie. There is always a touch of comedy or of pathos where Miss Marsh appears. Her personality leads itself to fine temperamental treatment of any part she plays. Her expressive, every changing, mood-adapting face, is one of the most valuable in all the list of film favorites.

She was discovered by David W. Griffith, the producer of many film successes, long before he made "The Birth of a Nation."

...ING FROM Press
Portland Me
Date 9-23-15

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION." F

The success of "The Birth of a Nation" is due wholly to the intrinsic value of the picture itself. Everyone who sees it becomes a booster, and the word of mouth advertising is the greatest factor of all. Over 25,000 people saw this wonderful motion picture drama at its recent engagement at the B. F. Keith theatre, and hundreds were turned away at every performance. Every one who saw the picture before is a booster, and the way Portland theatre-goers are buying their seats for the coming engagement indicates that the same capacity houses that greeted the picture before will again be in attendance.

The engagement will open next Monday, Sept. 27, and will continue throughout the week with two performances daily. A larger number of seats at the lower prices of admission have been arranged for.

"The Birth of a Nation" is undisputably the greatest motion picture drama ever enacted for the "movies." Eighteen thousand actors, 3000 horses and over 5000 scenes are required to depict the story. The production is in every way the greatest ever staged. It required over half a million dollars to stage the picture. There was over 120,000 feet of film when the cameras had finished their work, but the process of selection which plays such a telling part in these productions has reduced this to 12,000 feet. The amount of film rejected, while photographically perfect, would make ten other photo-plays equally as long as "The Birth of a Nation," but this large amount was destroyed for there is one, and only one, "The Birth of a Nation."

No one can afford to miss this spectacle. Remember the date, one week at B. F. Keith's commencing Monday, Sept. 27. Tickets now on sale for the entire...

...IPPING FROM Argus
Portland Me
Date 9-23-15

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION." F

The Argus said in its issue of [illegible] 9, commenting editorially on the engagement of "The Birth of a Nation" at B. F. Keith's. The phenomenal success in this city proves that Portland will patronize high priced shows that advertise well, and produce all that they advertise."

The success of "The Birth of a Nation" is due wholly upon the intrinsic value of the picture itself. Everyone who sees it becomes a booster and the word of mouth advertising is the greatest factor of all. Over twenty-five thousand people saw this wonderful motion picture drama at its recent engagement at the B. F. Keith Theatre and hundreds were turned away at every performance. Every one who saw the picture before is a booster and from the way Portland theatregoers are buying their seats for the coming engagement indicates that the same capacity houses that greeted the picture before will again be in attendance.

The engagement will open next Monday, Sept. 27th and will continue throughout the week with two performances daily. A larger number of seats at the lower prices of admission have been arranged for.

"The Birth of a Nation" is undisputably the greatest motion picture drama ever enacted for the "movies." Eighteen thousand actors, three thousand horses and over 5,000 scenes are required to depict the story. The production is in every way the greatest ever staged. It required over half a million dollars to stage the picture. There was over 120,000 feet of film when the cameras had finished their work, but the process of selection which plays such a telling part in these productions has reduced this to 12,000 feet. The amount of film rejected, while photographically perfect, would make ten other photo-plays equally as long as "The Birth of a Nation," but this large amount was destroyed for there is one, and only one "The Birth of a Nation." So famous has this wonderful picture become that the sponsors for other pictures and other forms of entertainment seek to bask in this great photo-drama's reputation by claiming "as great as" "The Birth of a Nation," and other catch phrases and imitation of advertising, to catch the public eye. These make-shifts only go to show that they acknowledge "The Birth of a Nation" to be the topmost pinnacle of motion picture art, the last word in picture photography, the greatest spectacular, educational and thrilling picture ever projected on the screen.

No one can afford to miss this spectacle. Remember the date one week at B. F. Keith's commencing Monday, Sept. 27. Tickets now on sale for the entire engagement.

NORFOLK (Va.) VIRGINIAN-PILOT
SEPT. 23, 1915

HAPPY DAYS IN PIEDMONT BEFORE THE WAR. One of the 5,000 scenes in "The Birth of a Nation" at the Colonial.

SEAT SALE OPENS TODAY FOR "BIRTH OF NATION"

Number Of Inquiries Received At Colonial Indicates Wide Interest

Judging from the great number of inquiries by mail and telephone which have reached the Colonial theatre management, the box-office of that playhouse will probably be the busiest spot in Norfolk at 9 o'clock this morning, when the seat sale for the big Griffith spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," will be opened. No theatrical offering in many years has been the subject of as much discussion as the film production based upon Thomas Dixon's successful play and story, "The Clansman."

The company which begins a week's engagement at the Colonial Monday night consists of upwards of 40 people, half of them musicians, who will be heard with the regular theatre orchestra in a splendid symphony organization of 30 pieces. There is a large corps of mechanics and electricians for the stage effects, as well as a squad of supernumeraries who are utilized in some of the more important scenes showing the 18,000 people and 3,000 horses which make up "the cast."

"The Birth of a Nation" organization is in every sense a first-class theatrical attraction and in a recent statement David W. Griffith, the producer, stated that it will never be presented in any but the highest class theatres at the prices prevailing in those theatres for their best attractions. With the orchestra of 30 pieces and the stage realism that has made the spectacle a sensation everywhere, the presentation at the Colonial will be exactly the same as is being shown at the Liberty theatre, New York, where it has been running for seven months and will probably remain for the winter. Norfolk enjoys the distinction of being the smallest city in the United States to date, to get this attraction. It has been presened only in he larger centers, including Boston, where an objectionable attraction cannot live, and in Pittsburgh, Chicago, Philadelphia and St. Louis.

PITTSBURG (Pa.) POST
SEPT. 23, 1915

MIRIAM COOPER in "The Birth of a Nation" photo spectacle at the Nixon.

PROVIDENCE (R. I.) EVE. TRIBUNE 726
SEPT. 23, 1915

MAE MARSH

She Plays the Part of the Little Sister in "The Birth of a Nation" at the Providence Opera House.

Mae Marsh, the pretty little Miss who plays the part of Flora, the little sister, in "The Birth of a Nation," at the Providence Opera House, has arranged for 1000 feet of film, all scenes in which she is the central figure, to be printed for her and put away. She declares that on her 60th birthday this film will be opened, provided she lives 40 years longer, at a birthday gathering of all her old and new friends, and they will then have the pleasure of seeing her just as she was in her youth. Of course, this is a jolly idea; but will Miss Marsh be able to overcome the natural curiosity of women and not steal a look at the film before the secluded date?

LEWISTON (Maine) JOURNAL
SEPT. 23, 1915

"The Birth of a Nation," Entire Week.

"The Birth of a Nation" is the most remarkable attraction of recent years in American stage annals. It uses 18,000 people to tell its story and 3,000 horses add their quota to its bigness. The epic links history and romance in a way never attempted before. Its basic scenes are founded in some of the most stirring events in the nation's development and these are contracted with human appeals and family interests which are after all the essentials of true drama. Great battles of the Civil war are fought before your eyes. Lee surrenders to Grant at Appomatox. Lincoln is assassinated as actually as the scene took place fifty years ago in Ford's theatre, Washington. The South before and after the war is pictured in its most interesting phases. Wild rides of the Klansmen lend a dash and spirit to the performances.

It is a picture in a life time; one that will in all probability never be duplicated and for that reason should be viewed by every man, woman and child in this city. The Empire theatre will undoubtedly be crowded daily during the engagement of this remarkable spectacle which commences Oct. 4 for a period of six days. There will be two performances daily, the matinees starting promptly at 2.15 o'clock, while the evening sessions will start at 8.15 o'clock. The patrons are requested to reach the theatre in plenty of season to be seated before the opening of the mighty production.

PITTSBURG (Pa.) PRESS
SEPT. 23, 1915

...of the distinctive features of "Hands Up," in which Maurice and Florence Walton are featured, will be five young men from the elite of New York city, called the Maurice Dancing Men.

NIXON.

It is said of David W. Griffith, whose stupendous photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation," which is enjoying a successful run of many weeks at the Nixon theater, that he represents in the motion picture industry, the "newer school" at its best. He is a director of daring and a producer gifted with the artist's imagination. Or, perhaps, his "imagination" might better be expressed as "the ability to sense the feelings of the spectator." He handles his scenes so that every bit of action counts toward the achieving of the desired impression, the unnecessary is eliminated entirely.

of hoops and ruffles, D. W. Griffith, producer of the gigantic spectacle, now in its fourth week at the Olympic, was compelled to buy 25,000 yards of cloth to go into the dresses of his female characters. A goodly percentage of this clothes the women and girls who dance in the great ball just after Bull Run, on the eve of the departure of Confederate soldiers for the front, where it is realized a long and bloody struggle has commenced. Every dress is accurate to the period, copied exactly from contemporary costumes preserved in old wardrobes and museums, and many of them, which had to be made of special texture to give a shimmery, silky effect on the screen, ran into a cost that the average woman would consider almost fabulous.

It is after considering a thousand and one such items of expense as this, that the careful spectator of "The Birth of a Nation" not only regards the claim that the photodrama was produced at a cost of no less than $50,000 as accurate, but wonders how Griffith economized so closely as to get clear with no greater expense.

Comedy Bill at Columbia.

The Columbia's headliners next week are Will M. Cressy and Blanche Dane, who will appear in "The Village Lawyer." This is a comedy of New England life written by Cressy, who has written 139 one-act plays and created twice as many characters. Cressy and Dane will be remembered as unusual favorites on the Orpheum Circuit. Others on the programme are Harry Cooper, assisted by Louis Morrell, in a comedy skit, "The Mail Carrier," Eduardo and Elisa Cansino, dancers; Tom Smith and Ralph Austin in "All Fun"; Staines, tanbark comedians; Robinson Newbold and Marie Louise Gribbin in original songs and impersonations; Mae Francis, in bits of musical comedy, assisted by Clarence Caskill at the piano; Joseph Herbert, Jr., and Lillian Goldsmith in singing and dancing, featuring "The

(Me.) STAR
SEPT. 23, 1915

809

William Riley Hatch, Charles Lane, Robert Stowe Gill, George Graham, Harry Lil... Courtney Keats, Ethel Wright, Harry Oldridge and Joseph R. Garry.

Photo-Drama at Olympic.

Owing to the fact that the period of "The Birth of a Nation" was an age

PITTSBURG (Pa.) SUN
SEPT. 23, 1915

It is said of David W. Griffith, whose stupendous photo-drama, "The Birth of a Nation," which is enjoying a successful run of many weeks at the Nixon Theater, that he represents, in the motion picture industry, the "newer school" at its best. He is a director of daring and a producer gifted with the artist's imagination. Or perhaps his "imagination" might better be expressed as "the ability to sense the feelings of the spectator." He handles his scenes so that every bit of action counts toward the achieving of the desired impression, and the unnecessary is eliminated entirely.

SEPT. 23. 191
AGO (Ill.) HERALD

SEEN on the SCREEN

BY LOUELLA O. PARSONS

THOMAS DIXON, author of "The Clansman," dropped into the Colonial yesterday to see the pictorial elaboration of his famous novel. Mr. Dixon has seen "The Birth of a Nation" many times in New York, but this is his first glimpse of the Griffith spectacle in its Chicago home. Of course, he was delighted. Who wouldn't be filled with joy overflowing to see the child of his imagination being shown to a sold out house, with a line extending out into Randolph street waiting to be admitted?

Mr. Dixon, like the rest of the westward going "movie" crowd, stopped here, en route to the coast. The coast holds his "Fall of a Nation," which is a sequel to "The Birth of a Nation." It will be finished in about six months and is to be produced under his personal supervision. A newly organized company, known as the National Drama Corporation, of which Mr. Dixon is director general, will produce his latest cinema attraction.

"But Mr. Griffith?" Mr. Dixon was asked.

"Ah, Mr. Griffith," and the author's smile deepened, "I shall have the benefit of his friendly advice."

Being a sequel to "The Birth of a Nation," we naturally came to the conclusion that "The Fall of a Nation" would also deal with historical facts. We were right. Mr. Dixon announced that his new feature is to embrace the period of time extending from the era of Nero until 1920.

"The play," said Mr. Dixon, "is based upon the principle that there can be no universal peace until we have universal democracy. My hero is a hyphenated American—a foreign-born Pole—who rises from his sordid kingdom in the New York Ghetto to combat the imperialistic doctrines of the villain, who, by the way, is also a hyphenated American. The women play a prominent part in the production, and we expect to utilize a startling and novel finale in which women will be exclusively featured."

"Who will be the star?" Mr. Dixon was asked.

"There will be no special star. Some half dozen well-known actors will be featured, but there will be no one leading role," was the answer.

That the new picture might take the form of a peace propaganda was suggested to the ex-reverend.

He made a warm denial and insisted that "The Fall of a Nation" would primarily be a love story, which is, after all, the infallible assurance of a "Birth of a Nation" attendance.

"What are you going to do with all the kings and queens you dethrone," we asked, "if you allow democracy to triumph over imperialism?"

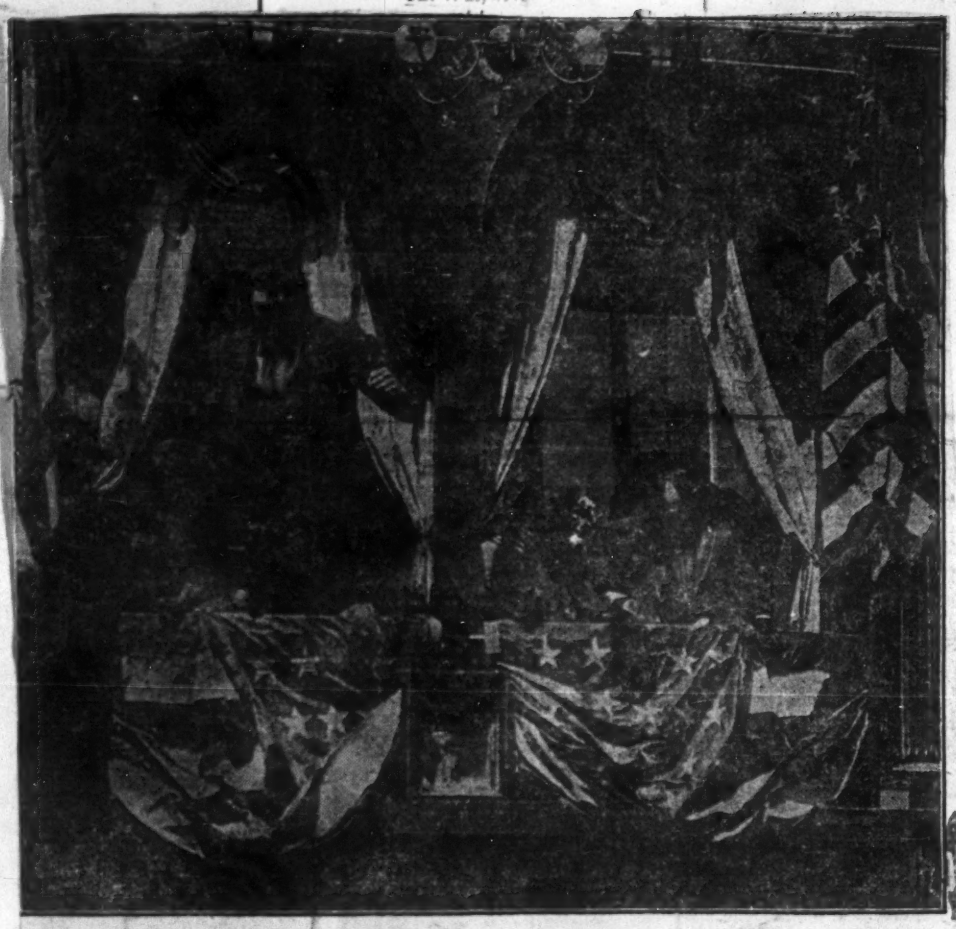
"I will put them in the 'movies' or pension them," was Mr. Dixon's bright retort.

Which shows that the author of many novels has a kind heart and a sense of humor.

"London is to have 'The Birth of a Nation' at the Scala Theater," said Mr. Dixon, "and thereby hangs a tale. My son and David Griffith's brother were sent over to England to arrange for the opening night and to see if the king and queen could be induced to attend. On board the ship 'Junior' (as the younger Dixon is called) met the wife of the prime minister of Serbia. He told her about 'The Birth of a Nation' and offered to give the opening night as a benefit for the Serbian refugees. The lady was greatly interested and promised to intercede with the queen for him. She did so, and it took exactly fifteen minutes to induce the queen to agree to be present on the opening night."

Another thing of interest that young Dixon wrote home was the story of a Zeppelin raid. The reports from London stated that only twenty people were killed, when, as a matter of fact, the city was attacked by three Zeppelins and hundreds met their death, according to Mr. Dixon, conflagrations being started in four widely separated parts of the city. Nearly one entire block within two blocks of Trafalgar square and the Bank of England was demolished by bombs from one of the airships, he wrote.

RUTLAND (VT.) HERALD
SEPT. 23, 1915



Wilkes Booth Jumping from President Lincoln's Box After the Assassination—A Scene from The Birth of a Nation.

CHICAGO (Ill.) POST
SEPT. 23, 1915

IN THE LAND OF PHOTOPLAYS
by Clover Lord

The Truth About "Birth of a Nation"

"The Birth of a Nation" is so fine a picture there is no necessity for the ridiculous exaggeration concerning its cost and the number of people taking part in the spectacle.

What is there about the show business which makes nearly everyone associated with it think they must "draw the long bow?"

Motion-picture men seem to have taken their cue in this respect from the spoken stage. Some of the players must smile when they read what princely salaries they are drawing and press agents must not imagine that the public accepts as gospel all the tall stories with which they would feed them.

How often have you read that "The Birth of a Nation" cost a half million dollars to produce and that more than 8,000 people took part in D. W. Griffith's great spectacle?

According to D. W. Griffith himself, the picture cost $125,000 and the number of people employed in it was nearer 3,000 than 8,000.

There isn't the least excuse in the world for keeping up the deception. The owners couldn't make an extra dollar out of the picture if they said it cost five millions and 50,000 people were employed in producing it. The Liberty Theater, New York, is packed at every performance, the heat notwithstanding. We all know what the big picture has done at the Illinois Theater and what it is doing now at the Colonial here in Chicago. It will be many a long day before "The Birth of a Nation" has run its course. Already it has brought the producers over $500,000.

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION"

Supposing that you were given the opportunity at a ridiculously small price—considering the spectacle offered—to occupy a reserved seat in a grand stand which commanded a fine view of such historic scenes as the actual Battle of Gettysburg, Sherman's March to the Sea, the last stand at Petersburg, the Assassination of President Lincoln in Ford's theatre, Lee's Surrender to Grant, the tragic and wild rides of the Ku Klux Klans, the destruction of entire cities by fire, wonderful artillery duels, miles of trench fighting, in fact war as it actually is—would you not jump at the opportunity?

You undoubtedly would. Well, that is practically just what is offered to the spectator in "The Birth of a Nation" which is in its fifth great month at the Tremont theatre, Boston, and will enter on its twentieth and last week, next Monday.

Every American heart cannot fail to thrill with enthusiasm over this offering which combines pictorial spectacle, music and effects in a thrilling drama of the Civil War crisis, interspersed with lively comedy and heightened with two charming love romances of the Blue and the Gray.

9-23-

the numbers being [illegible] Colors" and "Call All Hands," by A. A. Needham, an Irish composer of merit.

"The Birth of a Nation."

Following its established precedent of having to prolong its engagement in every city so far visited, D. W. Griffith's mammoth film spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," will again be presented at the Alexandra Theatre next week, to accommodate the many theatre-goers who have not been lucky enough to purchase tickets for this eighth wonder of the world. Barely may one go to the Alexandra now without finding a line of ticket purchasers in the lobby. This fact is of importance in making known to what extent the spectacle has taken hold upon the fancy of the public. Next week matinees will be given daily.

RUTLAND (Vt.) NEWS
SEPT. 23, 1915

AT THE SHRINE

Rutland Favored By Biggest Film Attraction Ever Shown, "The Birth of a Nation."

Griffith's big picture, "The Birth of a Nation," will come to the Shrine the whole week of September 27. There will be a big orchestra of 16 pieces, and a company of 20 people behind the scenes, while several very beautiful girls will act as attendants.

The picture is a dramatization of Thomas Dixon's "The Clansman." Its chief incidents are historic. The incident of the negro is responsible for the formation of the Ku-Klux Klan which chases the carpet-baggers out of the South and rehabitated the Southland.

Few people knew into what a lamentable situation the South fell nearly 10 years after Appomattox. The whites were disfranchised because of their part in the war and Southern states were governed by a combination of newly franchised negroes and carpet-baggers from the North whose main object was loot. How the whites of the South regained control of the country is one of the most dramatic passages in our history.

"The Birth of a Nation" used 18,000 people and 3000 horses in depicting the wonderful scenes. Nothing so spectacular has yet been shown. For the first time in the history of film art you see the great historical conflict pass before you; the burning of Atlanta; Sherman's march to the sea; victory of the North; Grant and Lee at Appomattox; reconstruction troubles; love and romance of history; tremendous battle scenes; the Lincoln tragedy; dauntless riders of the Ku-Klux Klan; tender domestic drama and charming comedy and the dawn of the "New Nation."

Owing to the tremendous patronage that will undoubtedly be showered upon this massive screen spectacle during its local engagement, patrons are warned to secure their seat reservations at the earliest possible moment for the attendances at the Shrine theatre will positively be greater than this city has ever known before, either for a production of the spoken stage or the silent drama. Seats now selling at the Playhouse. What costs $2 in the big cities today the management submit at 50c, 75c and $1.

DRAMA OF TODAY, MUSICAL COMEDY AND FILMS NEXT

"Law of the Land" at Shubert—Other Attractions at Playhouses.

Proud of its record as the drama longest on the New York stage last season, a drama of life, "The Law of the Land," by George Broadhurst, comes to the Shubert Theater for a week's engagement beginning Sunday night. A nicely balanced combination of tragedy, pathos and humor, "The Law of the Land" played the entire season at the Forty-eighth Street Theater, New York.

Clergymen, educators, social and welfare workers, suffragette leaders and others alert to the perils of the period, have indorsed the play. In constructive strength and human interest, "The Law of the Land" represents the best work of the master playwright, George Broadhurst, and it succeeded so triumphantly in New York because it treats exclusively of questions of the moment.

The cast which has been selected is of great brilliancy. The company is headed by Julia Dean and includes William Riley Hatch, Charles Lane, Robert Stowe Gill, George Graham, Harry Lillford, Master Courtney Keats, Ethel Wright, Harry Oldridge and Joseph R. Garry.

of hoops and ruffles, D. W. Griffith, producer of the gigantic spectacle, now in its fourth week at the Olympic, was compelled to buy 25,000 yards of cloth to go into the dresses of his female characters. A goodly percentage of this clothes the women and girls who dance in the great ball just after Bull Run, on the eve of the departure of Confederate soldiers for the front, where it is realized a long and bloody struggle has commenced. Every dress is accurate to the period, copied exactly from contemporary costumes preserved in old wardrobes and museums, and many of them, which had to be made of special texture to give a shimmery, silky effect on the screen, ran into a cost that the average woman would consider almost fabulous.

It is after considering a thousand and one such items of expense as this, that the careful spectator of "The Birth of a Nation" not only regards the claim that the photodrama was produced at a cost of no less than $50,000 as accurate, but wonders how Griffith economized so closely as to get clear with no greater expense.

PORTLAND (Me.) EXPRESS & ADV
SEPT. 24, 1915

...ever been ... house outside of the largest cities of the Country.—Advertisement.

BIRTH OF A NATION.

Griffith's big picture The Birth of a Nation will come to the B. F. Keith Theater for a return engagement next week. There will be a big orchestra and a chorus behind the scenes, while several very beautiful girls will act as ushers, to furnish local color, etc.

The picture is a dramatization of Dixon's The Clansman. Its chief incidents are historic. The incident of the Negro is responsible for the formation of the Ku-Klux Klan which chases the carpet baggers out of the South and rehabilitated the Southland.

Few people know into what a lamentable situation the South fell nearly 10 years after Appomattox. The whites were disfranchised because of their part in the war and Southern states were governed by a combination of newly franchised Negroes and carpet baggers from the North whose main object was lost. How the whites of the South regained control of the Country is one of the most dramatic passages in our history.

The Birth of a Nation is said to contain 18,000 people and 3,000 horses. Nothing so spectacular has yet been shown upon the screen. For the first time in the history of film art you see the great historical conflict pass before you; The Burning of Atlanta, Sherman's March to the Sea; Victory of the North; Grant and Lee at Appomattox; Reconstruction Troubles; Love and Romance of History; Tremendous battle scenes; The Lincoln Tragedy; Dauntless rides of the Ku-Klux Klan; tender domestic drama and charming comedy and the dawn of the New Nation.

Owing to the tremendous patronage that will undoubtedly be showered upon this massive screen spectacle during its local engagement, patrons are warned to secure their seat reservations at the earliest possible moment for the attendances at the Keith Theater will positively be greater than this city has ever known before, either for a production of the spoken stage or the silent drama, surpassing even the previous record for attendance and receipts established by this great picture-drama.—Advertisement.

"BIRTH OF A NATION" SETS HIGH MARK IN THEATRICALS FOR ATTENDANCE AND RECEIPTS

Receipts from the sale of tickets for "The Birth of a Nation," which will close a week's engagement at the Trent Theatre tomorrow night, will reach nearly $10,000. This total establishes a new high mark for any week in the history of Trenton theatricals.

D. W. Griffith, the producer, in addition to having a remarkable production, showed his faith in newspaper advertising. By carrying an extensive publicity campaign here he attracted wide attention and the wisdom he displayed in selecting his mediums has been justified.

Ever since Monday morning long lines of patrons have waited for the opening of the box office. Last night the crowds for the evening production began to assemble shortly after 6 o'clock and by 7:30 the lines had extended down Warren Street into State.

The success is all the more remarkable because thousands were attracted to the theatre who did not previously become enthusiastic over motion pictures. Even the noted legitimate stars were unable to draw the assemblages which had been eagerly awaiting the arrival of "The Birth of a Nation."

Montgomery Moses, manager of the Trent, had expected a successful week but the receipts will be greater than he believed he could anticipate.

MALDEN (Mass.) MIRROR
SEPT. 24, 1915 515

...ssate for Senator

MAJESTIC THEATRE

Supposing you were given the opportunity at a ridiculously small price—considering the spectacle offered—to occupy a reserved seat in a grand stand which commanded a fine view of such historic scenes as the actual Battle of Gettysburg, Sherman's March to the Sea, the last stand at Petersburg, the Assassination of President Lincoln in Ford's Theatre, Lee's Surrender to Grant, the tragic and wild rides of the Ku Klux Klans, the destruction of entire cities by fire, wonderful artillery duels, miles of trench fighting, in fact war as it actually is—would you not jump at the opportunity?

You undoubtedly would. Well, that is practically just what is offered to the spectator in "The Birth of a Nation" at the ...Boston.

Brooklyn, (N. Y.) Standard-Union

Date .....

SEP 24 1915

D. W. Griffith's $500,000 historical picture, "The Birth of a Nation," is still running at the Brighton Beach Music Hall. The last performance will be given on Saturday evening, Oct. 2. Because of the success of the picture the Brooklyn Rapid Transit is running extra trains on the Brighton Beach division of the elevated road and on the Smith street line to the playhouse. These trains will be continued until the last performance. Many theatre parties will be held next week. On Tuesday evening 500 school children who are studying the Civil War period will attend, that they may see in pictures arranged in chronological order and according to the best historians the events of that time as they occurred.

...TER (S...) TEM
SEPT. 24, 1915

BIRTH OF A NATION

Facts About the Declaration of Independence.

SIGNING OF THE DOCUMENT.

The Last Name, Thomas McKean, to Go on the Precious Parchment Was Not Appended Until 1781—The Mecklenburg and Maryland Declarations.

Of the fifty-six men who finally affixed their signatures to the Declaration of Independence, a document that heralded the birth of a nation, to the support of which they pledged their lives, their fortunes and their sacred honor, none was so old as to be liable to a suspicion of senility and few so young that they might be accused of immaturity of judgment. Even John Hancock, rather a roving blade and none too stable in his personal habits and predilections, was thirty-nine years old when the general congress met in Independence hall, Philadelphia, to sit in judgment upon the wording of the historical document.

The oldest man in the assemblage was Benjamin Franklin, then six months past his seventieth birthday, and the youngest was Thomas Lynch, Jr., of South Carolina, who was born Aug. 5, 1749, and was therefore a month short of being twenty-seven years old.

The first of the signers of the Declaration to die after the execution of the instrument was Button Gwinnett of Georgia, who passed away on May 27 of the following year. Charles Carroll of Carrollton, Md., lived the longest after the memorable date. He remained until Nov. 13, 1832.

James Smith of Pennsylvania was the only signer who lived to a more advanced age than Charles Carroll. He was ninety-six years old when his life ended on July 11, 1806. There were three others who became nonagenarians—John Adams of Massachusetts, who passed away at ninety-one years; William Ellery of Rhode Island, at ninety-three years, and Francis Lewis of New York, at ninety-one years of age. The youngest to die was Arthur Middleton of South Carolina, who was only forty-four years old at his demise on Jan. 1, 1788.

Of the fifty-six signers but seven had advanced past the age of sixty years on July 4, 1776. Nine were between fifty and sixty, there were nineteen between forty and fifty, the same number, nineteen, between thirty and forty and two below the age of thirty years. The average age was 43.87 years.

But, contrary to popular belief, the Declaration of Indepeudence was not signed on July 4, 1776. As a matter of fact, the last signature was not appended until five years later, in 1781. Thomas McKean, a member from Delaware, who had been present on July 4, 1776, but "absent with the army at the general subscription of said instrument," applied for permission to sign. An act was then passed permitting him to affix his signature, and "he added thereto the date of such subscription." Another delegate, Matthew Thornton of New Hampshire, who had been present at neither the reading on July 4 nor at the later date of general subscription, presented his credentials on Nov. 4, 1776, and was permitted to sign.

It was the first reading of the Declaration of Independence that occurred on July 4, and the tentative draft presented by the committee previously appointed to draw up such a document was approved by all the members present. No resolution was passed until July 10, when it was "Resolved, That the declaration passed on the 4th be fairly engrossed on parchment, with the title, etc., and that the same, when engrossed, be signed by every member of congress." Two weeks later, the engrossing having been duly accomplished, the members of congress then present signed it.

Another fact in connection with the Declaration of Independence which we venerate is that it is neither the first nor the only Declaration of Independence from the rule of Great Britain that was made in her North American colonies.

More than a year before the fa... of the document which we cheri... May 20, 1775, a convention wa... at Charlotte, N. C., and an instru... declaring freedom from the ru... Great Britain was drawn up and ... ed. This was the famous Meckle... declaration, the original of which ... unfortunately destroyed by fire in ... It was reconstructed from mem... and this "copy" is still preserved.

But even before this the colo... wrote a Declaration of Independe... The patriots of Harford county, ... gathered themselves together at ... ford Town, which is now called Bu... on March 22, 1775. On the same ... they prepared and signed a Decla... tion of Independence, probably the f... one ever made by the colonies or ... part of them, in formal, written for... The document is still in existence...

New York Sun.

PLAY WITHIN A PLAY IN "THE BIRTH OF A NATION"

A play within a play is a bit of dramatic construction which has often been utilized by dramatists since the play became an institution. Perhaps the earliest and most prominent utilization of this constructive detail as far as he English speaking stage is concerned is the player scene in Hamlet, which Shakespeare uses as an effective part of the earlier development of his tragic plot.

Nothing of this sort has ever been revealed upon so pretentious a plan as is shown in David W. Griffith's motion picture drama, "The Birth of a Nation," which is being so widely discussed at present. Griffith's scene is the reproddction in historic and dramatic detail of Ford's theatre, Washington, D. C., on the night of April 14, 1865, when President Abraham Lincoln was assassinated by John Wilkins Booth before the eyes of a gala audience gathered on that occasion to celebrate the close of the Civil war.

This scene is one of the tense dramatic moments in a story that is astonishing for its thrilling action. The drama is complete story within itself and yet is a vital part of the entire story which is covered in the larger plan of the spectacle. From a technical viewpoint, it is one of the most interesting achievements in the annals of the American stage.

In the language of motion picture production, it is known a sa studio scene. This means that it was built indoors and had to be specially constructed to get the desired dramatic effect. It is the largest interior set ever built for a motion picture story. The scene is in minute detail an exact reproduction of Ford's theatre as it appeared upon this historic occasion.

"The Birth of a Nation," will be shown at the Colonial theatre in Norfolk, Va., every afternoon and night next week.

Miss Mae Marsh, in "The Birth of a Nation," at the Colonial theatre in Norfolk all next week, matinee and evening.

NDOVER (Mass.) TOWNSMAN
SEPT. 24, 1915

Saturdays, the mid-week matinee being a popular-priced matinee for the benefit of suburban patrons, with the best seats only $1.00, and every seat in the house reserved.

18

MAJESTIC

Supposing that you were given the opportunity at a ridiculously small price considering the spectacle offered—to occupy a reserved seat in a grand-stand which commanded a fine view of such historic scenes as the actual Battle of Gettysburg, Sherman's March to the Sea, the last stand at Petersburg, the Assassination of President Lincoln in Ford's theatre, Lee's Surrender to Grant, the tragic and wild rides of the Ku Klux Klans, the destruction of entire cities by fire, wonderful artillery duels, miles of trench fighting, in fact war as it actually is—would you not jump at the opportunity?

You undoubtedly would. Well that is practically just what is offered to the spectator in "The Birth of a Nation", which is in its fifth great month at the Majestic theatre, Boston, and will enter on its twenty-sixth week next Monday, September 27. No other attraction has achieved such a record in a theatre in Boston in several seasons, and it is the more remarkable when it is considered that two performances daily have been given throughout the performance.

PITTSBURG (Pa.) SUN
SEPT. 24, 1915

THEATRICAL.

In "The Birth of a Nation," which is enjoying a most prosperous run at the Nixon Theater, the mimic war scenes transcend reality. Imagine a panorama miles long, in which the Confederate soldiers leap from their trenches in long, serried lines and charge the Union breastworks, overrunning the first, smashing their way into the second, and pounding at the third line until they are forced to recoil before the storm of grape, canister and bullet. Nothing approaches it in vraisemblance.

PITTSBURG (Pa.) GAZETTE-TIMES
SEPT. 24, 1915

AMUSEMENTS.

In "The Birth of a Nation," which is enjoying a prosperous run at the Nixon Theater, the mimic war scenes transcend reality. Imagine a panorama miles long, in which the Confederate soldiers leap from their trenches in long, serried lines and charge the Union breastworks, overrunning the first, smashing their way into the second and pounding at the third line until they are forced to recoil before the storm of grape, canister and bullet. Nothing approaches it in grim reality.

MEDFORD (Mass.) MERCURY
SEPT. 24, 1915
534

FF

MAJESTIC THEATRE

An opportunity to occupy a reserved seat in a grand stand which commanded a fine view of such historic scenes as the actual Battle of Gettysburg, Sherman's March to the Sea, the last stand at Petersburg, the assassination of President Lincoln in Ford's theatre, Lee's surrender to Grant, the tragic and wild rides of the Ku Klux Klans, the destruction of entire cities by fire, wonderful artillery duels, miles of trench fighting, a fact war as it actually is, is practically what is offered to the spectator in "The Birth of a Nation" at the Majestic theatre, Boston.

NEWTON (Mass.) GRAPHIC
SEPT. 24, 1915

FF

...ue General Secretary at Newton Y. M. C. A.

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION"

18

Supposing that you were given the opportunity at a ridiculously small price—considering the spectacle offered—to occupy a reserved seat in a grand stand which commanded a fine view of such historic scenes as the actual Battle of Gettysburg, Sherman's March to the Sea, the last stand at Petersburg, the Assassination of President Lincoln in Ford's Theatre, Lee's Surrender to Grant, the tragic and wild rides of the Ku Klux Klans, the destruction of entire cities by fire, wonderful artillery duels, miles of trench fighting, in fact war as it actually is—would you not jump at the opportunity?

You undoubtedly would. Well, that is practically just what is offered to the spectator in "The Birth of a Nation" which is at the Majestic Theatre, Boston, and which enters on its 26th wonderful week next Monday, Sept. 27. No other attraction has chieved such a record in a theatre in Boston in several seasons, and it is the more remarkable when it is considered that two performances daily have been given throughout the engagement.

Trent Ev Times 4pr

"BIRTH OF NATION" WILL LEAVE TODAY

Only two more opportunities remain for local theatregoers to see the film spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," which will conclude a week's engagement at the Trent Theatre today. Presentations will be given at 2:15 and 8:15 o'clock. The morning performance today especially for school children, brought out a capacity audience.

BROOKLYN, (N. Y.) TIMES

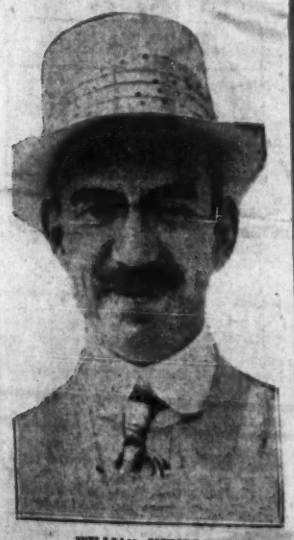
Date ..... SEP 24 1915 .....

work.

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION."

Big Film at Brighton Music Hall to Stay Only Till October 2.

"The Birth of a Nation," D. W. Griffith's $500,000 film, which is being presented at the Brighton Beach Music



WILLIAM KEMBLE
Manager of the Brighton Beach Music Hall.

Hall, will be continued there until Saturday evening, October 2. William H. Kemble, the managing director, has made provision for many theatre parties during the rest of the stay of the picture at the beach. Most of these have been arranged by school, educational and veteran associations.

MANCHESTER (Mass.) BREEZE
SEPT. 24, 1915
518

...ox equalled on any stage.

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION."

Supposing that you were given the opportunity at a ridiculously small price—considering the spectacle offered—to occupy a reserved seat in a grand stand which commanded a fine view of such historic scenes as the actual Battle of Gettysburg, Sherman's March to the Sea, the last stand at Petersburg, the Assassination of President Lincoln in Ford's Theatre, Lee's Surrender to Grant, the tragic and wild rides of the Ku Klux Klans, the destruction of entire cities by fire, wonderful artillery duels, miles of trench fighting, in fact war as it actually is—would you not jump at the opportunity?

You undoubtedly would. Well, that is practically just what is offered to the spectator in "The Birth of a Nation."

1 Mero

MANCHESTER (N. H.) ~~UNION~~

9-24-

Entertainment.

Tremont Theatre.

FF

Supposing that you were given the opportunity at a ridiculously small price—considering the spectacle offered—to occupy a reserved seat in a grand stand which commanded a fine view of such historic scenes as the actual Battle of Gettysburg, Sherman's March to the Sea, the last stand at Petersburg, the Assassination of President Lincoln in Ford's theaade, Lee's Surrender to Grant, the tragic and wild rides of the Ku-Klux Klans, the destruction of entire cities by fire, wonderful artillery duels, miles of trench fighting, in fact war as it actually is—would you not jump at the opportunity?

You undoubtedly would. Well, that is practically just what is offered to the spectator in "The Birth of a Nation," which is in its fifth great month at the Tremont theatre, Boston, and will enter on its twentieth and last week next Monday, Aug. 16. No other attraction has achieved such a record in a theatre in Boston in several seasons, and it is the more remarkable when it is considered that two performances daily have been given throughout the engagement. This means that nearly 2,000,000 people have seen this famous spectacle, which has been just as much of a sensation in New York, Chicago, Atlantic City, Brighton Beach and other important points of the United States.

PITTSBURG (Pa.) POST
SEPT. 24, 1915

18 Theater Memoranda

In "The Birth of a Nation," the photo spectacle having a prosperous run at the Nixon theater, the mimic war scenes show a panorama miles long in which soldiers leap from trenches and charge breastworks, overrunning the first, smashing their way into the second and pounding at the third line until they are forced to recoil before the storm of grape, canister and bullet. Owing to the line in front of the box office before the doors open it is advisable to get seats in advance.

ER (N. H.) UNION
9-24-15

"BIRTH OF A NATION" A GORGEOUS SPECTACLE

For once the press agent has been undone. For years it has been his duty to employ such exaggeration in the verbal presentation of his subject as to infuse in the mind of the reader a desire to see or hear that which he tells about. But now comes "The Birth of a Nation," the gorgeous spectacle of the twentieth century, and the press agent finds himself at a loss for words to describe the production even in a minor way. D. W. Griffith has stripped him of his power; exaggeration is out of the question and the writer must now work his brain overtime in order to do even meager justice to his subject.

There are countless scenes in the film that tongue or pen cannot cope with. Only the eye alone can realize the wonderful progress the motion picture has made in this phenomenal masterpiece.

It seems that everything the brain of man could conceive has been put into this subject; 18,000 people were used in telling the story, 3000 horses and countless guns, shells, etc., utilized in its massive battle scenes. Two years time was consumed in its making and the approximate cost has been $500,000.

Imagine a pictorial production of love, romance and history, including tremendous battle scenes the equal of which has never yet been shown upon a screen; imagine such scenes as the Burning of Atlanta, Sherman's March to the Sea, Grant and Lee at Appomattox, the thrilling rides of the Ku-Klux Klan; entire cities built up and destroyed by fire; the assassination of Lincoln at Ford's theatre, Washington; wonderful artillery duels in which real shells costing $80 apiece were used; miles and miles of trenches with thousands of fighters; cavalry charges, infantry charges, deeds of heroism on the field of battle; imagine hundreds of such mighty scenes as these, and there you have "The Birth of a Nation," the pinnacle of filmed spectacles.

Is it any wonder that the press agent bows humbly to D. W. Grifith, the mighty producer of this tremendous screen triumph, and admits his inability to describe this massive visualization.

CHELSEA (Mass.) RECORD
SEPT. 24, 1915

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION"

26th Wonderful Week in Boston Begins Next Monday, Sept. 27

Supposing that you were given the opportunity at a ridiculously small price—considering the spectacle offered—to occupy a seat in a grand stand which commanded a fine view of such historic scenes as the actual Battle of Gettysburg, Sheridan's march to the sea, the last stand at Petersburg, the Assassination of President Lincoln in Ford's theatre, Lee's surrender to Grant, the tragic and wild rides of the Ku Klux Klans, the destruction of entire cities by fire, wonderful artillery duels, miles of trench fighting, in fact war as it actually is—would you not jump at the opportunity?

You undoubtedly would. Well, that is practically just what is offered to the spectator in "The Birth of a Nation," which is in its sixth great month at the Majestic theatre, Boston. No other attraction has achieved such a record in a theatre in Boston in several seasons, and it is the more remarkable when it is considered that two performances daily have been given throughout the engagement. This means that nearly 2,000,000 people have seen this famous spectacle which has been just as much of a sensation in New York, Chicago, Atlantic City, Brighton Beach and other important points of the United States.

While the above mentioned spectacular scenes are shown as features of the story of "The Birth of a Nation" as shown in moving pictures they had to be originally reproduced with the greatest fidelity to life and viewing them from a seat in the theatre is quite as realistic as it would be to have been sitting in a grand stand as an actual onlooker.

Every American heart cannot fail to thrill with enthusiasm over this offering which combines pictorial spectacle, music and effects in a thrilling drama of the Civil War crisis, interspersed with lively comedy and heightened with two charming love romances of the Blue and the Gray.

BIRMINGHAM (Ala.) AGE-HERALD
SEPT. 24, 1915

...re sincerely hope not."

A Remarkable Picture

"I don't think there is anything in the country which has met with such unusual success as the moving pictures," said E. H. Colly. "Recently one of the most stupendous productions in the moving picture business that has ever been undertaken. I am speaking of 'The Birth of a Nation,' now running in New York. It is undoubtedly one of the most wonderful pictures that has ever been thrown on the canvas. It cost over $1,500,000 to produce it and over 1000 people were used to make it. The thing that impressed me more than anything else was the price of admission. Seats ranged in price from 50 cents to $2 and they were doing a capacity business.

"Another picture is now being shown which is equally as wonderful. It is called the 'Battle Cry of Peace,' and from what I am told it is a wonderful achievement in the moving picture world. They are likewise charging as high as $2 admission to witness it, and doing a big business. The movies have done more to ruin the legitimate stage than anything else in the past 100 years. Nearly every one is a movie fan these days, and most people make it a rule to go to see some film once a day. A number of the films are instructive and are a source of a liberal education along some lines. Many of the best plays are being filmed and some of the best moral lectures in the world are exemplified on the screen."

SEPT. 24, 1915
CHICAGO (Ill.) POST

Any person who thinks at all upon such a subject might write columns if not volumes upon this question, and I, therefore, refrain from expressing myself further. I have merely attempted to suggest the general significance of the conflict as I maturely appreciate that significance to be. Yours truly,

SAMUEL B. KING.

"The Birth of a Nation."

CHICAGO, Sept. 23.—To the Editor of THE POST. Sir: A riot is reported in Philadelphia, caused by the exhibition of "The Birth of a Nation." A number of colored people were arrested. When the intense feeling of the negroes against this most slanderous caricature of their people is considered, it is remarkable that there have not been many riots.

This moving-picture exhibition is regarded as a great triumph of this new art. It is so brilliant and so entertaining that many people either from lack of information or want of thought fail to see that it misrepresents the Union soldiers, glorifies the infamous Ku-Klux Klan and brands ten millions of our citizens as degenerates and outlaws.

There are two sides to the story of the reconstruction period, and both sides have much to their discredit, but the Thomas Dixon stories are largely malicious and mischievous.

Dixon does not represent the best spirit of the South in trying to intensify hate of the negro people, who have made such marvelous progress during the last fifty years. The most intelligent negroes of Chicago declare that "The Birth of a Nation" as presented in the moving pictures is the most insulting and dangerous influence against them ever given to the public. They regard it as representing "uncommercialized vice," all the more perilous because it is so brilliant.

DUNCAN C. MILNER.

(Editor's Note:—We quite agree with Dr. Milner's estimates as presented in his letter. But we believe that in the everlasting balance of things the negro race will benefit by the reaction of truth against untruth more than it will be harmed by the mere presentation of untruth.)

CLIPPING FROM Press
Portland Me.
Date 9-24-15

...the matinee performances.

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION"

It is not until after one has seen the picture on the screen that one fully appreciates the magnitude of "The Birth of a Nation," the tremendous amount of money, time and energy required in the staging of this stupendous spectacle and the brilliant genius of David W. Griffeth which made the motion drama possible. From Thomas Dixon's novel "The Clansman" Griffeth's vivid imagination saw the underlying dramatic idea of this wonderful picture. Others had used the civil war as a background for various motion pictures but none had the tremendous perception and genuis possessed by this wizard of the film. History becomes vital to every spectator as no page of dry reading matter could ever hope to do. The spectator sees war in all its aspects, a war that led Sherman to declare it to be more terrible than the torments conceived by Dante. While modern warfare has become terrible in slaughter, with soldiers seldom seeing the enemy and artillery duels at a distance of 20 miles apart, in the civil war all the dash of hand to hand encounter, and the romantic side as well as the most gruesome went hand in hand. Those days of cavalry charges are practically passed by, but the great motion-drama shows such charges and reconstructs history with a fidelity that is magical. For the first time in the history of art you see the great conflicts pass before you; the burning of Atlanta, Sherman's march to the sea, Grant and Lee at Appomattox, the reconstruction struggles and the dawn of the new nation.

"The Birth of a Nation" summed up as a whole is tremendous, the story is gripping, the photography superb and the detail perfect. It is an education in itself and the most stupendous spectacle ever staged. No one can afford to miss it.

MOTION PICTURE WORLD (N. Y. C...
SEP 25 1915

"The Birth of a Nation" has been booked at the Grand opera house, in Superior, for some time in October. The Green Bay booking originally for Sept. 12-19 has been postponed because of extended engagements elsewhere.

Charles Somers, of Cleveland, O., lessee of the Plankinton property in Milwaukee...

CLIPPING FROM Va. Pilot
Norfolk Va
Date 9-24-15

stand for the best in minstrelsy."

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION"

David W. Griffith's most extraordinary achievement with his great spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," which comes to the Colonial theatre next week, is that of making history live. He has touched the high peaks of American history—slavery, the war of secession, the surrender at Appomattox, the death of Lincoln, the miseries of reconstruction and the reconciliation of the North and South. These things, it would have seemed a year ago, were beyond the scope of the motion picture camera. But the master producer has successfully combined, in 12,000 feet of celluloid, a thrilling, consecutive presentation of national greatness with a vital and human love story. According to experts who have viewed the work, Griffith has not only surpassed in many ways the art of the "indoor" theatre, but he has also developed a new art-form far superior to the old-fashioned history or historical novel. A very eminent public man has nicknamed it "history by lightning."

Eighteen thousand people were employed in taking the historical pictures. One sees Lincoln among his counsellors issuing the call for troops, the battles of the conflict, Sherman's march, Grant and Lee shaking hands at Appomattox, the shot that John Wilkes Booth fired, the South in the throes of change, the carpetbaggers' excesses, and the famous rides of the K. K. K. Parties of war veterans and sons of veterans are coming in great numbers to the Tremont. It is difficult for many of them to refrain from shouting the old war-cries or from shuffling the feet to the rhythm of the martial music. Scenes in the latter half of the picture are so skillfully managed, the interest is so tensely maintained, that often the applause is practically continuous for half a three-quarters of an hour.

CLIPPING FROM Telegram
Lowell Mass
Date 9-24-15

...city.—adv.

"The Birth of a Nation"

For once the press agent has been undone. For years it has been his duty to employ such exaggeration in the verbal presentation of his subject as to infuse in the mind of the reader a desire to see or hear that which he tells about. But now comes "The Birth of a Nation" the gorgeous spectacle of the twentieth century and the press agent finds himself at a loss for words to describe the production even in a minor way. D. W. Griffith has stripped him of his power; exaggeration is out of the question and the writer must now work his brain overtime in order to do even meagre justice to his subject.

"The Birth of a Nation" cannot be exaggerated. It is too tremendous, too gigantic for that. There are countless scenes in it that tongue or pen cannot cope with. Only the eye alone can realize the wonderful progress the motion picture has made in this phenomenal masterpiece.

It seems that everything that the brain of man could conceive has been put into this subject. 18,000 people were used in telling the story, 3,000 horses and countless guns, shells, etc. utilized in its massive battle scenes. Two years time was consumed in its making and the approximate cost has been $500,000.

Imagine a pictorial production of love, romance and history, including tremendous battle scenes the equal of which have never yet been shown upon a screen, imagine such scenes as the Burning of Atlanta, Sherman's March to the Sea, Grant and Lee at Appomattox; the thrilling rides of the Klan, entire cities built up and destroyed by fire; the assassination of Lincoln at Ford's theatre, Washington, wonderful artillery duels in which real shells costing $80 apiece were used, miles and miles of trenches with thousands of fighters, cavalry charges, infantry charges, deeds of heroism on the field of battle, imagine hundreds of such mighty scenes as these and there you have "The Birth of a Nation" the pinnacle of filmed spectacles, which is coming to the Empire for a week commencing Oct. 4th was it any wonder that the press agent bows humbly to D. W. Grifith, the mighty producer of this tremendous screen triumph and admits his inability to faithfully describe this massive visualization.—adv.

Telegraph 9-25

Master Director

DAVID W. GRIFFITH

Whose proficiency in developing the art of photoplay has earned him the title of "Master Director." The most conspicuous example of his accomplishment, "The Birth of a Nation," is now on view at the Forrest, and other film dramas made under his direction will be revealed in the coming season of Triangle Pictures which are to be shown at the Chestnut Street Opera House.

BOSTON (Mass.) COURIER
SEP 25 1915

PLYMOUTH—"The White Feather"
SHUBERT—"Experience"
TREMONT—"Song of Songs"
WILBUR—"Nobody Home"

MAJESTIC THEATRE.

Supposing that you were given the opportunity at a ridiculously small price—considering the spectacle offered—to occupy a reserved seat in a grand stand which commanded a fine view of such historic scenes as the actual Battle of Gettysburg, Sherman's March to the Sea, the last stand at Petersburg, the Assassination of President Lincoln in Ford's Theatre, Lee's Surrender to Grant, the tragic and wild rides of the Klu Klux Klans, the destruction of entire cities by fire, wonderful artillery duels, miles of trench fighting, in fact war as it actually is—would you not jump at the opportunity?

You undoubtedly would. Well, that is practically just what is offered to the spectator in "The Birth of a Nation," which is in its fifth great month at the Majestic Theatre, Boston, and will enter on its twenty-sixth and last week next Monday, September 27. No other attraction has achieved such a record in a theatre in Boston in several seasons, and it is the more remarkable when it is considered that two performances daily have been given throughout the engagement. This means that nearly 2,000 000 people have seen this famous spectacle which has been just as much of a sensation in New York, Chicago, Atlantic City, Brighton Beach and other important points in the United States.

Telegraph Leger

"The Birth of a Nation," a film spectacle of unusual magnitude and scope, presented with the accessories of as nearly perfect projection as can be contrived, and a musical accompaniment furnished by a large orchestra, will enter upon its fifth week at the Forrest. The earlier reels unroll scenes and incidents from the Civil War—Sherman's march to the sea, the battle of Petersburg, Lee's surrender and the assassination of Lincoln. Then follows a pictorial chronicle of conditions in the South during the reconstruction period, the carpet-baggers and the Ku-Klux-Klan, ranging from intimate domestic life to turbulent episodes. Finally comes an apotheosis of the United States and a presentment of the present estate of the colored race, illustrated by pictures of their present-day activities. Sentimental passages between a Southern soldier and a Northern lass and a Northern warrior and a daughter of the South add an intimate touch.

Continued from Page Five.

MOTION PICTURE WORLD (N. Y. City)
SEP 25 1915

FF Arthur Lucas, general supervisor of exchanges for the Triangle Film Corporation, and Henry Walthall, one of Essanay's star players, accompanied A. MacArthur, Jr., New York advertising manager of the Moving Picture World, to Chicago on the Twentieth Century, Sunday, September 12. Mr. MacArthur came to fill the place of Paul C. Hinz, Chicago business representative of the World, who is now spending a well earned vacation in New York City with relatives. Mr. Lucas will remain in the city a few days in the interests of his company, and will then go to the Pacific Coast by way of St. Louis and Kansas City. On the journey, Mr. Walthall told a good story on himself. During the early run of "The Birth of a Nation" at the Illinois theatre, Mr. Walthall, who appears in the role of Colonel Cameron in that production, invited five good friends to accompany him to the show one evening. Much to his chagrin, when presenting himself at the box office, he was obliged to decorate the coin sill with twelve good American "bucks." Needless to say, Mr. Walthall's companions enjoyed the show hugely.

* * *

BOSTON JOURNAL
SEPT. 25, 1915

113

other

"Experience" shows no sign at the Shubert of having even begun to exhaust its remarkable drawing power. It is unquestionably the best-liked of all the morality plays yet seen in Boston. The acting of Ernest Glendinning and other prominent players in the large cast is much admired.

"The Birth of a Nation," which is now running at the Majestic, is the same extraordinary photoplay that David Wark Griffith brought to Boston six months ago and that has already exceeded all records for continuous presentations on the Boston stage. It is a wonderful war film.

TRENTON (N. J.) GAZETTE
SEPT. 25, 1915

"NATION" HARPIST MOVES QUARTERS

FF

The harp player in the augmented orchestra for "The Birth of a Nation," was a victim of mob violence at the Trent last evening when he was ousted from the lower floor stage box which has been his seat since the opening of the film last Monday.

It seems that the box contains five chairs, one of which was occupied by the harpist. Treasurer MacCallum, during the rush on the box office last evening, sold the entire five, including the place of the musician. When it came time for the performance to begin the trouble began. Five patrons, eager for a glimpse at the great spectacle, marched down the aisle to the box where the harpist was sitting. The usher in charge of the party noted the difficulties and immediately sent out the "S. O. S." call for help. Manager Daniel Shea, of "The Birth of a Nation" company answered, and after a few unpleasant moments—unpleasant moments for the player—Mr. Harpist was removed to a more commodious and less dangerous position on the stage, and there he remained to contribute his harmonious melody to the score.

Last evening's audience was the largest of the engagement, and several hundreds of people were turned away, unable to get seats or standing room.

BOSTON ADVERTISER
SEPT. 25, 1915

fon, for while many plays have done big business at the Shubert, no drama in years has ever drawn such an enormous advance sale. The demand for seats has been so great that efforts are now being made to extend the engagement beyond the limits of the original contract.

Majestic Theatre

"The Birth of a Nation," D. W. Griffith's mighty spectacle, continues to fill the Majestic Theatre every afternoon, notwithstanding the fact that it has already run in Boston longer than any theatre attraction ever seen in this city, and been witnessed by a great many more thousands of people than ever patronized a continuous engagement of any kind in Boston. In number of weeks "The Birth of a Nation" completes just a half year the coming Saturday night, but in number of performances, figured on the regular theatre basis of eight performances a week, it has now been here 37 weeks.

CLIPPING FROM NEW YORK MAIL
Date .....
1915

THE FUTURE OF THE FEATURE FILM

By GEORGE F. WORTS

THE coming of the Triangle photo plays to the Knickerbocker Theatre is an important event, because it marks a big, decisive step that has been taken by producers and exhibitors to put the feature film on a substantial and permanent basis. Public favor went so quickly to feature programmes that a doubt quite naturally arose concerning the durability of this variety of motion picture entertainment. Everything that could possibly be done to increase the pleasantness of feature films is being done. Their technique is better understood, and it will continue to be better understood. The quality of screen acting has improved, direction has grown finer, photography and scenic effects are more finished.

"The Birth of a Nation" was one of the earlier forces that worked toward the public appreciation of the feature film; "The Battle Cry of Peace" is one of the latest. Between the two have been scattered scores of excellent feature films. And the number of such plays as this is constantly increasing. The question has been raised as to whether or not the feature film is a fad or a permanent institution. Unquestionably, its popularity is still inclining; but whether or not the public will grow tired of the mani-reeled picture is a problem that is already confronting producers and exhibitors.

One fact remains, however: Public interest in motion pictures is quickening. There will always be a demand for a motion picture well done. And motion pictures are being better done every succeeding day. Whether the pictures are one-reel or ten-reel makes no difference if the quality is there. And that is what the big men, the real men, of the industry are working for.

MOTION PICTURE WORLD (N. Y. City)
SEP 2

thoroughly

TRENTON THEATERS BOOK "NATION" FILM.

FF

Montgomery Moses, manager of the Trent theater, Trenton, N. J., has booked D. W. Griffith's gigantic spectacle in motion pictures, "The Birth of a Nation," for the week of September 20. This announcement has created quite a stir in moving picture circles in the Jersey city and interest in the films is running high, on account of the reports heard from other cities of the wonderful qualities of the immense production. Manager Moses expects to show to capacity houses and is making his plans accordingly.

HARTFORD (Conn.) POST
SEPT. 25, 1915

THE FILM AGAIN

To the Kick Editor:

What's all this kicking about the showing of "The Birth of a Nation?" I am inclined to believe an energetic press agent is responsible for much of the agitation that is going the rounds in this city.

If the picture is really so bad why do these people go to see it, when these same gentlemen (or ladies) are generally supposed to be looking for higher things?

I believe if I was told a picture was bad and warned that to see it would hurt my finer sensibilities I would keep out of the theater.

OBSERVER.

City, Sept. 23, 1915.

TRENTON (N. J.) GAZETTE
SEPT. 25, 1915

"NATION" MAKES RECORD

FF

NEW records were established at the Trent theatre this week by the gigantic film spectacle "The Birth of a Nation." There is a new record for attendance figures, as well as for gross receipts on the week's engagement. The previous record in this respect was credited to the production of "Ben Hur," which Klaw & Erlanger presented at Taylor Opera House for one week. It is estimated that the receipts of "The Birth of a Nation" will reach $10,000.

CLIPPING FROM Times
Date Nov 7th
9 55 A

GRIFFITH PICTURE AT STATE STREET

FF

Manager Wahn, of State Street Theatre, obtained a notable photoplay feature when he closed a contract for the presentation of "The Escape," by D. W. Griffith, who has thrilled thouhands with his wonderful feature, "The Birth of a Nation." It will be presented at State Street the first half of nexe week, in conjunction with the feature film, "Neal of the Navy," with Lillian Lorraine and William Courtleigh, Jr.

"The Escape," the Griffith production, it is stated, has countless thrills in the 6,000 feet of photoplay, that is said to be in keeping with the Griffith standard.

This photoplay is regarded as so important that it has supplanted the Paramount feature that was booked for the first half of next week. It is declared to be the greatest photoplay Manager Wahn has ever offered his patrons, and the most costly. The other Griffith production, "The Birth of a Nation," commands $2 high price in every place where it is given. The Griffith film will be offered at State Street with the usual vaudeville numbers and "Neal of the Navy" for the regular popular prices.

BROOKLYN DAILY EAGLE
SEP 25 1915
Date .....

fer this engagement ... ing and Saturday matinee prices will be from 25c. to $1.00, and the Wednesday matinee, 25c., 35c. and 50c.

"The Birth of a Nation."

The final performance of D. W. Griffith's $500,000 production, "The Birth of a Nation," at the Brighton Beach Music Hall, will be given next Saturday night, when William H. Kemble, the managing director, will celebrate the occasion with a special musical programme. He is now making an effort to have some of the film stars who appear in the picture attend and join the festivities.

"The Birth of a Nation" has had a remarkable run at the Brighton Beach Music Hall, where more than 300,000 persons have seen the picture protraying the stirring days of the Civil War. The film is not a war picture but a combination of love, tragedy, war and peace. Mr. Griffith intended that it should be a picture history of the principle events of the Civil War. That the picture is educational is evidenced by the fact hundreds of Brooklyn ministers and priests, school principals and educators, Civil War veterans and others, have unqualifiedly endorsed it.

William H. Kemble, who brought the film to Brooklyn at a great expense, is well known in this city, although for a long time he was away attending to extensive mining interests in Mexico. Mr. Kemble has decided to become a Brooklynite again. He was at one time a member of the Twenty-third Regiment and the Old Guard. He is a member of the Army and Navy Club, and other prominent organizations.

Mr. Kemble was one of the Americans who just escaped from Mexico with their lives, when the Zapata revolutionists and bandits started on their campaign several years ago.

CLIPPING FROM Boston Transcript
Date 9-25-15

Majestic—The Birth of a Nation

A filmed spectacle of unusual magnitude and scope, that for twenty-five weeks held one or another Boston stage. The earlier reels unroll scenes and incidents from the Civil War—Sherman's march to the sea, the battle of Petersburg, Lee's surrender and the assassination of Lincoln—on a scale of numbers, diversity and vividness new to motion-pictures in America. Then follows a pictorial chronicle of conditions in the South during the days of Reconstruction, the carpet-baggers and the Ku-Klux Clan, ranging from intimate domestic life to turbulent episode. Finally comes an apotheosis of the United States. Into all this is woven sentimental adventure between a soldier of the North and a woman of the South. Music accompanies the whole spectacle.

TRENTON (N. J.) GAZETTE
SEPT. 25, 1915

FINAL TIMES OF "BIRTH OF NATION"

FF

There is no diminution in interest in "The Birth of a Nation," the D. W. Griffith motion picture spectacle which will wind up its week's engagement in this city at the Trent theatre today. There will be three performances today—a special morning matinee, beginning at 10 o'clock for school children; the usual matinee show at 2:15, and the evening presentation at 8:15 o'clock. So great is the demand for seats for the farewell performances that the theatre will be thronged for each show.

"The Birth of a Nation" pictures have historic value as well as tense dramatic quality, and the augmentation of the effect each production makes is a tribute to the fine orchestra, playing music specially selected, and in description of each incident as it is re-enacted through the intermediary of the picture machine and the screen. "The Birth of a Nation" has unquestionably set a standard in motion picture achievement difficult to attain.

And never before in the history of the city has a theatrical enterprise been received with more cordiality and patronage. The production has not only proven itself a wonder in animated photography, but it has also broken all records for local theatrical business.

UTLAND (Vt.) HERALD
SEPT. 25, 1915

Methodist church—Rev. J. B. Horton, pastor; morning service at 10:45; reception of members; subject of sermon, "The Incomparable Things of

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION."

Shows may come and shows may go, feature film be widely heralded and after brief exhibitions returned to the shelves, but "The Birth of a Nation" continues on its triumphant way and will be shown at the Shrine theater on Monday, September 27, for an engagement of one week only. Besides the film spectacle itself "The Birth of a Nation" music has taken a firm hold on the fancy of New England theatergoers. It revives most of the old tunes of the Civil war and includes also much elaborate orchestration in modern mode.

For out-of-town patrons the matinee performance will be found attractive the same as night and more convenient to attend. No Sunday shows will be given, but, with that exception, Mr. Griffith's spectacle is being performed twice daily at 2:15 and evenings at 8:10 respectively.

"The Birth of a Nation" is the biggest production so far made. There were over 120,000 feet of film when the cameras finished their work in the West and South, but the process of selection, which plays such a telling part in these productions, has reduced this to 12,000 feet, the spectacle as it now stands, taking about two and three-quarter hours to present.

The production cost over $500,000 and the first presentation was given in Los Angeles, Calif., since which the production has been shown in New York city, Boston, Chicago, San Francisco, Seattle, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Atlantic City, Brighton Beach and Long Branch for long runs and playing to capacity at every performance.

The production will be presented here in the same big manner that has characterized its performances in the above cities, with augmented orchestra of 16 pieces and all other details exact. Obtain seats at Playhouse 10 to 12, 1:45 to 4, 6:45 to 10 p. m. Seats may be reserved for any evening during the engagement.—adv.

CHICAGO (Ill.) MOTOGRAPHY

Mi[illegible]souri.

The booking [illegible] "The Birth of a Nation," now playing at the [illegible] Theater in St. Louis, Missouri, have been arranged to keep the big spectacle in the big amusement centers of the country indefinitely. St. Louis will be the only city in which it will appear for scores of [illegible] around this season. The spectacle has been billed and advertised in every small city and town for miles around and within a radius of seventy-five miles of St. Louis. The same policy has been pursued everywhere since the "Birth of a Nation" started in Los An-

PORTLAND (Me.) EXPRESS & ADV.
SEPT. 25, 1915

Symphony Orches

THEATERS

THE BIRTH OF A NATION. FF

The Birth of a Nation, the sensational and spectacular Griffith production of the Civil War period, in 12 parts based on the book The Clansman, breathes the spirit of that well known book. The two great outstanding features of it are its controversial spirit and splendor, and the magnificence of its production. Taken as a whole it is the most tremendous offering ever projected.

The greatness of the production is in its spectacular points and the historical reproductions, yet so clearly defined is the drama and so very carefully presented that it grips the audience hard. The appeal is far reaching and there probably never has been a production offered to the American public that can approach the "swing" of its powerful "pull" or sometimes almost uncanny reproductions of historical scenes. From a technical viewpoint it may be placed upon a pedestal by itself. It is a magnificent production, wonderful in its scope, dramatic to a degree in its construction, faithful in detail and convincing in its argument. Those who may feel inclined to take offense at alleged incidents of half a century ago, and find it difficult to square such offenses with latter day conditions, should bear in mind that the traitor Arnold of the Revolution, was the same Arnold who, as the daring "rider of the black horse" was the hero of the siege of Quebec.

Beginning with the troublous times just preceding the Civil War The Birth of a Nation takes us through that awful struggle, culminating in the assassination of Lincoln, into and through the reconstruction period which has been classed by many as the darkest period of United States history.

This great masterpiece of photo-dramatic art will return to the B. F. Keith Theater for one solid week commencing next Monday and is sure to duplicate the previous capacity attendance. Hundreds were unable to secure seats during its first engagement and from the way the seats are selling late comers are going to be disappointed again. Moral, secure your seats in time.—Advertisement.

ROVIDENCE (R. I.) NEWS-D[illegible]
SEPT. 25, 1915

Prov. Opera House

"The Birth of a Nation," D. W. Griffith's photoplay on re-construction days, will be continued for another week at the Providence Opera House, opening with a matinee performance Monday afternoon. This will be the fifth week this photoplay has been shown in this city, the first engagement consisting of three weeks and the present engagement of two weeks. This will positively be the final week that the photoplay will be shown here.

It is not often that a photoplay audience is moved to such a pitch of enthusiasm that it applauds the action, but such is the case in this picture. Sound and action are synchronized. The special music by the orchestra of 25 pieces and the realistic sound affects produced behind the screen carry the audience from climax to climax. To produce the effects 5000 pounds of mechanicti devices, controlled from a switchboard by an electrician, are employed and a force of 20 men is required to run the various pieces of apparatus. All of the sound effects are timed to the second by the electrician, who, anticipating every movement signals to his men by an elaborate electric light system. In this way sound and action are synchronized.

The switchboard, which notifies the men who control the effects, has over 30 different keys, each one calling for a different sound. The effects include cannon boom, cannon rumble, church chimes, rifle shots, rifle rattle, rush of water, horse hoofs, smashing of doors and breaking of window glass. A group of 10 men produce the sounds for the mob scenes. All of the men work in complete darkness in order to read the vari-colored electric light signals correctly.

"The Birth of a Nation" is a historical drama in two parts founded on "The Clansman" by Thomas Dixon. It shows the North and the South at war and the reconstruction period. The love element is not lacking. A Northern girl, who visits in the South dismisses Col. Ben Cameron, her lover, when she discovers he belongs to the dreaded Ku Klux Klan.

NE (Wash.) CHRONICLE
SEPT. 24, 1915
851

PAGE TWENTY.
ADVERTISING

DUR[illegible]

[illegible] Big Job to Suit Griffi[illegible] in Role of President, Sa[illegible] Henneberry.

FF

"An actor's ambition is gratified [illegible] once in a lifetime and mine probably came when I was selected to portray President Lincoln in Griffith's celebrated film, 'The Birth of a Nation,' said Joseph Henneberry yesterday at the Hippodrome theater, where he is appearing as one member of a black face team.

"Before the scene suited Mr. Griffith, we rehearsed 20 times and it was filmed six times before the pathos was intended to carry showed sufficiently to suit.

"I had just started my vacation in the Saugeny mountains of New York last June when I received a wire to report to Mr. Griffith. They jumped me across the continent at a good salary and expense account, and while it was my first venture into movies, I liked it very much.

Wart Gave Him Trouble.

"The wall of my dressing room was almost covered with mirrors and in the vacant spaces there were hung pictures of our martyred presidents showing every conceivable facial angle. It usually took about two and one-half hours to put on my makeup, and it was a very tedious task. One of my greatest aggravations was to get the wart in proper position, for everyone was offering suggestions about other pictures they had seen.

"Because the cloth binding of the wig would 'register' in the closeup scenes, it was necessary to purchase a strip of surgeon's rubber membrane cut to fit over the edge. Over all this the grease paint was applied about one-fourth of an inch thick. The beard was a stickler, too, for, when I thought I had it on properly, Mr. Griffith would say one side or the other was a little too full or too much skimped. Consequently much trimming was in order.

"When I saw the completed film, I confess that forgot I had worked in it and wept or cheered as it swayed my impulses."

There is more realism in the making of moving pictures than many movie patrons are aware, Mr. Henneberry declares. He bears evidence of the heat from a powder explosion of a blank cartridge in a scar at the back of his neck.

He was playing the role of Lincoln when William Walsh, in the part of J. Wilkes Booth, pulled the trigger of an old-fashioned derringer too close to his bare neck. The mechanism of the old gun was to blame for, while the explosion made enough smoke for movie purposes, the flame came from under the barrel sidewise and caused a burn that was weeks in healing.

"Those movie directors can have all that work they want," he said. "That particular production was seven months in the making and one can hardly imagine the strain that Mr. Griffith was under in the heavy parts. For weeks on end I know that he worked 20 hours a day and some nights went to bed without removing his clothing. With all the seven months' direction I never saw Mr. Griffith with a pencil or pad. He kept notes in his wonderful memory and he is surely a stickler for detail."

ORONTO (Ont.) NEWS
SEPT. 27, 1915

AMUSEMENTS

BIRTH OF A NATION.

Prolonging its engagement to accommodate the vast crowds that are visiting the Alexandra Theatre daily, "The Birth of a Nation," D. W. Griffith's mammoth film spectacle, inaugurates the second week of its engagement with a popular price matinee this afternoon. Never before has such a sensational drama graced the boards of a Toronto theatre. Its five thousand individual scenes are made more impressive by the musical accompaniment that is played by a symphony orchestra of thirty. Many circumstances have conspired to make this spectacular film the most discussed play in the world, it embraces a period of 150 years and pictorializes the greatest events of the Civil War, as well as those of Reconstruction. The early glories of the South, the devastating march to the sea, the burning of towns; the signing of peace at Appomattox; the assassination of Lincoln at Ford's Theatre, and the succeeding orgy of hate and oppression of the South—these incidents pass with the rapidity of lightning before the enthralled spectator and lead up to the terrific climaxes of Part II., which is devoted to what has been termed "the second struggle," a struggle caused by the attempt to impose carpet-bagger rule upon the conquered states. The wild adventures and achievements of the Ku Klux Klan dominate the final scenes, which yield a happy ending of a double romance of southern and northern sweethearts. During the week performances will be given afternoon and evening, with no advance in prices.

CLIPPING FROM Portland Me. Press Herald 9-25-15

HOSPITAL SCENE IN "BIRTH OF A NATION," at the Colonial all this week.

FROM THE PRESS AGENTS

At The Colonial

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION."

"The Birth of a Nation," bringing forward David W. Griffith's new art of musical spectacle, opens an engagement of one week at the Colonial on Monday, with daily matinees after the opening. The first half of the great picture exhibits the salient events of the Civil War which came to a close at Appomattox just fifty years ago. Lincoln's call for troops, Sherman's march, the Battle of Petersburg, Lee's surrender to Grant and the awful tragedy at Ford's theatre live before the spectator of the Griffith drama. In the second half of the South's "second uprising," this time against the carpeting regime, is shown in a thrilling story of reconstruction days. The romance of the "Little Confederate Colonel," Ben Cameron, with the Northerner, Elsie Stoneman, and that of the Unionist captain, Phil Stoneman, with Margaret Cameron, the South Carolina lassie, maintain two threads of continuous love interest throughout the story. The fun and frolic of plantation days, as well as the heartaches and pathos of the stricken South are shown. The great out-of-doors is Mr. Griffith's special field. Great battle scenes and the rides of the clan are staged with thousands of participants. There are 5,000 scenes in the spectacle, and (it is estimated), no less than 200,000 interesting historical details. On the musical side Mr. Griffith attempted something previously unheard of in connection with moving pictures. This was the synchronizing of a complete symphonic score with the appearances of the important characters and the enactment of the principal scenes. This instrumental music is played by a large orchestra, and supplemented by part-singing behind the scenes. Somehow the old war-time tunes, thus thematically treated, make the "counterfeit presentments" of long ago seem irresistibly real. Among the leading players in what was probably the largest theatrical cast ever assembled may be mentioned Joseph Henabery as President Lincoln, Donald Crisp and Howard Gaye as Generals Grant and Lee; Mae Marsh and Flora Cameron, Henry Walthall, Lillian Gish, Elmer Clifton, Miriam Cooper as the quartet of lovers; Ralph Lewis as Congressman Stoneman; Spottiswoode Aiken and Josephine Crowell as the elder Camerons, and Walter Seigmann as Lynch. Seats are now on sale for the entire week.

N. (Maine) JOURNAL SEPT. 25, 1915 467

D. W. Griffith's Massive Spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," at the Empire Theater, Week of [illegible]th.

With the approach of half a century after the actual scenes of the Civil War, this highest development of the motion picture art bears a keen relationship to current events. Aside from its dramatic appeal and poetic flight it brings back to a younger generation with a new-born realism the things which our fathers and grandfathers went thru that out of the travail could come the Nation we are so proud of today. It is not a case of opening old wounds but in art suggestive, the highest form of art, to point out to us the mistakes and misunderstandings of the past that we may face the crisis of the present with a calmness and determination to uphold the right. The dramatic form has often been employed by the greatest minds of the world to express underlined truths and as regards the usages and the sufferings of war, no pen has been able to make as impressive a picture as Griffith has encompassed in this masterpiece. A born realist, he cuts into the quick of facts that he may establish his dramatic plot. He has not been concerned with factions of propaganda but with the unerring view of the master of the new art he has made his impression upon our minds in a way which is startlingly original and a force to be reckoned with in the future. He masses great armies upon a historic plane to reproduce the records of a mighty struggle and by the human interests of two families makes a great nation's efforts a topic of a dramatic construction which appeals to the heart and the sympathies as no bold narrative of facts could hope to do. To attain these results he employs the passions, the loves and the conflict of essential drama. He writes history by flashes of lightning and with it all has built up a spectacle that thrills the human soul, brings tears to the eyes, mingles pathos with laughter, and above all else, does something fine upon the most tremendous scale that was ever undertaken by a dramatist in the world's history.

"The Birth of a Nation" is well worth while and when one has witnessed it, it is easy to understand why it has created such a gigantic stir. The engagement of this greatest of all film spectacles opens at the Empire Theater, October 4th, for one solid week.

AT THE THEATRES

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION."

Supposing that you were given the opportunity at a ridiculously small price—considering the spectacle offered—to occupy a reserved seat in a grand stand which commanded a fine view of such historic scenes as the actual Battle of Gettysburg, Sherman's March to the Sea, the last stand at Petersburg, the Assassination of President Lincoln in Ford's Theatre, Lee's Surrender to Grant, the tragic and wild rides of the Ku Klux Klans, the destruction of entire cities by fire, wonderful artillery duels, miles of trench fighting, in fact war as it actually is—would you not jump at the opportunity?

You undoubtedly would. Well, that is practically just what is offered to the spectator in "The Birth of a Nation" which ran for four great months at the Tremont Theatre, Boston, and will enter on its twentieth and last week next Monday, August 16th, at the Majestic.

Every American heart cannot fail to thrill with enthusiasm over this offering which combines pictorial spectacle, music and effects in a thrilling drama of the Civil War crisis, interspersed with lively comedy and heightened with two charming love romances of the Blue and the Gray.

ONLEYVILLE (R. I.) TIMES SEPT. 24, 1915 674

Providence Opera House.

"The Birth of a Nation," D. W. Griffith's sensational photo drama is enjoying a second engagement at The Providence Opera House. The first engagement lasted three weeks and drew capacity audiences at every performance. The same is true of the present engagement, which will last only a few days more. The performance starts at 2.15 and is finished in ample time for suburbanites to get home for dinner. "The Birth of a Nation" will be shown twice daily, at 2.15 in the afternoon and 8.15 in the evening.

"The Birth of a Nation" is a historical drama in two parts founded on "The Clansman," by Thomas Dixon. It shows the North and South at war and the reconstruction period which was the aftermath of the war. The story of the play is along the following lines. A Northern and Southern home are shown before the war. The call to arms comes and the sons of both houses leave for the front. Battles and battlefields are rolled out in marvellous perspective, the most striking scenes being the four years war, showing all of the principal events, including Sherman's march to the sea. Then comes the assassination of President Lincoln, the getting into power of the men who exploited the negroes and the rise of the Ku Klux Klan. The love element is not lacking in the film. A Northern girl who visits in the South dismisses Col. Ben Cameron, her lover, when she discovers he belongs to the dreaded Ku Klux.

Ex. Journal Dallas Texas 1915

18,000 PEOPLE, 3,000 STEEDS, 5,000 SCENES IN PRODUCING FILM "THE BIRTH OF A NATION"

Art is long says the poet, and out lasts throne or emperor. Occasionally, however, old art ideals sway and totter to their fall, whilst a daring revolutionist seizes the scepter and remakes the world. This is what David Mark Griffith, foremost of directors, is said by many critics to have done by the production of his magnificent spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," which will be seen at the Dallas Opera House for two weeks, starting Monday night, Oct. 4.

Griffith had an idea that oral speech could be eliminated in great drama. He supplied the absence of words by a symphonic musical score which fits the action like a garment. Result: A new kind of grand opera—motion picture plus music plus mechanical effects—that bids fair to pass the achievements of the dramatic stage on the one hand and the most pretentious works of operatic composers on the other.

The director put on "The Birth of a Nation" as no other filmed play—not even "Cabiria" or "Quo Vadis"—had been put on. He used half a great State for his locale, 150 years of American history as his subject, 18,000 people as his actors, 3,000 riders and steeds as his cavalry, 5,000 scenes instead of a few score or a few hundred. His work dwarfed the old-fashioned stage art to such petitions that many are wondering whether the so-called "indoor" drama is not doomed to long and possibly total eclipse.

"The Birth of a Nation" is an inspiring story of romance, love and patriotism culminating in the "times that tried men's souls." The times of Civil War and Reconstruction. Suggested by Thomas Dixon's "The Clansman," it covers a far wider scope and imparts a vastly greater thrill.

For the first time in theatrical history a motion spectacle is being presented as a regular attraction at regular prices in regular first-class playhouses. The success speaks for itself. The Griffith drama comes here with a baggage equipment of two sixty-foot cars, a complete staff, including mechanical experts and stage crew, and a large symphonic orchestra regularly carried on tour—a company of fifty people altogether.

The story embraces beautiful romances of the Blue and the Gray: Ben Cameron, the Clansman, and his Northern sweetheart, Elsie; Captain Phil Stoneman, U. S. A., and sweet Margeret Cameron, the South Carolina lassie. Among the principals of the largest cast ever assembled for a dramatic entertainment are Henry B. Walthall, Mae Marsh, Lillian Gish, Miriam Cooper, Josephine Crowell, Spottiswoode Aiken, Ralph Lew, Elmer Clifton, Robert Harron, Wallace Reed, Mary Alden, George Seigmann, Walter Long, Joseph Henabery, Raoul Walsh, Donald Crisp, Howard Gaye, John McGlynn, Ernest Campbell, John French, J. A. Beringer.

SAN FRANCISCO (Cal.) BULLETIN SEPT. 25, 1915

AT THE SAVOY

"The Birth of a Nation," of "The Clansman," the famous Griffith film-story, continues to crowd the Savoy Theater through the power of its wonderful historic, spectacular and emotional qualities. The matinee and evening performance tomorrow will launch the twenty-second week of the picture's San Francisco career.

Rupert Hughes, the noted author, recently wrote of it:

"The Birth of a Nation' is a work of epochal importance in a large and fruitful field of human endeavor."

Atlanta Journal 4 pix

"BIRTH OF A NATION": Begins Fifth Week.

With four weeks to its credit that have broken all records for an extended theatrical run in St. Louis, "The Birth of a Nation" enters upon the fifth and final week of its original bookings at the Olympic Theater tomorrow afternoon. The engagement, however, has been prolonged to include the week of the Veiled Prophet and kindred festivities, with whose general scheme the Griffith spectacle fits in as admirably as if it had been especially planned. For it, too, portrays history, and such history as the Mississippi Valley passed through in the terrible days of Civil War and reconstruction. Over all is thrown the glamor of romance, just as the floats in the Veiled Prophet parade are poeticized.

No production in the theatrical history of America has so stirred audiences as "The Birth of a Nation." During the great battle scenes and the dashing rides of the Ku Klux Klansmen, there is continuous deafening applause.

Daily Press
Newport News Va. Sept 25

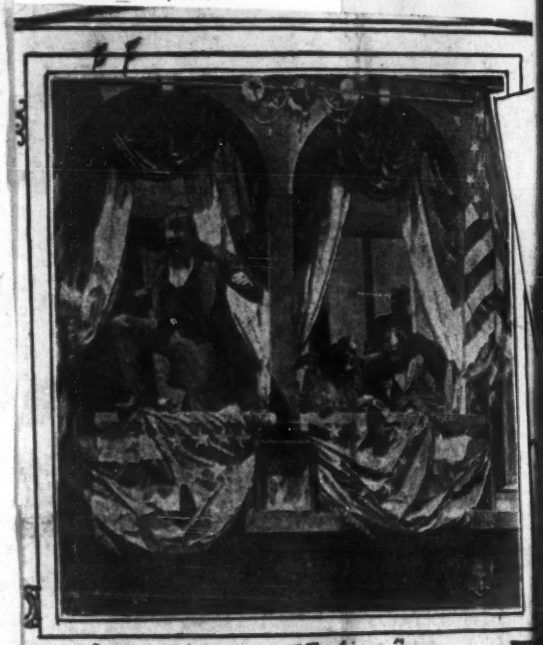
Lillian Gish Who Plays Flora Cameron in 'The Birth of Nation'

"BIRTH OF NATION" WONDERFUL PICTURE

Next week's attraction at the Colonial theater, Norfolk, will be D. W. Griffith's wonderful production, "The Birth of a Nation." This mighty spectacle has turned the theater records of America topsy-turvy. It holds the long distance runs in New York, Boston, Chicago, Los Angeles and San Francisco to date and is making a triumphant tour which is causing more comment than anything ever undertaken in drama of this country heretofore. It is a story of American history, showing the rise and fall of slavery in this country and the terrible suffering that was endured before a solution of this problem was reached. It is not so much history as it is drama romance in a new form of expression with an operatic accompaniment in the way of a symphonic score which shows the power of blending the two in this unique projection. Nothing like it was ever seen before. Nothing its equal is likely to be accomplished again until D. V. Griffith has time to select another theme for his genius of expression.

SCENE IN "THE BIRTH OF A NATION," COLONIAL THEAT RE, NORFOLK NEXT WEEK

PITTSBURG (Pa.) POST
SEPT. 26, 1915



Pittsburg Sunday Post Sept 25

Art of D. W. Griffith In Picture Producing

The "newer school" in the field of motion picture production is represented by David W. Griffith, producer of "The Birth of a Nation," the famous photo spectacle which is enjoying a most successful run not only at the Nixon Theater in this city but practically in all the larger cities of the country. The clash between the new and the old in picture producing methods is one of the most interesting features of the art. Even laymen are awakening to a realization of the fact that there are distinct schools of producers and that the same story, the same players and even similar settings will make two entirely different pictures if staged by producers representing the extremes of the two schools.

The "newer school" at its best is Griffith. He is a director of daring, who does not stop to think of cost. He is a director gifted with the artist's imagination. Perhaps his imagination might better be expressed as the ability to sense the feelings of the spectator. He has the faculty of handling his scenes so that every bit of action counts toward the achieving of the desired impression. The unnecessary is eliminated entirely. At times, as in the on-rushing scenes at the close of "The Birth of a Nation," he is content with flashes that are really but suggestions, for he realizes that, with the proper foundation built, the mind and imagination of the spectator is always keeping pace with him.

Mr. Griffith is continually striving to insure himself against the danger of wearying his spectator by seeking always for new angles at which to place his camera.

There are exponents of both schools who may be labelled successful producers, but it must be admitted that the taste of the times is for the newer or Griffith art, and that one may notice an increasing tendency on the part of the old school producers to seek a compromise.

Griffith's art is that which is farthest away from the stage, and yet he makes use of every device of the motion picture.

The new art requires real art. It is not a mere bagful of tricks, and "The Birth of a Nation" is made the more interesting by reason of its many scenes, each one of which presents some new and startling view to the spectator.

NORFOLK (Va.) VIRGINIAN PILOT
SEPT. 26, 1915

"BIRTH OF A NATION" HERE ALL THIS WEEK

Griffith's Film Production At The Colonial With Daily Matinee

FF

After more extensive and sensational publicity than has fallen to the lot of any theatrical enterprise, D. W. Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation" will will open a week's engagement tomorrow at the Colonial theatre, with daily matinees. The first-class metropolitan production is guaranteed to be the one shown here, carrying two baggage cars of equipment, a symphonic orchestra of musical experts, and a complete traveling organization of 50 people.

Many circumstances have conspired to make "The Birth of a Nation" the most widely discussed play in the world. Suggested by Thomas Dixon's southern novels, it embraces a far wider scope than "The Clansman" play. Mr. Griffith's new art covers 150 years of history and pictorializes the greatest events of the War between the States as well as those of Reconstruction. Lincoln, Lee and Grant; the early glories of the Confederacy; the devastation of General Sherman's march to the sea; the awful siege of Petersburg; the signing of peace at Appomattox; the assassination of the President in Ford's theatre, and the succeeding orgy of hate and oppression of the South—these personages and incidents pass rapidly before the enthralled spectator and lead up to the terrific climaxes of Part II, which is devoted to what has been styled "the second struggle between the North and the South," a struggle caused by the attempt to impose carpetbagger rule upon the conquered States. The wild adventures and achievements of the Ku Klux Klan dominate the final scenes, which yield a happy ending of a double romance of Southern and Northern sweethearts.

Mr. Griffith's treatment of the magnificent theme is so much greater and grander than the original play that there can be no comparison.

BOSTON HERALD
SEPT. 26, 1915

Performance Matinees Daily Except Saturdays.

Majestic Theatre

FF

"The Birth of A Nation" has been presented more times consecutively than any other theatrical attraction in the history of Boston. Last night at the Majestic Theatre it completed a record of 300 performances in this city. This is equal to over 37 weeks of an attraction playing eight performances a week. Tomorrow afternoon and evening will begin the 38th consecutive week in Boston, and the 301st to the 312th performance.

PITTSBURG (Pa.) POST
SEPT. 26, 1915

...ents and good singing by the chorus of 30.

Nixon—"Birth of a Nation" Photo Spectacle.

FF

"The Birth of a Nation," D. W. Griffith's marvelous photo spectacle, runs tomorrow afternoon on its fifth successful week at the Nixon Theater and also the last two weeks of its engagement. The historic features of this presentation have attracted wide attention and educators have been convinced that there is no more effective way to tell the story of a nation. In pictorial form are shown stirring events of American history, including Sherman's march to the sea, the last gallant stand of the Confederates at Petersburg, the surrender of Robert E. Lee to U. S. Grant, the assassination of President Lincoln and the saving of the South by the K.K.K. The realistic scenes [illegible] was expended in building towns, a replica of Ford's Theater in which Lincoln was killed and in laying out the vast battlegrounds. Eighteen thousand people and 2,000 horses were utilized. Five thousand scenes are in this stupendous spectacle. The battle scenes are said by Richard Harding Davis and other war observers to be the most wonderful and realistic ever presented to the American public. Thousands of soldiers are seen in the trenches, battling at breastworks, masked batteries in action, a panorama of marching and countermarching troops, shells exploding in the air and, in the midst of struggling masses, the carnage of battle.

Running through the historical scenes are two romantic love episodes, in which a colonel of the South loves the sister of an officer of the North, and the officer of the South loves the sister of the colonel of the North. The proud spirit of the Southern girl and the equally proud spirit of the Northern maid are shown in thrilling and soul-gripping story. Love turns to hate and then to love again. As each girl watches the grim struggle with partisan eyes and remains loyal to the land of her birth. These love scenes are taken from Thomas Dixon's famous stories, "The Clansman" and "The Leopard Spots." The cast includes such favorites as Henry Walthall, Mae Marsh, Spottiswoode Aiken, Lillian Gish, Miriam Cooper, Ralph Lewis, Robert Harron, Mary Alden, Donald Crisp and others.

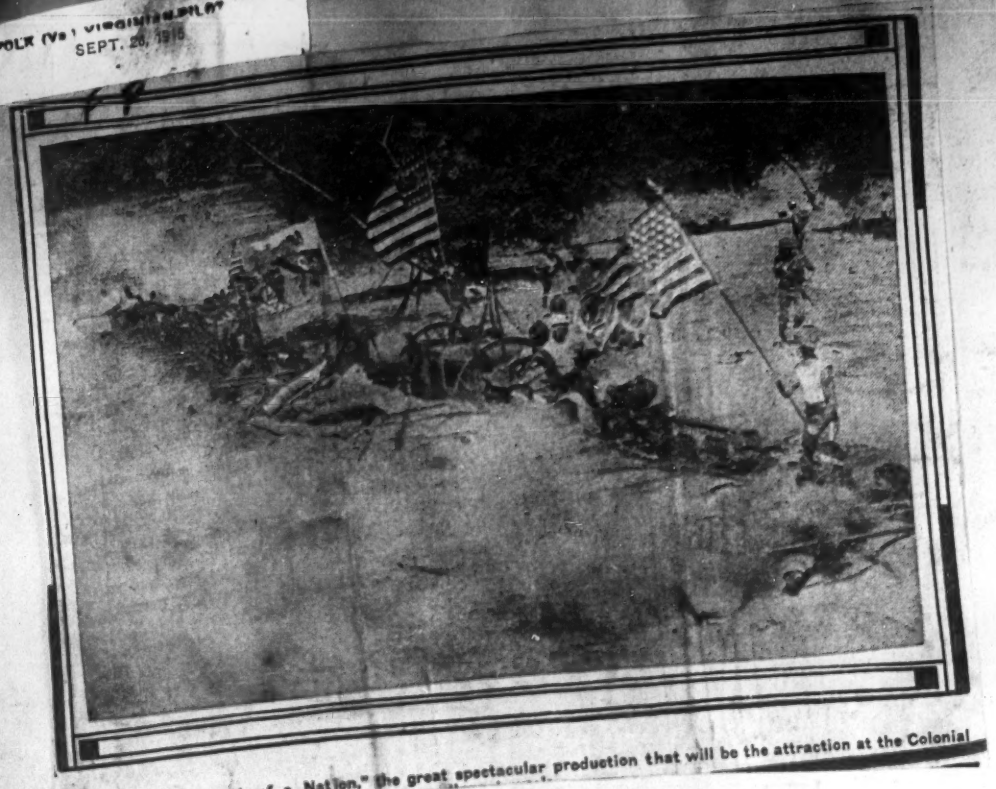
The symphony orchestra of 30 is a feature of every performance. The orchestration by Joseph Carl Breil is a masterpiece of illustrative music.

"The Birth of a Nation" is now in its sixth month at the Liberty Theater in New York, and in Chicago it will be playing for months to come. In Boston, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Milwaukee and other large cities it is breaking all records. It is shown here twice daily [illegible] and 8:30 P. M.

Date 9 26 1

D. W. Griffith's spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," will to-day begin the eighth month of its run in the Liberty Theatre. Miss Lillian Gish as the Carolinian Governor's daughter and Miss Mae Murray her friend play the chief feminine roles in the long cast.

NORFOLK (Va.) VIRGINIAN-PILOT
SEPT. 26, 1915



Battle scene in "The Birth of a Nation," the great spectacular production that will be the attraction at the Colonial public showed its appreciation by ... ing the theatre at every performance during the run of the piece. Quentin Tod and Helen Clarke do some splendid modern dancing.

BOSTON POST

Majestic Theatre

"The Birth of a Nation," which has to terminate its run at the Tremont Theatre a few weeks ago because of the regular season bookings at that house, and had to be transferred to the Majestic Theatre because the Boston and New England public plainly demonstrated that although this "eighth wonder of the world" had been presented more times consecutively than any other theatrical attraction in the history of Boston there were still thousands who had not had an opportunity to see it, completed last night at the Majestic a record of 300 performances in this city. This is equal to over 37 weeks of an attraction playing eight performances a week, and thus "The Birth of a Nation" has achieved a distinction for a much longer run than ever known before in these parts.

PROVIDENCE (R. I.) JOURNAL
SEPT. 26, 1915

of Current Events."

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION"

Its Fifth and Last Week at the Opera House.

"The Birth of a Nation," D. W. Griffith's photoplay on reconstruction days, is continued for another week at the Opera House, opening with a matinee performance to-morrow afternoon. This is the fifth week of this photoplay in Providence. The first engagement was for three weeks and the second was for two weeks. Col. Wendelschaefer states that an extension of the run is not contemplated.

It is not often that a photoplay audience is moved to such a pitch of enthusiasm that it applauds the action, but such is the case at the Opera House. The special music by the orchestra of 75 pieces and the realistic sound effects produced behind the screen carry the audience from climax to climax. To produce the effects 3000 pounds of mechanical devices, controlled from a switchboard by an electrician, are employed, and a force of 20 men is required to run the various pieces of apparatus. All of the sound effects are timed to the second by the electrician, who, anticipating every movement, signals to his men by an elaborate electric light system. In this way sound and action are synchronized.

The switchboard, which notifies the men who control the effects, has over 30 different keys, each one calling for a different sound. The effects include cannon boom, cannon rumble, church chimes, rifle shots, rifle rattle, rush of water, horse hoofs, smashing of doors and breaking of window glass. A group of 10 men produces sounds for the mob scenes. All of the men work in complete darkness in order to read the vari-colored electric light signals correctly.

The film presents a historical drama in two parts founded on "The Clansman" by Thomas Dixon. It shows the North and the South during the war and the reconstruction period. The love element is not lacking. A Northern girl, who visits the South, dismisses Col. Ben Cameron, her lover, when she discovers he belongs to the dreaded Ku Klux Klan.

[redacted] MAIDS."

BOSTON MORNING GLOBE
SEPT. 26, 1915

"The Birth of a Nation" at the Majestic Theatre.

Tomorrow afternoon at the Majestic Theatre Griffith's picture spectacle starts on its 26th consecutive week in this city. Last evening it completed a record of 200 performances in the engagements at the Tremont and Majestic Theatres, which is a much longer run than ever known before in Boston.

The elaborate nature of the production, showing an interesting era in the history of this Nation, represents the work of thousands of participants in mimic scenes, which have been devised and directed by master minds in the movie world.

In rapid succession are revealed views of the South before the Civil War, during it and immediately following it. The scene of Lincoln's assassination and the dark days of the reconstruction period in the South during the regime of the carpet-baggers and the various thrilling battle scenes are presented on a grand scale.

BOSTON (Mass.) AMERICAN
SEP 26

Remarkable Experiment with High-Priced Films Now Under Way.

By HARLOW HARE

The most interesting experiment in the history of moving pictures is now being made at the Knickerbocker Theatre, New York, and will soon be made in Boston, if the plans of the Triangle Film Company are realized.

It has been proved that the public will pay $2 to see a most marvelous spectacular picture like "The Birth of a Nation." The Triangle crowd believe that there is a field for a $2 theatre presenting a regular program of good pictures offering well known players and directed by Griffith, Ince and Bennett, the three most celebrated picture makers in the game.

Few experienced picture men outside the Triangle believe that audiences can be found so flush with money as to pay four or five times the prices asked by such houses as the Strand and the Park in Boston for a picture program which has not been extraordinarily advertised.

On the other hand the same people predicted that "The Birth of a Nation" would not go at $2 and it is now in its seventh month here in Boston.

In every community there is a class to which money is no object, and there are many people who actually stay away from picture theatres because the low prices result in a miscellaneous audience.

Most of these people are willing to pay a theatre price for a motion picture so well done as to be really entertaining, and such pictures are much rarer than one would suppose by reading the advertisements.

Few of the feature pictures are masterpieces. Most of the five or six reelers are ordinary, indifferent or bad. The picture men turn out an even larger proportion of failures than the legitimate drama producers, but by their extraordinary system of distribution, and by their arrangement of regular programs, which the exhibitor binds himself to accept, they make nearly as much money out of their failures as their successes.

Again and again I have been chased out of picture theatres by a stupid or tiresome picture and the knowledge that it would grind on for five or six reels.

The chief explanation of a bad picture is not the acting, but the treatment by the director, who has selected a poor subject, fumbled a good one, or extended a two-reel story into a five-reeler.

Not so long ago I dropped into a theatre and watched a picture unfold which was nothing but the familiar old play and opera "Tosca" with its name changed. As I had seen "Tosca" many times I had no desire to see it on a film and I felt a bit peeved because they did not call it "Tosca" and warn me before I went in.

It is too much to expect that the Triangle directors will always turn out masterpieces, but Griffith, Ince and Bennett are less liable to be guilty of the sins of motion picture directors than most others and their names carry some assurance that a good picture program will be pre-

AMERICAN
SEP 26 1915

"TRENCH FIGHTING SCENE FROM 'THE BIRTH OF A NATION,' AT THE MAJESTIC.

PITTSBURGH (Pa.) DISPATCH
SEPT. 26, 1915

GRIFFITH THE GREAT

His Method Is to Visualize and Revitalize Scenes of Past

There is a new way of recording history. Carlyle, Motley, Macauley, Prescott, Parkman and all the historians of all time have placed the results of their research on paper. David Wark Griffith, actor, dramatist and director of motion pictures, places his interpretation of history on a film. His method is to revitalize and visualize the deeds of the past. He was peculiarly fitted to recreate the scenes of the Civil War and Reconstruction days for his father, Jacob Wark Griffith, commanded a Confederate brigade and all his kinfolk endured the terrible sufferings of the post-bellum days.

D W Griffith.

For years young Griffith dreamed of his plans to make that epoch of American history live anew. Finally, at a cost of half a million dollars, he realized his dreams. The result was "The Birth of a Nation," which is now in its fifth triumphant week at the Nixon, and which enters upon the last two weeks of its engagement tomorrow afternoon.

In staging Sherman's march to the sea a village of frame houses was built to be burned; Ford's Theater in Washington was constructed in replica; the Assembly Chamber of the South Carolina Legislature was reproduced in the same way in order to get a scene lasting only 20 seconds.

When he wanted to show the thrilling rides of the Ku Klux Klan he found that all the roads he could use were oiled macadam. He needed dirt roads, so he went to the County Supervisors and obtained the use of the roads in an area of ten square miles for one day, hired a force of laborers to lay ten inches of dirt on the roads and ran his rides. Then the workmen removed the dirt.

Date M. Press 9.26.15

Liberty.

"The Birth of a Nation" begins the eighth month of its run in the Liberty Theatre this week. It is the only attraction in the Broadway district that has continued through from last season without a break in the run and is one of two attractions that are still running from last season. The interest in this story of the war and the reconstruction period is as popular as when it first reached New York and will remain indefinitely in the Liberty

PITTSBURGH (Pa.) DISPATCH
SEPT. 26, 1915

PITTSBURGH (Pa.) DISPATCH
SEPT. 26, 1915

"The Birth of a Nation"

FF

PERFECT projection has been the aim and accomplishment of the management of "The Birth of a Nation" at the Nixon Theater. The result is that there is no strain on the eyes of the spectators. Although the entertainment runs for two and three-quarters hours, it is a common comment of those who have seen this great spectacle that it hardly seemed an hour.

One of the most irritating features to the eyes is the exposure to directly reflected rays, a condition which is found in so many picture houses where the projecting machines are placed in the gallery of the theater. Dr J Morman Risley of Philadelphia has been waging vigorous warfare against this method of projection and he warmly urges projection to the screen on a horizontal plane. This perfect method which he urges is that used at the Nixon Theater. The booth is situated on the orchestra floor and there is absolutely no eye strain from screen reflection. No expense has been spared to give to "The Birth of a Nation" the most perfect presentation that modern science can accomplish. The greatest optical experts in the country were consulted so that every piece of mechanism should be the best that the ingenuity of man has yet devised. It is rather interesting to note that in the projection of this picture over 26,000 candle power is used and that the cost of the electricity is $50 a day.

The experts have measured to fractions of an inch the exact distance required for perfect focussing. They have likewise selected by means of high tests that location for the booth which will afford an optometrically perfect view of the film spectacle. Never before in the history of the theater has such minute scientific adjustment been attempted. Besides perfect projection "The Birth of a Nation" is shown with every surrounding that can add to the pleasure and enjoyment of the spectator. A symphony orchestra of 20 picked musicians play a score of Wagnerian proportions which is perfectly synchronized to the scenes of this great spectacle.

PITTSBURG (Pa.) LEADER
SEPT. 26, 1915

FF

SCENE IN "THE BIRTH OF A NATION."

The incident of the young Confederate's release by President Lincoln's order, which gets a round of enthusiastic handclapping when presented in "The Birth of a Nation," now playing at the Nixon, was verified as an actual historical event by one of the spectators, G. L. Mordecai, of 174 West Eighty-sixth street, is the man to whom it happened. During the New York run of the play he visited D. W. Griffith's offices and told this remarkable story:

"My father, a wealthy trader of Charleston, S. C., was engaged in extensive blockade running operations between the Confederacy and the Bahama Islands. I had served in the Confederate army but had been honorably discharged on account of sickness. My father then wanted me to go as his agent to Nassau. The only channel of intercourse was closed, however, when the Federals captured Fort Fisher, so father suggested that I should try to slip through the northern lines and thence take steamer from New York.

"In civilian dress I managed to elude the Union pickets in Virginia, crossed the Potomac, took stage for Washington, but in the latter place I was arrested and thrown into prison as a Confederate enemy. It was feared that I would be court-martialed and executed, or at best held prisoner until the close of the war. My fiancee's father, Alderman Samuel Lewis, of New York, later acting mayor, came to Washington and worked in my behalf. Notwithstanding Secretary Stanton's opposition, he succeeded in convincing President Lincoln that I was not a spy. 'I will release the young man,' said Mr. Lincoln, 'on one condition, that he take oath not to return to the southern states during the war.'

"I glarly took this oath and was released. Before leaving for the north for my marriage and residence in Alderman Lewis' family, I desired to thank President Lincoln. On being presented to Mr. Lincoln, I remember he shook me by the hand and said: 'I am happy to know that I have been able to serve an enemy.' I have never forgotten the great President's generosity and kindheartedness to a foe and when I saw the picture that early experience was vividly unearthed."

PHILADELPHIA, (PA.) PRESS
Date .....

THE LOVESICK SENTRY IN "BIRTH OF A NATION"

A great deal of film comedy is horseplay, but David W. Griffith in "The Birth of a Nation," at the Forrest, proves that much quiet, refined comedy is a big laughtmaker and pleases people better than the old-style slapstick buffoonery. One of the most delightful scenes in "The Birth of a Nation" is that showing the lovesick sentry, in the hospital scene, gazing at Elsie Stoneman.

This particular bit is of the "sure fire" order, for never does an audience miss the rapt devotion of the sentinel and the haughty expression of the young lady rebuking him with a million-miles-away look.

Paul LaBlanc is the name of the young actor, who made the unexpected hit as the sentry. He is a New Orleans Creole by birth, and played comedy roles with Sarah Bernhardt's company before he went to Los Angeles to Griffith's studio. The costuming of the young soldier is correct in every detail. Recent Civil War portraits in magazines and newspapers are almost doubles of this sentry figure.

Lillian Gish wears costumes of Civil War and Reconstruction times. The costumes are heirlooms in her family. Indeed, through Griffith's skill and care all the actors in the production are made to appear as if to the manner born and none moves awkwardly in unaccustomed habiliments.

DALLAS (Tex.) HERALD
SEPT. 26, 1915

Joe Weber [illegible] signed for an indefinite engagement to appear in Sennett supervised Triangle comedies.

* * *

David Griffith, producer of "The Birth of a Nation," is one of three of the directors who will produce regularly for the Triangle Film company.

Thomas H. Ince, director of Triangle pictures, claims that the chief reason for his success is hard work. Ince works the greater part of nineteen hours each day and sleeps but five. His first big success was "The Battle of Gettysburg." His most recent universally acclaimed masterpiece was "The Cup of Life." The first Ince Triangle feature will be "The Iron Strain" with Dustin Farnum.

Eddie Foy and the seven little Foys are busily engaged at the Sennett-Keystone studio to appear shortly on the Triangle program in "A Favorite Fool."

PITTSBURG (Pa.) GAZETTE-TIMES
SEPT. 26, 1915

Personal View of D. W. Griffith

FF

THE official biographer of David W. Griffith, the motion picture producer, asked for some data and got the answer that "he was born in Kentucky, that he grew up in a house like most boys; started out after his school and college days to find his place in the world, and that since he went into the business of producing pictures he has lived most of the time under his hat."

Strangely reticent about his personal affairs, the creator of "The Birth of a Nation," (when you know him) has one of the most interesting personalities in the world. One day he appeared in the office of the Epoch Producing Corporation of New York and put in a requisition for $5,000 cash. It was Saturday afternoon. All the funds at the Liberty Theatre, where "The Birth of a Nation," was playing, had been banked, and the cash on hand was required for salaries. But one of the managers made the rounds of several Broadway hotels and finally got the cash money in exchange for checks. It was all in $100 bills.

Mr. Griffith bundled the money into an old newspaper which he tied with a piece of rough string. As he caught the flyer for Louisville, Ky. that afternoon, he was observed with a suitcase in one hand and the bundle of "kale" in the other, disappearing rapidly in the direction of a train which was starting just as he reached the station.

The next chapter of this little story opens in La Grange, Ky. A tall youthful looking man, with aforesaid "kale" bundle and suitcase, knocks at the door of an ivy-clad cottage. The thin, stately, white-haired woman of the crinoline and hoop-skirt era answers the knock and comes out to meet him. As the tall young man drops his suitcase and embraces the old lady with his good right arm, his left hand holds out a bundle in a newspaper with the commonplace remark: "Here is a little present for you, Mother."

The incident, as the managers of the company came to learn about it, surprised then not a little, but it is characteristic of Griffith. Four times a year, on his flying trips between Los Angeles and New York, he visits the old Kentucky home and leaves that same little "momento." It is always the same sum and is always contained in an old newspaper.

"When I was a boy," said Griffith to a chum the other day, "I always had a vision of making a place in the world and bringing back the coin. I didn't know what checks were in those days. I don't think most people in La Grange know what they mean nowadays. Anyhow its just a fad of mine to make the little present in Uncle Sam's legal tender."

Few men owe more to their parents than the famous director does to Brig. Gen. Jacob W. Griffith and Mrs. Mary Perkins Griffith. The father held distinguished command in the Southern army. He died when D. W. Griffith was but a lad, nevertheless the sixth sense of military strategy that the boy inherited and the vivid depiction of Civil War campaigns that Gen. Griffith used to tell have remained ever with the son. Mrs. Griffith, the mother, has been David's best friend. She gave him a good education, schooled him in the old-fashioned chivalry of Kentucky, and has ever watched his welfare and progress with a whole hearted love and devotion.

PITTSBURG (Pa.) GAZETTE TIMES
SEPT. 26, 1915

[illegible]

* * *

Nixon—"The Birth of a Nation"

FF

"The Birth of a Nation," D. W. Griffith's great spectacle, starts tomorrow afternoon on its fifth successful week at the Nixon, and also the last two weeks of its engagement. The historic features of this presentation have attracted widespread attention and educators all over the world have been convinced that there is no more effective way to tell the story of a nation. In pictorial form are shown stirring events of American history, including Sherman's famous march to the sea, the last gallant stand of the Confederates at Petersburg, the surrender of Robert E. Lee to U. S. Grant, the assassination of President Lincoln and the saving of the South by the Ku Klux Klan.

Mere words can never give a realization of the dramatic scenes, the lifelike and vivid reproduction of the past. Realism is the keynote of the success of "The Birth of a Nation." To attain such results $500,000 was expended in building towns, a replica of Ford's Theater, in which Lincoln was killed, and in laying out the vast battlegrounds. Eighteen thousand people and 3,000 horses were utilized and eight months of time were consumed.

There are over 5,000 scenes. The very size of the spectacle defies description. The battle scenes are said by Richard Harding Davis and other war observers to be the most wonderful and realistic ever presented to the American public. Thousands of soldiers are seen in the trenches, battling at breastworks, charging over fields with cold steel, masked batteries in action, a panorama of marching and countermarching troops, shells exploding in the air, and in the midst of struggling masses the carnage of battles as it really is. There could bo no more potent argument for peace.

The symphony orchestra of 30 is a pronounced feature of every performance. The orchestration by Joseph Carl Breil is a masterpiece of illustrative music.

SEPT. 26, 1915
PHILADELPHIA (Pa.) INQUIRER

In Filmland

FF

FORREST—So great is the success of the D. W. Griffith historical drama, "The Birth of a Nation," that it is not always possible to accommodate the crowds. A crowd of intending purchasers of seats is at the box office throughout each day and the line seldom disappears until the ticket office is closed for the evening. There is a reason for this teremendous popularity of the motion picture spectacle bearing the Griffith signature and that is the wonderful detail of photography in a gigantic undertaking. For the proper enactment of the battle scenes of the Civil War shown upon the screen 18,000 men and 3000 horses were utilized, and the great numbers of men, women and children were required to give verity to pictures showing departure of troops, jubilations or scenes of mob violence. At close range is seen the great liberator, Abraham Lincoln and his assassination in the crowded Ford's Theatre is one of the most deeply impressive reproductions of an historic happening yet realized by motion photography.

Of great value in the projection of this masterpiece is the accompanying music arranged by Joseph Carl Briel and representing typical melodies of war times as well as martial tunes and tripping measures that set the feet astir. There is always the tensest interest as the picture is shown and Griffith with rare art permits no lagging in attention. The play has its foundation in that sensational novel, "The Clansman," but Griffith has utilized this tale only to the extent of providing a humanly appealing story enveloped in facts of history. The Ku Klux Klan has an important part in the latter part of the picture and there Griffith demonstrates his wonderful ability as a stage director by the contrasts he brings in rapid changes of scene. The approach of the clansmen is always bloodtingling and there is no onlooker who can escape the psychological influence of the onrush of strangely garbed horsemen.

Brooklyn, (N. Y.) Standard-Union

BRIGHTON BEACH MUSIC [illegible]

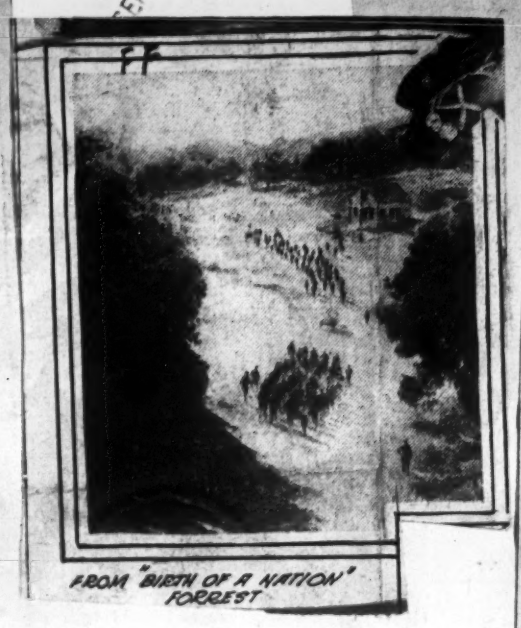
FF

The final performance of D. W. Griffith's $500,000 production, "The Birth of a Nation," at the Brighton Beach Music Hall, will be given next Saturday night, when William H. Kemble, the managing director, will celebrate the occasion by having a special musical programme. The spectacle has had a remarkable run here and more than 300,000 persons have seen the picture portraying the stirring days of the Civil War. The film is not a war picture, but a combination of love, tragedy, war and peace. Mr. Griffith intended it should be a picture history of the principal events of the Civil War. That it is educational is evidenced by the fact that hundreds of Brooklyn sisters and priests, school principals and educators, civil war veterans and others, have unqualifiedly endorsed it. William H. Kemble, who brought the film to Brooklyn at a great expense, is well known in this city, although for a long while he was away attending to extensive mining interests he owns in Mexico. Mr. Kemble has decided to become a Brooklynite again. He was at one time a member of the Twenty-third Regiment and the Old Guard. Mr. Kemble was one of the Americans who just escaped from Mexico with their lives when the Zapata revolutionists and bandits started on their campaign of murder and brigandage several years ago.

PITTSBURG (Pa.) GAZETTE-TIMES

NIXON—HENRY B. WALTHALL IN "THE BIRTH OF A NATION"

PHILADELPHIA (PA.) PUB. LEDGER



FROM "BIRTH OF A NATION" FORREST

SEPT. 27, 1915
MISSOULA (Mont.) MISSOULIAN

BLACK FACE COMEDIAN PLAYED LINCOLN IN BIRTH OF A NATION

Joseph Henneberry, who is on the vaudeville bill at the Bijou theater today in the blackface team of Ted and Bob, portrayed the character of Abraham Lincoln in Griffith's celebrated film, "The Birth of a Nation." Speaking of the work in making that elaborate picture, Mr. Henneberry says: "Before the scene suited Mr. Griffith we rehearsed it 20 times and filmed it 16 times in an effort to give it the pathos he desired. It was my first adventure into the movies and I liked it very much. The Birth of a Nation was seven months in the making and one can hardly understand the strain that Mr. Griffith was under in the heavy parts. For weeks on end I know he worked 20 hours a day and during all those seven months I never saw him with a pencil or pad; he kept notes in his wonderful memory and he surely was a stickler for detail."

SEPT. 26, 1915
TSBURG (Pa.) PRESS

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION,"
At the Nixon.

BIG ORGANIZATION DISBANDED IN A DAY.

Before the presentation of "The Birth of a Nation" throughout the big cities of the north there were but few who knew the real story of the Ku Klux Klan. The scene showing the activities of this mysterious body of men are all taken from the histories of the United States which treat of the period of reconstruction and most of which were written by northern historians. As a matter of fact the Ku Klux Klan saved the South from [illegible] which, if unchecked, would have brought that part of our new united country to absolute ruin. With a membership of over 500,000 of the flower of southern manhood when its work was done it was disbanded in a day.

The common disguise of the Ku Klux consisted of a white mask, a tall cardboard hat and a gown that covered the whole person. The languare of the warnings was always mysterious, the paper on which they were written was often adorned with pictures of crossed swords, coffins, skulls and cross bones, owls, a bloody moon, or a train of [illegible] labelled K. K. K.

BROOKLYN (N. Y.) EAGLE

SEP 26 1915

The final performance of D. W. Griffith's production, "The Birth of a Nation," at the Brighton Beach Music Hall, will be given next Saturday night (October 2), when William H. Kemble, the managing director, will celebrate the occasion by having a special musical programme. He is now making an effort to have some of the film stars who appear in the picture attend and join in a festive occasion.

"The Birth of a Nation" has had a long run at the Brighton Beach Music Hall, where more than 300,000 persons have seen the picture.

William H. Kemble, who brought the film to Brooklyn, is well known in this city, although for a long time he was attending to private interests in Mexico. Mr. Kemble has decided to become a Brooklynite again. He was at one time a member of the Twenty-third Regiment and the Old Guard. He is a member of the Army and Navy Club and other prominent organizations.

SEPT. 26, 1915
TSBURG (Pa.) PRESS

Alfred Latell, Peter Swift, Adele Jason and A. Robins.

NIXON.

There is a new way of recording history, Carlyle, Mosley, Macauley, Prescott, Parkman and all the historians of all time have placed the results of their research on paper. David Wark Griffith, actor, dramatist and director of motion pictures, places his interpretation of history on a film. His method is to revitalize and visualize the deeds of the past. He was peculiarly fitted to recreate the scenes of the Civil war and reconstruction for his father, Jacob Wark Griffith, commanded a Confederate brigade and all his kinfolk endured the terrible sufferings of the post-bellum days. For years young Griffith dreamed of his plans to make that epoch of American history live anew. Finally at a cost of half a million dollars he realized his dreams. The result was "The Birth of a Nation" which is now in its fifth triumphant week at the Nixon, and which enters upon the last two weeks of its engagement tomorrow.

In staging Sherman's march to the sea, a village of frame houses was built to be burned; Ford's theater in Washington was constructed in replica; the Assembly Chamber of the South Carolina legislature was reproduced in the same way in order to get a scene lasting only 30 seconds.

CABLE ADDRESS: CLIPBURO
CLIPPING FROM

PHILADELPHIA (PA.) PUB. LEDGER

AT THE PHOTOPLAYS

FORREST—D. W. Griffith's historical photo-drama, "The Birth of a Nation," continues here to crowded houses. For the proper enactment of the battle scenes of the Civil War shown upon the screen, 18,000 men and 3000 horses were utilized, and great numbers of men, women and children were required to give verity to pictures showing the departure of troops, jubilations or scenes of mob violence. The great liberator, Abraham Lincoln, is seen at close range, and his assassination in Ford's Theatre is one of the most deeply impressive reproductions of an historic happening yet realized by motion photography. Of great value in the projection of this masterpiece is the accompanying music, arranged by Joseph Carl Briel and reproducing typical melodies of war times, as well as martial airs and tripping measures.

NEW YORK (N. Y.) WORLD

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION" HAS BROKEN THE RECORD.

Great Film Play at the Brighton Beach Music Hall Tops "Long-Run" List.

During the summer theatrical season William H. Kemble, manager-director of the Brighton Beach Music Hall, has produced, at great expense, the D. W. Griffith $500,000 film play, "The Birth of a Nation." He made the venture at a time when the theatrical world was virtually paralyzed by the war, and when conditions did not afford a bright outlook, but in spite of all this he has achieved success that has amazed the theatrical profession.

After Mr. Kemble had renovated the Brighton Beach Music Hall he paid an enormous sum to the Griffith interests for the privilege of producing "The Birth of a Nation." From the start it has been a wonderful attraction. To date more than 300,000 persons have seen it at the Brighton Beach Music Hall. The long run of the play has broken the record for a continuous theatrical performance in Brooklyn.

Mr. Kemble was a Brooklynite years ago. He became interested in Wall Street and later in mining ventures in Mexico. He has decided to remain a Brooklynite. For years he was a member of the Twenty-third Regiment, the Old Guard, the Army and Navy Club and other military organizations. He is a member of many clubs, and he operates a chain of motion picture houses. In the theatrical world he is considered a "wizard" in his line.

NEW YORK (N. Y.) HERALD

[illegible], Isabelle [illegible], Dorothy Gordon and others.

BRIGHTON BEACH MUSIC HALL—Because D. W. Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation" is still being presented at the Brighton Beach Music Hall the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company is maintaining a special train and car service for the accommodation of those who see it.

Brooklyn residents will have their last opportunity to see the wonderful picture of love, tragedy, war and peace during this week. The last performance is to be given next Saturday night, when William H. Kemble, the managing director, intends to have a gala performance to celebrate the record run of the film in Brooklyn.

NEW YORK (N. Y.) WORLD

SEP 26 1915

BRIGHTON BEACH—Because D. W. Griffith's $500,000 film, "The Birth of a Nation," is still being presented at the Brighton Beach Music Hall the Brooklyn Rapid Transit is still maintaining a special train and car service for the accommodation of patrons. Brooklynites will have their last opportunity to see the wonderful picture of love, tragedy, war and peace during this week. The last performance is scheduled to be given Saturday night, when William H. Kemble, the managing director, intends to have a gala performance to celebrate the record breaking run of the film in Brooklyn.

Manager-Director Kemble has received more than five hundred letters from clergymen, educators, historians and historical society officers thanking him for bringing the picture to Brooklyn. The fact that the picture presents, in chronological order, the momentous events of the Civil War period, great battle scenes, the assassination of President Lincoln and the surrender of Lee to Grant was cited by them as educating and a lasting benefit to those who saw the presentation.

Date Jan. M. [illegible] 1916

some driver.

© Rue—Hartsook, L.A.
Mae Marsh.

MAE MARSH who figures prominently in "The Birth of a Nation," film classic, is a keen admirer of the works of Edgar Allen Poe. Next to Poe, in her estimation, comes O. Henry, for short stories. Miss Marsh is never seen without a book in hand, when not actively engaged in picture acting.

PHILADELPHIA, (PA.) RECORD.

Date SEP 26 1915

FROM LINCOLNIANA

Story Illustrative of the Sort of Man Martyred President Was.

It has remained for David W. Griffith, through the medium of the camera, to present a faithful characterization of Abraham Lincoln—a picture that one is able to grasp and to understand. Historians have told the manner of man Lincoln was, but Griffith in "The Birth of a Nation" shows a flesh and blood Lincoln who will never efface himself from memory. It has been said that the Lincoln scenes alone in "The Birth of a Nation" form a spectacle that would stand by itself as an evening's entertainment. Certainly the picture drama has never accomplished a greater achievement than this clear visualization of the martyred President.

In "The Birth of a Nation," as seen at the Forrest [illegible] the tender side of Lincoln is revealed, and it is by that gentle nature that the public of today doubtless best likes to revere his memory. But beneath great tenderness was a sense of justice that frequently astonished his friends and confidants. It is a matter of history that Lincoln's judgment was seldom wrong. An interesting anecdote is told of his interference in the decision of a military board that was examining candidates for commissions in the army. One of the candidates for a commission was a young sergeant who lacked education, but who had fighting qualities. He had enlisted from the country, and in his first engagement was suddenly thrust into the command of his company when all of his superior officers were killed. He handled his men so well that the colonel of the regiment recommended the sergeant for a commission. The examining board was made up of dapper young West Pointers, trained in all the science of war as taught in that institution. The sergeant was asked a score of technical questions that involved higher mathematics. He was not able to answer a single question, when, toward the close of the examination, a young officer, in an effort to ridicule the sergeant, asked:

"Sergeant, if you were in command of a company and were suddenly confronted by an enemy's force three times greater than your own, what would you do?"

The sergeant didn't hesitate. It was the first query in the two-hour examination that had any meaning to him.

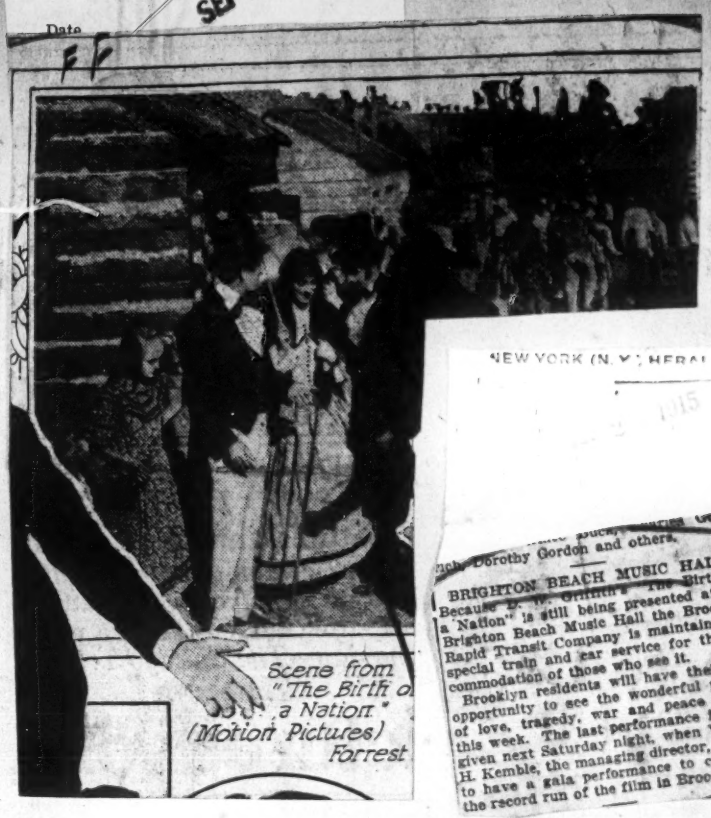
"Do?" he shouted. "Do, you darned fool: I'd give 'em blazes. That's what I'd do."

When Lincoln was told of the incident later, he laughed heartily and remarked: "That young man will get a commission." And he did.

PHILADELPHIA, (PA.) RECORD.

Date SEP 26 1915

FF



Scene from "The Birth of a Nation" (Motion Pictures) Forrest

NEW YORK (N. Y.) HERALD

1915

[illegible] Dorothy Gordon and others.

BRIGHTON BEACH MUSIC HALL.—Because D. W. Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation" is still being presented at the Brighton Beach Music Hall the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company is maintaining a special train and car service for the accommodation of those who see it.

Brooklyn residents will have their last opportunity to see the wonderful picture of love, tragedy, war and peace during this week. The last performance is to be given next Saturday night, when William H. Kemble, the managing director, intends to have a gala performance to celebrate the record run of the film in Brooklyn.

Public Ledger Sep 26

LILLIAN GISH IN "THE BIRTH OF A NATION"

She Has the Rôle of the Northern Girl in Love With the Southern Colonel in That Stirring Spectacle

D. Ledger Sep 26

Mae Marsh's Rise to Fame

Mae Marsh, who is seen as little Flora in D. W. Grimth's photoplay spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," at the Forrest, is called a prodigy of fildom. The young girl, who lives near Los Angeles, met so many rebuffs at first that she almost gave up hope of a stage career. A modest position with a chorus was at last promised her. While awaiting this, she decided one day to go with her older sister to the motion picture studio where the latter was employed. Grimth saw the young stranger and asked her whether she wanted to act. Every one laughed, for wasn't Mae Marsh awkward and freckle-faced and unprepossessing, the very antithesis of motion picture charm?

Grimth was in earnest, however. He saw under the freckles a visage born to comedy and tragedy, the high lights and deep shadows of feeling. He sensed also a temperament of electrical quality. Under his tutoring she lost some of the awkwardness and kept the rest for "slavey" parts. Fine frocks made a wonderful difference. The other actors found that Mae Marsh, with equal facility, could queen it in a palace or play a cook in a kitchen.

This chameleon quality led the director to intrust her with important characters, and lately he has been using her in emotional roles. When one asks a film man nowadays to mention off-hand a really great character actress in the photographic field, the chances are 10 to 1 he will mention her name. The ugly duckling is at last a swan!

[illegible] TELEGRAM

note it sounds.

D. W. Grith's spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," begins the eighth month of its run at the Liberty Theatre with the current week. It is the only attraction in the Broadway district that has continued through from last season without a break in the run, and is one of two attractions that held the boards last season which is still in evidence. This best exemplifies its popularity with the theatregoing public.

SEPT 27. 6

(Mo.) GLOBE-DEMOCRAT

[illegible] out of balance. The scenery and costumes are neat as is always the case with an Al H. Wilson show. Sunday matinee next: While New York Sleeps.

The Birth of a Nation

D. W. Griffith's masterpiece of photoplay construction, The Birth of a Nation, entered the phase of "last two weeks" at the Olympic yesterday afternoon, with an audience, 90 per cent of whom had come from a distance to view this absorbing camera creation. The announcement that this romance and war feature film will positively be exhibited in first-class theaters only and that in no case will small cities be privileged to see it, is having its undoubted effect. There is to be no change of bill at the Broadway house until October 10.

The Man from Oregon.

Political stories, whether told on the screen, in newspapers or in books, always interests the spectator or reader. The Man from Oregon, the creation of C. Gardner Sullivan, an Oregon newspaper man, is no exception. The new play was much enjoyed yesterday by the audiences at the New Grand Central Theatre where it began a week's engagement. The most excellent feature of the play is its showing of the United States Senate in session, as well as other interesting scenes about the national capital.

Students of geography as well as those who enjoy travel can find much instructive entertainment in the lecture, illustrated with motion pictures, on the expedition of Prof. George A. Dorsey to Japan. It is one of the best travel lectures that has been delivered here in a long time. Dr. Dorsey is the head of the Field Museum, Chic[illegible]

[illegible] PHILADELPHIA, (PA.) RECORD.

Date SEP 26 1915

Forrest—"Birth of a Nation"

FF

So great is the success of the D. W. Griffith historical drama, "The Birth of a Nation," now to be seen twice daily at the Forrest Theatre, that it is not always possible to accommodate the crowds. A line of intending purchasers of seats is at the box office throughout each day and the line seldom disappears until the ticket office is closed for the evening. There is a reason for this tremendous popularity of the motion-picture spectacle bearing the Griffith signature, and that is the wonderful detail of photography in a gigantic undertaking. For the proper enactment of the battle scenes of the civil war shown upon the screen thousands of men and horses were utilized, and great numbers of men, women and children were required to give verity to pictures showing departure of troops, jubilations or scenes of mob violence. At close range is seen the great liberator, Abraham Lincoln, and his assassination in the crowded Ford's Theatre is one of the most deeply impressive reproductions of an historic happening yet realized by motion photography.

Of great value in the projection of this masterpiece is the accompanying music arranged by Joseph Briel and representing typical melodies of war times as well as martial tunes and tripping measures that set the feet astir. There is always the tensest interest as the picture is shown and Griffith with rare art permits no lagging in attention. There is constant shift from grave to gay, from romance to intrigue and vast spaces with soldiery in conflict, typifying the bigness of the theme. The play has its foundation in that sensational novel, "The Clansman," but Griffith has utilized this tale only to the extent of providing a humanly appealing story enveloped in facts of history. The KuKlux Klan has an important part in the picture. The approach of the clansmen is always bloodtingling and there is no onlooker who can escape the psychological influence of the onrush of strangely garbed horsemen.

Griffith made success sure by engaging actors of first rate ability, who would typify and make life-like historic characters as well as those of the novelist's creation. It is hardly necessary to speak of the ability of such players as Henry Walthall, Miriam Cooper, Mae Marsh, Lillian Gish, Ralph Lewis and George Siegmann to make this assertion certain.

NEW YORK TELEGRAM

Date SEP 26 1915

D. W. Griffith's spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," begins the eighth month of its run at the Liberty Theatre with the current week. It is the only attraction in the Broadway district that has continued through from last season without a break in the run, and is one of two attractions that held the boards last season which is still in evidence.

FF

CLIPPING FROM N. Y. American

Date SEP 26 1915

"BIRTH OF A NATION" AT THE LIBERTY

FF

D. W. Griffith's epoch making spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," begins the eighth month of its run at the Liberty Theatre with the current week. It is the only attraction in the Broadway district that continued through from last season without a break in the run and is one of two attractions that held the boards last season which is still in evidence. This best exemplifies its popularity with the theatregoing public.

The interest in this wonderful story of the war and the reconstruction period keeps as fresh as when it first reached New York and created a sensation. It will remain indefinitely at the Liberty Theatre and will not be seen at any theatre in the metropolitan district except the Lib-

[illegible] enough to absorb the attention of people and provided an excellent vehicle for Grace Shannon, the new leading lady. Miss Shannon is [illegible] an [illegible] Richard La Salle in the [illegible]

[illegible] PHIA, (Pa.) TELEGRAPH

Date SEP 26 1915

"The Birth of a Nation."

With no apparent diminution of interest, D. W. Griffith's photo-spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," entered upon its last week at the Forrest. The extraordinary spectacular effects, the extraordinary reception and the skill of execution by which the picture has been made, differentiates it from all previous attempts in photo-spectacle in America. The wide range through the Civil War and reconstruction periods and visualizes graphic effect the scenes and personages of a stirring period. A double love interest is woven throughout the reels.

[illegible] of other [illegible] are [illegible] it to [illegible]

Record Sep 26/15

Scene from "The Birth of a Nation" (Motion Pictures) Forrest

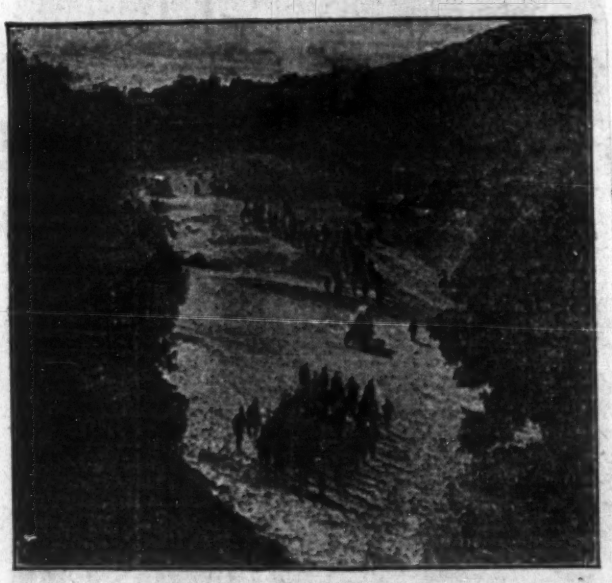
NEW YORK (N.Y.) HERALD

SEP 28 1915

FF

MAE MARSH IN "THE BIRTH OF A NATION" AT THE BRIGHTON BEACH MUSIC HALL

Merkwürdige Wandelbilder im Nixon.



Wohl nie zuvor sind für ein Wandelbild so gewaltige Menschenmassen zusammengebracht worden, wie für das gegenwärtig im Nixon Theater aufgeführte Kinodrama: „The Birth of a Nation." (Die Geburt einer Nation.) Schlachtenszenen, in welchen 15,000 Soldaten und 3,000 Pferde verwendet werden, gehören zu den merkwürdigsten Errungenschaften dieser neuen Darstellungskunst. Das ganze Innere des Theaters wird in der Wiedergabe von Lincoceln's Ermordung gezeigt—der Zuschauerraum voller Menschen, die Schauspieler auf der Bühne u. s. w. Auch die von einem früheren Pittsburger, Joseph C. Breil arrangirte Musik, die durch ein Orchester von 40 gegeben wird, bildet eine der anziehenden Punkte des „Birth of a Nation" Kinodramas, das jeden Nachmittag und Abend ein großes Publikum nach dem Nixon Theater lockt.

NEW YORK PRESS

Date .....

SEP 1915

18-PP

Mae Marsh "The Birth of a Nation" Liberty

"THE CLANSMAN" COST $500,000 TO PRODUCE

Scene From "The Clansman" Now Appearing At White

"The Clansman" has appeared at the White theater four nights and one matinee, having opened last Monday evening, already over five thousand (5,000) people have bought tickets to see the greatest of all motion pictures, which cost its producer, David W. Griffith, over $500,000.

The Clansman film will hold the screen at the White theater for the balance of this week, with matinees Saturday and Sunday at 2:30. Next week will be the final week and it is safe to predict big crowds during the entire engagement.

Nothing approaching "The Clansman" film in point of vividness, historical value and elaborate action has ever been produced.

In the twelve reels embracing the story, the South is shown before, during and after that great crisis in American history, the Civil War. The great battle scenes portray thousands of soldiers in a gigantic death struggle, and if the portrayal seems too vivid, too real, it is to the end that war be held in abhorrence and universal peace promoted.

From an educational standpoint, every school child in the city should see "The Clansman." In the three hours passed in seeing it, a more lasting impression of the South's history is obtained than could be found in scores of volumes in many months of reading.

RESNO (Cal.) REPUBLICAN
SEPT. 24, 1915

Mail Review
Toronto Ont
9-27-15

and photo-plays and special film features complete the bill.

At the Alexandra.

Prolonging its engagement to accommodate the vast crowds that are visiting the Alexandra Theatre daily "The Birth of a Nation," D. W. Griffith's mammoth film spectacle, inaugurates the second week of its engagement with a popular price matinee this afternoon. Never before has such a sensational drama graced the boards of a Toronto theatre. Its five thousand individual scenes are made more impressive by the musical accompaniment that is played by a symphony orchestra. During the week performances will be given afternoon and evening with no advance in prices.

THAD STEVENS IN "BIRTH OF NATION"

Many inquiries have reached the Times Office regarding the character of "Stoneman," one of the leading figures in "The Birth of a Nation," which played to capacity houses at the Trent last week. For the information of the many interested in the subject, it may be stated that Thaddeus Stevens, Republican leader in the House of Representatives during the Civil War period, seems to have been the original of the fanatical champion of equal rights in the picture play. The characterization is overdrawn, but not more so that is frequently done in order to achieve dramatic strength. President Lincoln and Thad Stevens, as he was generally called, were very much opposed in their ideas as to the proper policy to follow in the reconstruction of the South. Growing out of the production of "The Birth of a Nation," a little controversy has sprung up in the New York Sun touching Mr. Stevens' relations with his colored housekeeper and his alleged burial by her side. The following, which appeared Friday from a Stevens admirer, will be read with interest by those who witnessed last week's production at the Trent:

"To the Editor of The Sun:

"Sir—Several weeks ago there appeared in your 'Questions and Answers' column an extract from a letter from the Rev. Thomas Dixon reflecting severely upon the character of Thaddeus Stevens. May I draw attention to the most glaring of his misstatements?

"Thaddeus Stevens was a bachelor who preferred to live in his own home rather than at a hotel. His housekeeper was a colored woman named Lydia Smith, not Brown, a small error, but characteristic of the inaccuracies of the entire letter. On this slender basis of fact Mr. Dixon makes the charge that Stevens lived for fifteen years in open adultery with his housekeeper. Whether the inference was drawn by the author from the customs of his own country or the bent of his own mind, it is wholly without foundation in truth.

"Stevens is not buried in a negro cemetery. He is buried in Shreiner's Cemetery, at the corner of West Chestnut and North Mulberry Streets, Lancaster, Pa. He chose it as his last resting place because it was the only cemetery in the city of Lancaster which in its charter did not discriminate against the colored race. As a matter of fact, so far as I have been able to learn, and I have lived her 22 years, and have made careful inquiry, no negroes are or ever have been buried in this cemetery.

"Lydia Smith, Steven's housekeeper, is not buried at his side or even in the same cemetery. For a number of years before his death Stevens was an invalid; his housekeeper was a loyal and faithful servant, and in his will Stevens remembered her with a moderate legacy, not incommensurate with her services. The bulk of his estate went to endow an industrial school for boys in this city, which the State of Pennsylvania has recently taken over as a State institution, and in which the benevolent plans of the "Great Commoner" are being carried into effect.

"During his lifetime Stevens was always more than a match for his enemies and detractors. Were he alive Mr. Dixon would not have dared to bark at him, much less attack him. Thaddeus Stevens' whole life was dedicated to the cause of human liberty, and I protest against the attempt to write these slanders into his life and history.

"WILLIAM H. KELLER.

"Lancaster, Pa., Sept. 22."

The Rev. Mr. Dixon mentioned above is the author of "The Clansman," the story of which forms the basis for "The Birth of a Nation."

PRAISE CRITICISM OF "NATION" FILM

To the Editor of the Times.

Sir—We have read with great satisfaction an article which appeared in your valuable paper, from the pen of the Rev. Hamilton Schuyler, upon the photoplay, "The Birth of a Nation." After writing only a very short paragraph on the spectacular features of the play, which are used to cloak the real object—the perpetuation of race antagonism—the good Christian gentleman fearlessly attacks the propaganda to its rotten core and lays bare, that all may feel the slanderous efforts of a distorted brain to assassinate a peaceful, law-abiding race.

We wish to thank him most sincerely for his open statements and the fairmindedness that led him to give frank expression to the truth. We feel greatly encouraged to know there is at least one man of his standing and position who has the courage of his convictions. We are compelled to suffer so many humiliations and injustices, and so often find the pulpit and the press silent and dumb upon the deepest injuries that come to us that we feel grateful beyond expression when we find there are those who have such ideas as the reveernd gentleman has expressed and the manhood to tell them to the world.

Could we but get such sentiments to prevail as were so ably expressed in the article to which we refer, race hatred would die and the rights of man be vindicated.

T. EDWARD KINNEY.
REV. SOLOMON PORTER HOOD.
REV. J. A. WHITE.
REV. W. H. BATCHELOR.
DR. PAUL A. COLLINS.
Trenton, N. J. Sept. 27 1915.

Pittsburg Chronicle Tele. Sept 27

Showing Sherman's March to the Sea.

SCENE FROM "THE BIRTH OF A NATION."

One of the most picturesque scenes in "The Birth of a Nation," is that showing Gen. Sherman's march to the sea and ending with the burning of the city of Atlanta. As far as the eye can reach one sees the army of Gen. Sherman moving onward toward the sea. Finally Atlanta is reached. Whether the burning of the city was a military necessity, or whether the conflagration was of accidental origin, chronicles of the time fail to agree, but Atlanta was sacrificed to the flames and the conflagration is so realistically pictured in "The Birth of a Nation" that one can almost smell the smoke and hear the cries of the terrified people as they flee for their lives.

PITTSBURG (Pa.) CHRONICLE
SEPT. 27, 1915

Showing Sherman's March to the Sea.

SCENE FROM "THE BIRTH OF A NATION."

One of the most picturesque scenes in "The Birth of a Nation," is that showing Gen. Sherman's march to the sea and ending with the burning of the city of Atlanta. As far as the eye can reach one sees the army of Gen. Sherman moving onward toward the sea. Finally Atlanta is reached. Whether the burning of the city was a military necessity, or whether the conflagration was of accidental origin, chronicles of the time fail to agree, but Atlanta was sacrificed to the flames and the conflagration is so realistically pictured in "The Birth of a Nation" that one can almost smell the smoke and hear the cries of the terrified people as they flee for their lives.

BRIDGEPORT (Conn.) POST
SEPT. 27, 1915

LILLIAN GISH FIGURES IN "THE BIRTH OF A NATION"

LILLIAN GISH.

One of the most effective minor scenes in "The Birth of a Nation" coming to Poli's next Monday, October 4, shows Miss Elsie Stoneman, daughter of the "Great Commoner" who led Congress in Lincoln's time, playing a guitar to solace a wounded rebel officer in the Patents' office hospital.

"I haven't known you long," says the little Confederate colonel, Ben Cameron, "but I have carried you about with me for years and years." [illegible] a half-faded daguerreotype girl, a picture she had given her brother and which had fallen into Ben's hands.

Soothed by her kindness, Ben makes a rapid recovery. In the second half of the story, the scene of which shifts to South Carolina, they are sweethearts in the dread time of the second Southern uprising. To portray the fine flower of Northern womanhood throughout the whole troublous era is the task of Miss Lillian Gish as Elsie Stoneman in this play.

Miss Gish is of the "golden aureole" blonde type which makes for photographic beauty. She is singularly graceful, and her features never lose their piquancy in indoor or outdoor scenes. The eyes before the camera are most expressive. The acting conveys sincerity as well as true feminine charm—at least so the New York critics thought.

Both Lillian and Dorothy Gish (the two being sisters) are the favorite actresses of the studios where D. W. Griffith, director of "The Birth of a Nation" does most of his work. It took eight months to stage the Civil War and Reconstruction epic. As Elsie Stoneman figures in hundreds of scenes from the early war-time to the end of Reconstruction and her marriage to Ben, Lillian Gish had hardly an idle moment.

[illegible]FIELD (Mass.) ITEM
SEPT. 27, 1915

AMUSI

MAJESTIC THEATRE.

Supposing that you were given the opportunity at a ridiculously small price—considering the spectacle offered—to occupy a reserved seat in a grand stand which commanded a fine view of such historic scenes as the actual Battle of Gettysburg, Sherman's March to the Sea, the last stand at Petersburg, the Assassination of President Lincoln in Ford's Theatre, Lee's Surrender to Grant, the tragic and wild rides of the Ku Klux Klans, the destruction of entire cities by fire, wonderful artillery duels, miles of trench fighting, in fact war as it actually is—would you not jump at the opportunity?

You undoubtedly would. Well, that is practically just what is offered to the spectator in "The Birth of a Nation," now showing at the Majestic Theatre.

[illegible] of othe[illegible]

TRENTON (N. J.) GAZETTE
SEPT. 27, 1915

21,000 ATTENDED SHOWS OF 'NATION' FILMS AT TRENT

Between $10,000 and $11,000 Realized by Big Spectacle—Success Due to Advertising Campaign.

4,000 WERE TURNED AWAY

Upwards of 21,000 people saw the exhibitions at the Trent theatre last week of "The Birth of a Nation," and between $10,000 and $11,000 comprised the gross receipts for the week, according to the figures compiled at the box office at the conclusion of the engagement Saturday night.

These amounts mean the establishment of new records for the theatre and for theatricals generally in Trenton, each shattering the previous record to a point that seems almost exaggerated. The previous attendance record was held by "The Three Twins" company, which filled a week's engagement at Taylor Opera House five seasons ago, which attraction also held the record for gross receipts. The figures then were about 18,000 attendance and $7,500 receipts.

The attendance figures for "The Birth of a Nation" were arrived at by the addition of the capacities of the three lower and upper floors. The lower floor seats 592; the balcony, 366; the gallery, 500, and the boxes 60, making a total of about 1,500. There were twelve presentations, including the special morning show Saturday, and capacity was the rule at eleven of them. The other was close to capacity. In addition to this, standing room was sold to 4,000 patrons during the week.

It is figured that more than 4,000 people were turned away, either unable to buy suitable seats or refusing to pay the prices asked for the production. The telephone companies reported that more than 2,000 calls were connected with the theatre wires during the week. Taken altogether, it is considered that upwards of 25,000 people approached the box office during the week, there having been a continuous line of patrons in the lobby from early Tuesday morning until Friday afternoon. On Saturday the management was forced to ask the services of city policemen to keep the lines from blockading sidewalk and street traffic.

Much of the success incident to the local engagement is unquestionably due to the extensive advertising campaign carried on by Manager Moses and "The Birth of a Nation" company. Never before in the history of the city has a theatrical enterprise set forth its wares more extensively, and Manager Moses believes this had a great deal to do with the unusual triumph. Of the local newspapers, 803 inches of advertising space were purchased to exploit the huge spectacle, the cost being between $500 and $600.

Although no date has been set, it is considered a certainty that the production will fill a return engagement at the Trent theatre within the next two months. The management feels that there were hundreds of patrons disappointed, owing to their inability to see the picture, and that they would rally to the support of a plan to bring it back for another week.

The company in charge of the local production went from here to Norfolk, Va., where it will be seen this week.

PORTLAND (Me.) EXPRESS ADV.
SEPT. 27, 1915

THE BIRTH OF A NATION.

With today's matinee, The Birth of a Nation returns to the B. F. Keith Theatre for another week's run with two performances daily at 2 and 8 p. m. This is the wonderful motion picture drama which packed the popular playhouse to the doors during its recent engagement, turning hundreds away at every performance. Twenty-five thousand people saw the tremendous spectacle and the seat sale indicates that 25,000 more are going to Keith's again this week. The reason for this record breaking attendance is that all press advance reports fail to do justice to this truly stupendous and mighty spectacle. The spectator goes to see it with expectations raised to the nth-degree of anticipation and at the end as the spectator leaves the theater, feels that every promise has more than been fulfilled and that no word description is adequate to do the picture justice.

From all over the State letters are being received reserving seats and the coming week will probably even break the record established by it before although it is well nigh impossible to house any more people than previously, so there is bound to be late theatergoers again disappointed in being unable to secure seats.

The Birth of a Nation's praises have been sung so extensively that it would seem that everyone must know about it. It is the mightiest panorama and pictorial exposition of the most vital points of American history, combined with a tremendously dramatic story and love romance against which the great forces of history serve as a background. As a work of art it is so grand and stupendous that words fail a writer, for its beauty and wonderful execution of production robs one of the power of criticism. Hundreds of local theatergoers who have already seen this great epic of the film are buying tickets to see it again for it is a picture that can be seen again and again. It sways an audience as no drama has ever done in our history of the American stage. Those who fail to see it do themselves an injustice. It is for children, adults, everyone.—Advertisement.

CLIPPING FROM Press
Portland Me.
9-27-15

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION."

Commencing with the matinee today at 2 p. m., and the evening performance at 8, the wonderful picture-drama, "The Birth of a Nation" enters upon a week's engagement at the B. F. Keith theatre with two performances daily. This great spectacle holds the record of attendance for not only Keith's theatre but for every theatre in Portland; twenty-five thousand people having packed the largest theatre in Maine to the doors at every performance during its recent engagement. The seat sale for the present run indicates that again capacity houses will be the rule and the wise theatregoer will make his reservations at once.

"The Birth of a Nation" gives the facts of history with a straightforwardness and fidelity for truth that has caused many to protest, for in the South the histories studied by the children give an entirely different version of the great struggle of 1861 than that which is given in the schools of the North. The sidelights on history, the various episodes that are visualized for the spectator are all authentic. Not only did David W. Griffith have the Brady pictures of actual battles and events to fall back upon, as well as the leading generals, officers and soldiers of that great strife who are now living to describe and assist in absolute accuracy being obtained, but he also had the aid of the United States government. The spectator realizes after seeing this picture that he has learned as never before more actual history of the civil war than he ever knew before.

The question will arise in the minds of many: "Why are so many facts kept from the students in the schools of the North, and why should the people of the South be given a different version than the people of the North? Why shouldn't there be one history for the entire country and that history absolutely truthful unvarnished to suit the prejudices and sympathies of either class. Must it remain for the motion pictures to give the people of the world the real truth of history and other educational matters? It would seem so. And if it must be let there be more pictures like "The Birth of a Nation." Don't forget there are two performances daily all this week, and unless one wishes to be disappointed, now is the time to secure your seats as later it will be a repetition of the last engagement, hundreds turned away at every performance.

BRIDGEPORT (Conn.) TELEGRAM 101
SEPT. 27, 1915

THE BRIDGEPORT TELEGRAM

GREAT FILM SCENE IS TRUE TO LIFE

Release of Young Confederate, Shown in "Birth of a Nation" Based on Fact.

The incident of the young Confederate's release by President Lincoln's order, which gets a round of enthusiastic handclapping when presented in "The Birth of a Nation," which comes to Poli's next Monday was verified as an actual historical event by one of the spectators. G. L. Mordecai of 174 West Eighty-sixth street is the man to whom it happened. During the New York run of the play he visited D. W. Griffith's offices and told this remarkable story:

"My father, a wealthy trader of Charleston, S. C., was engaged in extensive blockade-running operations between the Confederacy and the Bahama Islands. I had served in the Confederate army, but had been honorably discharged on account of sickness. My father then wanted me to go as his agent to Nassau. The only channel of intercourse was closed, however, when the Federals captured Fort Fisher, so father suggested that I should try to slip through the northern lines and thence take steamer from New York.

"In civilian dress I managed to elude the Union pickets in Virginia, crossed the Potomac, took stage for Washington, but in the latter place I was arrested and thrown into prison as a Confederate enemy. It was feared that I would be court-martialled and executed or at best held prisoner until the close of the war. My fiancee's father, Alderman Samuel Lewis of New York, later acting mayor, came to Washington and worked in my behalf. Notwithstanding Secretary Stanton's opposition, he succeeded in convincing President Lincoln that I was not a spy. 'I will release the young man,' said Mr. Lincoln, 'on one condition, that he takes oath not to return to the Southern States during the war.'

"I gladly took this oath and was released. Before leaving for the north for my marriage and residence in Alderman Lewis' family, I desired to thank President Lincoln. On being presented to Mr. Lincoln, I remember he shook me by the hand and said: 'I am happy to know that I have been able to serve an enemy.' I have never forgotten the great president's generosity and kindheartedness to a foe, and when I saw the picture that early experience was vividly unearthed."

LINCOLN PORTRAYED IN GREAT FILM PICTURE

Joseph Henabery as Abraham Lincoln in "The Birth of a Nation."

MILWAUKEE (Wis.) LEADER
SEPT. 27, 1915

DAVIDSON—MOVIES.

"The Birth of a Nation" is this week's attraction in the Davidson, playing its second return engagement since its summer run in the same playhouse.

It is D. W. Griffith's masterpiece and generally recognized as the greatest motion picture spectacle ever staged. With thousands of persons participating, realistic battle scenes and historical atmosphere, interest is kept at top notch throughout the three hours' run of the picture.

The musical setting leaves nothing to be desired. On this return engagement the music is rendered by an orchestra considerably larger than that which was heard during the summer, with the result that the musical score is vastly more impressive than before.

F. H.

DALLAS (Tex.) HERALD
SEPT. 26, 1915

"The Birth Of a Nation"

D. W. Griffith's mighty spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," opens a run of two weeks at the Dallas Opera house Monday night, October 4. There will be daily matinees after the opening. The prices at night will be 50 cents to $2, and at the matinees the scale of 50 cents to $1 will prevail. These prices are the same as are being charged in New York, Boston and Chicago, where "The Birth of a Nation" has runs to its credit that eclipse the career of "Ben-Hur." Theaters have been leased in both Chicago and New York to continue the runs for at least one more year.

This attraction is credited with working a revolution in theatricals. It can not be classed with moving pictures, since its grand operatic score lifts it into the concert field, and since its musical and sound interpretations are said to make the 5,000 scenes of rapidly flitting drama appeal to the ear as strikingly as to the eye. Besides Mr. Griffith is credited with some marvelous inventions in photography, especially in the night effects, that lift his scenes into the ranks of an art that the basic theme is historical in its foundation, its intent is the fundamental one of true drama. The forces which make for those results have been marshaled upon a larger scale than was ever dreamed of before. Where directors of vast spectacles have dealt with hundreds in the past Griffith employs thousands. Eighteen thousand people fill his stage which has a vast territory for its background. Three thousand horses pass before your view in wild dashes over miles of country roadway. The decisive battles of the civil war are reproduced in faithful detail, and you see these conflicts fought again just as they were waged fifty years ago. Cities were built up only to be destroyed to lend force and verity the dramatic narrative. One enormous battlefield is shown stretching over an area of ten square miles, and upon these plains and trenches 10,000 soldiers clash in a mimic warfare that is as real as if you were an eye-witness to the actual occurrence. Holding the great effects in tether is a story as tender and true as love and romance can be pictured. There are tears and smiles, noble sacrifices and heroic deeds of personal valor. Youthful dreams of love's fruition are rent asunder by the demons of war; home ties snap before the call to arms, and suffering such as can not be imagined is depicted in the crude manner that history is made when men surrender reason to passion and engage in a deadlock of armed resistance.

You see the war start after being shown the causes which precipitated it. You see the great generals of the contending sections playing their desperate games of human pawns moved into the field of slaughter. Then comes the agreement for peace, and Lincoln sets about his superhuman task of healing the wounds by the great love which made him the towering figure of his age. A fanatic's bullet stills the heart which beat so evenly for all humanity. The South is thrown back into a worse fate than war. Their lands are overrun by a hungry horde of vengeful politicians and grafters. The negro is cajoled into a false understanding of liberty, and in his ignorance is led into excesses by these scalawags of fortune. Out of it come the ghastly-garbed crusaders of a terrible era to once more set things aright and return the lands and liberties of peace to their rightful owners, and over the land's miserere sounds the chorus of brotherly love in an allegorical dream which visions the reunion of the divided sections and the welding of that national spirit that has made this nation so great after its baptism in its own blood.

VISALIA (Cal.) DELTA
SEPT. 23, 1915

1307

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION" HISTORICALLY PORTRAYED IN "THE CLANSMAN" COMING HERE

ONE OF THE ALL-STAR CAST IN "THE CLANSMAN"

D. W. Griffith's latest achievement, "The Clansman," in twelve reels, will be the attraction at Theatre Visalia for six nights, commencing Monday October 4. The film is based on the famous novel by Thomas Dixon, Jr., but it deals more broadly on its historical side with the life of the American nation than does the play or the book. "The Clansman" is the greatest and most spectacular motion picture ever produced. It is said to have cost half a million dollars and required seven months to make. Historically and technically "The Clansman" is perfect. A well known professor of history in one of the California colleges worked three months in securing historical data for this film production. The interior of the famous Ford's Opera House in Washington, D. C., where the assassination of President Lincoln took place, is the most gorgeous theatre scene ever put on by any producer. It is an exact replica of the old Ford, including stage, orchestra pit, furnishings, and all other equipment of that famous and historical playhouse. This scene was built from the most authentic paintings that could be secured, and is identical with the original theater in size. On the stage are seen the same characters that were there the night the assassination took place. The same play that was staged that night is also depicted in the film production.

This motion picture classic, "The Clansman," carries the spectator through the Civil War and the Reconstruction Period that followed. It shows the causes responsible for the war and treats impartially the problems that confronted both the North and South prior to and after the conflict.

The night battle scenes represent the greatest feat ever accomplished in the history of motion photography. The burning of the entire city of Atlanta at night is graphically shown in the picture. Sherman's march to the sea; the siege before Petersburg, and Lee's surrender to Grant, are all faithfully portrayed before the camera. The famous raids of the Ku Klux Klan, with thousands of these white-hooded riders in action are shown, and this magnificent spectacle has opened a new world of possibilities in the motion picture art. "The Clansman" is a powerful plea for universal peace, and finishes with an allegorical climax that is one of the strongest sermons against the horrors of war that could possibly be arranged.

Included in the all-star cast presenting "The Clansman" are the following principals: Henry Walthall, Mae Marsh, Miriam Cooper, Josephine Crowell, Spottiswoode Aitken, Ralph Lewis, Lillian Gish, Elmer Clifton, Robert Harron, George Seigmann, Walter Long, Mary Alden, Joseph Henneberry, Samuel de Grasse, Howard Gaye, Donald Crisp, William de Vaull, and Jennie Lee.

FRESNO (Cal.) REPUBLICAN
SEPT. 23, 1915

"THE CLANSMAN" IS HISTORICALLY PERFECT

Miriam Cooper As Margaret Cameron In "The Clansman"—White Theater

Portraying the darkest chapter in American history, "The Clansman," the greatest picture ever produced, is now playing at the White theater to crowded houses nigthly this week. "The Clansman" has greater popular appeal than any picture ever made. This is proven by the fact that over 300,000 people witnessed this masterpiece at Clune's Auditorium in Los Angeles during the twelve weeks of its run. From the finest detail shown in the little scenes to the utter magnitude of the big scenes, "The Clansman" stands unequaled. The direction is masterly. D. W. Griffith is a past master of depth and detail. The effect of light and shade, the use of the "close-up," the trick of double exposure, are handled as only he can handle them.

Historically, "The Clansman" is perfect. A student of history can gain more from the few hours necessary to witness this wonderful production than from months of careful study of books. To miss seeing "The Clansman" would be to miss part of one's education.

St. Louis Star Sept 25

FIFTH WEEK OF "THE BIRTH OF A NATION."

Having cast a sickly hue over all former box office records for extended runs of a theatrical attraction, "The Birth of a Nation" enters upon the final week of its original booking at the Olympic Theater tomorrow. By special arrangement, however, the Griffith spectacle of Civil War and reconstruction days is to be held over for the week of the Veiled Prophet. Already mail orders are pouring into the Olympic Theater box office from out-of-town sources, and the indications are that "The Birth of a Nation" will establish that week in St. Louis a new high record in its own marvelous career.

"The Birth of a Nation" will be far form the least of the attractions for Veiled Prophet week, as recognized by the committees having the festivities in charge, who are endorsing the spectacle in their official literature. Its appeal as amusement is universal, and it has a special added appeal in a community like St. Louis and the surrounding territory, which felt intimately the tragedy of war and worse than war portrayed. The great battle scenes and the mad rides of the Ku Klux Klansmen have stirred the blood of the spectators as it has not been stirred in many long years.

TRENTON (N. J.) TIMES
SEPT. 25, 1915

"NATION" PICTURE BREAKS RECORDS

More theatrical records have been broken by the photoplay production, "The Birth of a Nation," at the Trent Theatre. One thousand eight hundred and seventy-eight calls have been answered over the telephones for ticket orders.

That advertising pays is shown by the receipts of the house which will reach about $10,000. More money was spent for newspaper publicity for this production than for any that has ever been given here. A total of $500 was devoted to this purpose, but the resulting patronage more than compensated for the outlay.

The theatre is sold out for today and an extra performance had to be given this morning.

PAWTUCKET (R. I.) TIMES
SEPT. 25, 19

Providence Opera

HENRY WALTHALL
In "Birth of a Nation," at the Providence Opera House Next Week.

"The Birth of a Nation," D. W. Griffith's sensational photo play, will be shown at the Opera House all of next week, Col. Wendelschaefer having made arrangements for another week's engagement here. This photoplay was shown [illegible] last week and drew capacity audiences at every performance. The demand for seats was so large that Col. Wendelschaefer set out to secure another engagement and succeeded. All the features will be seen with the photoplay next week. The special orchestra of 25 pieces, and courtesy girls and the hundred men behind the scenes necessary to make the suitable noises as the pictures are thrown on the screen will be here again. The performances will be given daily, opening Monday afternoon.

"The Birth of a Nation," a Civil War drama, is founded on "The Clansman," by Thomas Dixon. It is said to employ more attendants and workers before and behind the curtain than 75 per cent. of the legitimate attractions. It requires 25 men behind the scenes to produce the roars of battle, the pounding of horses' hoofs and other appropriate noises as the pictures are flashed on the screen. Ten more men are kept busy as clearers. The orchestra, which plays specially written music for the pictures, is larger than that carried by some of the big musical shows. Fifteen musicians were brought here from Boston because they were familiar with the music, and 10 local men were added to these.

Mr. Griffith's theme is the development of the nation and its relationship to the part the slavery problem played in bringing about Daniel Webster's prophecy, "One and Indivisible." The action begins with the introduction of slavery into the colonies. Then comes the abolition movement, then the stirring times leading to the secession of the southern states. The audience is carried through the four years of strife to the death of President Lincoln in Ford's Theatre. The eight years of reconstruction form the final episodes in a drama of history, romance and emotion. Its termination is an allegorical picture of the coming permanent peace and the settlement of all local differences.

To get these varied incidents into the drama the producer used 18,000 people and 3000 horses.

CLIPPING FROM News
Milwaukee Wis
9-25-15.

—)o(—

DAVIDSON—

"The Birth of a Nation"

For the week beginning Sunday afternoon, the Davidson theater announces a return engagement of the wonderful film spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," which during a record-breaking summer run at that theater establishes a new record in Milwaukee's theatrical annals. The film will be shown twice daily as before, at 2:15 o'clock in the afternoons and 8:10 o'clock in the evenings. The big orchestra of forty pieces will again render the musical setting which contributes so largely to the impressiveness of the pictured drama.

Much has been said and written of this masterpiece of motion photography but it is impossible to convey by words an adequate idea of the magnitude and impressiveness of the pictures. The fact that a year was required in the preparation of the film; that thousands of men and women were enlisted in the big scenes; that 3,000 horses were used and that the production is said to have entailed an expenditure of $500,000 before it was ready to be presented to the public are all startling, but they do not begin to indicate the wonders of the pictures themselves. For the entire three hours during which the film runs the audience is held spell-bound by a succession of wonderful battle scenes; historical events that thrill the heart of every American; dashing and exciting pictures of the southern clansmen, representations of the turbulent reconstruction days and other scenes of enthralling interest, all held together by an intensely moving heart interest story dealing with the life of a southern family during and after the great struggle from which a united nation was born.

Some of the historical events depicted are the signing of the call for troops by President Lincoln, the surrender of Lee, Sherman's march to the sea, Lincoln's assassination and several White House scenes showing the martyred president surrounded by his advisers. The night scenes of battles are not only thrilling but viewed technically are marvels of photographic inventiveness. The principal parts are taken by film players of international reputation who carry the story through with most convincing authority.

PAR

Lone Tuerk.

An interesting feature of the entertainment is the war-time atmosphere which pervades the theater.

MILWAUKEE (Wis.) WISCONSIN
SEPT. 25, 1915

EMPRESS—Burlesque. Polo and Pollock from pantaloons Sunday afternoon. Matinee daily.
BUTTERFLY—Pictures.
ALHAMBRA—Pictures.
TOR—Pictures.

DAVIDSON.

Opening Sunday afternoon, the Davidson announces a return engagement of "the Birth of a Nation," the gigantic motion picture spectacle which has aroused such remarkable interest in Milwaukee and elsewhere in the state and which during its summer run at the Davidson set a new mark in Milwaukee's theatrical annals. The film will be presented just as before, with the war time setting greeting the visitor at the entrance; the great orchestra of forty pieces rendering the musical accompaniment and all the other features that go to make up the most remarkable offering ever produced by the genius of motion photography.

The martyred Lincoln in these wonderful scenes returns to life and the spectator sees him at work in his library during the period of the nation's greatest stress; they see him sign the call for troops which brought thousands of men to the colors; they see him fall in Ford's theater, the victim of the assassin's bullet. They see the immortal Grant as he receives the surrender of Lee which brought an end to the struggle. They see the onward sweep of Sherman's army as it marched from Atlanta to the sea. They are spectators of battles by day and by night—battles which extend over miles of territory. They see the turbulent life in the south during the reconstruction period. They see the wild rides of the southern clansmen in their struggle against the conditions imposed on their home land. And through it all they are gripped and held by a strong heart interest story of a southern family whose fortunes are so bound up in the greater events of the times as to become a part of the nation's epoch making conflict.

Much has been said and written of this gigantic spectacle. But the facts that it required a year in preparation; that it enlisted the services of 18,000 men and women, 3,000 horses, military paraphernalia and other equipment by the ton; that new photographic plans and devices were invented to make possible some of the almost miraculous achievements of the producer, and that half a million dollars were expended in preparing it, do not convey an adequate idea of its magnitude and its compelling interest.

The production is valuable as a lesson in history and for the grammar school scholar is an invaluable adjunct to his study. It shows the leading episodes of the civil war, its decisive battles, Lee and Grant at Appomattox Sherman's march to the sea, the assassination of President Lincoln and the terrible period immediately following the war in the reconstruction days.

To avoid disappointment, theatregoers should reserve their seats at once for during its previous engagement hundreds were turned away at every performance and all indications point to a repetition of the record breaking attendance.

Cordial greetings are being extended to Mrs. Archibald Morrison Stone (Miss Lillian Harmon) of Wahan, Massachusetts, who arrived Tuesday for a series of visits with friends.

(UKEE (Wis.) NEWS
SEPT. 25, 1915

DAVIDSON

Assassination of Abraham Lincoln in "The Birth of a Nation."

PORTLAND (Me.) PRESS
SEPT. 26, 1915

S AND TIMES, SUNDAY

BIRTH OF A NATION RETURNS TO KEITHS

Wonderful Picture Spectacle To Be Seen Again This Week.

Portland is agog over the engagement next week of D. W. Griffith's magnificent spectacle "The Birth of a Nation" which is the gigantic offering at the B. F. Keith theatre with daily matinees. When one stops to consider that this extraordinary photo-spectacle has played to capacity houses at the Tremont theatre, Boston for twenty weeks, and again at the Majestic theatre for another long run and still the public is pouring into Boston to see the marvelous pictorial wonder, it must be imagined that there is something to this production that is not to be found in any other offering of the stage today. No such tremendous record of patronage has ever been known for an amusement enterprise before. Thousands are going to see it again and again and each time the same tremendous enthusiasm is expressed for the marvel.

The Boston Globe critic, in passing upon the work said: "As a work of art it is so wonderful and so beautiful and so full of life that it robs one of the power of criticism. It is a great work first, last and all the time, and it stamps Mr. Griffith as a master artist in whom the power of visual interpretation reaches a height that cannot be easily comprehended at one sitting. In such a man there must be the imagination of the poet, the creative power of the artist, and with these the genius of the architect, the dramatist, and the modern stage manager, who understands all the subtleties of stage effects in their relations to human emotions. You are lost in amazement at the acting of these hundreds and hundreds of people in this drama." "The Birth of a Nation" is a picture that satisfies the desires of every class of people. To the mere amusement seeker, it opens up fields of action and heart interest that sends the blood rushing through the entire body, its thrills are big thrills, and the patriotic fervor with which the subject inspires all is felt long after the performance is over. To the historian, there is a new knowledge of facts and conditions during the troublesome times of the Great Rebellion and the Reconstruction Days that is not to be found in ordinary histories. To the lovers of the spectacular there are scenes of such gigantic magnitude as to make one feel almost lost in it all. One gazes with amazement at the thrilling scenes of battle, the terrible carnage and horror of war; the awful destruction in the ranks of the soldiers as they blindly charge against the defences of the opposite forces. Such terrible realism has never before been shown in a spectacle of any kind. In the battles real shells, costing $80 apiece, are used, and the spectator sees these tear into the ranks dealing death and destruction to hundreds. Shells are seen to strike and burst, throwing clouds of dust, dirt and rocks in all directions, while soldiers are terribly maimed and wounded, arms and legs swept away, and when the awful battle scenes are over, the spectator is apt to say, yes, quite sure to say: "War! Good Heavens, who wants it?" And yet as terrible as these scenes are shown to be, it is known that war as carried on in the present day is ten times more terrible and destructive.

If "The Birth of a Nation" has no other mission, it will surely impress all with the seriousness of war and will fill everybody with a desire to avoid it unless only as a last resort.

The scenes presented before the spectator are without equal in any kind of a production ever offered the public. Such massive and masterful presentations as Sherman's March to the Sea; The Burning of Atlanta; The Surrender of Lee to Grant; The Assassination of Lincoln; have all been handled in such a way that it seems as though one is transported back to the days of the great conflict and is actually seeing these inspiring scenes which have formed such an important epoch in our nation's history.

The wild rides of the Ku Klux Klan will ever be remembered by all, as these daring horsemen dash along, scaling high mountains, daring the dangers of the steep roads, the sharp turns, etc. Such horsemanship is not to be seen in these days and as hundreds of these dare-devils sweep along, one feels a desire to rise and cheer, so intensely inspiring is the scene.

The musical score of this wonderful triumph will cause a furore among the music lovers of this city. Twenty picked musicians under the direction of an able director will render a musical accompaniment that will add many fold to the intenseness of the scenes. One who has not enjoyed a spectacle accompanied with synchronized music cannot appreciate the marked difference it makes in the appreciation of it all.

Olympic Theater.

"The Birth of a Nation" will enter upon its fifth week at the Olympic Theater to-day. This was to have been the final week of its St. Louis booking, but as it has proven the best drawing card the Olympic has ever housed, special arrangements have been made to hold the spectacle over for the week of the fall festivities.

The audiences at the Olympic during the four weeks of the engagement of "The Birth of a Nation" have been made up of St. Louis people and suburbanites in about equal numbers. The fame of the spectacle of Civil War and reconstruction days has spread universally in all directions within a radius of a hundred miles, and the interurban roads have noticed a marked increase in patronage, it is said. The record for distant travel has been established by a Louisiana man, who brought his family to St. Louis especially to see this production. Indiana and Wisconsin have contributed to the audiences.

Date 9-27-15

night performance.

photo when you purchase seats ... Friday night.—adv.

Coming "The Birth of a Nation"

Short runs falling off to almost nothing at the close have been the invariable rule with motion pictures hitherto.

The film spectacle of "The Birth of a Nation" which comes to the Empire theatre on Monday, Oct. 4th, for an entire week is not a feature in the ordinary sense, but a mighty panorama and pictorial exposition of the most vital points of American history which are particularly interesting to Americans now on account of the threatened complications with a foreign power. Super-added to history is a delightful love romance of the North and South, whilst the whole is lit up and made fascinating by Mr. Griffith's remarkable gift of quiet humor and keen eye for the slightest significant detail. Indeed there are said to be no less than 200,000 details in the picture.

"As a work of art it is wonderful and so beautiful and so full of life that it robs one of the power of criticism. It is a great work, first, last and all the time, and it stamps Mr. Griffith as a master artist in whom the power of visual interpretation reaches a height that cannot easily be comprehended at one sitting. You see a whole battlefield covered by thousands of men.

There is no drama on the American speaking stage in our history that has ever swayed an audience as does "The Birth of a Nation."—adv.

Date Augusta, Ga. 9 26 15

©1915—HARTSOOK, L.A.
Mae Marsh

MAE MARSH, who figures prominently in "The Birth of a Nation," film classic, is a keen admirer of the works of Edgar Allen Poe. Next to Poe, in her estimation, comes O. Henry, for short stories. Miss Marsh is never seen without a book in hand, when not actively engaged in picture acting.

PROVIDENCE (R. I.) JOURNAL
SEPT. 27, 1915

At the Theatres.

"The Birth of a Nation" begins its farewell week at the Providence Opera House with the matinee this afternoon. This is the fifth week that the film spectacle has been presented in this city. Seldom have motion pictures attracted so much notoriety as this one, while it is doubtful if any photoplay has been seen by so many people. The presentation is made more realistic by the work of a special orchestra of 25 pieces and 5000 pounds of mechanical devices, which are operated by means of an electrical switchboard. In this way sound and action are synchronized. The film itself is a presentation of an historical drama founded on "The Clansman," by Thomas Dixon. It shows the North and South during the Civil War and the Reconstruction period that followed. Matinees start at 2:15 and the evening performances at 8:15.

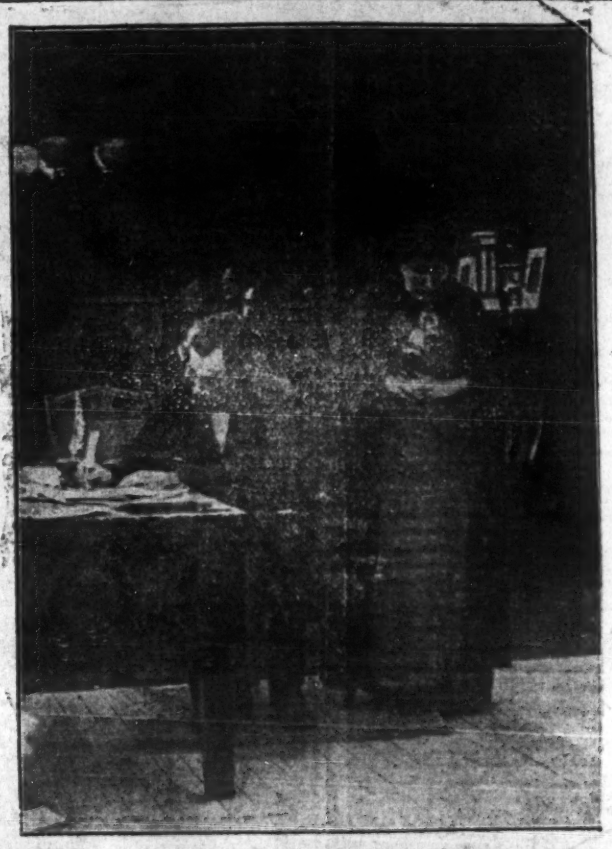
BURLINGTON (Vt.) NEWS
SEPT. 27, 1915

AMUSEMENTS

Champlin Company Opens Week's Engagement at Strong Today

Charles K. Champlin company opened its week's season at the Strong this afternoon with "The Reformer." It is the first appearance here of the Champlin Stock company, but the 15th year of unprecedented success. Matinee 2:30 p. m., daily. Tonight the play will be a strong political play, adaptable to any civic surrounding, in four acts, with all special scenery. Charlie Chaplin contest for all boys desirous of entering immediately after the performance. Night prices 10, 20, 30 and 50.

Probably the youngest leading lady with any theatrical company is Miss Edna Grandin who will be seen here all this week with the Charles K. Champlin Stock Company. Miss Grandin has been on the stage for the last five years, she has played various roles, but of all the ones that she has played none are so dear to her as the stock roles. She will give the theatregoers of Burlington a little or rather a good idea of what a young lady of her age can accomplish. At the Thursday matinee you will have an opportunity to meet Miss Grandin at the stage reception as well as other charming lady members of the company. Miss Grandin will be seen in the following roles during the week. As Dorothy Davis the daughter of an adventuress in "Beyond the Law," in the dual role of the twin sisters, Vera and Alice in "The Rosary," as Innocent the part made famous by Pauline Fredericks in the play by that name; As Maryland Clavert in the southern romance of the Civil War "The Heart of Maryland;" and as the dashing western girl Posey Parker in the "Cowboy and the Captain." Miss Grandin was 20 years old last July.



The Mothers Appeal to Lincoln In "THE BIRTH [illegible] NATION."

"The Birth of a Nation."

Griffith's big picture "The Birth of a Nation" will come to the Strong October 4-5-6-7. There will be a big orchestra of 14 pieces, and a chorus behind the scenes, while several very beautiful girls will act as ushers, to furnish local color, etc.

The picture is a dramatization of Dixon's "The Clansman." Its chief incidents are historic. The incident of the negro is responsible for the formation of the Ku-Klan which chases the carpet baggers out of the South.

"The Birth of a Nation" is said to contain 18,000 people and 3000 horses Nothing so spectacular has yet been flown upon the screen. For the first time in the history of film art you see the great historical conflict pass be-

CLIPPING FROM [illegible]
Date 9-26-15

Providence Opera House

"The Birth of a Nation," D. W. Griffith's photoplay on re-construction days, will be continued for another week at the Providence Opera House, opening with a matinee performance (Monday) to-morrow afternoon. This will be the fifth week this photoplay has been shown in this city, the first engagement consisting of three weeks and the present engagement of two weeks. This will positivly be the final week that the photoplay will be shown here.

It is not often that a photoplay audience is moved to such a pitch of enthusiasm that it applauds the action, but such is the case in this picture. Sound and action are synchronized. The special music by the orchestra of 25 pieces and the realistic sound effects produced behind the screen carry the audience from climax to climax. To produce the effects 5000 pounds of mechanical devices, controlled from a sitchboard by an electrician, are employed and a force of 20 men is required to run the various pieces of apparatus. All of the sound effects are timed to the second by the electrician, who, anticipating every movement, signals to his men by an elaborate electric light system. In this way sound anu action are synchronized.

The switchboard, which notifies the men who control the effects, has over 20 different keys, each one calling for a different sound. The effects include cannon boom, cannon rumble, church chimes, rifle shots, rifle rattle, rush of water, horse hoofs, smashing of doors and breaking of window glass. A group of 10 men produce the sounds for the mob scenes. All of the men work in complete darkness in order to read the vari-colored electric light signals correctly.

"The Birth of a Nation" is a historical drama in two parts founded on "The Clansman" by Thomas Dixon. It shows the North and the South at war and the reconstruction period. The love element is not lacking. A Northern girl, who visits in the South dismisses Col. Ben Cameron, her lover, [illegible] she discovers he belongs to the [illegible] Ku Klux Klan.

PROVIDENCE (R. I.) EVE. TRIBUNE 726
SEPT. 27, 1915

AT THE

Providence Opera House.

"The Birth of a Nation," D. W. Griffith's photoplay on re-construction days, will be continued for another week at the Providence Opera House, opening with a matinee performance this afternoon. This will be the fifth week this photoplay has been shown in this city, the first engagement consisting of three weeks and the present engagement two weeks. This will positively be the final week.

"The Birth of a Nation" is a historical drama in two parts founded on "The Clansman" by Thomas Dixon. It shows the North and the South at war and the reconstruction period. The love element is not lacking. A Northern girl, who visits in the South dismisses Col. Ben Cameron, her lover, when she discovers he belongs to the dreaded Ku Klux Klan.

It is not often that a photoplay audience is moved to such a pitch of enthusiasm that it applauds the action, but such is the case in this picture. Sound and action are synchronized. The special music by the orchestra of 25 pieces and the realistic sound effects produced behind the screen carry the audience from climax to climax. To produce the effects 5000 pounds of mechanical devices, controlled from a switchboard by an electrician, are employed and a force of 20 men is required to run the various pieces of apparatus. All of the sound effects are timed to the second by the electrician, who, anticipating every movement, signals to his men by an elaborate electric light system. In this way sound and action are synchronized.

[illegible]LAND (Vt.) NEWS
SEPT. 27, 1915

normally not be picked for three or four weeks, was blown from the trees.

Change Place Of Picture.

"Birth of a Nation" to Be Given at The Playhouse All This Week Instead of at The Shrine.

The productions of the famous motion picture, "Birth of a Nation," scheduled for all of this week at the Shrine theatre, will be given instead at The Playhouse, the management deciding that facilities were better at the Center street theatre.

Special effects in costuming, lobby decorations and other details are promised and the orchestra, which was announced as 10 men, will consist of 16.

The regular Playhouse pictures will be shown at the Colonial theatre this week, opening with the George Beban feature, "An Alien."

Tickets bought for the Shrine will be exchanged at [illegible]

CLIPPING FROM
PHILADELPHIA (PA.) PUBLIC LED[illegible]

Facts about "The Birth of a Nation"

Five thousand scenes, 18,000 characters 2000 horses; approximate cost of production, $500,000.

Cities built up and then destroyed by fire.

The biggest battle of the Civil War re enacted.

Ford's Theatre, Washington, reproduced to the smallest detail for the Lincoln tragedy.

A series of wild "Ku Klux" rides that commandeered a county for a day and cost $10,000.

Women's dresses used 25,000 yards and Ku Klux costumes 12,000 yards of cloth.

Night photography of battle scenes, invented and perfected at cost of $5000.

Wonderful artillery duels, in which real shells—costing $80 apiece—were used. Miles of trenches, thousands of fighters, "war as it actually is."

A musical score of 40 pieces, synchronized to the several thousand distinct and individual scenes.

Twelve thousand feet of film in the public picture represent 14,000 feet of actual photography.

RUTLAND (Vt.) NEWS
SEPT. 27, 1915
783

Friday evening.

Miss [illegible] Signor has returned from the sanitorium at Pittsford and is at the home of her parents, Mr.

AT THE PLAYHOUSE

Instead of the Shrine, "The Birth of a Nation" Starts Today.

For once the press agent has been undone. For years it has been his duty to employ such exaggeration in the verbal presentation of his subject as to infuse in the mind of the reader a desire to see or hear that which he tells about. But now comes "The Birth of a Nation," the gorgeous spectacle of the twentieth century and the press agent finds himself at a loss for words to describe the production even in a minor way. D. W. Griffith has stripped him of his power; exaggeration is out of the question and the writer must now work his brain overtime in order to do even meagre justice to his subject.

"The Birth of a Nation" cannot be exaggerated. It is too tremendous, too gigantic for that. There are countless scenes in it that tongue or pen cannot cope with. Only the eye alone can realize the wonderful progress the motion picture has made in this phenominal masterpiece.

It seems that everything that the brain of man could conceive has been put into this subject. 18,000 people were used in telling the story, 3000 horses and countless guns, shells, etc., utilized in its massive battle scenes. Two years time was consumed in its making and the approximate cost has been $500,000.

Imagine a pictorial production of love, romance and history, including tremendous battle scenes the equal of which have never yet been shown upon a screen, imagine such scenes as the burning of Atlanta; Sherman's march to the sea; Grant and Lee at Appomattox; the thrilling rides of the Ku Klux Klan; entire cities built up and destroyed by fire; the assassination of Lincoln at Ford's theatre, Washington; wonderful artillery duels in which real shells costing $80 apiece were used; miles and miles of trenches with thousands of fighters; cavalry charges; infantry charges; deeds of heroism on the field of battle; imagine hundreds of such mighty scenes as these and there you have "The Birt of a Nation," the pinnacle of filmed spectacles.

Is it any wonder that the press agent bows humbly to D. W. Griffith, the mighty producer of this tremendous screen triumph and admits his inability to faithfully describe this massive visualization. In all its entirety, even to the scenes so unjustly criticised. See for yourself before you pass judgment.

PORTLAND (Me.) ARGUS
SEPT. 27, 1915
706

AMUSEMENTS.

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION."

Commencing with the matinee today at 2 p. m. and the evening performance at 8, the wonderful picture-drama, "The Birth of a Nation" enters upon a week's engagement at the B. F. Keith Theatre with two performances daily. This great spectacle holds the record of attendance for not only Keith's Theatre but for every theatre in Portland; twenty-five thousand people having packed the largest theatre in Maine to the doors at every performance during its recent engagement. The seat sale for the present run indicates that again capacity houses will be the rule and the wise theatregoer will make his reservations at once.

"The Birth of a Nation" gives the facts of history with a straightforwardness and fidelity for truth that has caused many to protest, for in the South the histories studied by the children give an entirely different version of the great struggle of 1861 than that which is given in the schools of the North. The sidelights on history, the various episodes that are visualized for the spectator are all authentic. Not only did David W. Griffeth have the Brady pictures of actual battles and events to fall back upon, as well as the leading generals, officers and soldiers of that great strife who are now living to describe and assist in absolute accuracy being obtained, but he also had the aid of the United States government. The spectator realizes after seeing this picture that he has learned as never before more actual history of the Civil war than he ever knew before.

The question will arise in the minds of many: "Why are so many facts kept from the students in the schools of the North, and why should the South be given a different version than the people of the North? Why shouldn't there be one history for the entire country and that history absolutely truthful, unvarnished to suit the prejudices and sympathies of either class. Must it remain for the motion pictures to give the people of the world the real truth of history and other educational matters? It would seem so. And if it must be, let there be more pictures like "The Birth of a Nation." Don't forget there are two performances daily all this week, and unless one wishes to be disappointed, now is the time to secure your seats as later it will be a repetition of the last engagement, hundreds turned away at every performance.

Philadelphia, (Pa.) North American

Date .....

SEP 27 1915

[illegible] cost to maintain [illegible] proper style and [illegible] an increased tax will be necessary.

Negroes Pass Resolutions

Resolutions protesting against the exhibition of the film play, "The Birth of a Nation," in this city, were passed yesterday by 1000 negroes, who held a mass meeting in the Olympia Theater, at Broad and Fitzwater street. John O. Sheatz, former state treasurer, presided, and several members of the negro race made addresses. A letter supporting the movement was received from former Mayor John Weaver, and others sent contributions.

TRENTON (N. J.) TIMES
SEPT. 27, 1915

NEWSPAPERS HAVE PICTURE SUCCESS

Montgomery Moses, manager of the Trent Theatre and Taylor Opera House, is writing to Trenton newspapers expressing his appreciation of the value the mediums were in making "The Birth of a Nation" the most successful production ever given here. About 21,000 patrons were attracted to the house and the receipts reached a total of about $10,000.

The previous attendance record for theatres here was held by "The Three Twins" company, which filled a week's engagement at Taylor Opera House five seasons ago. The figures then were about 18,000 attendance and $7,500 receipts.

The attendance figures for "The Birth of a Nation" were arrived at by the addition of the capacities of the three lower and upper floors. The lower floor seats 592; the balcony, 344; the gallery, 500, and the boxes 50, making a total of about 15,000. There were twelve presentations, including the special morning show Saturday, and capacity was the rule at eleven of them. The other was close to capacity. In addition to this, standing room was sold to 4,000 patrons during the week.

It is figured that more than 4,000 people were turned away, either unable to buy suitable seats or refusing to pay the prices asked for the production.

PRAISE CRITICISM OF "NATION" FILM

To the Editor of the Times.

Sir—We have read with great satisfaction an article which appeared in your valuable paper, from the pen of the Rev. Hamilton Schuyler, upon the photoplay, "The Birth of a Nation." After writing only a very short paragraph on the spectacular features of the play, which are used to cloak the real object—the perpetuation of race antagonism—the good Christian gentleman fearlessly attacks the propaganda to its rotten core and lays bare, that all may feel the slanderous efforts of a distorted brain to assassinate a peaceful, law-abiding race.

We wish to thank him most sincerely for his open statements and the fairmindedness that led him to give frank expression to the truth. We feel greatly encouraged to know there is at least one man of his standing and position who has the courage of his convictions. We are compelled to suffer so many humiliations and injustices, and so often find the pulpit and the press silent and dumb upon the deepest injuries that come to us that we feel grateful beyond expression when we find there are those who have such ideas as the reverend gentleman has expressed and the manhood to tell them to the world.

Could we but get such sentiments to prevail as were so ably expressed in the article to which we refer, race hatred would die and the rights of man be vindicated.

T. EDWARD KINNEY.
REV. SOLOMON PORTER HOOD.
REV. J. A. WHITE.
REV. W. H. BATCHELOR.
DR. PAUL A. COLLINS.
Trenton, N. J. Sept. 27 1915.

RUTLAND (Vt.) HERALD
SEPT. 27, 1915

come into the road and when we did

At the Playhouse, "The Birth of a Nation."

For once the press agent has been undone. For years it has been his duty to employ such exaggeration in the verbal presentation of his subject as to infuse in the mind of the reader a desire to see or hear that which he tells about. But now comes "The Birth of a Nation" the gorgeous spectacle of the twentieth century and the press agent finds himself at a loss for words to describe the production even in a minor way. D. W. Griffith has stripped him of his power; exaggeration is out of the question and the writer must now work his brain overtime in order to do even meagre justice to his subject.

"The Birth of a Nation" cannot be exaggerated. It is too tremendous, too gigantic for that. There are countless scenes in it that tongue or pen cannot cope with. Only the eye alone can realize the wonderful progress the motion picture has made in this phenominal masterpiece.

It seems that everything that the brain of man could conceive has been put into this subject. 18,000 people were used in telling the story, 3000 horses and countless guns, shells, etc., utilized in its massive battle scenes. Two years time was consumed in its making and the approximate cost has been $500,000.

Imagine a pictorial production of love, romance and history, including tremendous battle scenes the equal of which have never yet been shown upon a screen, imagine such scenes as the burning of Atlanta; Sherman's march to the sea; Grant and Lee at Appomattox; the thrilling rides of the Ku Klux Klan; entire cities built up and destroyed by fire; the assassination of Lincoln at Ford's theater, Washington; wonderful artillery duels in which real shells costing $80 apiece were used; miles and miles of trenches with thousands of fighters; cavalry charges; infantry charges; deeds of heroism on the field of battle; imagine hundreds of such mighty scenes as these and there you have "The Birth of a Nation" the pinnacle of filmed spectacles.

Is it any wonder that the press agent bows humbly to D. W. Griffith, the mighty producer of this tremendous screen triumph and admits his inability to faithfully describe this massive visualization.

In all its entirety, even to the scenes so unjustly criticised. See for yourself before you pass judgment.—adv.

Journal Dallas - Sep 27

Dallas Theaters

DALLAS OPERA HOUSE.

"The Birth of a Nation," which will be seen for the first time in Texas at the Dallas Opera House next Monday night, is the masterwork of D. W. Griffith, inventor of a new stage art. This mighty spectacle of Civil War and Reconstruction days, based upon Thomas Dixon's "The Clansman," must not be confused with the ordinary motion picture play. It is as surely a new art creation as were the operas of Richard Wagner. Wagner took drama and fitted music to the action, making his orchestra truly interpretive of dramatic passions. It was a long step in advance of the old honeyed Italian operas, and even an improvement over the tremendous art of Shakespeare. Likewise, Griffith took the motion picture and fitted to it a musical score that tells the story to the ear as surely as the pictures tell it to the eye. After the average music lover has seen the spectacle once or twice he can stand in the lobby of the theater and follow the drama as accurately as if he were in the auditorium face to face with the screen. So necessary is the music to the general effect that a special symphony orchestra of thirty pieces will be brought to Dallas from New York to interpret a score of grand opera caliber, yet so simple in its themes of love and patriotism that it can be appreciated by the veriest novice.

Among the great spectacular scenes of "The Birth of a Nation" are the battle of Petersburg, Sherman's march to the sea, the storming of Atlanta, Lee and Grant at Appomattox, the assassination of Lincoln and the wild rides of the Ku-Klux Klans.

SEPT. 27, 1915
PHILADELPHIA (PA.) PUB. LED

[illegible]dmore and wealthy.

NEGROES MASS-MEETING AT PROTEST AGAINST FILMS

Contributions of $500 Received to Fight "Birth of Nation"

More than 1000 negroes attended a mass-meeting in the Olympia Theatre, Broad and Bainbridge streets, yesterday to protest against the photo film, "The Birth of a Nation," being shown at the Forrest Theatre, and due to which there have been two disturbances in the last two weeks. Ex-State Senator John O. Sheatz presided at the meeting. The other speakers were negro ministers and citizens.

A resolution condemning Thomas Dixon, author of "The Clansman," was passed by the assemblage. It also called upon the Christian and liberty-loving citizens of Philadelphia to repudiate the film. Five hundred dollars was taken up in the collection, and this will be used to defray the expenses of further legal warfare upon the film management. Checks were received by mail from John Weaver, Clinton Rogers Woodruff, J. B. Spingairn and John A. Mitholland.

"In addition to this, we have a crew of about 15 men who run the sound-producing devices to imitate rifle-fire, the gallop of horsemen and the detonation of the shells and bombs. Two of the big devices for the latter purpose are suspended from the fly-loft, and we have beside a special switchboard for signalling this crew, all of which takes up room.

"When I saw the Playhouse, I said at once: 'This is what we want,' and Mr. Church made the change."

Several special effects in costuming, lobby decoration and other details are promised for tonight, and the orchestra, which was announced as 10 men strong, will be 16 of the best men available, being recruited from the best organizations in the state.

The regular Playhouse pictures will be shown at the Colonial theater this week, opening with the George Beban feature, "An Alien." Mr. Beban is one of the stars of vivid acting from the vaudeville stage.

Tickets for the same relative location in the Playhouse will be exchanged any time.

St. Louis Times Sep 27

ATTACKS "BIRTH OF NATION" AS A STAIN ON THE WHITES

CHICAGO, Sept. 27.—The exhibition of the film "The Birth of a Nation" was denounced yesterday by Rev. Preston Bradley, pastor of the People's Church, in the Wilson Avenue Theater.

Dr. Bradley's reason for condemning the exhibition was not the one usually given, namely, that it presented the negro in an unfavorable light, but that it presented the Southern whites in an unfavorable light.

SAN FRANCISCO (Cal.) BULLETIN
SEPT. 27, 1915

to the heart of the [illegible] jungle. The story is told in six acts.

"Birth of a Nation" Now on 22nd Week at Savoy

"The Birth of a Nation" at the Savoy Theater, D. W. Griffith's mammoth screen spectacle, which is based on Thomas Dixon's story, "The Clansman," is now in the twenty-second week of its stay in San Francisco and is still running strong.

Not a little of the entertainment the Savoy is contributed by the special music which fits the scenes acted upon the screen we found ourselves near a company of troopers from Brownsville. The bandits not only took my clothes, but one Mexican, who said he was in the raid of Sebastian, took my hat and wedding ring."

WILL BE SHOWN AT PLAYHOUSE.

"Birth of a Nation" Transferred From Shrine—Deeper Stage.

On account of the superior qualities of the Playhouse for a big motion picture entertainment, "The Birth of a Nation" was transferred on short notice from the Shrine to the Playhouse, where it will be shown twice a day this week.

In explaining the reason for the change, Manager David E. Dow, who is personally in charge of the Griffith production, said yesterday:—

"The Shrine is a fine theater, but for our purposes the stage is not quite deep enough. We have a special 'masked-in' black setting for the screen, which covers the whole stage opening from the proscenium arch, so the audience sees nothing but the figures on the screen. This makes them stand out with a lifelike effect.

PHILADELPHIA (Pa.) INQUIRER
SEPT. 26, 1915

Gigantic Task of Creating The Birth of a Nation Films

D. W. GRIFFITH, the advanced thinker of motion picture art, and the inventor of about every important improvement in motion photography that has been developed in his time in this country, accepted the stories of "The Clansman" and one or two kindred works of Thomas Dixon as a basis for action in the great film drama, "The Birth of a Nation," now at the Forrest Theatre. This was his choice because he was in search of a copyrighted tale that gave him protection for developing an epic creation which would astound the world.

The scenario for this history-embracing work was outlined by Griffith, and the entire production was made under his personal direction. It took him eight months to complete the picture. Its salient scenes were taken in five States and partly in Mexico. The cost of the production was between $400,000 and $500,000. As near as can be estimated, there were between 16,000 and 18,000 people utilized in the making of the entire picture. It is estimated that not less than 200,000 feet of film was taken. In condensing this to the direct narrative, Griffith has assembled 13,800 feet of story as the audience now sees it. For his cavalry effects and artillery dashes, together with the stirring runs of the Ku Klux Klans, nearly 3000 horses were used. These scenes were participated in by the crack riders of all the western territory that could be reached. In the great battle scenes which are the tremendous features of the work, the eye scans a battlefield covering an area of twelve square miles.

With the selection of the theme finally agreed upon, came the primary work of research to establish the historical truth of the narrative. Several professors of history from different universities worked three months compiling this data. They examined no less than five thousand volumes of history and countless official records to get at the facts. To show the difficulty encountered in this work it may be cited that there are eighteen distinct accounts of the assassination of President Lincoln. Eye witnesses were sought to get at the facts and to determine their accuracy.

It was easier to establish the data regarding the great battle scenes. The War Department archives at Washington furnished ample material for this work. Actual measurements of the battlegrounds were made and surveyors and engineers of military experience laid out an exact reproduction of these scenes. Once the suitable location for the enactment of this great mimic warfare was determined upon, the engineers went to work to establish a camp. Wells were sunk to secure the needed water; camp was pitched as at the modern military rendezvous, a hospital corps was established and a fully equipped commissary department was organized to feed the participants in the big battles.

A fleet of over one hundred motor busses was utilized to transport the men to and from the camp to the studios, at which every detail of the battles had to be thoroughly rehearsed under Director Griffith's eye to get just the effect he sought. While this was going on, engineers were throwing up the trenches, laying out roads for the artillery approaches and for the bringing forth of the reserve charges at the given signal; great batteries were masked behind the hills at least five miles distant from the foreground of the action and on the side lines mortar pits were built for the bomb-throwing ordnance which takes part so spectacularly in the actual scene of war's carnage.

Another corps of men was making the shells and explosives for these effects. This work had to be carried out with great care to get the effect of bursting shells and these had to be so charged that there would be little danger of injury to the men in the battles. Owing to the scenes being laid in the period of the Civil War it was difficult to get the same sort of rifles which were used in those conflicts and much time and care was needed in getting the real thing.

The artillery was loaned by the Ordnance Department of the U. S. Army, and every piece was in service at some time or other during the Civil War. County Commissioners had to be seen and their consent obtained to occupy the roads and territory upon which the battles were fought. This meant the blocking of traffic in that part of the country for several days at a time.

Every leader in the various battles was a trained motion picture actor, many of them well-known camera stars gathered from the forces of the nineteen different stock companies under Griffith's general direction. The soldiers were men who had seen military service either in the regular army or in the State guards. Griffith did not care to risk his work to the usual mobs that are utilized in big scenes for motion picture stories. These men were employed at the usual wage allowed soldiers for actual field duty.

The soldiers were rehearsed in sixteen different groups under sub-directors, who had been trained by the general director himself. They were divided into battalions, each man taking orders from the battalion commander, who, in turn, looked to Griffith for the signal for the entry of his forces into this fight of the camera.

MR. GRIFFITH DIRECTING THE BATTLE SCENES FROM A 60-FT. TOWER.

Griffith, with his chief photographer, G. W. Bitzer, took his station on a tower sixty feet high, and from that commanding position he had a view of the entire battlefield. Straight down from his viewpoint stretched the opposing trenches for a distance of nearly five miles. At many points the rival trenches were less than forty yards apart. This proximity was warranted by historical records of the fight at Petersburg.

Griffith's signal for action is the magic word to his followers: "Camera." Every detail of the great scenes had been thoroughly gone over for three weeks when the day came for this signal. By an elaborate system of wigwags and underground telephones, Griffith was in constant touch with the commanders of each of the sixteen battalions. Those in turn were "covered" by separate cameras to get minute details of their part of the action. When the battle began the general director remained on the signal tower, and at the needed moment flashed to his different battalion chiefs the signal for their entrance into the picture. Most of the men were too far away to be reached by wigwags, and these were directed by telephone.

Ten regiments of warriors were maneuvred without a hitch, except that on the first day the picture was a fizzle. Some thoughtless lieutenant touched off a great store of shells, and the camera lost its vision in clouds of yellow smoke that enveloped the battlefield. This mistake cost thousands of dollars. Griffith's saving sense of humor came to his rescue in the studio that night when the disheartening truth was revealed upon the developed films. "I guess he wanted to make it real," was all he said.

For the first time in the history of motion pictures, actual scenes of warfare at night were taken after dark. The burning of Atlanta and the escape of the refugees from that city before Sherman's conquering advance are part of this. Griffith had been experimenting upon a small scale with this work for years, and this was his first attempt to see its working upon so elaborate a plan. He got his pictures by the use of giant illuminators which he patented for this work and also by the bursting of specially constructed illuminating bombs, which were freely made use of. This was one of the costliest features of the entire production.

These war effects and the stirring movements of the men were all laid out upon a gigantic scale by the general director. The plans were completed at nightly conferences with his subordinates, where every detail was gone over thoroughly to be sure that nothing was missed. The principals in the action were selected for their ability to appear like the famous generals and other personages of history.

After they were chosen, each had to "make up" and then go through a rigid rehearsal with Griffith. Then they were photographed separately and in groups to test their appearance upon the film. It required infinite patience to get just the right players. As an evidence of this, it is known that over twenty applicants were found wanting before the right man was selected to portray Lincoln. It took nearly as much care to get men to play General Grant and General Lee.

As the battle scenes are now presented, it takes about sixteen minutes to run these. Weeks of camp life were necessary to get effects. The cost of this was approximately $[illegible],000 a day. In the terrible struggles, [illegible] three sets of uniforms were used up by [illegible] participants.

A corps of over five hundred costume makers worked for three months to supply the players with the correct clothing. For the Ku Klux Klan over 50,000 yards of cloth were sewed into costumes, replicas of the clothing worn by the original Klansmen. Every costume had to be historically correct and experts were at work for months making the designs for these. Fourteen hundred sheets of music were used in the orchestration of the entire score of the production.

Ford's Theatre, where President Lincoln was shot, was reproduced in part from old prints and actual descriptons of that playhouse. Eye witnesses of the assassination were consulted in making this detail complete.

For the military scenes, Griffith had with him during the time he was directing the pictures, several officers of the U. S. army, and the services of many veterans who actually took part in the battles were obtained.

'BIRTH OF A NATION' TO BE AT OLYMPIC TWO WEEKS LONGER

Photo-Spectacle Such a Drawing Card Time Limit Is Extended a Week.

The run of "The Birth of a Nation," the great photo-play spectacle, at the Olympic Theater, has proved such a strong drawing card, that a week's extension has been gained. Yesterday started the fifth week of the picture's run here, and this will be extended over next week, so that the Veiled Prophet week visitors may see it.

Attendance records have been broken almost daily at the Olympic Theater recently, and when it is considered that there is a daily matinee, it can be seen how strong the attraction is drawing.

All court troubles connected with the photo drama have been straightened out.

Pittsburg Sun 9-28-15

THE NIXON.

With no signs of waning in its power to attract, "The Birth of a Nation" opened its fifth week in the Nixon Theater yesterday afternoon and last night before crowded houses. This vivid "movie" drama, depicting on a lavish scale the history of the Nation's great crisis, and the new Nation, as it emerged from that crisis, seemingly possesses all the elements needed in a gripping photoplay. If some of the scenes meant to portray the reconstruction period of the South seem somewhat overdrawn, there is no escaping the impressiveness of the spectacle or the thrill of the action.

The massiveness of the production, the uniform excellence of portrayal in scene and character, the clearness of the picture on the screen and the fitting musical accompaniment by orchestra combine to make "The Birth of a Nation" a moving picture classic. The battle scenes probably are as realistic as anything seen outside of an actual armed conflict, and in these days of battles give an idea of the carnage of warfare. The reproduction of historic scenes evidences painstaking care and thoroughness in every detail. The ride of the Ku-Klux Klan is a surpassing achievement in motion picture production. The photoplay of D. W. Griffith is scheduled for one more week after this.

Gazette Times 9-28

Nixon—"The Birth of a Nation."

The big Griffith spectacle photoplay continues to draw large audiences to the Nixon Theater, where the line of ticket-buyers extends almost every day out to Smithfield street. This picture has, so far, outclassed the ordinary "movie" play that the success is not to be wondered at. In massiveness of scenes, perfection of detail, steadiness and clearness of photoplay and in harmony of musical accompaniment, it is far and away the best "show" of the kind so far seen in Pittsburgh. It may be added that, despite the somewhat vigorous protests made against its performance here, there has never been the slightest disorder in the theater—a tribute to the good sense of the people who felt in the beginning that they were aggrieved by the presentation. The engagement has several weeks to run before the regular dramatic season opens in the Nixon.

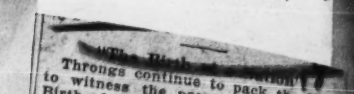
BRIDGEPORT (Conn.) TELEGRAM 101
SEPT. 28, 1915.

STIRRING FEATURE IN "BIRTH OF A NATION

THE RIDE OF THE KUKLUX CLAN.

The ride of the Kuklux clan is one of the most thrilling features of the great film, "The Birth of a Nation," which is to be shown at Poli's all next week. This selection of the film abounds in dash and thrills seldom seen on the movie screen.

PITTSBURG (Pa.) LEADER
SEPT. 28, 1915



Throngs continue to pack the Nixon to witness the presentation of "The Birth of a Nation," that wonderful picture performance which has kept thousands of persons breathless for three hours at a performance.

Although "The Birth of a Nation" is a "movie" at $2, it serves to draw throngs which any regular theatrical performance well might envy. Yesterday's crowds were as big as ever. The production is on its last two weeks in Pittsburg. As the Nixon owns the Pittsburg territory for the film, it is not to be shown at any other theater within 100 miles.

The picture is rich in Civil war history, and the scenes of 50 years ago are presented with startlingly realistic effect.

CLIPPING FROM The New York Clipper
Date Oct 2 1915

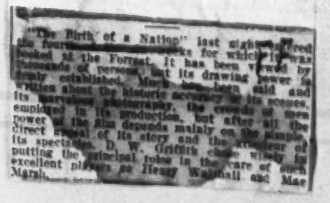
DAVID WARK GRIFFITH is hard at work with his next production, which will rival "The Birth of a Nation." His present cast includes well known stars, headed by Mae Marsh and Bobby Harron, who have been entrusted with two strong emotional parts.

MANCHESTER (N. H.) MIRROR 521
SEPT. 28, 1915.

"BIRTH OF A NATION" IS GREAT

THE CAMERONS IN THE PLANTATION SCENE.

ILADELPHIA, PA. BULLETIN
9-28-15



LYNCHBURG (Va.) NEWS.
SEPT 29 1915

THE BIRTH OF A NATION.

Norfolk, Va., Sept. 27.—(Special).—Simultaneous with its presentation at the Scala Theatre, London, England, before King George and members of the royal household, D. W. Griffith's spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," made its entry into the South tonight at the Colonial Theatre here. An audience typical of the Old Dominion greeted the first presentation. Mayor Wyndham R. Mayo, with members of the council and board of aldermen, Admiral Beattie, commandant of the Portsmouth Navy Yard; Col. Haynes in command at Fortress Monroe; representatives of the Daughters of the Confederacy and other prominent in the official and social life of Eastern Virginia were in the audience.

PITTSFIELD (Mass.) EAGLE
SEPT. 28, 1915.

WILL SHOW "BIRTH OF A NATION"

Film To Be Produced in West Springfield.

WEST SPRINGFIELD, SEPT. 28.—"The Birth of a Nation," the sensational movies picture drama of reconstruction days, will be seen for a month's run in the town hall here in the near future. The selectmen of the town voted last night to lease the town hall for that purpose to George R. Miller of Springfield. The selectmen reserve the right, however, to have the film censored by a committee of their selection before any public performances are given.

